Denounce Brutal Murders by Esthonian Terror

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY.—(By mail.)—Despite the severe rain several hundred workers gathered at the Labor Temple in response to the appeal of the International Workers' Aid and Workers' Party to protest against the white terror in Germany and Esthonia.

The meeting adopted a resolution denouncing the brutal murder of the Esthonian comrades and the violent persecutions of revolutionary workers in Germany. It called for the freedom of the 400,000 workers in the capitalist dungeons thruout Europe and Asia.

The resolution further declared that the violence being now employed by the imperialists of these countries is evidence of the fact that the workers are resisting the attempt to enslave them thru the Dawes plan and other means. The meeting went on record in favor of supporting the International Workers' Aid in its campaign for raising funds on behalf of the imprisoned workers.

The speakers of the meeting were Israel Amter, who told of the imprisonment of workers in Europe and of the steps the workers were taking in their behalf; Ludwig Lore, who discussed the Dawes plan and its effect upon the working class of Germany, and Ben Gitlow who spoke of American capitalist class and the House of Morgan as the center of revolution thruout the world. William W. Weinstone, secretary of the International Workers' Aid, acted as the chairman. A collection was taken on behalf of the political prisoners.

Drain Eyes World Court.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The American Legion committed itself by the words of its national commander, James A. Drain, in favor of the universal draft bill to come before congress soon and for "some sort of a world court." Drain explained that the draft bill would make all citizens obliged to serve the government either by fighting, working or finahcing.

DISARMING THE SMALL NATIONS

By Ja. Ca.

In the very portals where Carnegie established his notorious sham, "The Peace Palace," at the Hague, Holland, an unpractical pacifist and an ambitious propaganda spreading militarist held a debate on the subject, "Shall the Netherlands disarm?"

This debate attracted much attention, and it was attended by peoples from all classes. The hall was cramed to capacity and a large crowd was gathered on the outside where a loud speaker had been arranged. In spite of the fact that both speakers were leaders of bourgeois parties, a great part of the audience thought it would be fitting to the occasion to sing the social-pacifist song "Down with the weapons." This, of course, tended to aggravate the speakers because it gave indication of the rising tide of resentment, not only against war, but the elements that promote it.

Present Warfare Spares None.

Professor Van Emden, the pacifist, pictured the terrible slaughtering in the next war, and how, today, in time of war, when entire populations in big cities are working on the necessities of war, to make it successful, the enemy will recognize no non-combatants, and will endeavor to destroy them, and might make their own (the bourgeois) wives and children the innocent victims of air raiders. Thus bringing the horrors of war right on their front doorsteps.

This is where the shoe pinched. As long as they could draft cannon fodder out of the working class, and let them do the sacrificing while their own kinsmen were safe at home they were satisfied, but now a new condition presents itself. Yes, to die for one's country is glorious, but now they realize that in the war of the future their own flesh and blood might decorate the gutter in the street.

"War" For Whom?

It is remarkable how a man like Professor Van Emden can talk for hours about war and against it, or rather the terror of war, without coming to the point.

Thus it is, as Professor Van Emden stated, there is no speck of sense for a small country to have an army, even for defense. They will be kept neutral to buy food from or be used to protect their (the warring nation's) boundary line. If it is in a strategic position, the country will be overrun. He pictured the coming chemical war with its poisonous gases, where in the big cities, everywhere from baby to grandmother will wear a gas mask, and told about the horror that would result from bacterium plotting, laying waste to all vegetation infected.

Imagine two opposite air raiding parties sent out on the same day, returning home after a successful raid, to find their own city wiped off the earth. Of course, the general did not agree to this. He thinks chemical war is not so inhuman as pictured, Holland only needs 15,000,000 florins to be protected from air raids (the general must have been reading Brisbane's editorials.)

They Have Poor Memories.

General Snyders thought it was very touching and nasty to make a joke of the army and to speculate on the cowardice of a people. He said, "When the big neighbor states know that neutral Holland is prepared they will think twice before attacking it." (He was mum about the experience of Belgium.)

After both parties had spoken the pacifist audience was ready to go on the war path, and were shooting with cat calls. After the singing of the International, and "Down with weapons," they went home.

Of course, they could not blame Professor Van Emden, "a progressive" for bringing reds there. He probably didn't like it himself.

This meeting was another step toward the grave of a parasitic class that still lives on the glory of Holland's golden age, the 17th century.

FILIPINO SCORES LYING ARTICLES IN BOSS PAPERS

Like Most 'Intellectuals' He Is Rather Tame

By H. O. WATT.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11. — Several articles published in the Washington Post, and syndicated thruout the country, have aroused the ire of the Philippine people. At a meeting held tonight by the league of industrial democracy, Vicente Bunuan, press representative of the Philippine government, in this country, spoke in refutation of the published statements.

Bunuan, who is a good speaker, put his audience in good humor, by preceding his address with the remark that Laurence Todd, who acted as chairman, had just informed him that the members of the organization he was about to address are "intellectual liberals." The speaker called attention to the fact that the writer of the articles in question had found nothing in the islands favorable to the Filipino people: not a single instance of human feeling or decency.

U. S. Degeneracy.

The unfairness of this attitude was obvious. Bunuan explained that if he wished to be unfair to America he might take isolated instances of degeneracy in this country and go back to the Philippines and base slanderous articles on these isolated cases. It was an easy matter for the speaker to refute the charges contained in the offending articles.

Facts and figures give the lie to the whole mass of vituperation and the speaker confined himself to such facts and figures. The articles are obviously propaganda in the interest of those interests which are fighting against independence for the Philippine people. Instead of the "decay and deterioration" found by Katherine Mayo, the speaker showed that remarkable progress has been made in the islands, especially during the time in which they were granted some degree of local autonomy by the Wilson administration in this country.

Bunuan Non-Commital.

At the conclusion of Bunuan's talk an effort was made by members of the audience to draw from him his opinion as to the motive behind the publication of the newspaper stories. He was asked if he thought that the author was employed by the sugar trust to do his dirty work. Bunuan would not commit himself specifically but said that he had a suspicion as to why the propaganda was instituted. He stated that the articles are of magazine style and that there is nothing new in them. Such articles are usually printed on the "home" page of newspapers, but in this instance they cover nearly the entire first page. He stated that the author has been back in this country for three months but the articles did not appear until the first week of congress.

Must Be More Militant.

It seems to the writer that the Filipinos might make more progress in their fight for liberty if they should adopt a more militant attitude toward their oppressors. Nowhere in history have subject peoples obtained freedom except by fighting for it. Surely the Filipinos are dissatisfied with administration of their affairs by American exploiters; otherwise they would not be asking for independence. Still, Bunuan, this evening, told his audience that he has confidence in the fairness and justice of American, christian, civilization.

This humble, servile attitude seems to prevail amongst all of the educated Filipinos now in this country and gives rise to the impression that there are several "kept" newspapers in the islands, and that these publications are "educating" the populace into paths of humility, much as is done in this country. Perhaps if a little mass action in the shape of general strikes and other demonstrations were indulged in, more might be accomplished than by the eternal passing of resolutions.

He told the bootblacks of all sovereign states assembled there that he was especially interested in Chicago and Detroit upon his recent visit in the United States. "The obvious remark to make about these two cities," said the Prince, "is that Chicago turns live pigs into little bits as fast as Detroit turns little bits into live automobiles." (Laughter.)

The obvious remark we are compelled to make is, that in both instances the workers are ground to little bits turning pigs into little bits and little bits into autos. This may be what the bootblacks laughed about!

LENIN AND THE TRADE UNIONS

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The twenty-second chapter is entitled, "Lenin and the Trade Unions."

THE trade union movement also is very much indebted to Lenin. First of all because he has determined the correct place to be occupied by the trade unions in the class struggle. He fought very bitterly all those in the trade unions of Europe that favored the existence of the trade unions as perfectly independent organizations from the political party of the proletariat. He proved in a number of cases that this idea of the independence of the unions from the political movement of the proletariat in reality means independence from revolutionary class politics, that the anarchists and reformists by preaching the idea of the independence of the trade unions are merely serving the interests of the bourgeoisie.

Lenin looked upon the trade unions as the elementary units of working class organization, "as the place where the masses are trained in organization, in collective management, and in Communism." He was at one and the same time opposed to overestimating as well as under-estimating the importance of trade unions. He always insisted upon the necessity of taking part in these mass organizations, irrespective of the nature of their leadership. In his book "The Infantile Sickness of Communism," in the chapter entitled, "Shall revolutionaries Participate in Reactionary Trade Unions?" he criticizes very energetically those Communist elements which at the first onslaught of the reactionary bureaucracy become pessimistic and throw out the slogan of: "Out of the trade unions, an immediate split." Such tactics he designates as: "Unpardonable stupidity which is equivalent to offering the greatest service to the bourgeoisie." He says: "We must work wherever the masses are, criticize mercilessly the labor aristocracy which is dominated by reformism, narrow craft egotism, and the ideas of bourgeois imperialism." Lenin would emphasize time and again that without the trade unions the Soviet government could not have maintained itself in power for more than two weeks. The trade unions are the connecting link between the masses and the proletarian vanguard. It is only by our daily activities that we can convince the masses that it is only we who are capable of leading them from capitalism to Communism.

The development of the revolutionary trade union movement followed that of the Communist movement. The Russian trade union movement was to the Red International of Labor Unions of the same importance as the Communist Party of Russia was to the Communist International. The Russian trade union movement had begun developing with particular intensity after the October revolution under the ideological and political leadership of Lenin.

Lenin followed the development of the trade union movement with the same interest with which he followed that of the Communist movement. He would always explain that the American International is the main support of the international bourgeoisie, and because of this he was so much interested in the Red International of Labor Unions, as can be seen from his communication to the First Congress of the R. I. L. U. (July, 1921) where Lenin said:

"It is hard to express in words the importance of this international trade union congress. Everywhere in the whole world the Communist ideas find ever more followers among the membership of the trade unions. The progress of Communism does not follow a straight line. It is not regular, it has got to overcome thousands of obstacles, but it moves forward just the same. This international trade union congress will hasten the progress of Communism, which will be victorious in the trade union movement. There is no power on earth that is able to prevent the collapse of capitalism and the victory of the working class over the bourgeoisie."

From this it can be seen what importance Lenin attached to the international unification of the revolutionary trade union movement for the struggles of the working class.

Clothing Boss Tries To Escape Union But Has Fight on His Hands

PORTCHESTER, N. Y.—Picketing of the Tommy-lines Manufacturing Corporation, makers of boys' clothing, began here by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union on the first day the factory attempted to operate. The union workers picketing the shop claim that the company had been working in New York under a union agreement and suddenly moved all its equipment out of town in an effort to set up an open shop. The Amalgamated has opened a local office and will inslet upon organising the Tommy-lines shop, according to pickets.

The dispute with the union is over the guarantee of 40 weeks yearly work. The season usually last only 32 weeks. The factory signed for the 40 week work but moved out of town in the night after 32 weeks' work.

YOUNG SLAVES MAKE MILLIONS FOR THE BOSSES

Two Great Big Little Pamphlets

The Young Workers League has just published two small and attractive pamphlets dealing with the conditions of the young workers in the National Biscuit Co. and the national mail order houses of America. The first is titled "Who Makes Who Owns-Nabisco" and deals extensively with this nationally known biscuit firm and the human element that goes into their production.

A Graker-Jack Pamphlet

This little pamphlet describes graphically the conditions under which the famous "Nabisco" wafers and other sweetmeats are produced. We find that the great majority of the workers are young boys and girls under 21 years of age, and they receive the magnificent wage of $15 to $18 per week.

The pamphlet concludes by bringing forward the position of the Young Workers League and presents a series of demands that the youmk workers should fight for. The Young Workers League has already successfully propagated these demands in several of the large cities where Nabisco plants are located.

Millionaires Made From Slaves

The second pamphlet of this unique series is entitled "Millions and Misery" and presents to the young workers of the many mail order houses the class significance of their exploitation. In no industry are the young workers exploited so viciously. The mail order bosses have their exploitation down to a science. The various means of competition are exposed and the facts as to where J. Rosenwald and all the other millionaire owners get their millions from while the young workers receive $14 and $15 per week in wages.

The Sears-Roebuck company is the largest mail order concern in the country and the net profits of this company was $11,512,619 during 1923.

The Young Workers League calls upon the mail order house workers to organize and fight for their definite demands and to organize into factory nuclei of the YWL there to fight for their everyday demands and the ultimate abolition of all exploiters and their damnable system.

Both of these 16 page pamphlets sell at 5c per copy and every reader of the DAILY WORKER should purchase one for himself and a bundle for selling in his branch, union meeting or fraternal organization.

Prices are as follows: In bundles of 100 or more $3.50, in bundles of 25 copies, $1.00, under 25 they sell at 5c per copy. Order from Young Workers League, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

So many people overlook this one matter of fastidiousness. And do so in spite of the fact that in conversation the teeth are the one most noticeable thing about you.

Notice today how your self, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Gompers Is Dead—The Revolution Lives

Samuel Gompers has gone and no matter what temporary arrangements are made to keep peace in the official family of the American Federation of Labor, there will ensue a bitter struggle for the throne he occupied so long.

Forty-five years of experience in the game of internal trade union politics, forty-five years of playing one union against another in jurisdictional disputes, forty-five years of dividing the support of political opponents and mustering a majority for his machine at every convention, made Gompers an artist of rare skill in this field.

He played on the ambitions, prejudices and passions of the lower strata of officialdom like a violinist plays on his strings. He was far abler and much better informed than any of his immediate associates and he was regarded by many an ignorant international union official with almost superstitious awe.

He dominated the American Federation of Labor and it bears his mark today. He made no pretense of leading the labor movement, but fought always for the fetishes of craft and calling, was against industrial unionism, working class political action, against anything that smacked of criticism of American capitalism, acted always on the theory that employers and workers were parts of a happy family and that bad conditions were due to bad employers—not to a bad social system.

He delivered the labor movement to the House of Morgan in 1917. He waged war on every working class foe of imperialism, was the most bitter and outspoken enemy of Soviet Russia in America and crowned his labors, a few days before his death by handing over the Mexican labor movement, tied hand and foot, to American imperialism.

He fought against the socialist party before it betrayed the working class during and after the world war, and when the Workers (Communist) Party became the revolutionary vanguard in the United States, he formed a united front with every agency of capitalism against it.

The capitalist, yellow socialist and reactionary labor press will mourn Gompers. They will praise his leadership, his strategy and his organizing ability, but the record of history can be read by all and it says in unmistakable terms that Samuel Gompers left the American labor movement weaker, in proportion to the strength of the capitalist class, than it was when he came upon the scene. He left the American Federation of Labor an organization that has forgotten how to fight and that glories in its subservience to American capitalism at home and prides itself on the aid given by it in subjugating workers of other nations.

The record of the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor—its endorsement of military training camps, its request for more battleships, its plea for official representatives in the war department, its enunciation of the Monroe doctrine in accordance with the imperialist policies of the Coolidge-Morgan-Dawes government, its betrayal of the Mexican workers—is the epitaph of Samuel Gompers.

He lived a servant of American capitalism and he died as such. The labor bureaucrats have lost their leader and American capitalism an efficient ally.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America and the Trade Union Educational League live and will carry on the same struggle to win the masses for the revolution that they waged before Gompers' death and which served to show to hundreds of thousands of workers the true character of Gompers as the mouthpiece of capitalist reaction in the ranks of labor.

His successor cannot fool for long the workers into following the bloody trail that Gompers blazed for them—the trail that leads straight to death on imperialism's battlefields.

Social-Democracy "Victorious"

The German social-democrats announce triumphantly that the recent elections were a victory for the Dawes plan.

If there is any shame left in the Bergers and Hillquits they will be as outspoken as their Deutschland kindred and admit that the socialist party—what part LaFollette did not swallow—is as Comrade Zinoviev so aptly phrased it, "the third party of the bourgeoisie."

Perhaps in the light of the sturdy work of the social democracy for the slave plan of American imperialism this phrase should be revised and the social-democracy given first place in the list of capitalism's supporters.

Its boast of the victory of the Dawes plan in the German elections entitles it to promotion when added to its murder of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

The Communists and Child Labor

The census report of 1920 showed that only 43 per cent of the farm boys and girls of high school age were enrolled in school. More than half of all the farm children are not obtaining the educational advantages which our schools are theoretically supposed to offer to all. Many of them remain at home because they are unable to carry high school work, but the greater portion of them are at home because they have to work or because of a financial handicap.

—J. E. Hill, state supervisor of Vocational Education in Illinois, in a speech before the Society for Vocational Education, December 11.

Here is a concrete example from the rich agricultural state of Illinois, given by an expert in close touch with the situation. It is complete proof of the statement contained in the manifesto of the Workers (Communist) Party of America on child labor, that any method proposed to destroy this evil which does not provide for maintenance of school children by the government, is meaningless and ineffective.

Illinois is an old and rich agrarian district. The state is covered with a network of public schools that are as good as any under capitalism. Transportation is excellent, yet but 43 per cent of the eligible high school youth were enrolled.

Why? The state supervisor, certainly no friend of Communism, states plainly that poverty of the parents necessitating the employment of the children, is the basic reason. And now we come upon one of the worst effects of child labor i. e. its devastating inroads on wages and conditions of labor. The father of a family, if his children can find jobs, can be forced by the bosses to accept drastic reductions in his wages and as for large sections of the farming population they live only by intensive exploitation of the labor of their own flesh and blood.

A united front of all working class organizations for the government maintenance of all children of school age is the only method of combatting an evil that not only condemns children to lives of slavery but that also brings down the standard of living of the whole working class.

Rebukes Cop for Killing

A coroner's jury reprimanded former Traffic Policeman John McGuire yesterday for killing Chester Mizulowski, 20, of 4227 South Richmond street, who was shaking dice. McGuire has resigned from the police force.—News Item in Chicago Tribune.

Policeman McGuire was probably actuated by a flood of righteous indignation when he resigned. To be reprimanded for the killing of a foreign-born worker who was undermining the Anglo-Saxon civilization by shaking dice, is too much for any self-respecting bluecoat in this land of freedom.

The increasing domination of South American nations by American imperialism is shown in recent dispatches from Brazil which state that that country will await action by the United States before proceeding further with negotiations for recognition of and a treaty with Soviet Russia.

The American army officers who are training the Brazilian forces for war on Argentine are apparently extending their activities to European affairs as well.

Watch the capitalist press, see how it will play up the working class traitor Gompers. Last week they had a picture of Debs too, with a nice friendly little note. Usually the photo section is filled with pictures of kings and murderers, bandits and whole strings of social parasites, with royalty always played up strong. And this is the greatest "democracy" on earth.

That the division line of society cuts thru racial groups and follows class interests, is seen by the way the American capitalists can get the Mexican president, Calles, to lick their boots, while Gompers joined with other labor fakers of the Mexican race, joins hands with both Calles and Hughes to fight the Communists.

If anyone asks who the "reds" are today, let him look at those the capitalist press attack. The anarchists are non-existent, the socialists are dead, even the I. W. W. has become harmless, and only the Communists are the center of hostility. That's because they are alive.

French imperialism raided a school in Paris where Communists taught natives of Tunis, Morocco and Syria how to organize their fellows to overthrow French rule. The Communists are the only group which makes internationalism a thing of reality.

The German social-democrats are now engaged in going around with offers of cabinet jobs to fascist nationalists to trade off for support by these monarchist elements against the Communists in the reichstag. The more we see of social democrats the better we like dogs.

The Unemployed They Buy Policies

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 11.—Many Workers Party branches in northern Ohio have already oversubscribed their quota for the fund to insure the DAILY WORKER for next year, in spite of widespread unemployment in this section.

At a meeting of the Cleveland city central committee, branch DAILY WORKER agents reported that the sales of the insurance policies are in full swing. Many of the Cleveland branches have promised to subscribe an average of five dollars per member.

Buy Five and Ten Dollar Policies.

At Warren, Ohio, an interesting discussion took place at the DAILY WORKER membership meeting. The Finnish branch will try its utmost to raise its quota in spite of much unemployment among its members. The South Slavic branch of Warren has nearly raised its quota.

In Ashtabula and Conneaut there is also much unemployment. Some members have not worked for six months. In spite of this the sale of policies to build the DAILY WORKER is on and many bought five and ten dollar policies at the meeting.

The unemployed Finns of Ohio call upon all higher paid Finnish building laborers and others in the east to buy five and ten dollar policies to assure the full Finnish Federation quota.

"Czarina" Becomes Acclimatized to American Hot Air

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The "Grand Duchess" Victoria Fedorovna, formerly of Russia, wife of the Russian grand duke Cyril, who claims to be "Czar of all the Russians," has been occupying her royal time in the United States attempting to solve cross-word puzzles. The "Czarina," seems not a bit embarrassed by the fact that her "subjects" are a handful of disgruntled monarchists who fled for their lives to Paris in mortal fear of being put to work by the Bolsheviks.

The "Czarina" has extended her "kingdom" to the hand-kissing followers of extinct Russian imperialism in New York, including the American society people and industrial monarchs who are afraid of being buried as deep and luxuries to boot. The duchess was received in the metropolis with kissing of hands by the male flunkies, and curtsies by the women. She was referred to as "Your Highness" by the jaded parasites of Fifth Avenue who attended the ball in Sherry's in honor of the czarist female. The writer once knew of a Scottish chief who lived comfortably for several years on the moneyed aristocracy, from the Back Bay in Boston to the fashionable sections of New York, on his title and his kilts. A grand duchess should not worry about the economic conditions in America as long as the American workers are willing to be slaves.

OUR old friend, J. A. Lochray, editor of the Mid-West News and one of the enthusiasts for a farmer-labor party when such a proposition was popular among the masses, does not seem to have prospered much from his lightning change political twists. First Lochray supported the farmer-labor party. Next he supported LaFollette, perhaps a little, but he damaged his virtue nevertheless. Then he came into Chicago and offered to peddle himself for cash. He was willing to be sold to any organization. The G. O. P. took him for so much on the hoof. He immediately declared for Coolidge, and opened fire on LaFollette, branding the latter as a radical, tho Lochray, a few weeks prior to his sale on the Chicago market, put LaFollette down as a reactionary.

THE latest copy of Lochray's paper to reach us is reduced in size and carries the announcement that henceforth it will appear monthly instead of weekly. It carries a front page story boosting the policies of the bureaucrats of the American Federation of Labor at the El Paso convention. On one of the inside pages it publishes a fake "special" from Chicago to the Mid-West News, denouncing the Workers Party manifestos on "Education Week." Lochray has sunk so low that only unusual ingenuity will enable him to go down farther. It is rather consoling to know that his pertidy has not added to the sum total of his material comfort.

TEN DAYS THAT SHOOK CHICAGO

Here you have it. This is what they do to us whenever an opportunity arises. For ten days Chicago literally shook while it was being soaked, day after day, with this yellow filth.

This yellow filth contained a bit of truth, of course. That's what they hang their lies upon. That Chicago is a hotbed of red propaganda, true! That Communist are, from tip to toe, for Soviet Russia, correct! But that we plotted to slay public officials; made bombs in either dunes or flats or any place; conspired to assassinate President Wilson—this is foolish fiction, ridiculous rot.

We had the DAILY WORKER. And in a minute we were on the job covering their yellow with a bright coat of red. Upon large posters and in our daily we told the workers that Communists were not to be found under beds or in dark alleys, or in the woods.

We told Chicago that we were quite perceptibly located at 1113 West Washington Blvd., and that there wasn't a "keep out" sign on or in the building. The same sun that shines on the Daily News and its brothers in the corrupt chorus of capitalism also shines on us. We told the workers that if they wanted to learn ALL about us, to read the DAILY WORKER daily and not the enemy press, the Daily News.

Our only bombs are the propaganda in the DAILY WORKER. And this dynamite we do not intend softening one bit. With this dynamite we helped silence the Daily News. About a week, and the Daily News closed its columns to this yellow dope. It had discovered that it did not pay.

BUT SUPPOSE WE HAD NOT HAD THE DAILY WORKER? Then what? Confronted with these questions is what compels us to make this campaign to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925 a "must" campaign. We MUST make the DAILY WORKER safe so that it will always help us give battle in all our struggles with the yellows.

Do you seriously wish to increase the effectiveness of the DAILY WORKER? Do you demand that it live and increase in power? Are you in earnest in this fight against world imperialism and that section of it that prides in this country? Are you with us? PERU FIGHTS WALL STREET RULE

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

SAMUEL GOMPERS has again deceived the American working class. While the class conscious wage slaves were throwing their hats in the air and otherwise expressing their joy over the passing of the notorious labor lackey of the exploiters, in the thot that one obstacle to their progress had passed away, the sad news that Gompers was up to another of his dirty tricks was flashed over the wires. This labor lieutenant of capitalism, as Mark Hanna characterizes him, was so crooked that he could not even die straight.

GOMPERS will at least have the satisfaction of reading the Workers Party obituary on his death. Gompers has been killing the radical movement in America regularly every year at A. F. of L. conventions, but that movement is even more tenacious of life than the notorious labor faker. Some people believe that the reason for Gompers' change of mind about passing away, was his desire to die in the United States. Others believe that in his last moments a spark of decency entered his heart and he felt that he had no right to leave this existence the same year that marked the passing of the world's greatest revolutionist, Nikolai Lenin.

THE allies are better pleased that the German nationalists and not the German Communists are about to form a cabinet. A Communist cabinet would see the agents of the American bankers who are now the conquerors of Germany, beating it for the border. It would mean that a German Soviet republic would be set up and the war equipment of the bourgeoisie reduced to toothpicks. Even a nationalist cabinet is better than that. Yet the present situation in Germany resulting from the elections is not satisfactory to the allies.

THE German Nationalists want to restore that country's former prestige and get out from under the Dawes plan. They have the ambition to re-establish Germany as a great commercial and military power. Naturally this prospect does not appeal to the French and the British. But England fears France and France fears England and they all fear Russia. England, France and Italy are trying to make a robber's pact over the part of northern Africa from which the Spanish were expelled. The league of nations stands by twiddling its thumbs and whenever it dares to speak above a whisper in protest one of the powers, the one most concerned, throws something soft and clammy at the league and there is an awful silence.

THE Chinese christian general, Feng, pulled off a dirty trick on the capitalist powers. If the news from China has any degree of reliability it would appear that Feng has failed to carry out the instructions of the capitalist powers and is actually aiding Dr. Sun Yat Sen in bringing about the unity of China, a policy that is supported by the Soviet government. What an awful waste of bibles!

NOW that Calvin Coolidge is safely elected and after that gentleman saved the taxpayers of the nation $1.98 more or less on his trip to the stockyards, the time is propitious for slipping thru a bill calling for the construction of a big naval program to the tune of $140,000,000. We did not notice that Senator Borah who so vigorously opposed a pay raise for postal employes, raised his voice against this extravagance." Big business needs battleships to fight the big business of other countries, while postal employes are plentiful and cheap.

THE ANGEL FALLS

"DEMOCRATIC pacifism," like Icarius in Greek mythology, makes himself wings and seeks to fly as the gods. But as he approaches the sun, the heat of its rays melts the wax with which he had attached the wings, and the would-be god takes a fall. The "democratic pacifist" illusion has held the working class spell-bound for the past many months, as shown by the British "labor" government, the French "radical socialist" government, the LaFollette "progressive" movement in America, and the Dawes plan throwing its criminally hypocritical pretense of "democratic reconstruction" over Central Europe. But the creation of the "democratic pacifist" illusion is but a maneuver of capitalist imperialism which needs and receives the help of the "socialist" parties to lift capitalism over a dangerous period. The work is done. With the aid of the "democratic pacifist" illusion, the plans of the imperialists are advanced, the criminal Dawes plan is put over, and capitalism is ready to restore its naked rule of blood and iron. The "democratic pacifist" angel falls.

SECRECY CLOAKS C.P.P.A. MEETING AT WASHINGTON

Many Clashes on Line of Action to Adopt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—In a guarded room atop the Machinist Building here today a little group of men and women discussed plans for starting in the United States a permanent new political party.

They were members of the executive council of the conference for progressive political action, the organization which first endorsed the independent presidential candidacy of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, and which supported him vigorously in the recent campaign.

Can Only Recommend.

Individually at least, most of the members favored creation of a new party, a movement seeking the backing of the workers and farmers of the country for concerted political action in future national and state elections.

If the wishes of the leaders prevail, it was indicated that out of the committee's discussions will come the definite recommendation to fuse the groundwork for the new party, laid in the LaFollette campaign, be maintained and strengthened. The committee can do no more than recommend. The final decision must be left to a new convention of the progressive conference, expected to be called for Chicago in about six weeks.

Delegates themselves held widely divergent views over what course should be followed if it is decided to give permanency to the new movement. There were among them, particularly the socialists, those who favored launching at once a national party organization, complete from top to bottom, which would place candidates in all election races, from the presidency down to minor state and local offices.

Urge "Go Slow" Policy.

The more conservative of the group would not go so far. They would build along the lines followed in organizing the LaFollette campaign. They would concentrate on a few of the more important offices, contesting only against those candidates, regardless of party, whom they regarded as "reactionary." Then when they had gained sufficient strength, indicated thru the election of candidates to office, they would branch out in political contests all over the country.

Senator LaFollette is said to adhere to the belief that the new movement should be built slowly to insure its permanency. He has repeatedly said that "new parties are born, not made." He believes that the people themselves will demand soon a political realignment and that this should be encouraged by maintaining a permanent third party organization which should lead the way in consolidating opinion toward a new movement.

A spirited wrangle broke out in the opening session when representatives of at least two labor unions, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, moved to postpone indefinitely issuance of a call for a national convention.

Under a mandate from the convention last July, one of the committee's

GOMPERS, WEAK BUT STILL ALIVE, ARRIVES AT SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 12.—Gompers, the head of the American Federation of Labor, whose death was widely reported thruout both the United States and Mexico from reports originating with General Gomez of the military telegraph office in Mexico City, was expected to arrive at this city at 5.45 this afternoon and be taken to a hospital.

Gompers was first taken ill with bronchitis on Monday night and was ordered to bed. He became worse until Wednesday, when he was taken aboard a train to the American border in order to reach a lower altitude on account of weakness of heart function.

Enroute to the United States, the train on which he was taken had to cross two mountain ranges. While still passing thru these high altitudes, General Gomez, the commander of the northern army of Mexico, announced at the telegraph office in Mexico City that he had received a wire from San Nicholas, a small station in the mountains, that Gompers was dead.

Upon arrival at Laredo this morning, a bulletin was issued by physicians saying that Gompers' temperature, pulse and respiration were normal.

CAR STRIKERS CAST VOTES ON PROPOSED PACT

They Stand Firm for Overtime Pay

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 12.—The striking employes of the Illinois Traction system are now voting on a compromise agreement which was reached by union leaders and representatives of the company in a conference here, according to reports.

The 350 striking trainmen met behind closed doors in the Collins House here Wednesday night. Altho no statement was made as to what the man decided, it is understood they are standing firm on their demand for time and a half pay for all work over ten hours.

Sentiment Overwhelming.

W. I. Taylor, representing the strikers, in a statement declared, "I don't want the public to get the idea that I am engineering this strike. I am simply speaking the attitude of the men in plain terms. They feel they are entitled to the overtime payment in common decency, not that they want more money, but more reasonable hours and better living conditions. Their attitude on this question is overwhelming."

"We are making no threat as to what we will do if the company attempts to operate the lines. We are opposed to violence."

It is declared here that if the men vote down the compromise agreement, the terms of which have not been revealed, the Illinois Traction system threatens to immediately import strikebreakers.

The company is losing over ten thousand dollars each day the strike lasts, according to employes working around the building. Friday was the seventh day of the strike.

WORKERS OF PERU RISE IN REVOLT

Indian Union of Two Million May Join

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 12.—From information given me by Anibae Secada, a revolutionary worker who was exiled from Peru and who is now a member of the Communist Party of Mexico, a revolution has broken out in southern Peru, against the autocratic government of President Leguia, a tool of American imperialism.

Hundreds of exiles are waiting the signal to return to Peru to take up the fight against this servile government which has become nothing but a creature of the imperialism of the United States, which sent Admiral Woodward at the head of a whole corps of officers of the army and navy of the United States to "train the Peruvian army and navy to fight Chile."

Hotly Resents U. S. Imperialism.

The Peruvian people are hotly resentful, especially the great group of Peruvian Indians who are, contrary to the North American conception, largely peaceful, industrious and home-building workers on great plantations. They do not want insane wars between Peru and Chile or any other nation, and stirred by the Communist call to arms against imperialism which aims to divide, embroil and weaken the southern countries, they are opening a struggle against their own government which sells the nation into the hands of Yankee imperialists.

From the northern part of Peru, it is said the guerrilla bands are attacking the government garrisons, in order to divert the mercenary forces of the government from concentrating on the south where the main force of the revolt is arising.

Indian Union 2,000,000 Strong, for Moscow.

The Indian workers of Peru are organized in an Indian organization of 2,000,000 members. A representative of this organization attended the recent Third Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions at Moscow this year and also was present there during the sessions of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International.

This Indian organization has now officially declared its adherence to the Communist movement, and it is expected to participate in the revolt which may dislodge the Leguia government from power.

BARBERS' UNION MEMBERS FIGHT REACTIONARIES

Election Takes Place on Dec. 28

The progressive members of the Chicago Local No. 548, of the Barbers' union, at the local meeting Thursday night, launched a drive against the proposed new contract and the reactionary officials who dared to bring in such a proposal, and placed their own progressive slate in the field against the present set of labor fakers.

The barbers have had to abide by their previous three-year contract, in spite of the advance in wages in other trades and the continuous increase in the cost of living. Now the old executive committee want to put over another three-year contract, to which the membership objects on the further ground that it contains proposals of class collaboration which no union should propose against its own interests.

Union Proposes Members Be Docked.

Chief among these proposals is the one that the bosses should have the right to dock the wages of barbers who report after 8 a. m., regardless of the fact that the union rules now permit the bosses to work the men overtime two hours or so in the evening without extra pay. Why the union should propose such a thing to the bosses is something the membership of Local 548 wants to know.

Another similar proposal is that the workers shall be compelled to furnish their coats. Why the old reactionary officials put such things in the agreement is something that needs explanation.

Faker Strong on Points of Order.

In the meeting the contract and the reactionaries who proposed it were bitterly attacked by the progressive members, led by Joseph Giganti, who criticized the proposal and its makers in a spirited speech, interrupted frequently by the official hecklers, especially Joe Lauder, who was as successful

FARM HAND KILLED WHEN POLICE FIRE ON MILK STRIKERS

ROCKFORD, Ill., Dec. 12.—Richard Saunders, a farm hand, died last night as the result of wounds received when motorcycle state highway policemen fired at pickets in a milk strike at Garden Prairie, Tuesday. The patrolmen, Fremont Nestor and Paul Clendening, who fired into the line of defenseless pickets, have been released on bonds. The grand jury has been called to "consider indictments."

Saunders was shot thru the abdomen and Charles Carlson was also wounded. Carlson was beaten over the head with the butt of a revolver wielded by one of the policemen. Nestor has been identified by bystanders as the slayer of Saunders. Clendening was seen beating Carlson over the head with his revolver.

AID URGED FOR 18TH WEEK OF WALTHAM STRIKE

2,700 Workers Standing Solid in Fight

By JOSEPH MANLEY
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 12—"I'll leave it aside and perhaps the angels will fix it." These were the words used by one of the Waltham watch girl strikers, at present in New York soliciting aid for the strike at Waltham, Mass. that is now in its eighteenth week, to describe the terrible nervous strain to which she and the other highly skilled workers are subjected. This girl is one of the many "assemblers," who must assemble and adjust all the delicate parts of a watch. This task is a particular strain on the nerves. It requires intense mental concentration to adjust the various moving parts for trueness and distance of many thous and parts of an inch that can only be measured by the eye and brain trained by years' or experience. Sometimes an assembler will work for hours on a particular watch, especially the higher grade 21 and 22 lewel types, to make it run perfect, only to have to give up in despair and lay it aside with the hope that by tackling another one the brain may be "rested" enough to again resume the almost superhuman strain. Under this strain many of the girl assemblers have been known to scream out loud.

In the present strike can well be seen the truth of the expression that "capitalism is its own gravedigger." The Waltham Watch company has lately come under the control of that most highly developed section of the robber class—finance capital. The plant is notable for the tremendous amount of automatic and labor saving machinery used to grind out a maximum of profits for the coupon clipping capitalists. When the bankers, Kidder-Peabody and their group took control of the plant they were not content with the profits earned in the past. New piece work systems were introduced and the already speeded-up workers were forced to slave under

Those who lag behind in their work are put out in the sun without water.

Prisoners who return to France alive from this African service, are broken wrecks who never recover. Those who try to escape are shot on sight.

TEXTILE MILLS CUT WAGES; RUN ON PART TIME

Run at One-Third of Their Capacity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LAWRENCE, Mass., Dec. 12.—The large textile mills here which are working on a part time basis, have started a drive to drastically reduce wages.

The Everett Mills company, working four days a week, has just announced a ten per cent reduction in wages.

The Arcadia cotton mill is pursuing the same tactics. This mill is working four days per week, with only 30 per cent of its normal capacity employed. A reduction in wages in the Arcadia mill is looked for in the immediate future. The Arcadia mill has been on part time since June.

The weavers in the Arlington mills are running from two to six looms each. The Tyer rubber company has just reduced wages ten per cent and extended the hours to 50 hours per week. For overtime work the men receive only their straight wage rate. Time keepers and efficiency experts have been put on the job in large numbers in all mills and factories in this vicinity.

Cuts in wages are being made in small groups, and two complete shutdowns have been effected this year, one lasting for four weeks.

The notice of reduction in wages in the Everett mills blamed the cut on "business conditions." The notice to the employes declared, "After more than a year of unprofitable business and greatly curtailed operations, it has become necessary to reduce manufacturing costs. Accordingly a reduction in wages of about 10 per cent will be made in the wages paid in these mills beginning on Monday, Dec. 15. At that time a reduced quantity of machinery will be put on a five day a week schedule.—Signed, William D. Twiss, agent."

The Everett mills management declare that their largest competitor, producing ginghams in the s uth—the Dan River mills—has recently cut wages 15 per cent. The reduction in the Everett mills applies to all departments.

The Everett mills have been operating at only 46 per cent capacity for a year, and only 35 per cent capacity for the past three months. The mills have been working on a basis of three days every other week for some time.

chief tasks was to set a date for a national meeting in January.

Union Heads Oppose Third Party.

The move by union men was opposed by a coalition of socialists and leaders of the LaFollette campaign committee who charged that indefinite postponement of the convention would virtually mean the death of third party plans, at least for the immediate future.

The union men, whose names were withheld, declared their organizations would not go along with any third party movement.

This was in line, they said, with the decree of the American Federation of Labor convention that organized labor must remain strictly non-partisan in political affairs.

Despite the protest of the labor union officials, third party supporters predicted they would have sufficient strength to pass the resolution calling for the national convention at which they hope to give life to a permanent new political movement.

Keating Leads Anti-Third Partyites.

Third party adherents scored an important victory today at the first session of the executive committee of the conference for progressive political action. A combination of LaFollette supporters and socialists succeeded in blocking a motion by Edward J. Keating, editor of the official newspaper of the railway brotherhoods which would have postponed indefinitely another convention of the conference when plans for a new third party will be worked out. After a spirited discussion William H. Johnston, chairman, ruled Keating's motion out of order and no protest was made by the railroad brotherhood group.

Keating's resolution postponing the convention, expected now to be called for February, probably in Chicago, would have killed off immediate efforts to develop out of the LaFollette organization a permanent new political movement in the United States.

The sessions are expected to continue until tomorrow afternoon.

William M. Johnstone, president of the International Association of Machinists, is chairman of the committee.

New York Tailors' Meeting Called for Monday, Dec. 22

A complete and open discussion of the policy of the union is to be carried out at the meeting, which is aimed to put the union more in line with the wage standard of better paid workers and to give them an idea of what their position is in relation to the problems of the whole working class.

Julia Stuart Poynts, a forceful and well-informed speaker on wohking class problems, will lecture at this meeting. All tailors are urged to attend.

ful as Harry Lauder in making a monkey of himself by raising points of order.

Tho the reactionaries had the chairman to help them, they failed to shut off the battle waged by the rank and file. The president, Leidig, tried to attract attention to himself by a soft soap speech, his poor heart bleeding for suffering humanity, which he was going to help by aiding the sick members—while he proposes docking the well ones who are working.

The Progressive Slate.

The progressives put up a full slate for local officials, nominating Paul Petras for president; Joe Braun for vice-president; Joseph Giganti for secretary-treasurer; Ben Polk for recorder; and Wm. Wolkowsky for guide. All progressive barbers, who want to take the union out of the control of those who make proposals to benefit the bosses, should support this ticket

Ackerman and Lauder, both former progressives, are now rank reactionaries, since they got re-elected, and Ackerman, together with Frank Rango, are in disfavor with the membership for their connection with the hold-up sheet called the "Chicago Union Labor News"—a paper that was so rotten that even the A. F. of L. denounced it.

Ackerman, Rango and Castleman.

Before the denunciation, however, it published in one issue, a fake resolution which stated that the Barbers' Union endorsed it. This resolution was never brought up at the local, and was simply faked by Ackerman and Rango who had their names on the "advisory board" of the sheet, in cahoots with its chiefs, Pete Kunif, a self-acclaimned gunman and "tough guy" and Castleman, an unprincipled parasite who acted as editor.

These latter worthies, when the membership protested at the fake resolution, came over to the union meeting, to "find out who the reds are," and by raising the red bogeyman and using the gavel, they finally got the fake resolution endorsed after all. But then the Chicago federation had to denounce the sheet, and even the A. F. of L. repudiated it, and Ackerman and Rango found themselves in a fix. Now they have to answer to the membership for their slimy tricks.

The progressives are waging a hard fight and expect every barber who belongs to the union to turn out and support their slate at the election, held Sunday, December 28, from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. at 180 West Washington.

Aid Is Urged for the 18th Week of the Waltham Strike

the grinding lash of the modern efficiency expert.

Spontaneous Strike.

The workers in this plant are men and women about equally divided. Their wages are not sufficient to keep them from the brink of poverty, consequently whole families must work so that they get enough to eat and pile up the enormous profits for the heartless watch trust. The workers both the men and women are typical simple people. They never went on strike before in their lives, no "professional agitators" were on the job to stir them to rebellion. The strike is a spontaneous outburst against the savage exploitation being forced upon American industry in its last capitalist stage—that of operation by finance capital.

Long Struggle.

The strike is now in its eighteenth week; the strikers have maintained a solid front out of the original 2,700 who went out—the entire working force—not more than 100 have returned to work. The strikers have organized a union and affiliated with the International Jewelry Workers' Union. They have sent out committees to the large cities to solicit aid for those back home who are keeping up the fight. One of these committees is now in New York City. Previously they were at New Haven, while there, they were very much impressed by, and grateful for the help they received from the Workers Party of New Haven. In New York City the Workers Party, the Trade Union Educational League and their sympathizers will actively support the strike by helping in the solicitation of aid.

The strike of the Waltham Watch workers is a typical mass spontaneous strike. Communists and their sympathizers must support this struggle Send all donations to the strikers' committee the secretary of which is: Frank Clements, 69 Lowell street Waltham, Mass.

PEASANTS OF MEXICO JOIN WITH MOSCOW

Internationalism of the Workers Endorsed

That the peasant movement of Mexico looks with clear eyes on the world wide class struggle, is indicated in the following statement, adopted by the Second Congress of the League of Agrarian Communes of the state of Vera Cruz in Mexico. It was presented by the resolutions committee, Ursulo Galvan, Rafael Carrillo, and Manuel Diaz Ramirez.

Thesis on International Relations.

We the peasants of the agrarian communes affirm and sustain that the proletarian organizations must tend to greater and greater centralization. And for the realization of our destiny it is not sufficient to organize on national lines but on international lines

In this our Second Congress has been planted the project of the national agrarian organization. Why?

Simply because the peasants wish to take advantage of their acquired experience, they wish to perfect their organization, they wish to strengthen themselves, and they feel the need of such an organization; not an organization as a mere formula, but one that is effective and solid.

This aim and this new tendency shows that the peasants of the state of Vera Cruz are beginning to comprehend the historic mission of the proletariat—that his mission is the realization of the workers' and peasants government and the absolute control of such a government of the land and all the factors of production.

The peasants understand that the realization of their proletarian destiny cannot be accomplished except by strong organization which will result in their own capacity to direct the proletarian economy in a not too distant future.

It will be well to analyze at this juncture the continental situation in relation to American imperialism.

Against Imperialism of U. S. A.

Our internationalism is not the product of an insane desire for empty phrases, but it is the product of the necessity to insure ourselves to strengthen ourselves against our near est, power and real enemy. This enemy is not a chimerical fantasy, it is only too tangible reality—THE IMPERIALISM OF THE UNITED STATES. This absorbing imperialism has thrust its tentacles into all Spanish-speaking countries, after crushing its own working masses.

The Latin-American countries are in fact colonies of U. S. imperialism and of these colonies, alone, no matter how powerful it may be economically cannot fight against or withdraw from this system of absorbing imperialism. And precisely in this lies the reason for our present tendency towards internationalism But first let us see what is an inter national, how many internationals exist and which of them suits us most Internationalism in Two Forms.

There are two distinct international tendencies: one based upon the class struggle and the other in the defense for the collaboration of classes.

Around the International at Moscow the revolutionary worker of all countries have grouped themselves: those workers who are struggling for the establishment of workers' and peasants' governments with the dictatorship of the proletariat, as a repressive instrument against the bourgeoisie who will never admit its defeat nor give up its privileges peacefully.

While around the other internation al—at Amsterdam, are grouped the traitors of socialism, those who helped the imperialist countries in the last European slaughter, something which future generations will remember only with horror.

The Yellows of Amsterdam.

Towards Amsterdam the false and hypocritical revolutionary leaders direct themselves—such a Gompers Ebert, MacDonald, and all their followers of the American continents, who work for the interests of the land owners and the industrialists, who fight against the dictatorship of the proletariat and who submit themselves like little lambs before the dictatorship of the capitalist class.

It is to this yellow internationa' that our "working class leaders," sterile dogs, blind instruments of Yankee imperialists, are trying to bind us.

Hail the Peasants' International.

The second congress of the league of agrarian communes of the state of Vera Cruz has affiliated itself with the peasants' international at Moscow but we must not stop with this simple adhesion, which will not be complete unless we use all our power to form a united front with all Latin-American countries, to fight American imperialism.

Therefore the league of agrarian communes of the state of Vera Cruz resolves:

1. That recognizing the absolute necessity of national as well as inter national organizations in the economic struggle for the better defense of its common interests, it will dedicate all its efforts possible to the construction of a national economic peasants' organization which will fight against organized international capital.

2. To affiliate with the peasants' international at Moscow which stand for the abolition of capitalism.

3. The peasants' international at Moscow, being the only organization which satisfies the aspirations of the field proletariat, this congress will work for the most prompt adhesion to that body.

Land and Liberty . . .

LaFollette's Regulators Slap Big Wall Street Financiers on the Wrist

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the timid voice of the Interstate Commerce Commission is heard in whispering criticism of the three great Wall Street banking houses of W. A. Harriman & Co., and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in their handling the nation's latest rail merger. It is the I. C. C. that is supposed to "regulate" the great transportation of the United States, with its mileage half that of all the railroads on earth. The I. C. C. is in line with the LaFollette idea for "regulating" big business.

But this present development, growing out of the merger of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company, shows again the utter fallacy of "regulation" as a policy for controlling big capitalism.

The three Wall Street banking houses mulcted the two railroads for a $1,000,000 fee in payment for the little job of effecting the merger. The two railroads are no better off today than they were before the transaction was put over. No new roadbed has been built. No ties have been put down. No rails have been layed. There is no new or repaired rolling stock. That is the heavy work that falls on the backs of labor, under brutal conditions at low wages.

Back in palatial offices in Wall Street, the financiers juggled some of the gilt-edged securities of these railroads, persuaded some to sell, others to buy, to put the deal thru. The railroads both had full sets of parasitic officials, but the little job of effecting the combination was too much of an exertion for their languid lives. The workers on these two roads are willing slaves, and they will continue to toil for a mere pittance, so the officials could spend the million dollars, knowing that they could wring more millions out of labor's sweat and agony.

LaFollette urges "regulation" as a panacea for these big grafts and other raw deals put over under private ownership. LaFollette and his followers believe that if these manifestations, which are a little irritating to the reformist viewpoint, can only be cauterized, then the capitalist social order will be a beautiful thing to behold. It was largely in response to this urge that the Interstate Commerce Commission came into existence.

But in the case of this merger, according to its usual custom, the sanctified I. C. C. slaps the Wall Street banking houses on their respective wrists, and call them "Naughty! Naughty!" with the best Fifth Avenue inflection. Then it goes ahead and approves the merger. Of course, the railroad magnates and the Wall Street financiers laugh uproariously at the comical antics of the I. C. C. and then go ahead and plot some more steals and the annexation of some more rich graft.

• • • •

The Interstate Commerce Commission and its thousands of offspring, to be found in the regulatory bodies of numerous kinds set up in the nation, in the states and in the cities, are the creatures of the capitalist system. They are all jealous of the rights of private property. They always decide on the side of capitalist interests. They are a bulwark of capitalism.

• • • •

The reformist weekly, The Nation, sends us an advance copy of its Dec. 15th issue, blue pencilling an article on "Soviet Georgia's Little Revolution." In speaking of the recent counter-revolutionary uprising in Soviet Georgia, the writer says:

"I have put the question to many Communists (in Soviet Georgia) only to receive an almost unvarying reply: No bourgeoisie will voluntarily relinquish its wealth and power. Nationalize its mines, railroads, land, real estate, factories, attempt a serious land levy, and even the bourgeoisie which is the greatest champion of democracy will fight, the its enemy be a regularly elected parliamentary majority. No class submits to the guillotine without a struggle, not even so small and weak and unorganized a class as the Georgian bourgeoisie."

• • • •

The workers and farmers in Soviet Georgia, as in all the other Republics of the Soviet Union, have learned that the LaFollettes, with their choice assortments of cure-alls, are the staunchest allies of the enemy class.

The millions of American workers and farmers in the United States, who turn longing eyes toward the LaFollette movement as "a hope" must learn this lesson. They must learn that their only hope lies in the abolition of the capitalist system, from Morgan to LaFollette, including the Wisconsin senator's "socialist" offshoot. Labor's salvation lies only under the red banners of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat blazing the way for the new Communist social order. The millions must turn their steps that way to achieve their emancipation.

ing he was placed in charge of the distribution of the millions appropriated for the relief of wounded veterans of the world war. Forbes preceded to prove that he was a "go getter" by entering into deals wit contractors, which would relieve the veterans of the appropriation.

UNFORTUNATELY for Forbes, one of those with whom he was in league in the work of robbing the war veterans, a gentleman by the name of Mortimer, had a wife who could shoot craps and was otherwise agreeable. Mortimer caught both o them rolling the ivories, while a bottle of Scotch stood guard over the game This sight had a damaging effect on Mortimer's pride, with the result that he turned around and exposed the whole grafting scheme, involving himself with the rest. The scandal was one of the unsavory affairs that set Washington buzzing with excitement last year. But now that the election is over, it can hurt nobody but Forbes and the lesser crooks.

LEWIS MACHINE IS SWAMPED IN LOCAL ELECTION

Dilles Bottom Miners for Progressives

DILLES BOTTOM, Ohio, Dec. 12.—John L. Lewis and his administration were snowed under in the elections for international and district officers in local 2262.

The vote for international president was, 237 for George Voysey, progressive, of Verona, Illinois, against 118 for John L. Lewis, Springfield, Illinois.

Philip Murray, of Pittsburgh, Pa., received only 118 votes against 233 for Arley Staples, Christopher, Illinois. Both were candidates for the vice-presidency.

Nearing Beat Green.

William Green, secretary-treasurer of the U. M. W. of A., and the most popular member of the Lewis administration, was able to run up only 123 votes against 215 for his opponent, Joseph Nearing, of Nova Scotia.

For auditing and general committee the voting was almost two to one for the progressive candidates. The fact that the administration leaders had their names at the head of the ballot gave them an advantage.

Communist Gets Big Vote.

In the voting for district president, J. J. Hoge, Bellaire, Ohio, a member of the Workers Party, polled 196 votes against 88 for Robert Farmer and 86 for Frank Ledvinka, thus polling more votes than his opponents combined.

For vice-president, Frank Bishopric, Dillonvale, Ohio, polled 159 votes, beating the total of his two opponents by one vote. The progressive candidate for secretary-treasurer, John Gross of Dilles Bottom, got 203 votes, the highest man in the local union.

Brophy Unopposed.

CHICKASAW, Pa., Dec. 12.—There was no opposition to the candidacy of John Brophy, district president, but 20 votes were cast for George Voysey, Verona, Ill., candidate for international president against John L. Lewis, who received 34 votes. Arley Staples running against Philip Murray, received 34 votes and Joseph Nearing, candidate for secretary-treasurer, received 26 votes.

CAL WAS SILENT BUT HIS DOUGH WAS ELOQUENT

Cash Judiciously Used Is Very Convincing

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Who actually got the millions of dollars spent by the republican national committee in the Coolidge campaign will never be known in detail by the public. Only fragments of information have been divulged in the two volumes of typewritten reports sent to the senate committee which was directed to investigate the financing of the presidential contest. But from the bits of confession which may be pieced together in those pages is told a story of suppression of criticism, of financing of influential persons in "traveling expenses," and of payment to Negro papers and foreign language papers for "goodwill advertising."

Cash is Convincing.

Angus McSween is the veteran Washington correspondent for the Philadelphia North American. Van Valkenburgh, editor of that paper owned by the Wanamakers, was one of the noisiest of bull moose. McSween was known as one of the most persistent and derisive critics of the old guard at the capital. Yet the record shows that on Sept. 12 he drew $400 "salary and expenses," and that on Sept. 29 he drew another $400; on Oct. 6 a check for $400 was issued to "Mrs. Angus McSween, chairman;" on Oct. 20 two checks for $400 each were issued to Angus McSween, and Oct. 28 three checks of $400, $500 and $500 respectively. Two days later came another check for $500. Men familiar with the republican headquarters situation at Chicago stated that McSween was supposed to be on the payroll for $400 a week for 16 weeks, during which time he was, to all outward appearance, acting merely as the correspondent of his paper. His articles in the North American were strongly pro-Coolidge.

Reporters Like Labor Fakers.

Another newspaper man on salary from the Chicago headquarters but operating in the national capital, was Mulligan, assistant Washington correspondent for the Boston Post—the "democratic" paper of Boston that came out for Coolidge. He is still on the payroll as advisor or assistant in getting out their weekly news sheet.

In the Chicago office was an advisory committee of newspaper correspondents—Armstrong of the Los Angeles Times, Akerson of the Minneapolis Tribune and Harry Brown of the Anaconda Standard. They received traveling expenses from the national committee. Back in Washington were a number of "key" correspondents who received orders to prepare series of articles on various topics, at generous rates of pay—and who discovered that the committee did not publish much of this costly product.

Harold Lord Varney—Stool.

Expense money for traveling was furnished to Marion Burton, the $18,000 president of the University of Michigan; to Ben W. Hooper, of the railroad labor board; to Frank Mondell, Chas. Brand, Phil P. Campbell and other pro-packer notorieties. J. R. Howard, former president of the American farm bureau federation, and Rev. Joseph Medin, got large weekly installments.

Raymond Robins got $1,500 for traveling expenses, and Dan G. Smith, J. P. McArdle, Jos. Ryan, and Thos. B. Healy of the "labor" brigade dipped deep in the trough.' They had a modest rival in Harold Lord Varney, former conspicuous I. W. W. and in T. V. O'Connor and Daniel J. Keefe. The international association of railway supervisors of mechanics got three payments, and the Illinois Labor News and the Pittsburgh Labor World marketed some goods

The Temperance Man.

Ninety-four foreign language papers shared the distribution of "advertising" money, from $30 to $650 per paper, in the last week of the campaign while the Negro press got two payments ranging from $100 to $1,600 apiece for about 20 publications. The Polish women's alliance, the Omaha Daily Tribune with its German editions, "Bishop A. J. Carey" and Conrad Matson, president of the Fininnish temperance league, Virgina, Minn. took their turn at the pay window with Martin B. Madden, Sen. Willis Sen. Sterling, Gov. Harding of Iowa and Mrs. Corrinne Roosevelt Robinson. Even Heber Votaw, brother-in law of the late President Harding, and federal superintendent of prisons, got $300 for "traveling expenses."

Of course the weekly item of "payroll," amounting to $40,000 to $55,000 told no tales.

NEW YORK PLEDGES WHOLEHEARTED SUPPORT TO DAILY WORKER DRIVE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 12.—The District Executive Committee of New York District No. 2, indorsed the resolutions of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party regarding the DAILY WORKER policy campaign at its last meeting.

Most Important Party Job.

The committee urged all branches to give not only formal compliance but wholehearted support and co-operation in putting the C. E. C. resolutions into effect. The D. E. C. agrees that the campaign to make the DAILY WORKER a stronger and bigger paper next year, is the most important task before the party at the moment.

Not only did the district executive committee indorse the campaign, but the individual members of the D. E. C. subscribed $85.00 as their personal contribution to the drive to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

At the meeting last Sunday the New York Lettish branch pledged itself to raise the same amount for the DAILY WORKER within the next year as it did last year—namely, five hundred dollars.

The West Side English branch of New York started their DAILY WORKER campaign fund last night with pledges totalling $85.00.

ARMY HEADS TRY HARD TO FRAME CAPTAIN HIBBEN

Stool Dubs Charles Recht 'Disreputable Lawyer'

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.— Several more scenes in the ponderous play of the military authorities vs. Capt. Paxton Hibben were added in the reopening of the hearings by the U. S. army board of inquiry. The play is neither so dramatic nor so entertaining as What Price Glory, the Broadway war play which has sold out the house into February. The plots of the two plays are equally slight, although the military officials are introducing a tremendous amount of extraneous heavy material.

Did Not Reach Decision

Counsel for Capt. Hibben, Col John J. Bradley and Major Joseph H. San, filed a letter from Senator Borah emphatically denying that the senate investigating committee had reached any decision whatever on Communist activities in the United States. Judge advocate general, Hibben's prosecutor, used the statements of the department of state inspired by Secretary Hughes making it appear that the Borah committee had found radical activities a menace in the United States whereas that was merely the belief of the state department.

Not Disreputable Lawyer

Major San, who represented Hibben at the hearing, protested against the irrelevant examination of Charles Recht, counsel for the Russian government, at length on his belief and on usage of such words as anarchist and Bolshevist. Recht denied the charge of Bomb Squad Detective Louis Herman, that he was a "disreputable lawyer who took only anarchist cases."

The hearing will be continued later in the month at the Engineers' building, 30 W. 40th st. New York City. Postponment was granted, after debate, in order to allow Hibben's counsel to read and correct errors in the 1,000 typewriten pages of testimony already given.

Immigration Law Is Now Being Revised to Hit Radical Workers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Revision of the three sections of the Burnett immigration act of Feb. 5, 1917, dealing with deportation of criminal aliens, is attempted in a bill now being whipped into shape by the house committee on immigration. Chairman Albert Johnson is sponsor for the measure, which is a compromise of half a dozen introduced by various members. Among other things, the new measure removes the 5-year limitation upon the right of the immigration bureau to deport an alien who has been convicted of a crime.

The committee is trying to provide for deportation of all aliens engaged in traffic in narcotic drugs, as well as those engaged in prostitution, but the language of the present draft of the bill also permits the secretary of labor to deport any alien who shall have been convicted of any crime, after the passage of this measure, for which he is sentenced to imprisonment for one year or more.

SOCIALISTS OF WISCONSIN TRY TO RAFFLE CORPSE

Berger Looking for a Political Grave Digger

By G. S. SHKLAR.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 12.—This is indeed a very difficult time for Berger of Wisconsin. The contradictions of the socialist democratic parties of the Second International are so many that it takes "Comrade" Berger a great deal of time and effort trying to explain things away.

The Latest Perversion.

The Milwaukee Leader in its editorial on December 3, states that the newest plan may be used by German socialists as "a transiuon to socialism" for "have not the Communists of Russia used retreat and maneuvers?"

And so here we have the latest perversion of Marxism, imperialism acting as a torch bearer of socialism. The Wall street robbers bringing socialism to Germany in the form of gold and bayonets.

In its election campaign the S. P. of Wisconsin plays strongly upon the sentiment of German workers and yet in this unique perversion of Marxism, Berger tries to justify the enslavement of German masses by American imperialism.

In the election campaign, Berger substituted the issue of class struggle by an issue of "Honesty." It seems to be the case of a thief raising the cry "catch the thief."

The Third Party Puzzle.

There is another matter that taxes the sluggish mind of "Comrade" Berger. The third party slogan under which they have lured the party into supporting LaFollette is now demanding solution. And yet his erstwhile friends are now silent on the question. Vainly does Berger plead for some action and looks longingly into the eyes of his new affinity.

LaFollette maintains a cruel silence and Berger is up against it, realizing that his scalp is lost if he does not enter into some kind of an alliance in the coming elections.

Nobody Cares For Berger.

The socialist party today is demoralized and politically dead with its leaders waiting for the first opportunity to desert their party and to perfect any kind of an alliance. The farmer-labor party having been destroyed by the LaFollette swoop, there remains only one group with which the S. P. party can unite and that is the left wing of the republican party represented by the christian gentleman Cummings, who, in his christian spirit of tolerance is willing to unite even with the socialist sinners, following the biblical tradition that only the people without sin can throw the first stone. It is apparent that even this alliance if perfected, will be very weak and will not be able to withstand the attack of the all-powerful Governor Blaine, who has the endorsement of LaFollette.

The 5,000,000 Votes Myth.

The socialists make a proud boast that the 5,000,000 votes cast for LaFollette are essentially socialistic or sympathetic to the socialist party. It is natural for the servant to have his pride for the achievement of his master. Especially if this happens to be Berger, the humble servant and "handkerchief head" of the progressive movement, however, their idle claim is shattered when one examines the results of the Wisconsin campaign. Of the 350,000 votes cast for LaFollette in the state of Wisconsin, the S. P. received only 45,000. A very small percentage indeed and coming mostly from Milwaukee. And with Wisconsin making such a poor showing, surely it is a height of arrogance to make a claim of 5,000,000 for the socialist party.

S. P. Wreck on Sale.

The leaders of the socialist party saving led the organization on the rocks are now ready to desert the party and perfect any kind of unholy alliance. The latest flirtation of Mayor Hoan with LaFollette indicates that they are willing to go the full way, not even stopping before the alliance with the republican party machine. There is no difference today between the republican candidate Blaine and the "socialist" Congressman Berger. There is no depth of betrayal to which the socialist party will not stoop, and its treason is only limited by lack of desire on the part of any group to accept and pay for its prostituted services.

The party of the Second International helping to fasten the yoke of imperialism upon the German people is making an unholy alliance with parties of imperialism in this country. The banner of revolutionary class struggle is raised by the Workers' Communist Party.

MINER JUST OUT OF PRISON SAYS 'DAILY WORKER WAS SOMETHING TO LOOK FORWARD TO EVERY DAY

MIAMI, W. Va., Dec. 12.—H. C. Hickey has just been released from the Lewisburg county jail after serving six months for taking part in the 1921 "march of coal miners" Hickey's term ran out this month, but he was being held in jail indefinitely with a $500 fine hanging over his head. Friends have now paid a portion of the fine and Hickey has returned to his home

The DAILY WORKER has just received the following letter from Comrade Hickey: "Editor the DAILY WORKER: I am home now, owing to the assistance of Miss Meyer and other friends of our cause. I enjoyed the DAILY WORKER while I was in prison and want to continue it. I will write and thank Tom Swain, at La Jolla, Calif., who contributed my subscription. Each day I have had something to look forward to.

"Don Chafin had me persecuted and sent to prison on account of the miners' march in 1921. I was given six months and $500 fine. I paid $250 of my fine and a friend went my security for the balance, which I will have to settle up as it will ruin him

"There is a big miners' strike going on here now. We have been out three years in Cabin Creek and will win yet. I am doing good work for our cause. Please send the DAILY WORKER here. (Signed) H. C. J Hickey."

Head of Children's Bureau Says Kids On Farms Must Work

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Child labor is all right for the children of farmers, according to Julia C. Lathrop former head of the children's bureau of the U. S. department of labor, who spoke here on the proposed federal child labor amendment.

Miss Lathrop was supposed to be speaking for the amendment, but her interpretation of it would make it futile. "Opposition to the amendment by the farmers is ridiculous," said Miss Lathrop. "It never was the intention of the amendments framers to have its provisions apply to work done by farmer's children about the farm."

There are more children working on the farms than in any other occupation in the United States, according to the United States 1920 census figures.

No Leopold-Loeb Mercy for Them.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 12.—On a cold winter morning, Dec. 6, at daybreak, two more workers went to their deaths in the South Carolina electric chair. They were Mortimer D. King and Frank Harrell, young cotton-mill workers and confessed slayers of Maj Samuel H. McLeary.

Desperate and hungry, without funds and in dire need, the two young millworkers held up McLeary at the point of a pistol. The car resisted the two bandits and was killed in the encounter. An appeal was made to South Carolina's "praying governor" for mercy, but it was refused. Both were ex-service men. Both had been forced to work in the cotton mills since early childhood. Both were uneducated and without friends or money.

They died realizing that Clarence Darrow had spoken truly when he said, "No murderer need die if he has the money to hire a good lawyer."

Judge Upholds Sandwich Picketing.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12.— Judge William M. Byrnes of the New Orleans civil district court rules that it is not unlawful for members of movie operators unions to have a sandwich man in front of a theater to inform the public that that theater does not employ union labor. The decision was made in the case of Paul and Marcel Brunet, proprietors Harlequin theater who asked that members of Local 293 Motion Picture Operators, be punished for violation of an injunction restraining them from interfering with the theater. Judge Byrnes held sandwich men not unlawful but that not more than one was necessary.

Oposes Judges' Salary Grab.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 12.—A 30 per cent wage boost for Milwaukee's civil judges got a unanimous turndown from the Federated Trades Council to which the grab had been referred for indorsement. The judges are drawing $5,000 a year and want $6,500. "The civil courts need improvement, but not by pay raises," said Delegate Friedrick of the machinists. "The judges only come to organized labor when they want our votes or are after fatter salaries." A cigarmaker delegate said those judges would have a hard time making $5,000 a year in private law practice. The pay boost dropped with a dull thud.

Life for Bottle of Milk.

DANVILLE, Ill., Dec. 12.—James Taylor, Jr., a high school freshman was shot and killed today by Herman Frobose, who had lain in wait in his home for the person who, he said, had been stealing milk left there by the milkman. Frobose told the police he opened fire as the boy picked up the bottle.

Outbreaks in Albania.

BELGRADE.—The Politiks said today that it was reported an insurrection had broken out in various parts of Albania. The government is taking stringent measures for suppression.

CHICAGO LABOR BANK TO OCCUPY NEW QUARTERS

Are More Conveniently Located in Loop

A lease has just been signed which will bring the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank from its old location at 371 West Jackson boulevard into the loop to larger and more attractive quarters at Clark and Jackson in the Austin building.

The new location has been decided upon after some months of search. For the past year it has been obvious that the old quarters were too small to care for the increasing volume of business. At busy hours, particularly on Saturday, the entire floor space was covered. As this situation became more acute, the officials began to search for a place which, in addition to meeting the requirement of more floor space, would also be centrally located.

The directors say: "The Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank will henceforth have not only one of the most attractive and modern bank floors in the city of Chicago, but will also be in a most conveniently located spot to which every trade union member can find easy access."

Worker Killed; Foreman Blamed.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The foreman of a building in course of construction here at 1020 Fifth avenue has been arrested charged with criminal negligence, following a fatal accident to John Buccola.

Buccola, of 219 Violet St., W. Hoboken, was struck on the head by a falling girder. He died instantly. The foreman, Joseph Smith, 2865 east Barnes Ave., Bronx, has been blamed for the accident.

Workers Party Upholds Old Bolshevist Guard in Russia

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has sent the following cable to the Central Executive Committee of the Russian Communist Party:

To the Central Committee,
Russian Communist Party,

Dear Comrades: The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party notes with regret that in spite of the decision of the Thirteenth Congress of the Russian Party and Fifth Congress of the Comintern, which definitely repudiated the position of the minority in the Russian Party, Comrade Trotsky again resumes the discussion on those matters. The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party considers this attempt by Comrade Trotsky extremely harmful to the Russian Party and to the Comintern. We again express our solidarity with the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party and expect the entire Comintern to stand behind the old Bolshevist guard in its valiant leadership toward the final victory of the working class.

The Capitalists Mourn Sam

That Gompers was a key figure in the superstructure of American imperialism is easily gleaned from the manner in which the capitalist press has handled the news of his illness and death. He has occupied space and position in the metropolitan dailies given usually only to presidents and plutocrats. Seven column headlines have been handed out freely to the man upon whom the Morgan-Rockefeller clique depended to play the same role in Mexico that Dawes played in Germany.

The comments of the capitalist press are invariably friendly. He receives the title of the "grand old man of labor" and eulogies of his sanity, conservatism and patriotism are the order of the day.

In other words, the capitalist press of the United States knows that its owners have lost a valuable ally. The workers who think, know that the death of Lenin brought forth no such unrestrained praise for him and his career. On the contrary, there was a note of gladness and relief in the most dispassionate utterances of the capitalist press on the death of Lenin while the most rabid sheets went into ecstacies over the blow the world's working class had received.

Says the Chicago Daily News:

The importance attached to the outcome of Mr. Gompers' illness is due to the fact that his combination with Secretary Morones and with other Mexican labor leaders was expected to greatly assist President Calles in solving the government's labor problems.

What the solution of the (Mexican) government's labor problems was has been told in the columns of the DAILY WORKER by our special correspondent. That solution was the delivery of the Mexican labor movement to the Wall Street bondholders.

A labor leader who can accomplish such a betrayal in the name of labor solidarity is certainly a loss to American capitalism and the capitalist press shows that it realizes it.

More Millions for Battleships

The first fruit of the Dawes plan is now being given to the working masses of the United States. It is in the shape of a huge naval appropriation totalling $140,000,000.

This is the first of a series of naval appropriations that will be voted by the Coolidge government which prates so much about economy when the question of raising the salaries of the postal employes, helping the bankrupt farmers, or granting even the most insufficient compensation to ex-soldiers is brought up. The Yankee imperialists must bring their hell-belching armadas beyond the prowess of the British fleet. Their world interests now demand a world fleet.

With the United States becoming the official receiver of Germany; with the insistence of a large and influential section of the American capitalist class that some sort of a Dawes plan be worked out for the settlement of the French and other debts; with the sharpening of the imperialist conflict of interests in the Pacific; with a growing unrest in the American colonial empire, the imperialist government is preparing to build a battle fleet that will be able to terrorize and crush into submission all opponents and all discordant elements, whether at home or abroad.

A portion of this gigantic sum will be consumed in paying for the cost of additional gunboats to serve Yankee imperialists in Chinese waters. Six more deadly American firesptters are to be sent to these waters. The Standard Oil properties in China must be protected and extended. The influence of Soviet Russia in the Orient must be stifled.

The huge war budget just accepted by the senate is a menace to the safety and welfare of the working and poor farming masses of the United States and the other countries of the world. The bill was adopted without the slightest opposition on the part of the so-called progressives in the senate. At best these "progressives" are only fig leaves for the imperialist ruling class. The struggle against American imperialism, Yankee militarism and navalism is not a matter of talk any more. It is a vital struggle that all workers must prepare to participate in most effectively and at all costs.

Debts and Danger

The parlous days when the horried hun was driving toward Great Britain are over, the once formidable foe is vanquished, the loot is divided and the need for aid has passed. The enemy of British imperialism is not Germany but the United States and the negotiations for the payment of the British debt to wealthy America take on an ever sharper tone.

The British financiers insist that if payments are made to America by France that similar amounts be paid to Britain by this common debtor of the two great powers. The British imperialist press is frantic with the thought that the House of Morgan, because of its ability to bring pressure on France that Britain dare not use, may get payments that should go into British pockets.

The Morning Post, echoing the sentiment of the other capitalist sheets, says:

> It is obvious that we cannot bear all the sacrifice, despite the somewhat barren glory which we reap for our generosity. At the same time, as Mr. Churchill asserted, this country does not wish to pursue any niggardly policy toward France. It seems then that the next step lies with the United States.
> President Coolidge and congress are faced with a grave decision. They have to choose between a policy which from the party point of view may be easy and for the time being profitable, and one which, the causing temporary embarrassment, will in the end redound to the credit of the United States and make for settlement and peace in the world.
> It is primarily a moral, but it is also a business issue. For a too rigid creditor suffers in the end almost as much as his unfortunate debtor."

Discernible behind this smoothly worded threat is the snarl of the British lion whose markets, spheres of influence and world prestige are threatened by the growing financial power of the American plunderbund.

Wars are made in counting houses and fought by the working class doped with patriotic phrases. The scene shifters of Mars are arranging the stage for another world struggle which honeyed phrases concerning "Anglo-Saxon unity" do not avert but which serve to lull the working class of the two contending nations into fancied security.

The Communist International and its affiliated parties alone point out the danger and the only safeguard—working class solidarity and world revolution.

Anglo-French Unity

More and more it is becoming clear that the imperialist British Baldwin government and the so-called liberal French Herriot government have come to a complete understanding. In this sense it is interesting to note how little fundamental difference there is between the foreign policies of the MacDonald and Baldwin ministries.

Great Britain is prepared to blink the anti-German operations of France. The latter is to be allowed more gun toting and bayonet brandishing. Besides, Germany must be forced to keep in mind continually that there was a certain kind of peace signed at Versailles.

But the basic significance of the rapprochement between the imperialist cliques of both countries lies elsewhere just now. It is a union of the hangmen of the colonial and oppressed peoples to perpetuate the imperialist edifice at the expense of the lives and energy of hundreds of millions of poor people.

France is to be permitted to step in and crush the heroic Riffs who have made the Spanish murderers bite the dust. England is to be given a free hand in butchering the defenseless Egyptians. An entente cordiale is to be established of all the erstwhile allied imperialist powers to fight Communism. A new offensive will be launched again what the capitalist pogrom agents call Pan-Asiatic movements. China must be strangled especially as a move to stab Soviet Russia in the back and thus save the greatest labor market in the world for the exploiting class. It is particularly important to notice that the imperialists are planning to combat "the black chauvinist propaganda by Negro organizations in the United States."

This is an unholy alliance of the imperialist powers against every movement which struggles for freedom of the oppressed from the oppressors and for freedom of the exploited from the exploiters. Such Anglo-French unity is not only a source of friendship between the two countries, but is at once a source of new conflicts, new wars between France and England as well as in the world at large.

The workers of every country must smash this union of imperialist piracy.

COMMUNIST QUIZ UNWELCOME TO LA FOLLETTE, JR.

Workers Party Heckler Stumps Speaker

By O. S. SHKLAR.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 12.—"There is no place in this country for a party of class action; the LaFollette movement is based upon a much broader basis of democracy," declared Phil LaFollette, son of Robert M. LaFollette at the open forum lecture, on "Rich, Poor and my Father" delivered by Bob's son on Dec. 9.

In a sentimental appeal to a group of intellegentsia to gather courage and militant spirit in a crusade for the principals of democracy, district attorney of Dane county denounced the dictatorship of the rich and the workers' dictatorship and pleaded for the group "in between" standing for the spirit of 1776 and the true spirit of democracy.

Wisconsin Humbug Cited Ideal State

Mayor Hoan, acting chairman of the meeting, sat silently while Bob's son cited Wisconsin as an ideal state. Mayor Hoan is the author of a book written in 1914 on the failure of regulation in which he proves that the LaFollette management had the effect of strengthening the grip of monopoly and corporations on Wisconsin industry and Wisconsin railroads.

LaFollette's boy was very much embarrassed when we confronted him with questions whether the C. P. P. A. intends to form a third party and whether it will be a farmer-labor party, a liberal party or no party at all. As the local paper describes it: "Mr. LaFollette blushed, grinned and did not answer for more than a minute. Then he replied: 'I'd rather not answer that question' and then he blushingly added: 'There are too many reporters in this room.' You understand I am my father's son.' When confronted with the same question from the other corner of the hall Philip again declined to answer.

Sham of Courage and Democracy.

The representative of the Worker Party rebuked LaFollette, Jr. for lack of courage to answer the question or organization of the third party, after delivering a fifteen minutes oration on the necessity of courage and fighting spirit. His eulogizing of democracy was also exposed when it was pointed out that while he was opposed to the workers' rule and class action his father did not hestitate to set himself up as a dictator over the progressive movement.

Workers Party Only Leader of Workers

The fact that Mayor Hoan presided at the LaFollette meeting assumes considerable significance since he was the bitter opponent of the LaFollette alliance.

It appears that the so-called left wing of the socialist party is willing to go the right wing one better. While the right wing is holding conference with the left wing of the republican party the other group is willing to go all the way towards the alliance with real reactionaries of the republican camp headed by Governor Blaine, who was officially endorsed by LaFollette

With the destruction of farmer-labor party movement and the demoralization of the socialist party following the LaFollette swoop—the Worker (Communist) Party holds the most strategic position in Wisconsin as the only party of revolutionary class struggle. In opposition to Coolidge and LaFollette dictatorship the Workers Party raises the slogan of proletarian dictatorship.

Post Office Clerks Get Less Pay Today Than Ten Years Ago

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Ninety per cent of all postoffice employes receive less than $2,000 a year, and the real wage of the postoffice clerk is less today than 10 years ago, says Thos. F. Flaherty, secretary National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, in a final appeal to congress to pass the salary increase bill over the Coolidge veto.

Flaherty thinks patience has ceased to be the only virtue to which the 300,000 workers in the postal service need aspire. The virtue of survival in the race with poverty is one he would match up with patience. Flaherty shows that in less than four years the over-worked employes in the service have produced an increase in revenues that has wiped out a deficit of $52,000,000, and that the clerks are giving more service at less real wages than at any time since Ben Franklin stated the postoffice system. He asks congress to pay a living wage.

NEW ENGLAND TEXTILE WORKERS LEARN WHAT PROSPERITY MEANS TO THEM UNDER CAPITALISM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LAWRENCE, Mass., Dec. 12.—The Everett Cotton Mills, among the largest of Lawrence, have announced a 10 per cent cut and the beginning of a 5-day week operation. This is the first Lawrence textile mill to follow the general New England movement of wage reductions and more regular operation. Fall River mills in southern Massachusetts are already on the new schedule and Rhode Island mills are also.

Everett Mills normally employ about 1,800 workers. It is thought that at least a third or possibly one-half of the workers will not be employed under the new schedule as the whole plant will not be reopened. The mills have been operating on a three-day week for a month and a half previously operated only intermittently, frequently closing completely for two weeks' periods.

FIRST COMMUNIST "FACTORY DANCE" ON TONIGHT AT NORTHWEST HALL

The first Communist "factory dance" ever held in America will take place tonight under the auspices of the Young Workers League at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves.

The dance is being held especially for the mail order house workers in the Montgomery and Ward factory, who have become acquainted with the Young Workers' League thru the Young Worker mail order house campaign.

"Many affairs have been arranged by your bosses for you," says the circular distributed by the Y. W. L. to the "Monkey" Ward employes. "But this dance is arranged by young workers like yourself and for the benefit of yourself—not for the bosses."

The admission price is 35 cents, but a special price of 25 cents is being charged the "Monkey" Ward employes. A large number of tickets have already been sold to league and party members who are expected to be present to enjoy the snappy jazz music and get acquainted with the Montgomery and Ward workers. Incidentally, the Young Workers League members are planning to make the "Monkey" Ward employes better acquainted with the Communist movement.

Tickets have been sold at the doors of the factory by the Young Workers League members. The dance is known as a "moonlite and snowball."

Half the proceeds will go to the DAILY WORKER and half to the Young Worker.

LECTURE SUNDAY UPON CANADIAN LABOR MOVEMENT

Tom Bell Has a Live Subject for Workers

We are strangely unacquainted with the labor movement of Canada. The it lies next door and has many important and interesting organizations, political parties and union movements, the overly self-centered labor movement of the United States pays little heed to the millions of workers beyond the Canadian border.

Yet there are many vital matters upon which we may well inform ourselves, many situations in the organizations of labor, political and industrial, which serve as a warning and a guide in our own movement. These matters will be taken up fully at the open forum of the Workers Party, which will be held at the Ashland Auditorium, next Sunday evening, at 8 o'clock, in a lecture by Tom Bell.

The speaker is one who is thoroly acquainted with the Canadian labor movement and whose analysis of it will be given in his characteristic incisive and spirited delivery which few speakers possess.

The title of the lecture is, "The Canadian Labor Movement; Its Tendencies in Politics and the Trade Unions." The movement for Canadian autonomy from the American Federation of Labor, the rise and decay of the O. B. U., the Canadian labor party and many other features make this lecture one of especial importance for those who wish to profit from the experience of labor in other countries.

The Russian Workers' Revolution.

When the Russian workers and farmers made their revolution in November 1917, they took over the lands and the factories, the palaces and the houses, and made all the rich people go to work or else leave the country. Whoever would not work, got nothing. Only workers and farmers who were willing to work for each other, got all the land and the homes.

This revolution made the capitalists in other countries afraid. That is, they thought that the workers in their own countries would do the same thing, and they would have to go to work for a living. So they got together and tried to overthrow the workers' government; they wanted to bring back the old days when landlords and capitalists owned everything in Russia, and the workers nothing—the same as in all countries where there has been no workers' revolution.

But the Russian workers and peasants built up a Red Army and a Red Navy, and the workers in many of the capitalist countries refused to fight the government of the Russian workers and farmers.

When the capitalists saw that they could not change back to the old order by fighting with armies and guns, they tried something else. They made up their minds to fight Soviet Russia with the BLOCKADE. That is, they kept all ships away from Russia, the ships that carried food, clothing and machinery which Russia had to have. On top of this, Russia had famine, a terrible drouth when nothing would grow out of the ground.

Now even where there is no drouth, a country can't live unless she trades with other countries. That is, she gives other countries things that those people need, and she gets in return other things that she needs.

The Russian workers' government said to the capitalists of other countries, "We will pay you well for the things we need. We will pay you in gold or in goods."

But the capitalists said, "We will not sell to a workers' government. We will starve you out until you give back the land and homes to the landlords, and the factories to the capitalists."

The world capitalists are fighting Russia, because Russia is fighting to free all the workers. But the workers of all countries have made up their minds to save Russia even tho they are poor workers themselves because they work for capitalists in rich capitalist countries, and get only a small part of the wealth they produce.

The capitalists see that their guns and blockades did no good so they now pretend friendship for Russia. No matter what the capitalists say or do, the workers and the workers' children must support Russia to the limit.

MUSIC LITERATURE DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

When I read that the Bush conservatory orchestra, which gave its first concert of the season at Orchestra Hall recently, had announced the finale of "Das Rheingold" as the windup of the program, I blinked and read again. For the finale of "Das Rheingold" is, to say the least, exceptionally difficult music to play. It has a very definite program, as unfolded by the Wagnerian system of leading motives. Donner, the god of thunder calls up a storm. The storm clears away leaving a rainbow leading to Valhalla. In a slow procession the gods cross the rainbow to their newly built castle, while from below comes the cry of the Rhinemaidens, bereft of their magic gold. (These Rhinemaidens are Wagner's worst dramatic blunder, but the music allotted to them is quite effective on the concert stage.)

Conductor Deserves Praise.

The difficulty lies in the string parts, especially toward the beginning, in the description of the rain bow. I didn't think they could do it but they did, and much is Richard Czerwonky, the conductor, to be praised for the accomplishment.

The program opened with Dvorak's fifth symphony, "From the New World." Dvorak wrote most of this work while living in a Bohemian colony in Iowa, and when he had finished he thot he had produced a symphony which, while not actually using the melodies of Negro folk lore songs got into the spirit of the Negro music. Viewed from this angle the symphony is a very diluted creation indeed. Seen without the connotations of any kind of folk music, it is one of the great masterpieces in symphonic form. I have heard it and played it a thousand times, more or less, and never get tired of it.

Didn't Play Best Part.

Robert Quick, a good violinist with a rather wooly tone, played the first movement of Saint-Saens' third violin concerto. The first movement is unfortunately far worse than the second which is really fine, but Quick didn't play the second.

Evelyn Daniels played the first movement of Beethoven's third piano concerto. If only composers could be induced to study these piano concerti of Beethoven! It would result in far fewer concerti, and those of a lot better quality. For the five works Beethoven wrote in this form for piano and orchestra are unsurpassed, and stand out as perfect examples. Miss Daniels' performance had much vigor and life and character.

Beulah Van Epps, a soprano, also a student at Bush, sang the famous aria "Depuis le Jour," ("Ever Since the Day") from Charpentier's opera "Louise." It is an aria full of romance and charm, but it was not particularly inspiringly sung.

ONE THOUSAND DOGS

A thousand dogs took part in the dog show in Chicago. Big police dogs, trained to help break strikes. Little toy spaniels bred to play with.

We read on: "The little fellow. He was an effectionate, inquisitive, watchful little 'pooch,' always chipper, ready to eat anything and full of tricks and amusing devices."

Maybe that will be said about kids some day, but this was dog day in Chicago and the reference was to an English spaniel.

Maybe you too are willing, very willing for "some day" to come, when the class that carries the world will say to the class that rides it, "Children before dogs, and we before you." When masses begin to say this and start to crowd in a bit, elbowing the yellows out, well, it will only be a short jump then to a workers' and farmers' government. If you are strong for that day, you'll buy an INSURANCE POLICY and so help

How One Should Not Write the History of October

(Comrade Trotzky's Book: "1917".)

The Fifth World Congress and the Thirteenth Party Conference of the Russian C. P. unanimously condemned the political line of the Russian opposition, with Comrade Trotzky at the head, as petty-bourgeois and opportunist. In spite of this, Comrade Trotzky is carrying on his struggle still further, but in a new form. Under the flag of Leninism, he aims at a revision of Leninism. His book on Lenin was the first attempt of this sort. Many comrades allowed themselves to be dazzled by the literary side of the book, but the scientific organs of the Communist Party of Russia and of the Communist Party of Germany immediately recognized its tendency and repudiated it with sharp criticisms.

There now follows the second attack. Comrade Trotzky has written a preface of about sixty pages to the recently published third volume of his work: "1917". As in their time, those who came after Marx sought, under the flag of Marxism, to revise Marx, so Comrade Trotzky here attempts a revision of Bolshevism in the same of "Leninism". The Pravda, the central organ of the Communist Party of Russia, replied to this attempt with the following article which we reprint in full.— Editor's Note.

COMRADE TROTZKY'S recently published book: "1917," which is devoted to the "Lessons of October," will soon become the mode. This is not to be wondered at, as it amied at becoming an inner party sensation.

After the events of the past year, which have proved the incorrectness of the standpoint of our party opposition, after the facts, which have again and again proved the correctness of the leadership of our party, Comrade Trotzky again revives the discussion, altho with other means. The preface to the book (and it in this preface, as well as in the annotations, that there lies the "kernel" of the book) is written in a semi-Aesopic language, so that the totally inexperienced reader will fail to observe the hints and allusions with which the preface is interlarded. This peculiar cryptic language, for which Comrade Trotzky, in spite of the fact that he himself demands "critical clearness," has a strong preference, must be deciphered. For the work of Comrade Trotzky, which claims to be a guide to the "Study of October," threatens to become a guide for "every present and future discussion." It takes upon itself the responsibility to fight against the line of the party, as well as of the Comintern, in which it in no way bears the character of a theoretical analysis, but more resembles a political platform, upon the basis of which it will be possible to undermine the exact decisions adopted by the respective congresses.

Comrade Trotzky's book is not only written for the Russian reader; this can be recognized without difficulty. It is to a large extent written for the "information" of foreign comrades. Now, when the problem of "Bolshevising" stands on the order of the day in a whole number of Communist parties when the interest for the history of our party is undoubtedly increasing, the book of Comrade Trotzky can render a great disservice. It is not only not a text book of Bolshevism, but it will much rather become a factor for "debolshevising" the foreign Communist parties—so biassed, one-sided, and at times exceedingly falsely, does it describe the events, from the analysis of which it seeks to draw conclusions for the present.

This is what renders necessary a critical examination of this new book of Comrade Trotzky. It must not remain unanswered. One can only regret that Comrade Trotzky, who draws conclusions from "the teachings of October" which, it is true, are false, draws no conclusions from the more recent epoch of last year's discussion. The best test of different points of view is, as Comrade Trotzky himself admits, experience, life itself. Life however has shown that the ruling line which is recognized by the party, has not only not brought the country to "the verge of ruin," as the last year's opposition predict, which prophesied for the country all the plagues of Egypt, but in spite of events, which are independent of every "platform," as the bad harvest etc., has brought the country forward.

On theother hand a whole number of new tasks under new conditions have arisen: difficulties which are determined by the process of growth. The whole party desires, before all, concrete work under a leadership which has been tried by experience. For this reason it was not in the least desirable to reopen the old disputes, even in another form.

Comrade Trotzky saw fit to do this. Of course he bears the whole responsibility for it. Willingly or unwillingly, we must reply to this book, as the party cannot permit a propaganda which is directed against the decisions which the party adopted with such firmness and unanimity to remain unanswered. We will therefore examine the statement which Comrade Trotzky has now submitted to the party, the "lessons" which he has drawn from October and is now very kindly communicating to our young and old comrades.

Decision of the Party C. E. C.

To all Party Editors:
Dear Comrade:

You will find attached hereto an English translation of a review of Comrade Trotzky's Book "1917" entitled "How One Should Not Write the History of October."

By decision of the Central Executive Committee all Party papers are instructed to reprint this Pravda Review within ten days time.

It is the further instruction of the Central Executive Comittee that no Party paper shall reprint the book "1917" or any chapter thereof in the Party press.

The Central Executive Committee also instructs that in connection with the reprinting of the review attached the following statement by the Central Executive Committee shall appear in the Party papers:

"The Fifth World Congress of the Communist International and the Thirteenth Party Conference of the Russian C. P. branded the opposition in the Russian Communist Party under the leadership of Comrade Trotzky as 'petty bourgeois opportunistic.' Comrade Trotzky has recently published a book '1917' in which he reopens the discussion which was closed by unanimous decision of the Fifth Congress and of the Thirteenth Conference of the C. P. of R.

"The review of Comrade Trotzky's book herewith 'How One Should Not Write the History of October' shows clearly the method employed by Comrade Trotzky to again open the discussion.

"It is the view of the Central Executive Committee of the W. P. of A. that the publication of Trotzky's book in this country would be a detriment to the work of Bolshevizing the Workers Party which is the most important task before our Party.

"The Central Executive Committee regrets to note that the Volkszeitung has already begun publication of the book serially. It has instructed the Volkszeitung to discontinue the publication and further instructs all other Party papers that neither the book as a whole nor any chapter thereof is to be reprinted in the Party press.

"The Central Executive Committee has further instructed all Party papers to reprint the accompanying review of Comrade Trotzky's book which was originally published in the Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party of Russia."

"CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE W. P. of A.
"WM. Z. FOSTER, Chairman,
"C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary."

Prompt compliance with these instructions is desired of all Party papers.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

I.
The Question of Historical Investigation.

The axle upon which the statements of Comrade Trotzky turn is the estimate of the importance of various periods in the history of our party. He sees things essentially as follows: the whole period of the development of the party up to October 1917 is a thing of very little importance. Not until the moment of seizing power was the question decided, it is this period which stands out before all others, only then have we the possibility of testing classes, parties, their leading cadres, and individuals.

"It would mean a piece of barren scholasticism, but in no way a Marxian political analysis, were we at the present time to occupy ourselves with an analysis of the different view-points of revolution in general, and of the Russian in particular, and thereby to overlook the experiences of 1917. It would be as if we were to indulge in disputes over the advantages of various methods of swimming, but obstinately refuse to turn our eyes to the river, where these methods are being applied by bathers. There is no better test for a point of view over revolution than its application in revolution itself, precisely as a method of swmming can best be proved when the swimmer springs into the water. . . ." (page XVI.)

"What is the meaning of Bolshevising the Communist parties? It means such an education of these parties, such a selection of the leading persons, that they will not run off the track at the moment of their October. Herein lies Hegel, the book-wisdom and the essence of all philosophies. . . ." (page 65.)

These sentences only contain half the truth, and one can therefore (as Comrade Trotzky does) draw totally false conclusions from them.

Comrade Trotzky says to the Communist parties; Study October in order to be victorious! One must not overlook October.

Certainly one must not do that. Just as one must neither forget the year 1905, nor the very instructive years of reaction. Who, and where and when, has recommended such a monstrous thing? Who, and where and when, has even ventured to advocate such an absurdity?

No one has recommended it. But precisely in order to understand the pre-conditons of the October victory, one must at all costs look beyond the immediate preparations of the revolt. But in no event must one be separated from the other. In no circumstances must one estimate groups, persons and tendencies by disconnecting them from that period of preparation which Comrade Trotzky compares to disputes over "the best method of swimming." Of course in the "critical period," when it is a question of a decisive struggle, all questions are faced in all their acuteness, and all shades, tendencies and groups tend to express on this occasion their most characteristic, inner, essential qualities. On the other hand, the explanation for the fact that they play a positive role during the flood-time of revolution, does not always lie in the correctness of their "standpoint."

"It is not difficult to be a revolutionary when revolution has already broke out, when everything is in flames," —thus Comrade Lenin formulated this aspect to the question (Collected Works Volume 17, Page 133, Russian Edition.) In another passage he says: "The revolutionary is not he who becomes a revolutionary on the outbreak of revolution, but he who defends the principles and slogans of the revolution at the time of the most furious reaction." (Ibid. Volume 7, Page 15).

That is not the same thing as Trotzky says.

Let us dot the i's. What determined the attitude of the party of the Bolsheviki in October? It was determined by the whole previous history of the party, by its struggle against all opportunist deviations, from the extreme menshevists up to the Trotzkyites (For example the "August" Bloc). Can one however, perchance, say that the correct standpoint of Comrade Trotzky (because it coincided with the Bolshevist standpoint) in the October days resulted from his attitude in the preparatory period? Obviously one cannot say that. On the

Lore and the Comintern

By Moissaye J. Olgin

Second Article.
The Levi Case.—"Volkszeitung" in sympathy with Levi.—Comrade Lore and the Russian Discussion.

PAUL LEVI was a leading figure in the United German Communist Party. Paul Levi did not stand the test of Communist discipline. Paul Levi stabbed his party in the back in one of the most crucial moments of its history. And, Paul Levi was persona grata on the pages of the "Volkszeitung" both before and after he committed his act of treason against the German Communist Party. At one time it looked as if Paul Levi was the greatest authority on Communism and Communist tactics for the leading spirits of the "Volkszeitung." When Comrade Lore wished to find corroboration for his opinion on Serrati's refusal to comply with the decisions of the Comintern, he found no better authority than Paul Levi. When the crisis within the German Communist Party broke out, the "Volkszeitung" was in open sympathy with Paul Levi against the German Communist Party and against the Communist International.

Important Case For Comintern.

THE Levi case is still very fresh in the memory of all those who participated in the life of the Comintern. In March, 1921, the famous March action of the German proletariat took place. The movement was a failure. Partial insurrections did not lead to a general revolt of the German masses. The white terror set in. The German bourgeoisie, aided by the German social-democrats, filled the jails with Communists. Court martials were meting vengeance on the revolutionary proletariat. At this time Paul Levi, a member of the executive committee of the Communist Party and editor of one of its papers, published a brochure under the name "Our Way—Against Putschism," which in scathing words accused the party and the Communist International of having wantonly provoked the March action without any hope for success and with full knowledge that the action would bring only bloodshed and misery to the German proletariat.

Levi's Treason.

THE circumstances under which this brochure was published are worthwhile considering. The German Communist Party at that time led an "illegal" existence. Raids and arrests of Communists were rampant all over the country. Thousands of revolutionists were facing court martial. The brochure went to print on April 3, when the fight in many places was still going on. It was sent to print without the knowledge of the central committee of which Levi was a member. And it was published in spite of the fact that the enlarged executive committee had, by a majority of 44 to 5, rejected the resolution embodying the views of Levi's group. The German Communist Party could but expel Levi for such action which was more than a breach of discipline, which brought confusion and created a crisis in the German Communist Party at a most dangerous moment. The central committee excluded him from its own midst and from the party, as was stated in the resolution, for "crass breach of confidence and a grave injury to the party."

THE executive committee of the C. I. took up the Levi case at its meeting of April 27, practically all members of the E. C. expressing a glowing indignation again Levi's brochure. The general opinion was that Levi became a traitor. In the name of the E. C., Zinoviev branded as an infamous lie the statement of Levi that the March action was initiated by the E. C. of the C. I. The resolution adopted at that session reads in part:

The executive committee of the Communist International, having detailed knowledge of Paul Levi's brochure 'Our Way—Against Putschism,' approves of the action of the United Communist Party of Germany in excluding Paul Levi from the party and thereby from the C. I. Even if nine-tenths of Paul Levi's judgment of the March action were correct, he would have had to be expelled in this case for a monstrous breach of discipline and because Levi's attack in the given situation represents a blow to the party from behind."

AMONG those who signed the resolution was Lenin. In a letter to the German comrades published subsequently in the "Communist International" for December, 1921, but written on August 14, 1921, Lenin, discussing the character of and the lessons to be derived from the March action, says about Levi:

Of course, Paul Levi's assertion that the action was a 'putsch' is sheer nonsense . . . Levi is putting his criticism in a non-permissible and injurious form. Levi who preaches to others cautious and circumspect strategy throws himself into the fight (against his party) so prematurely, so unpreparedly, in such a nonsensical, wild fashion. . . . Levi acted as an 'intellectual anarchist' instead of acting like an organized member of the proletarian Communist International. Levi broke discipline."

EARLIER still, at the session of the Third Congress of the C. I., July 1, 1924, Lenin, discussing the March action and Levi's attack, said: "It is important to have a critical attitude towards our errors. We have begun with that. If, however, after a fight in which hundreds of thousands participated, one attacks this fight and acts the way Levi acted, he must be excluded. And this we have done."

RADEK who severely criticised the position of the German Communist Party at the Third Congress of the C. I., had to say concerning Levi:

"Levi's very behavior proved more than his argumentation the absence of any organic connection between him and the party. It proved that he was capable of throwing a bomb at the party at a moment when it was bleeding to death."

IT is evident that whatever the opinion of the C. I. might have been concerning the revolutionary action of March, 1921, in Germany, it was unanimous in considering Paul Levi's stand as non-Communist. Paul Levi's attitude had to be judged by every Communist quite apart from correctness or incorrectness of his view on the March action. Paul Levi's action could not have been tolerated in any revolutionary organization which meant action. Yet the "Volkszeitung" totally ignoring this side of Levi's demonstration and refusing to condemn Levi for his treacherous attack upon his party, gave full prominence to Levi's attacks on the C. P. and the International.

ON May 5, 1921, the "Volkszeitung" reprinted big excerpts from Levi's brochure. These excerpts contained such accusations as this:

"It is a total departure from the past that the Communists should work as somebody's errand boys, that they should provoke massacre of their brothers. The March revolution was "the greatest Bakunist putsch of history up to date. "The action was insanely begun, no man knew what the fight was for." "This action, this foolhardiness had to be stimulated, had to be enlarged. It was capable of enlargement. To the dead in the Mannsfeld region and Hamburg were added the dead in Halle. But they did not bring the necessary 'mood.' After the dead in Halle came the dead in Essen. But the 'mood' did not arrive. After the dead in Essen came the dead in Mannheim. But there was no 'mood' as yet." "We wish our comrades to have no repentance for what they did. We would put only one punishment on them, namely, that they should never appear before the eyes of the German workers."

THIS and other excerpts were freely published in the "Volkszeitung" without a word of unfavorable comment as to the behavior of Paul Levi. On the contrary, the "Volkszeitung" continued to give Paul Levi full publicity as one of its favorites. On April 13, 1921, the "Vorwarts," weekly edition of the "Volkszeitung," reprinted in full Levi's reply to the accusation of the executive committee of the Comintern that he supported Serrati. On April 16, the "Vorwarts" gave a full page to a speech delivered by Paul Levi in the German reichstag. On May 10, the "Volkszeitung" reprinted the protest of several local Communist groups against the central committee of the German Party for temporarily suspending the members of the Levi group from participation in the reichstag faction.

Levi Publicity No Accident.

THE favorable prominence given to Levi was by no means an accident. It was in full harmony with the "Volkszeitung's" view on discipline in the C. I. This view was expressed as early as March, 1921, in an article by a German comrade published in the "Volkszeitung" and expressing the view that, bluntly speaking, "Moscow" should not "dictate" to other Communist Parties the course of their action. The article, giving an account of a difference of opinion between some of the German comrades and the executive committee of the C. I., says in part: "After the Russian C. P., the German C. P. is the strongest and most important in the C. I. It has made proposals as to the organization of relationships between the individual C. P.'s and it was right in doing so. Communication with the E. C. was often deficient, in consequence

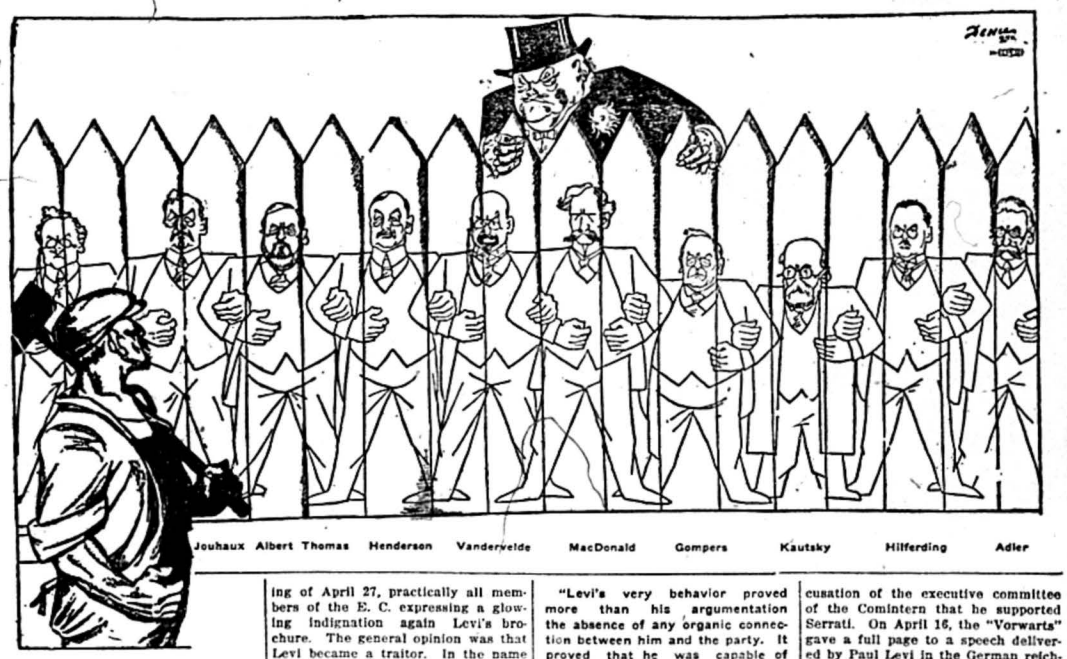
THE LAST DEFENSE OF CAPITALISM



The Discussion on Party Tasks

FARMER-LABOR OPPORTUNISM

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

THE campaign of the Workers Party to establish a farmer-labor party was the major united front manouvre of our party up to date. On the whole, despite some decided disadvantages which will be touched upon in this article, it was beneficial to our party. It put the Workers Party at the head of large masses of workers in motion and gained for it much prestige as the fighting party of the working class. It gave us an opportunity to acquire much skill in the handling of these masses and enabled us to make them at least partly acquainted with Communist principles and tactics. It gave our own party membership a realization that the Workers Party, altho a small party, can become a real factor in the class struggle by following a militant policy.

But this farmer-labor party campaign was carried out under exceedingly difficult circumstances. The sentiment for a farmer-labor party of industrial workers and poor farmers, distinct from a LaFollette third party, was weak and vague, and almost the entire trade union bureaucracy was opposed sharply to the farmer-labor party. The problem of driving a wedge between the "class" farmer-labor movement and the LaFollette movement proper, and of organizing a farmer-labor party in the teeth of official trade union opposition, was a great one. The burden of leadership in the movement fell almost entirely upon the membership of the Workers Party. Naturally many mistakes were made. Some of these were of an opportunistic character.

In their desperate efforts to breathe the breath of life into their dead "class" farmer-labor party slogan, the farmer-labor Communists of the minority, especially Comrades Ruthenberg and Minor, have singled out some of these incidents and, upon the strength of them, have denounced the Central Executive Committee as opportunist. They conveniently overlook far more serious mistakes made by themselves when they were the C. E. C. It is the purpose of this article to discuss the various mistakes in our labor party policy to place the blame for them where it belongs, and to draw the lessons from these mistakes for our future work.

The Chicago July 3rd Convention

The W. P. policy in this convention, mapped out by the present minority, which was then the C. E. C., was highly opportunistic. The basis of the convention was a united front from above, between the leaders of the Workers Party and the farmer-labor party. At the last W. P. convention comrades Pepper, Ruthenberg, and Lovestone made the welkin ring with complaints about the Chicago united front, but they themselves engineered this phase of it, the one section that was really open to serious criticism.

Perhaps the biggest mistake made at the convention was pressing to the point of a split the question of the immediate formation of a farmer-labor party. Experience later with the flimy federated farmer-labor party, which was formed at that time, showed that this mistake originated in an opportunistic grasping for the masses. The former C. E. C., in their eagerness literally to grab off a mass party, over-reached themselves. For this they were censured in the latest decision of the Communist International on our labor party policy, as follows: "The Workers Party failed in developing sufficient pliability with regard to so-called progressive elements and did not devote, and does not yet, devote, enough attention to the work among the workers organized in the labor unions." Former endorsement of the split by the C. I. were based on reports that the split resulted in a party of 600,000 workers and poor farmers.

Other sharply opportunistic tendencies developed with regard to the program of the F. F.-L. P. A committee entirely controlled by the W. P. presented to the convention a program so conservative in character that it was acceptable to the most reactionary elements and was adopted unanimously. (Comrade Pepper was especially pleased with the "courage" of our party in supporting the petty-bourgeois money plank which was supposed to win for us the support of the farmers). Comrade Pepper was pleased over this incident, almost as much so as some months later when he heard that our comrades in Minnesota had decided to vote for Magnus Johnson. He declared that we must have such errors in the platform, because behind this confusionism stands great masses, and of course we had to cater to catch them. Another fine sample of the opportunism of the former C. E. C. at the Chicago convention was the failure to introduce a resolution for the dictatorship—it was feared it would pass and break up the show.

The August Thesis

Among the very worst opportunistic development of the W. P. labor party policy stands the so-called August thesis. This was the chef d'oeuvre of Comrade Pepper, a master opportunist, the shrewdest yet produced by the American Communist movement, and one who understood how to cover up his opportunism with a heavy mask of revolutionary phraseology. His August thesis, enthusiastically supported by the former C. E. C., proposed a sort of get-rich-quick scheme. It was a very seductive "short-cut" to the revolution. Its essence was that the Communists should, by a grand manouvre, sort of sneak up unsuspected upon the labor movement, tear off a great section of it and become overnight the leaders of a mass-movement.

The August thesis proposed the wonderful and opportunistic scheme of two mass Communist parties in this country. One of these, the federated farmer-labor party, was to consist of a general mush of trade unions, singing societies, fraternal orders, hiking associations, self-advancement clubs, etc., and its function was to carry on an opportunistic campaign amongst the workers on the basis of their immediate demands. The other Communist party, the Workers Party, was to stand modestly in the background, serving to salve our revolutionary consciousness and to propagate Communist principles in the abstract.

The present C. E. C., then the minority, fought the August thesis unrelentingly. They forced its advocates to lay it on the shelf. At the last W. P. convention, the defenders of the August thesis lacked the moral courage to make a fight for it. They evaded the issue. But they still have this thesis definitely in their minds. It is the basis of their labor party policy. Comrade Minor admits this frankly in a recent article.

Comrade Pepper's political stock gamble, as exemplified by the August thesis, was sharply condemned by the C. I. in its recent decision on the American farmer-labor policy. In the face of Comrade Pepper's vigorous opposition, Comrade Olgin and I made war against the August thesis in Moscow. The result was that the following paragraph in the decision, which is entirely in accord with the policy of the present C. E. C., was proposed by comrade Kuusinen and adopted unanimously by the presidium:

"7. The aim to strive at is not to split the left-wing from the labor party as quickly as possible in order to form this split off party into a mass Communist Party. But we must strive at letting the left wing grow within the labor party and at the same time at taking in its most advanced and revolutionary elements into the Workers Party."

The Third Party Alliance

Another oportunistic sin on the political soul of the present minority was the so-called third party alliance. This was another product of Comrade Pepper's fertile opportunism. In common with many others, the present C. E. C. fell victim to it. It was my hard task to defend it in the Comintern. No sooner did I hit Europe and explain it to the first revolutionist I met than I encountered a drastic condemnation of it as most dangerous opportunism. And so it continued all the time I was on the continent. Never on my whole trip, in Russia and elsewhere, did I meet a single Communist who did not wholeheartedly repudiate this proposition. The action of the Comintern presidium was unanimous in rejecting it as a manouvre unfit for the Workers Party to make. There is no need here to make further argument about the opportunism of the third party alliance. This is admitted everywhere except in the thesis of the minority. The corrective action of the Comintern in this matter saved our party from serious difficulty.

In passing it may be noted that the three grand labor manouvres engineered by comrade Pepper and the former C. E. C., namely the Chicago convention, the August thesis, and the third party alliance, were all condemned by the Communist International in its latest decision on our labor party policy.

The Grab at the Farmers

Another opportunistic manouvre by the former C. E. C. was the adventure among the farmers. The split at the Chicago July 3rd convention cost the Workers Party many valuable rank and file union connections in the various industrial centers. It dampened the labor party movement there very much. Just about this time comrade Pepper discovered the impending "LaFollette revolution," the backbone of which were the farmers, then in a strong state of ferment. Immediately in the policies and statemens of the former C. E. C. the farmer emerged as a great, if not the great, revolutionary factor. The party turned its major attention towards working among them, the more difficult work among the trade unions being sadly neglected.

Largely forgetting that the industrial workers must of necessity be the base of our party activity, they shifted the center of gravity to the farmers. The trade unions were systematically minimized, the whole A. F. of L. being denounced as simply an organization of labor aristocrats, notwithstanding the great numbers of miners and other genuine proletarian elements amongst the unions. Efforts were made to minimize the importance of the working class itself in the revolution and to prove that the United States is more of an agricultural than an industrial country. In Moscow Comrade Pepper even went so far as to state that in respect to its industrial development the United States resembled Russia more than it did England.

The Workers Party must win the support of the poor farmers. They are essential to the success of the revolution. But this support must not be won by the sacrifice of real proletarian support. Realizing this, the present C. E. C., then the minority, carried on a ceaseless struggle to keep the heads of the former C. E. C. from being turned altogether by the "easy pickings" amongst the farmers and from neglecting the far more vital work amongst the industrial workers. The opportunism of the former C. E. C. ran riot in connection with the farmers.

The St. Paul Convention

Then we came to the St. Paul convention. In this connection the farmer-labor Communists raise loud outcries of protest. After having been guilty of the gross opportunism of the Chicago split, the August thesis, the third party alliance, and the grab at the farmers they venture to call the present C. E. C. opportunistic. The situation at St. Paul was this: The elections were approaching and it was absolutely necessary to crystallize the farmer-labor party in order to make, or try to make, a campaign under its banner. The situation was difficult, with the LaFollette forces sucking the life out of the farmer-labor movement. Consequently the C. E. C. made extreme efforts to hang on to the disappearing masses. In some respects its policy verged into opportunism. This must be admitted. But the minority are disbarred from criticism. They endorsed the whole thing.

Comrade Minor blossoms forth with a speech I was supposed to make in St. Paul. The fact is the speech was imperfectly reported. But it was bad enough at the best. I make no apology for it. It represented only one of the overstrainings we made to retain contact with the masses. But the speech was in harmony with the point of view of the whole C. E. C., majority. Comrade Ruthenberg, who was on the steering committee that authorized it, pronounced it very timely. Not a word of objection was raised by the minority, altho the C. E. C. was meeting nightly. It was only a couple of months later, when word was received from Moscow, that the minority woke up to a realization, for factional purposes, that the speech was opportunistic.

Comrade Ruthenberg also voices a protest against our opportunism. He cites a motion that I am supposed to have made in the C. E. C. to the effect that we should support LaFollette's nomination. But Comrade Ruthenberg has developed much a penchant for writing the minutes in a factional spirit that the C. E. C. had to adopt measures for their constant correction. Months ago I definitely repudiated this motion. It unfairly stated my position. At that time the C. E. C. was committed to the third party alliance which tacitly if not actually, accepted the proposition that LaFollette would be the candidate of the third party. Any denial of this is sheer hypocrisy. The motion I made proposed in effect that if at the coming conference the question of nominations was forced upon the conference and the choice lay between Ford (who was then in the field as a progressive candidate) and LaFollette, that if it had to the Workers Party would support the latter as the lesser of two evils. This was bad enough, but it indicates merely the opportunistic tangle we got into as a result of comrade Pepper's beloved third party alliance.

Comrade Ruthenberg's manufactured indignation that we should tolerate the nomination of LaFollette comes with ill grace, especially after his militant support of the third party alliance. Time and again he gave Mahoney, of the Minnesota farmer-labor party, to understand that if the Workers Party made any opposition to the candidacy of LaFollette in the approaching conferences and convention it would be purely formal, to keep the record clear. It is interesting to note also that when I introduced a motion in the C. E. C. at St. Paul which would have precipitated a break with the LaFollette forces then and there, it was lost by one vote, the vote of comrade Ruthenberg. His "fight" against LaFollette's nomination was a fake. This was clearly shown by the following motion, introduced by comrade Ruthenberg and defeated by the C. E. C. on May 2, 1924:

"We shall nominate in the convention a candidate in opposition to LaFollete and cast our vote for such a candidate. We must, however, be careful to see to it that this manouvre does not defeat LaFollette, for to nominate another candidate and permit LaFollette to become the candidate of the July 4 convention in opposition to our nominee would be to destroy the class farmer-labor party as a mass organization."

FARMER-LABOR OPPORTUNISM.

The Lesson to be Drawn

As I stated in the opening of this article, our labor party campaign has been waged under very serious difficulties, due to the lack of a more vigorous and definite movement for a party of industrial workers and poor farmers. Consequently, mistakes have been made, many of them verging into opportunism. But there is a fundamental difference in the way the present C. E. C. and the minority have reached to these mistakes. The C. E. C. majority went along with the third party alliance, but now frankly admits in their thesis that this was a mistake. They also recognize such opportunism as developed at St. Paul. More than that, they saw the opportunistic danger in making the election campaign under the banner of the skeleton national farmer-labor party, so they promptly cut loose from it and launched the Workers Party ticket. Likewise, now the C. E. C. perceives the opportunistic menace in continuing the use of the farmer-labor party slogan when there is no mass sentiment behind it, so they would avoid this disaster by dropping the farmer-labor party slogan.

But the minority are unregenerate in their opportunism. They have initiated and supported every opportunistic development in the labor party policy. They still support the Chicago split and the August thesis. They did not, in their thesis, admit that the third party alliance was a mistake. They supported fully such opportunistic tendencies as developed at the St. Paul convention. Nor did they justify our election policy of the W. P. running candidates in its own name. Comrade Lovestone was willing to see the Workers Party sacrifice this, its first opportunity to come before the workers nationally in an election campaign, in order that the beloved "class" farmer-labor party might be furthered, and they still try to minimize the results of the election campaign, of which every Communist should be proud. The minority now, in the face of the hostile decision of the Comintern, propose in their thesis that the W. P. follow a policy of penetrating the LaFollette movement. Their advocacy of the dead farmer-labor party slogan is calculated to plunge the Workers Party head over heels into the swamp of opportunism.

The meaning of this contiued and unrelenting opportunism of the minority is quite clear. The majority has made mistakes. It admits them and corrects them. The minority admits nothing, corrects nothing. These farmer-labor Communists represent the real right-wing of the Workers Party. They are disappointed with the progress made so far by our party. They want quick results, and they are not particular as to what kind of results they get. Their plan is not to carry out the united front principles of the Comintern, but to establish a substitute opportunistic party in place of the Workers Party. The membership must repudiate this dangerous right-wing, liquidating tendency. The way to do it is to defeat overwhelmingly the thesis of the farmer-labor party Communists.

THE MINORITY THEORY OF FAKE UNITED FRONTS

By EARL R. BROWDER.

THE minority in our party discussion, led by Comrades Lovestone and Ruthenberg, pose as the defenders of the united front. But what kind of united front are they thinking of? What do they mean by a "united front on the political field"? We can find a part of the answer in a paragraph written by Comrade Ruthenberg in the Liberator for August, 1924, in which he says:

"As there was not in the United States any mass political organization of workers and farmers with which the Workers Party could join in common struggles over immediate issues, thus forming a united front, it was the task of the Workers Party to create such an organization on the political field."

There we have the minority theory in a nutshell. If there are no non-Communist political organizations of the workers which we can approach to offer a united front, then we must create such an organization, so that we can thereafter form a united front with it.

Not a United Front, But Political Self-Abuse.

Of course, this is not the united front at all as the Comintern explains that tactic. Comrade Zinoviev said at the Fifth Congress:

"But comrades, history plays pranks with this slogan (the united front) as indeed it does with many slogans. We adopted the tactics of the united front as the tactics of revolution at a time in history when the struggle had become protracted. Some comrades in our own ranks interpreted them as something totally different, as the tactics of evolution, of opportunism as against the tactics of revolution . . . Some comrades endeavored to interpret them as an alliance with the social democracy, as a coalition of all labor parties'."

History does indeed play pranks with slogans, but history was never guilty of such a prank as that sponsored by Comrades Lovestone and Ruthenberg, who would not only make the united front synonymous with a coalition of all "labor parties," but propose that we ourselves shall assume the task of creating those "labor parties" with which we should form the coalition. The minority proposal is not for a political united front—it is for a form of political self-abuse.

United Front Not a Parliamentary Combination.

"The Communist Parties alone defend the interests of the proletariat as a whole. The tactics of the united front do not at all imply the so-called 'election combinations' at the top, calculated to promote parliamentary aims of one kind or another. The tactics of the united front are nothing else but an offer made by the Communists to wage a common struggle with all the workers belonging to other parties or other groups, or not belonging to any parties at all, in defense of the elementary vital needs of the working class against the bourgeoisie. Any action taken even for the most insignificant demand. . . ." These words of Comrade Zinoviev at the Fifth Congress seem to have been aimed directly at our farmer-laborites to refute their identification of the united front with the farmer-labor electoral combination, and, especially, to destroy their fantastic conception that we must create political parties in order to make a united front with them.

HELP! HELP! Give Us a Hand—

We are swamped again. There is just a load of work piling up in our office and our small force is struggling hard to get it done. If any comrades have a day, an hour or a minute to spare, COME ON OVER—GIVE US A HAND!

THE MAGIC SLOGAN

By ISRAEL BLANKENSTEIN.

THE united front tactic cannot be based on theoretically conceived issues and slogans. If its aim—to mobilize the working class masses against the capitalist class and to extend the influence of the Communist Party—is to be realized, it must be based on live issues and on slogans that find a widespread and active response among the masses of workers. Is the "class farmer-labor party" such a slogan at the present time? The minority contends, what was good in 1923 is good in 1925.

To be sure, in July, 1924, even the majority of the minority was forced to admit that the "class" farmer-labor parties were drowned in the "third party." This was not unexpected even to the minority. The Pepper-Ruthenberg thesis on the labor party policy adopted by the last party convention, and which the minority seems to have forgotten, declared:

"The workers and exploited farmers of the United States have for so many years supported the republican and democratic parties that any organization which breaks away from these old parties will have a tremendous appeal for tnem and they will not differentiate between such a general third party movement and the class farmer-labor movement . . . There is great danger that . . . (the existing class farmer-labor groups) will be swept into the third party movement and thus the whole movement for a class labor party will be halted FOR SOME YEARS TO COME."

This assertion is repeated over and over.

"Unless there is a national crystallization of the labor party movement . . . there will be NO HOPE for organizing a class labor party or a national scale FOR SOME YEARS TO COME." And again, more emphatically: "Unless such a class farmer-labor party is organized on a national scale for the 1924 election the whole movement will be dissipated and DESTROYED FOR YEARS TO COME." (Second Year of the W. P., pages 51 and 52.)

This prediction has come true despite the formation of the St. Paul "national farmer-labor party," not to mention the minority's miscarriage, the F. F. L. P. But to the minority "class farmer-labor party" has become a magic phrase that can at all times draw the workers close to our party. The minority thesis instructs us very profoundly:

"The experiences of the workers and poorer farmers in the struggle against capitalism will produce even a stronger movement for independent political action than has existed in the past."

Sure, sure. We know it. We even know that experience will teach the workers and poorer farmers that only thru revolutionary action and under the leadership of the Communist Party, etc. . . . That's very nice But how will these Communist platitudes help us to find the correct policy to hasten this process? Comrade Ruthenberg expatiates on them of experience in a whole article, with equal results. The sharpening of the class struggle in the post-war period forced the workers and poor farmers to leave the old parties. There are new and intenser class conflicts coming in the near future. Therefore, concludes Comrade Ruthenberg, large sections of the workers and farmers will break with the LaFollette movement, and our agitation for a class farmer-labor party will hasten this process and will help build our party. Is the situation quite so simple as the minority tries to paint it?

The experiences of the workers in the struggles of 1919-1922 were the climax to similar experiences of many years which revealed the republican and democratic parties as the political instruments of the ruling class. In the struggles that are ahead of us the governmental powers that will be used to suppress the working class will again be wielded by the republican party, and this is more likely to strengthen the LaFollette illusion than otherwise. Yes, the disillusionment with the reformist middle class-labor bureaucratic combination will come, but it will be a much slower process than the minority is willing to believe and dictates to us an entirely different angle of attack than the "class farmer-labor" phrase.

The minority thesis finds evidence of a fundamental conflict between the "farmer-labor" movement and the "third party" movement in the fact that a number of farmer-labor parties in the western states, including the Minnesota farmer-labor party which they themselves have repeatedly characterized as a third party, ran separate tickets in the last election and in the organizational friction between the LaFollette machine and the state "farmer-labor" machines. All of which shows only that in some of the western states the third party movement has been more definitely crystallized than elsewhere, and that the middle class liberal politicians on one hand, and the labor bureaucrats and socialist politicians on the other hand, are fighting for influence and control over the third party movement. Comrade Lovestone tries to prove this "fundamental conflict" by quoting extensively . . . from Mr. Mahoney's editorials. But unfortunately for Comrade Lovestone's argument, the very issue in which his article appeared carried the news that the farmer-labor federation, the labor wing which we helped to organize in the Minnesota farmer-labor party, unseated the representative of our party by a two-to-one vote, and Comrade Hathaway correctly characterized this act as a complete surrender to the C. P. P. A. As to the farmer-labor parties which "maintained their independence of the LaFollette movement," the North Dakota farmer-labor party was already disposed of by its father, Comrade Manley. The mass class farmer-labor party of Denver, Colorado, I will leave to somebody who may know what it really represents from personal contact. But of the federated farmer-labor party of Washington county, Pa. I am in a position to inform the comrades of the minority that, whatever it may have been in 1923, or the early part of 1924, at least since May, 1924, it was no more than a name and a committee of five members of our party.

No, there is no indication of a mass sentiment for a party that would fill the imaginary void between the C. P. P. A. and the Communist Party. A "class farmer-labor party" would at best mean no more than a united front with new Mahoneys and Cramers, and we are under no obligation to create a haven for "left" socialists. Our field for the application of the united front tactics lies elsewhere, in the fight of the working class masses for definite daily aims and daily demands. We all agree that the near future will bring intense class conflicts. It is on these coming struggles that we must base our united front tactics, it is there, by exposing the unfitness and inability of the labor bureaucrats to lead the working class, that we will find "an entering wedge between the working masses and their treacherous leaders," including the C. P. P. A. leaders. The Comintern has repeatedly warned us that in determining the concrete tasks of the united front tactics we must take into consideration the condition of the section, how strong and homogeneous the Communist Party is. The tasks ahead of us, to bolshevize the party, to reorganize it on a shop nuclei basis, to put the party in condition for active participation and leadership in the movements of the unemployed and in the "outlaw" and spontaneous strikes that are sure to come, are big enough for any Communist Party. With our slender strength we have no reason to waste any energy on a phantom "class farmer-labor party." Let its ghost rest in peace. Let us put to the fore the Workers (Communist) Party.

The Discussion on Party Tasks

A Fighting Slogan in the Trade Unions— The Farmer-Labor United Front

By BENJAMIN GITLOW.

IN the Labor Herald of March, 1923, edited by Comrade Foster the following statement is contained on the national referendum on the labor party.

"Not to speak of the political necessity for a militant independent party of the working class, the Trade Union Educational League holds that it is impossible to have a successful trade union movement in this country until labor has declared definitely for a labor party. The Gompers political policy of rewarding our friends and punishing our enemies is fatal to labor unions. . . . The workers will never be able to think or act intelligently as proletarian so long as their trade unions are linked up with capitalist political parties. This is a fundamental of unionism. A labor party is one of the most vital needs of the American labor movement."

Now Comrade Foster and the other members of the majority that in 1923 sponsored the above sentiments propose that the united front in the unions on the basis of the farmer-labor party slogan be abandoned. In 1923 they said "The workers will never be able to think or act intelligently as proletarians without a labor party. A labor party is one of the most vital needs of the America labor movement." Now they say that the slogan of a farmer-labor party has lost its power of stirring large masses of workers. They claim that the farmer-labor movement which Comrade Foster in his article on the triple revolt stated was one of the issues that might break Gompers' control over the American labor movement is dead. They go even further and state that the whole movement for independent political action in the unions is dead. They now assume that as a result of that, that the only form the movement for independent political action can take is the form of the Workers Party.

The C. E. C. majority reiterates that the economic conditions which were the basis before for the farmer-labor party united front have not materially changed. The development of the farmer-labor party movement should therefore continue. The C. E. C. majority, however, does not reason with economic factors. It wants every one to believe that a movement that has its roots in the economic life of the country and a movement it admits had a big following among the masses and particularly among the organized workers, in a single day, was destroyed because the workers believing in a labor party who followed LaFollette were disillusioned when LaFollette received only five million votes. The majority wants to create the impression that a movement that has been developing in the United States for years, that a movement with a historical background and with an ideology that has permeated hundreds of thousands of the most militant workers in the unions can immediately cease to be a factor in the labor movement. The majority makes the mistake here of considering the labor party movement not as a development going thru a period of years, but as a phenomenon of only immediate importance. That is why they make the big error of considering the election results as the final determining factor ending the labor party movement and not an important event in its development.

The Comintern in its decision on the American question has correctly formulated the significance of the labor party movement in its relation to the Workers Party. It states as follows: "The first task of the Workers Party is to become a mass Communist Party of workers. It can fulfill this task only by most actively participating in the establishment of a labor party which will embrace all elements of the working class wishing to conduct a policy independent of the capitalist class and establishing a bond with the farmers who are at present in a state of fermentation. These two independent tasks—the task of building around the Communist Party a broad class labor party and of establishing a bond between the labor party and the poorest elements of the farmers—have developed in the United States, thanks to the peculiarities of historical evolution as one problem. Namely, the building of a common party of workers and farmers." The Comintern demonstrates that it fully understands the nature of the farmer-labor party movement when it declares that it is the result of the peculiarities of historical evolution thruout the history of the American labor movement we can trace its development. It is true that the movement as such has not fully crystallized. That does not necessarily mean that the idea of the farmer-labor party is of no consequence. From a consideration of recent facts following the elections which the majority wants us to believe, has changed everything the direct opposite is true. The slogan for a farmer-labor party is of great dynamic value. First, the economic conditions driving the workers and poorer elements of the farmers to demand the organization of such a party exist today as never before. This even the majority admits. And second, around the slogan of a farmer-labor party we again find the militant and progressive forces in the unions rallying.

Let us go to the last convention of the American Federation of Labor recently held in El Paso in order to learn what took place there. Comrade Foster and the whole majority even before election day, considered the labor party slogan dead. That is why before election day when they drafted the resolutions for the A. F. L. convention they omitted a resolution on the labor party. As a result, the T. U. E. L. was put in the ridiculous position of publicly assuming the death of the farmer-labor party movement while Samuel Gompers and the American Federation of Labor convention fought that movement with all the power at their command. The question then arises if the LaFollette movement swallowed up as the majority would have us believe the farmer-labor sentiment in the United States and killed it and if as they further say, the movement itself is insignificant and is organized only in a few states, why then was Samuel Gompers and the whole bureaucratic and reactionary officialdom so much afraid of the idea of a farmer-labor party? If the farmer-labor party movement is not a revolutionary development for the workers in the United States, then why did the capitalist press of the country in unison, spur on and support Samuel Gompers in his fight on the idea of a labor party in the United States?

It is up to Comrade Foster and the other members of the majority to answer these questions. But in doing so, they should stick to facts. They should not make the false charges that the minority is opposed to all other united fronts except the farmer-labor party united front. Not only does the minority include a whole series of united fronts on immediate issues in its thesis, but the minority is the one that has forced the present majority to accept after it had fought it bitterly at the last convention the idea of a united front on unemployment. It is true that the minority never agreed with the Foster idea of united fronts with leaders as the Fitzpatrik united front in the Chicago Federation of Labor. That is one of the reasons there is today such a principle difference between the Foster and Ruthenberg group.

The minority wants to build a Communist Party not a syndicalist Lore left social democratic sectarian party. The minority wants to develop the Workers Party into an effective revolutionary political party of the working class. The minority wants a Workers Party that will go into the unions not one that will hold itself aloof from the unions, not one that will stand passively by watching the political consciousness that is developing inside of them. The minority wants to be the leader in developing this political consciousness instead of the Johnsons, Fitzpatricks, Mahoneys, Kramers, Hilliquits, and Bergers.

That is why the minority is for the farmer-labor party slogan. The farmer-labor party slogan is a militant slogan. It is a slogan of the rank and file in the unions. The realization of that slogan can only be gained thru a bitter struggle on the part of the rank and file against all the agents of capitalism in the unions. What form does the fight in the unions against Samuel Gompers' policy of reward your friends and punish your enemies take? It takes the form of the labor party against the policy of non-partisan political action. But this special form Foster and the majority wants us to abandon. To abandon the struggle for a labor party is to abandon one of the most effective and special means for awakening the political consciousness of the American workers.

Because the fight for the labor party is a fight against Gompers, a fight against the petty bourgeois politicians who would convert the labor party movement into a petty bourgeois party, against the socialist party betrayers and a fight against the big capitalist politicians the slogan for a labor party is a militant revolutionary slogan. In assuming leadership in the militant struggles of the rank and file for the labor party the Workers Party puts itself in a position where it can gain influence and leadership over the masses engaged in the struggle. And the more numerous the masses engaged in the struggle for the labor party the greater the prestige of the Workers Party among them the more sure is the Workers Party of its leadership over them. This will make it possible for the Workers Party to draw the best elements of this movement into its ranks and as a result of its wide influence of the broad masses involved to become the mass Communist Party that it is striving for.

The minority is therefore not composed of liquidators but builders of the Communist Party. The liquidators are the members of the present majority who have already in their alliance with the Loreites laid the basis for the contamination of the Workers Party with the 2½ sectarianism of the left social-democrats. We of the minority want a party not only of members but of active members who are Communists and who will loyally under all circumstances support the Communist International.

A CORRECTION.

To the DAILY WORKER: We would like to call your attention to the "Editor's note" in your issue of Friday, Nov. 20, page 3, column 7, above the "Anise story," where you state that the Jewish Workers' Relief Committee is at present carrying on a campaign for funds to assist colonization work in Soviet Russia. We wish to correct this statement in so far as the campaign to which you refer is being carried on by the Committee for Jewish Colonization in Soviet Russia, 46 Canal Street, New York, which is an organization entirely separate and distinct from the Jewish Workers' Relief Committee.

We will appreciate if you will bring this correction to the attention of your readers. Sincerely yours, Committee for Jewish Colonization in Soviet Russia, Dr. E. Wattenberg, secretary.

To the DAILY WORKER: After reading the article by Anise in the DAILY WORKER on the Jewish land question I wish to make a brief statement regarding this matter. The Soviet government was very liberal in giving land to the Jews. On this land a group of Jewish radicals have organized a colony under the name of Commune Harold with our main office in New York. Last October we sent a group of members to Russia with machinery and other necessities for the building of the Commune. We expect to send another group soon.

The New York office will be glad to send any information to those interested in Commune Harold. Communicate with our secretary Comrade R. Korn, c. o. Brodeck, 867 Hunts Point Ave., Bronx, New York.—Jeannette C. Freedman.

Letters From Moscow

By Anna Porter

The session of the Central Committee of the U. S. S. R., (the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics), combining the R. S. F. S. R. with all the small Soviet states has just closed. The session was held in the great white and gold pillared Andreyevski Hall of the old palace. What they talked about, I shall know when I get the DAILY WORKER. But tho I could not understand, I could see the interesting place and the interesting people —rows of men whose names meant much to me and whose faces I could study thru my glass, and I had the honor of nearly trampling on Karl Radek in the corridor. That was as near as I got to any experience of distinction on this occasion. Aside from the session, it was an opportunity to go in and out of the Kremlin with my permit and stroll about in as leisurely a fashion as I pleased every day.

Over the great white bridge near the Comintern, we passed the Red guards at the outer gate. The Kremlin enclosure stands high above the surrounding streets, and thru the crenelations of the bridge wall one looks right and left down thru the yellowing strips of parking that follow the high Kremlin walls. Passing by Red guards again at the inner gate, at the top of the tilted bridge, we followed lines of palaces around to the high drive that overlooks the river and sweeps by the stately front of the old palace.

Within, we climb a long broad stairway straight ahead in easy ascent, and at its top are confronted thru a doorway with an enormous hall crowded with people in a rather smoky atmosphere. I catch my breath. "It hardly seems real," I exclaim, and then suddenly I discover it isn't real only a very life-like picture thru a doorway—a picture of a historic meeting, with portrait figures of all the prominent revolutionary officials, addressed by Lenin, who stands out vigorously in a characteristic speaking pose.

At the door of the Andreyevski Hall, we show our permits to the two unassuming young fellows in stunning uniforms, with bright red riding breeches—a uniform I have noticed in parades and have not been able to find out about. Here is my chance. My companion translates. "This American comrade wishes to know who you are," to put it as directly as I asked it! They are soldiers of the "Gay Pay Oo," the G. P. W., the State Political Police, which has succeeded the Cheka and has not quite its broad powers. They are friendly and amused. My curiosity does not cost me my head. Here at the entrance to the session, I leave the narrative to intelligent correspondents, who long since have covered it by cable.

After the session we wander quite freely about the palace, up stairway after stairway, and by round-about corridors and thru all the beautiful apartments of the czars with low-vaulted ceilings and subdued gorgeousness of decoration—semi-oriental or Byzantine —with gay-tiled stoves and deep window niches. Those rooms are familiar to all of us who heard Chaliapin in Boris Godonov, for the scenery of that opera was a very faithful copy of the rooms of this imperial palace.

Then a stroll about the Kremlin grounds among the groups of churches with their picturesque clusters of little golden domes shadowed with the black stains of ages, past lines of heavy barracks and palaces with their great connecting porticos, and lighter carved and decorated structures, past the lofty bell-tower, "Ivan Veleki," John the Great, past the huge cracked bell that was never hung because it fell to its ruin in trying to be too big and swing too high, past rows of captured cannon, and by groups of marching soldiers and soldiers with stacked arms. And so out of the gates again, past the Red guards and over the white Troitski Most (bridge) with its crenelations framing the yellowing trees of the parks, and home to wait for the DAILY WORKER and find out what it was all about!

of which the Russian comrades were often incorrectly informed of the situation in western Europe. Comrade Paul Levi writes about these as follows: 'The Russian comrades judge events in a situation which is different from that of the rest of the world. They judge conditions in the position of owners of political power. To change their trend of thought from their situation to ours is difficult, and herein may lie the cause of misunderstandings.'"

COMRADE LORE thus allowed to spread thru the "Volkszeitung" the idea that the Communist International was a plaything in the hands of the Russian comrades, that the Russian comrades were uninformed as to the situation in Europe, that the mentality of the Russian comrades was entirely different from that of the rest of the world, and that herein lay the reason for discrepencies in the Communist International.

Lore's Peculiar Idea of R. C. P.

SOME time later Comrade Lore proved that he had peculiar notions about the Russian party itself. Not only were the Russian comrades, in his opinion, misdirecting the Communist International, but even in their own party they created intolerable conditions. Comrade Lore expressed this idea in the course of the discussion within the Russian Communist Party a year ago, a discussion connected with the name of Comrade Trotsky.

IT was a severe discussion which shook the Russian Communist Party to its very foundation. It was a broad comprehensive discussion embracing all phases of party life. To use only the captions of Trotsky's book, "The New Course," which was the storm center of all the discussion, would suffice to realize the scope of the discussion. The captions are: 1—"Question of Party Generations," (the Old Guard and the younger Communists; the position of the Old Guard within the party and the state apparatus, etc.). 2—"The Social Composition of the Party" (Number of workers and number of peasants, number of non-workers; role of the students, especially the workingclass students, as a 'barometer' of party life.) 3—"Groupings and Factional Formations" (A hint at the possibility of forming groupings, an assertion that if the party proceeds in its course, groupings would be inevitable.) 4—"Bureaucracy and Revolution." 5—"Tradition and Revolutionary Policy" (Necessity to adapt one's self to everchanging conditions.) 6—"Lack of Appreciation of the Peasantry." 7—"The Main Problems of the Supply and Land Policy." 8—"Planned Economic Activities." 9—"Red Tape, Military and Other." 10—"Linking Town with Village."

Lore on Discipline.

IN all of these problems the question of discipline pure and simple occupied an almost insignificant place. It may be said that Communist discipline as such, apart from the question of the older vs. the younger generation, did not occupy the minds of the Russian comrades. However, Comrade Lore found the problem of discipline to be the pivotal problem of all the Russian discussion. Commenting on the Russian discussion in the "Volkszeitung" editorial, Jan. 6, 1924, he writes:

"Self-control and discipline will naturally be inevitable in a party which has to carry out such formidable tasks. But a rigid centralization which allows the member no right to raise objections, which makes the member a link in a large chain, moved and operated by invisible hands, such discipline, according to the opinion of Trotsky and many other influential comrades, may gradually be loosened to be superceded by a sort of democratic centralization. Today Trotsky may still find himself in the minority in the Russian Communist Party, in the end he will prove to be right because it is simply unthinkable that the state of war should be maintained within the organization even under conditions of peace which are now being approached by the Soviet Republic."

THESE remarks proved Comrade Lore to be sharing at least part of the menshevik prejudices concerning the Russian Communist Party. According to Comrade Lore, a Russian Communist was not allowed to raise objections, was only "a link in a chain," i. e., a mute and obedient tool, manipulated by "invisible hands." According to Comrade Lore, the system obtaining within the Russian Communist Party was not democratic centralization. Comrade Lore thus misjudged discipline within one of the national parties as he misjudged discipline within the Communist International. Comrade Lore had a distorted view of the requirements of party discipline, and his distortions were akin to those made by the social-democrats of the Two-and-a-Half International.

A CHILD OF HIS PEOPLE AND CENTURY

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The twenty-third (concluding) chapter is entitled, "A Child of His People and Century."

LENIN was the child of his people and of his centry. When called a Jacobin he would answer: "We, the Bolsheviks, are the Jacobins of the twentieth century, that is, the Jacobins of the proletarian revolution," Lenin was, as we have seen, the very embodiment of the idea of internationalism, and at the same time he was part and parcel of the mighty revolutionary movement that the oppressed masses of Russia have been carrying on for years and years. He was really one link in a long chain of struggles for the emancipation of the Russian proletariat and the Russian peasantry From Radschev, thru Belinsky, Dobroljubov, Bakunin, Tschernischevsky, Ketschajev, and Jeliabov, thru the party "The Will of the People" and thru the group of "Emancipation of Labor," and thru many unknow representatives of the workers and peasants, which have been populating the prisons of the Czar and of Siberia, there runs the thread of struggle which unites Lenin with the Russian revolutionary movement. He was a man of an all-inclusive spirit; the press of our opponents would speak with irony about the utopian plans of Bolshevism. But in this irony there is to be found a profound truth. Lenin has been operating with whole continents. He was basing his policies upon the experiences of millions.

Only the limitless and vast extent of Russia could give birth to such a spirit.. This youth, born to a family of state functionaries and adopted by the proletariat, embodied and gave expression to the hatred of the working class of Russia accumulated thru centuries. He also reflected in himself the hatred of the peasantry against its oppressors that accumulated thru centuries. He had a deep sense for the sufferings of the toiling masses even when the masses could not give expression to those sufferings in words.

Lenin cannot be considered apart from the Russian workers and peasants and from the Russian history. Only within the social structure of Russia, the revolutionary struggles of whole generations, only by considering the achievements of the Russian revolutionary movement since the 18th century and up to the last day, can we locate the factors that have brought about the appearance of Bolshevism in Russia at the cross-roads of two centuries. Only by taking all this into consideration can we properly estimate the moral, political, national, and international physiognomy of Lenin For us, his contemporaries, who have been living within the circle of his influence, one thing is clear. Lenin was one of those men by whom humanity marks its historical path, concerning whom legends are being told in his lifetime and the farther we go from the date of his death the clearer will stand before us Lenin's greatness and immortality.

"Without a Revolutionary Theory a Revolutionary Movement Is Impossible."

How to Organize and Conduct a Study Class

THE problem of educational work is many sided. Enthusiasm for this work among the party members must be aroused and maintained. A general recognition of its fundamental importance must be established. It must be organically connected with the life and struggles of the party, and must not become academic and sterile. And it must be conducted in a systematic manner, becoming an established part of the life of the party thruout the year. This last will not just "happen." It will take much work and the introduction of correct organizational and technical principles. All our theories will come to nothing if our educational apparatus does not function properly.

MANY classes have landed on the rocks because they were not conducted properly. One of the most frequent inquiries we have received from comrades who are undertaking party educational work is: "What is the best way to conduct a study class"—It is the purpose of this article to give an answer to this qustion based on the collective experience in the field of educational work from which a few general principles can be extracted.

LET us begin at the begining and proceed step by step. When the responsible party committee in the given localities has decided to establish a class, let us say, for example, in the "A. B. C. of Communism," the next move must be to appoint a leader for the class. This leader must understand that the class will not move of itself, but must be organized and directed from beginning to end, otherwise it will fall to pieces. The comrade in charge of the class must then proceed to enroll students, having them register for the class and making sure he has a sufficient number who agree in advance to attend the classes before he sets the time for calling it. As soon as a sufficient number of students have been enrolled, a date is set for the first class and all the students are notified.

AT this point we should speak a word about the danger of haphazardness in the attendance at the classes on the part of any of the students. The party committee must decide that the attendance at class once a week, or more frequently, as the case may be, is a part of the member's party duty and should excuse him from party obligations for those nights. The systematic and regular attendance at class by all students must be constantly stressed, and the party committee and the leader of the class must constantly fight against the tendency, which always grows up, to regard the study class as a series of lectures at which one can "drop in" whenever he feels like it. Good results can only be obtained when the class is an organized body and is regularly attended by the same students.

Methods of Conducting Classes

THE methods of conducting the classes which have proved most successful from past experience can be roughly divided into two general methods. These methods may be modified and varied in many ways, according to local circumstances, experience and qualifications of the teacher, etc.

These two methods are:

1. The lecture-question method.
2. The method of reading from and discussing the text in the class.

THE Lecture-Question method. This is the method most frequently employed by experienced teachers, and one which yields the most satisfactory results if qualified comrades can be found to conduct the class along this line. The use of this method presupposes that the teacher, who is himself thoroly familiar with the subject matter of the text, possesses some ability and experience as a lecturer. It is not necessary, however, for him to be a professional. The average Communist who has a firm grasp of his subject will find that with a little practice he can succeed in holding the attention of a class.

UNDER this method the teacher delivers a lecture for the period of about one hour on some phase of the general subjects dealt with in the text. In addition he requires the students to read, outside the class, in connection with his lecture, certain portions of the text and sometimes portions of other books which deal with the same subject. When the class comes together for the second time it is opened with a question period of about thirty minutes during which the lecturer quizzes the students on the subject matter of the previous week's lecture and the reading in connection with it. It is best to have a short recess at the end of the question period in order to get a fresh start for the lecture. A lecture of about an hour then completes the evening's work. Again sections of the text are referred to the students for reading in connection with the lecture. The same proceedure is then followed at each successive meeting of the class until the end of the course.

WHEN this method is employed it is not advisable to have indiscriminate discussion in the class, as this will almost invariably divert the attention of the class from the immediate subject in hand and destroy the possibility of consecutive instruction. For a teacher to conduct a class according to this method he must take it firmly in hand, establish his authority at the very beginning, and maintain it thruout the course. Nothing is more fatal to the success of such a class than for the opinion to grow up amongst some of the students that the teacher knows less than they do about the subject. For he will then be unable to maintain the proper discipline in the class and hold it to its course. Whenever a study class, organized for the purpose of consecutive study of a certain aspect of Communist theory or tactics, begins to resolve itself into a group for general discussion or a debating society, its early demise can be confidently expected.

READING and Discussing the text. This method also works out very well, especially in elementary classes. In this method, as in all others, however, the first prerequisite is a class leader who takes a responsible attitude towards the work and who takes it upon himself to organize and lead the class and hold it down to the matter in hand. This class leader should by all means thoroly study the text before the class commences and make himself master of it.

THE class conducted according to this method proceeds by the class leader calling upon the students, one after another, to read a few sentences or a paragraph from the text. After each student finishes reading the part assigned to him, the leader asks the student who has read the passage to explain it in his own words. If he fails to bring out the meaning clearly or interprets the passage incorrectly, the question is directed to other students, the leader himself finally intervening to clarify the matter if necessary.

PROCEEDING along this line the class will cover a chapter or so of the text each evening. Before the reading commences each time, the leader should conduct a brief quiz of the class on the part of the text dealt with on the preceding evening in order to bring out the points clearly for the second time, refresh the memory of the students, and connect the preceding class with the one about to begin.

IN the course of a few months, proceeding along this line, the class will get thru the "A B C of Communism" and will have acquired a grasp on the fundamental theories of the movement. Moreover, if the class has been conducted successfully, if it has had the good fortune to have a leader that can inspire confidence and enthusiasm and who can hold it together as an organized body in spite of all difficulties, the students of the class, or at least a large part of them, will emerge from their first course of training with a strong will and spirit to acquire more knowledge and thereby equip themselves better to become worthy fighters in the cause of Communism.

THE success of the study class work is to a very large extent dependent upon organization, leadership and class discipline. It should start on time and stop on time each evening. It must not accommodate itself to casual students or chronic late-comers. It should not degenerate into a mere discussion group over the general problems of the movement but must confine itself in a disciplined manner to the specific subjects dealt with in the course. It should be conducted in a business-like fashion from start to finish, students being enrolled and the roll called each evening. Above all it should have a leader who, notwithstanding lack of previous experience, will take his task so seriously as to thoroly master the subject himself. Then he will be able to establish sufficient authority in the class to lead it step by step to the end of the course.

How One Should Not Write the History of October

contrary, had a historical miracle occured at that time, and had the Bolshevist workers followed that which Comrade Trotzky proclaimed (upity with the liquidators, fight against the "secretarianism" of Lenin, menshevist political platform, during the war fight against the Zimmerwald Left, etc.) then there would have been no October victory. Comrade Trotzky, however, entirely avoids dealing with this period, altho it would be his duty to impart just these "lessons" to the party.

Let us quote another example. There fought side by side with us on the October barricades many left social revolutionaries. In the decisive moment of October they contributed their share to the cause of victory. Did that mean, however, that they had been "tried" once and for all by October? Unfortunately this was by no means the case as the post-October experience has shown, which to a considerable extent confirmed the estimate given of these petty-bourgeois revolutionaries before October.

October isolated, therefore in no way suffices for the "test." It is rather the second moment which is of more importance, the moment which Comrade Lenin so categorically pointed out.

The statement of Comrade Trotzky, that the "Bolshevizing" of the Communist parties consists in such an education and such a section of a body of "leaders" that they shall not run off the track at the moment of their October, is therefore correct, in as far as it also includes the appropriation of the experiences of the "preparatory period." For even the immediate experiences of the Russian October can neither be understand nor made use if we do not take to heart the teachings of this preparatory period. Comrade Trotzky, who regards the matter in such a way that the Bolshevist Party in its actual essence only began to exist after the October days, does not see the uninterrrupted connection of the line of the party in its entirely up to "the present moment."

And just in the same way he fails to see that after the seizure of power, even after the end of the civil war, history is by no means at an end. In the same way the history of our party is also not at an end, the history which is likewise a "testing of the party policy," for it not only contains discussions regarding the one or the other standpoint, but also the experiences of practical policy.

One had to take care not "to leave the track" in October, but the same applies to the time of the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk (when, as Trotzky admits, the "head," that means the life and death, of the Soviet power was at stake). One had also to take care not to leave the track in the discussion of 1921, for without the Lenin policy we would have endangered everything. It would also have been out of place to leave the track in the last year, for without the money reform, without the economic policy etc., conducted by the party, we should have likewise arrived at a desperate situation. In all these critical situations, however, Comrade Trotzky has left the track, and in the same manner as in the pre-February period of his political existence, when he had not broken with the open opponents of Bolshevism.

"The tradition of a revolutionary party," writes Comrade Trotzky (page 62), "will not be created through maintaining silence, but out of critical clearness." Very true. The demand for "critical clearness" however, must not be raised only in regard to the actions which took place in October, but also in relation to the preceding and the succeeding period of development. Only in this manner is an actual test possible; for the party of the proletariat acts constantly and passes thru more than one "critical" period.

AS WE
By T. J. O'FL...

AFTER a career re... loss to the capiti... es and treason to the ... movement, Samuel Gom... president of the American Federation of Labor, passed away. The biggest capitalists in the United States and their errand boy, Calvin Coolidge, express grief over his death. Well they might. They have lost a valuable ally. His last outstanding act while alive, was to help carry the victorious banner of Wall Street into Mexico. What the armies of the American plunderbund could not do, the subtle poison of Gompersism accomplished; the acceptance of the hegemony of American capitalism by the Mexican labor movement, at least that portion of it under the domination of Morones, the Gompers of Mexico.

GOMPERS died with the harness of American imperialism on his back. And as in life he was the close ally and loyal aid of the exploiting class, it is only right that in death he should follow the same policy. His caresses will rest between two of the leading figures in the history of American capitalism: William Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie. The latter was one of the bloodiest scoundrels that ever coined gold out of the flesh and blood of the working class, but he appreciated the services of the head of the American Federation of Labor and left him a pension. The workers have no reason to mourn the death of Gompers.

THE socialists are now busy taking stock of the profit and loss to what is left of their party resulting from their immersion in the LaFollette movement. They find nothing on the credit side except a little publicity for a few leaders like Hillquit and Berger. The latter is by no means happy as the adventure practically wiped out his "socialist" machine in Milwaukee. Hillquit is anxious to form a "third party" in which he will undoubtedly be a leading figure. He has ability of a kind that will prove useful in parliamentary activities.

JUDGE PANKEN, writing in a socialist weekly, declares that the decision of the socialist party to support LaFollette after allowing the latter to write his own program, was almost fatal to the S. P. Socialists were placed in the position of supporting capitalist candidates, he says. Many so-called radical unions that had never previously voted for capitalist candidates, threw down the bars and picked out "friends" in the Gompers style. Instead of voting for Thomas as candidate for governor of New York, many of the needle trades workers voted for Al Smith. "Everybody was doing it," so to speak.

THE policy of the socialists was branded as opportunistic by Panken. It was worse than that he said, it was stupidly opportunistic. LaFollette got the assistance of the socialists while he made speeches denouncing socialism. It was with great difficulty that Norman Thomas was allowed to speak on the same platform with the "progressives" at large mass meetings. In fact the poor socialists were sacrificed to make a Roman holiday for Hillquit and the ambitious S. P. leaders who expected a big victory for LaFollette and a short cut to Washington. They were disappointed.

THE socialist press sneered at the Workers (Communist) Party when it ran William Z. Foster for president, the only presidential candidate running on a platform calling for the overthrow of the capitalist system and the organization of society on the basis of the rule of the workers thru Soviets and the dictatorship of the proletariat. They laughed at the comparatively small number of votes polled by our candidates and the still smaller number counted for us. But the Workers Party gained in strength thru the campaign. The circulation of our daily jumped ahead and the morale of our party was raised.

CAPITALISTS IN MOURNING OVER GOMPERS' GOING

Coolidge, the Breaker of Strikes, in Tribute

From the whole capitalist world comes a cry of sorrow at the passing of Gompers. President Cal Coolidge, the strike-breaker, in a telegram to Gompers' widow expressed his "great regret" for Gompers because, in his position "as the founder and head of a great

SECRETARY FRANK MORRISON IS THE MOST LIKELY CANDIDATE TO FILL GOMPERS PLACE TEMPORARILY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 14.—Reports are that the temporary president of the American Federation of Labor, who is to be chosen at a meeting of the executive council in Washington in a few days, as provided by the A. F. of L. constitution, will be Frank Morrison, now secretary. He will probably fill both positions until the next convention of the federation in November, 1925.

Labor Fakers' Pulses Bounce.

At that convention, there is sure to be great competition for the position of power. Every rat-hole in the federation is full of the sound of scurrying feet as the great family of labor fakers begins to stir. John L. Lewis, czar of the Miners' Union is mentioned as Gompers' successor, but he is supposedly in line for the job of secretary of the labor department in Coolidge's cabinet, and may not want the job.

Major George W. Berry, the great American Legionnaire, who managed to graft a few hundred thousand dollars from the Pressmen's Union and got away with it by aid of the capitalist courts, is also mentioned. Anything may happen.

But the mere selection of a new president is not the only question. War looms within the federation from many angles of competing groups which, always having been autonomous, now feels that they can go in and hog things for their craft, since Gompers who always kept a nice balance between these ravening jealousies is out of the way.

Did Gompers Die in Mexico?

It is reported here that the rumor of Gompers' death in Mexico was not without some currency. The news originated from a telephone message to the effect that he had died, sent to Mexico City from a railway employe at San Nicholas, Mexico, when Gompers' train passed thru that station.

After it left that station, the train could not be reached by wire, and it was late in the afternoon before connections were established again.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 14.—The opinion of the supreme court of Michigan, upholding the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg, covers some forty-one typewritten pages but it is only on page 39 that Judge Wiest, who wrote the opinion, deals with the main contention of the defense and then fails to meet the main argument of the defense against the position of the trial court.

The main contention of the defense was that irrespective of what the Communist Party was, there had been no proof submitted that the Communist Party or Ruthenberg had, within the state of Michigan, committed any act which violated the criminal syndicalist law, and that the mere assembling of the convention and Ruthenberg's "assembling with" the convention could not be punished as a crime.

Evidently the Michigan court found this a difficult question, for it was only after thirty-eight typewritten pages, most of which consisted of denunciations of the Communist Party and the Communist International, that the opinion deals with this question and then glosses it over in the following terms:

"It is also said there has been no overt act by the Communist Party committed within this state, and no showing of intent to commit any in the immediate future, and it is claimed it is without the power of the state to make it a felony to join an assembly formed to teach or advocate criminal syndicalism unless it is shown that activities are carried out within the state. This statute does not make criminality dependent upon the commission of crime an overt act. It reaches those who advocate or teach the commission of crime as a means to accomplish an end, and those who, by choice, assemble with them. An overt act along the lines of such advocacy or teaching would consti-

Thieves' Fight Over Muscle Shoals Booty Reveals New Scandal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 14.—An editorial in a local paper charges that the Underwood bill for disposing of Muscle Shoals is a "steal," and a "greater scandal than Teapot Dome."

Senator Underwood has declared that the editorial is a "libel" and a "deliberate falsehood."

In language seldom heard on the senate floor Underwood demanded an investigation and the senate judiciary committee will investigate the charges contained in the editorial as well as Underwood's charge that "the editorial was purchased by interests which are now trying to grab the power at Muscle Shoals."

Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, whose imperialistic policies in foreign affairs were the guide line of Gompers' efforts in the international labor movement, wired, "I am shocked, for it is the loss of a great figure."

Bosses Express Their Sorrow.

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust company, director of the Chicago and Alton railroad, the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago railway, the Pullman company, the Kansas City, Southern railway, the Chase National Bank of New York, the New York Trust company, the Illinois Trust company, the International Harvester company, the Illinois Bell Telephone company, and the Commonwealth Edison company, said, "Gompers was as conservative as a man could be to hold his position. Most of the time he exercised diplomacy. I am sorry to hear he is dead."

"The death of Mr. Gompers is a keen loss to the nation because he represented a conservative element," said David R. Forgan, president of the great open shop financial backer, the National City Bank of Chicago. And Forgan added, "It may be difficult to find some one as good and there is always the danger of getting some one more radical."

Samuel M. Felton, who is interested in a dozen railway corporations, who is now president of the western railroad association, one of the "dollar a year heroes" who received from the secretary of war the distinguished service medal "for especially meritorious and conspicuous service" as director general of the military railways, remarked that "Gompers' death is a great loss."

THIRD PARTY WILL SUCCEED SAYS C. P. P. A.

Calling Convention in February

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—That the C. P. P. A., (Conference for Progressive Political Action) which is the leading factor in the LaFollette movement, feel that an effort to form a new permanent political party will meet with success, is the expression of the C. P. P. A. executive committee, an expression which they are following up with a call for a national convention of the C. P. P. A to meet in Chicago on February 21, 1925

A Definite LaFollette Party.

This is the date decided upon by the executive committee in their secret sessions just ended here. The convention will, it is supposed, settle the matter of launching a definite third party on a permanent basis. The leaders of the executive committee feel confident that such will be done by the convention.

The special committee named to arrange for the convention has begun drafting the call which will be sent to the farm, labor and progressive organizations which endorsed the independent candidacy of LaFollette in the presidential election at Cleveland.

Socialist Party Leads Third Party.

The special committee is composed of Mrs. Bertha Hale White, secretary of the socialist party; Parley Christensen, the farmer-labor candidate in 1920; Charles McGowan and John A. Lapp of the Illinois committee; and

COOLIDGE RULE SEEKS HEAVIER GERMAN CLAIMS

Big Battle Is on with the British Government

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 14.—The Coolidge government insists that America receives a larger share in the German reparations payments than England wants to allow, in a note sent by Secretary of State Hughes to England.

It was said here that the notes exchanged by America and Britain "admit of detailed discussion of the issue involved." No doubt much future wrangling will take place as to how far the United States is to share in the money extracted from the life blood of the German workers.

The United States also claims one billion gold marks ($250,000,000) as the cost of the army of occupation in Coblenz. The German workers are expected to pay the upkeep of their oppressors.

England is now concerned over its debt payments, and will, it is announced, pay its debts to those countries which "offer the London government advantages in other directions." England will drive the hardest bargain possible, both in debts due the country, and debts owed other foreign nations. America, however, holds the whip hand thru its domination of the European governments' finances.

The Amtorg Trading company was organized last April as a merger of the Arcos-America and the Products Exchange Corporation.

Compete with Fascisti in Loyalty to Capitalism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—Ex-Chancellor Philipp Scheidemann has told how the entire executive board of the social-democratic party betrayed the workers by voting against support of the striking munitions workers in 1918, and urging the German workers not to disobey the conscription laws.

Scheidemann was replying to attacks of the German monarchists and nationalists at the libel suit trial of President Ebert, now taking place.

Scheidemann denied that he and Ebert led the German workers in the 1918 munitions strike, and declared himself an upholder of the ruling class.

Ebert read a letter from Field Marshal von Hindenburg, which commended Ebert for his work on behalf of the German bourgeoisie during the war.

The nationalists are trying to make Gen. von Winterfeldt the next president, and are vieing with the socialists for control of the next German cabinet. Ebert is trying to keep the head of his party above water by showing that it is as ruthless against working class movements as the monarchists or nationalists.

ASSASSINATION PLOT AGAINST KRASSIN FAILS

Woman Arrested Says She Planned Murder

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 14.—An attempt to assassinate Leonid Krassin, Soviet Ambassador to France, was frustrated when a Mrs. Marie Dickson, a journalist in the employ of the counter-revolutionary emigres in Paris, was arrested by the Paris police detailed to watch the Russian embassy.

The woman walked past the embassy door a dozen times and when challenged by a policeman, she attempted to get away. When searched, a loaded revolver was found up her sleeve and she confessed that her intention was to murder Krassin.

Suppress Plot Story.

The assassin would not admit that she was acting under instructions for the czarists.

This plot was partially suppressed by the French capitalist press which so luridly portrayed the imaginary "Red" plots which existed in the imaginations of the bourgeoisie who are scared to death over Communism and the recognition of Soviet Russia by France.

Russian monarchists hoped that Krassin's credentials would not be accepted by the French government owing to the red scare. They were disappointed, however, and Krassin was received cordially by the president of the French republic.

CAPPELLINI'S PLAN FAILS TO FOOL STRIKERS

Renegade Radical Now on Defensive

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 14.—Evidently, the chance to sleep for a night on the proposition of Rinaldo Cappellini, whereby he would allow the committee of striking miners to select one of their number to be put on the payroll as organizer, was sufficient for the committee to regain its equilibrium, for at the meeting today they decided almost unanimously to continue the strike.

Yesterday, Cappellini was able to muster thirteen votes in support of his proposition, with 66 against, but at today's meeting only three were found who were still ready to support it.

As soon as the meeting was opened today, the discussion was turned away from the Cappellini proposition. It being attacked as a ruse to get the men back in the mines, into questioning the motives of the men who voted in favor of the proposition.

John Martini of Hilldale, fellow townsman of Cappellini, quoted in yesterday's report as questioning the district president about his pretended radicalism of 1920 and his present-day attitude, attacked those who lacked the courage to talk while Cappellini was in the meeting.

On the Defensive.

He said "If some of you who had so much to say while he was away, had talked to his face as I did, things might have been different." Martini's remarks had the effect of putting those who voted yesterday to return to work without settlement on the defensive. One of them, Tony Brudzo of Old Forge, in defense of himself, stated that it was unwise to attack Cappellini like that, as he believed the district president was doing the best he could, and voted accordingly being one of the three to do so at the session today.

The other two who voted to accept at yesterday's meeting, evidently saw the "pig-in-the-poke" and changed to their original position, voting to stay out at today's session . . . Media for Davis, of the department of labor who has been present at most of the sessions, was rebuked at the meeting yesterday, when he pleaded with the men to accept the proposition of their president. When he said "I am telling you the "Honest-to-God' truth when I say that the proposition made by your president is a good one," the delegates in chorus yelled "Go sit down some place."

Admitted Men Were Right.

Today he was back again, and, after admitting that the men were right and justified in their stand, he requested that they refrain from getting angry when he informed them that they are "making a mistake in refusing to accept Cappellini's offer, and that if the strike hangs on they will realize it more fully."

However, he aroused the ire of one of the delegates, who stated that the newspaper men present, would probably report that Davis had said the men were making a mistake, but would fail to report what he said about the strike being a justifiable one. He also took issue with a statement made by Davis about "abiding by contract" saying, "I am willing and want to be a United Mine Worker, but if the contract we work under gets us nothing what the hell is the use of belonging to it?"

Cappellini Did Not Answer.

Delegate Rossetti from the Under wood colliery, the place where most of the grievances are still awaiting adjustment, drew the attention of the delegates today, to the fact, that when he enumerated the many grievances at his mine yesterday for the benefit of Cappellini, that Cappellini had refused to answer to most of his claims, while others were admitted and some were denied. He surprised the committee with a statement that, after the session adjourned yesterday, he approached Cappellini and in a discussion with him, made the statement that "Pennsylvania Coal company promises many things, but fails to give anything," to which Cappellini replied, in effect, that when the strike ended he (Rossetti) would not be given membership in the U. M. W. of A. A note was made of this charge and a sub-committee, chosen to meet with the district officials and the international commission to attempt a settlement of the grievances, was instructed to take up the matter along with other things.

The committee is determined that no discrimination will be tolerate Five hundred miners, employed at the Maltby mine of the Lehigh Valley Coal company, went on strike yesterday when they learned that the umpire of the conciliation board had made an adverse decision in a case from that mine. District officials are endeavoring to have them return to work.

MICHIGAN COURTS' RULING IN THE RUTHENBERG CASE PUNISHES IDEAS

tute an entirely different crime punishable now by other laws of the state."

Dealing with the facts in regard to the convention, the court makes the following statement:

"Defendant, as a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of America, by virtue of his office, attended the convention as a fraternal delegate with the right to address, and did address the convention. One duly elected delegate in attendance was a special employe of the United States department of justice, bureau of investigation. A delegate from the Comintern (Communist or Third International) Moscow, Russia, was present, and a delegate from the Hungarian federation and another from the Red Trade International at Moscow were presented and participated in the convention. Defendant reached the convention on Aug 15 and remained there until arrested on Aug. 22.

"Federal officers, investigating activities of Communists, traced down the convention place, recognized certain Communists in attendance, and laid the matter before the sheriff of Berrien county. The Communists in attendance recognized the federal officers and laid plans to disperse, with right to foreigners to go first, and many of the delegates hurriedly left. The sheriff, with a number of deputies and the federal officers, visited the convention place one morning and arrested defendant and sixteen others, without warrants for arrest or search, seized their baggage, and took them to the county jail. The sheriff then learned of the depository of the grounds committee and made search, found the barrels and seized their contents."

Discussing the question of Ruthenberg's participation in the convention at Bridgeman, the court says:

"That defendant voluntarily assembled with the other delegates at the Bridgeman convention as a Communist leader, factor and paid official is placed beyond question. Defendant, as a member of the Communist Party of America, section of the Communist International of Moscow, Russia, was re-elected a member of the Central Executive Committee at the Bridgeman convention. The national convention at Bridgeman was called by the Central Executive Committee, of which committee defendant was a member. He attended the Bridgeman convention as a fraternal delegate, by virtue of his office, with the right to address, and did address, the convention. He was a voluntary vassal of the Third International, as such, was on the errand of carrying out its policies, furthering its doctrines, and advocating its tactics. So found, so bound, so working and assembling with others formed as a group or society to further the aims, and the tactics of the Communist Party he is to be judged by the declared policies, fixed doctrines, and commanded tactics of the Communist Party of America, section of the Communist International."

The court took up at length the present program of the Workers Party which was written by Ruthenberg and which he had with him at the Bridgman convention, and says in regard to this program:

"This proposed program as was intended, dovetailed with the illegal purposes of the Communist Party. It declared: 'The capitalist state, that is, the existing government, municipal, state and national is the organized power of the capitalist class for suppression of the demands of the exploited and oppressed class.' It stated: 'The class struggle must take the form of a political struggle, a struggle for control of the government.' But this was so transparently buncombe as to mislead no one. It declared: 'The much talked of American democracy' is a fraud. Such formal democracy as is written into the constitution and laws of the country is camouflage to hide the real character of the rule of the capitalist.' It also declared the futility of accomplishing their ends thru political action and stated the following scheme: 'The Workers Party will also nominate its candidates and enter into the election campaigns to expose the fraudulent character of capitalist democracy and carry on the propaganda for the Soviet form.' It must be understood, in considering this program, that the authors thereof make no distinction between capitalist, capitalism, and the American form of government."

And further along in the opinion, it has this to say in regard to the program of the Workers Party:

"The unlawful intended purpose of such mass power was stated: 'If during the present strike of the coal miners, the railroad shopmen and textile workers, the whole working class had united in mass meeting and demonstration against the use of courts and soldiers in the strike, they could have thru such mass pressure compelled the government to withdraw the troops and recall the injunctions.'

"It predicted: 'The miners and railroad shopmen are learning from the experience of their struggles that the strongest weapon the capitalists use against them is the power of the government. The mass struggle of the workers will teach them the same lesson, and from these experiences the mass struggles of the workers will become struggles directed toward the end of wresting the governmental power from the hands of the capitalist and establishing the workers republic.'

"It proposed to destroy the government: 'The Workers Party will carry on propaganda to bring to the workers an understanding of the necessity of supplanting the existing capitalist government with a Soviet government . . . The Soviet government of the workers, will, because of the same necessity—the necessity of shppressing the capitalist—be a dictatorship of the workers . . .'

Capitalist Government and Religion.

The court went at length into the question of the relation of religion to the existing capitalist government and held that it was proper to introduce the religious issue into the trial, in view of the fact that religion is one of the bulwarks of government. The following quotation from the opinion states this view:

"Defendant claims great hurt because Buchrain's exegesis to Communists, pointing out the necessity of the destruction of religion, was read to the jury and tended to bore no relation to the charge of criminal syndicalism. While no law can be made in this country respecting religion, and none prohibiting the free exercise thereof, the great moral force of religion in the relation to good government and the happiness of mankind, as expressed in the great ordinance of 1787, for the government of the northwest territory, has ever been recognized and is clearly apparent to Communists; for this force stands as a bulwark against their machinations and nefarious schemes. Therefore, they attack religion, with resolve to absolutely destroy the same, because of its support of the state.

"The influence of christianity in diffusing moral conceptions of free contact, individual property and testamentary succession is well stated in Main's 'Early History of Institutions.'"

Rehearing Possible.

In view of the fact that the Michigan court failed in its opinion to meet the contentions of the defense in regard to the question of whether the ruling of the trial court that it was not necessary that either the Communist Party or Ruthenberg advocate ideas in violation of the criminal syndicalism law in the state of Michigan, it is possible that the defense may ask for a rehearing before the Michigan supreme court in order to press this question upon the court and get a definite opinion upon same Under the court rules, the defense has forty days in which to ask for a rehearing. Frank P. Walsh and I. E Ferguson, attorneys for Ruthenberg are considering this question and a decision as to whether to demand a rehearing in the Michigan court or appeal to the United States supreme court, will be made within a few days

In case it is decided to appeal to the supreme court without further action of the Michigan court, Ruthenberg will have to appear before Judge West of the St. Joseph trial court and be sentenced by the judge before the case can go to the supreme court of the United States. The question whether Ruthenberg shall remain free on bail, pending the proceedings before the United States supreme court is up to Judge West of the trial court. Should he refuse bail, an application can be made to the supreme court to allow bail pending the out come of the case.

representatives is known to have been close.

The compromise on which he men voted called for the losed shop, and the company agreed to pay ten cents extra an hour for overtime, altho not the time-and-half pay at first demanded by the employes.

Vote to Return Close.

Traction company officials spread the report that the men had agreed to return to work Saturday night, but this has not been confirmed by representatives of the union.

It was rumored in Springfield Saturday that the trainmen had rejected by a close vote the tentative agreement between the strikers' committee and the company officials. The committee then ordered a re-checking of the vote, it was reported.

Phil McGuire, international vice president of the Trainmen's Union, declared that the strikers' committee would again meet with the traction officials Saturday afternoon.

A report from Danville stated that the trainmen had voted to reject the compromise agreement and that the stations of the lines east of Urbana were being boarded up, preparatory to a long idleness.

According to the compromise on which the men voted, nine hours was to constitute a regular working day for passenger service and ten hours for freight service work.

Capitalists in Mourning Over Gompers' Going

onel John C. McArthur, representing Major-General Charles P. Summerall, commanding Fort Sam Houston, to tender his respects and services of the United States army. "The army considers it has suffered a serious loss," said Col. McArthur, in recognition of the labor faker who led the American unions into class collaboration with American capital in the world war. And Col. McArthur added "He was a loyal American. He is a friend gone."

From the capitalist newspapers, even in foreign countries, come expressions of sorrow that the great lieutenant of capitalism in the army of labor, has died. The London Standard says that altho Gompers was an autocratic dictator, "it was a sane autocracy, for whenever his followers show the slightest sign of drifting into Bolshevism or even socialism, he put his foot down." The Evening News agrees, and the Sunday Observer says that Gompers was responsible for "the failure of the revolutionary element to gain ascendancy in the American labor world." French capitalist papers unite in praising as a friend of French imperialism.

Post-Mortem Class Collaboration.

Even in death Gompers desired to associate himself with the bitterest enemies of the workers. Five or six years ago, he bought a burial plot in the most aristocratic graveyard in the United States, in the Sleepy Hollow cemetery at Tarrytown, N. Y., where the most wealthy and prominent capitalists of the nation are buried.

The grave that Gompers selected for his final companionship with the capitalists, lies less than 200 feet from the grave of Andrew Carnegie, founder of the United States Steel corporation and about the same distance from the tomb of William Rockefeller, brother and co-conspirator against the workers with old John D Near by is the grave of John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil and its subsidiary corporation, the Colorado Fuel and Iron company massacred the striking miners, their women and their babies in the tent colony of Ludlow, Colorado.

Gompers lived and died for capitalism. It is a fitting location for his grave.

C. P. P. A. Has Hopes That Its Proposed Party Will Succeed

Bewildered as to "The Future."

The "progressive party of Illinois" will hold a convention immediately after the national convention of the conference for progressive political action, declared Charles J. McGowan, state chairman.

"We have not formulated any definite plans," McGowan said. "The national convention to be held in Chicago Feb. 21, will be made up of state delegations which supported the La-Follette campaign.

"All those who supported the La-Follette campaign in Illinois will be invited to the Illinois convention."

Doesn't Know Its Strength.

When asked if any large labor organizations of Illinois had indicated their intention of going along with the "progressive party," McGowan refused to make a statement with regard to affiliations in Illinois.

The Illinois "progressive" movement is uncertain of its strength, and is marking time to see what the national convention of LaFollette elements will bring forth.

It is not definitely known what labor organizations will line up with the "third party movement" in this state.

MILITARIZATION OF THE UNITED STATES IS PROGRAM FOR 1925

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 14.—The war department has issued instructions intensifying the militarization of the United States during 1925, and speeding up the work of training army units for the next war. "Principles learned in the battles of the world war" are to be taught in the regular army, the national guard, and the reserve organizations.

An all-year-round recruiting campaign is to be inaugurated, the war department announces, and emphasis is laid on the mobilizing of a large army for 1925.

An Ex-Vice President Peddles More Hokum for His Capitalist Class

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the capitalist war upon the children gains another recruit in the person of Thomas R. Marshall, at one time a "progressive" governor of Indiana, and later vice-president of these United States. But his arguments, peddled thru a press syndicate to the most reactionary capitalist dailies, are as old as the most ancient.

Marshall is out to "preserve the family." He makes his hypocritical appeal to the fathers and mothers; presumably the fathers and mothers of the working class, since the children of the rich do not go into the mines, the mills and the factories of the nation.

* * * *

The prize gem advanced by the Indiana democratic politician, who also raises the age-old plea of states rights always championed by his party, is:

"To my mind the first question for each citizen to determine is: Does he belong to the state or does the state belong to him? Or, in other words: Has he organized the state to do his will or is the state organized to make him do as he chooses regardless of his desires."

This is the usual hokum passed around by apologists for the capitalist order. The capitalist state does not belong to the 110,000,000 of the American people. The capitalist state, that is called "the American government," is a weapon in the hands of the most powerful capitalists for the oppression of the masses. The family relation, the rights of children to the enjoyment of their childhood, all human rights are ground into the mire of the most cruel exploitation by this Moloch of greed.

Marshall, who is a profit system lawyer as well as politician, resorts to this usual subterfuge of "democracy," trying to fool the masses into the comfortable belief that the state belongs to them. If the masses accept this belief, as they do in giving their support to capitalist institutions, then they foolishly blame themselves for all the wrongs they suffer.

To the illusion that the state belongs to the people, Marshall adds some more hokum about "God given rights." The erstwhile vice-president claims that, "Long before he reaches 18 years of age a normal child has begun to find his way in the world," and that he must have the "God given right" to go it alone, without being hampered by a constitutional amendment declaring that, "Congress shall have the power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age."

Marshall says the boy and girl under 18 years of age must enjoy the "God given right" to go out in the world and battle with the cotton trust, the textile barons, mine owners and other employers of youth labor, for the right to live. Marshall goes to church and he must get considerable heavenly-inspired joy out of this uneven combat. Yet this is not the first time that the capitalist state has found an ally in God in the struggle to defend its institutions. The church thruout "The South," in the days before the Civil War, was almost unanimous in its defense of chattel slavery. Religion is but a reflection of the system of oppression under which it thrives.

Marshall fears that the protection of the children heralds the coming of socialism. He stands petrified in the grip of a fear that any government might concern itself with the welfare of growing boys and girls.

Marshall may rest easy, insofar as his capitalist state is concerned. It will never lift the burden of toil from the shoulders of the young. No cannibal was ever born who devoured his human meal with greater relish than the joy with which capitalism feeds upon its youth. Capitalism will always fight for the right to send children into the maw of the great industrial machine, as competitors with their fathers and mothers, their grown brothers and sisters, in the slave market of the wage workers.

The problem of child labor, like the problem of unemployment and other ills inherent in the present social system, will endure as long as capitalism lasts. The struggle against child labor, the struggle against unemployment, is fundamentally the struggle to end the capitalist system and all the evils it spawns.

* * * *

That is the struggle of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers (Communist) League in their joint war against child labor. Labor must learn that the fight against child labor is a fight to abolish the capitalist state; an effort to establish Soviet Rule for the suppression of the last remnant of capitalism and the ushering in of the Communist social order under which children will become the heirs of their childhood for the first time since human history began.

ELEMENTARY MARXIAN ECONOMICS

CLASS in Elementary Marxian Economics meets Wednesday night, at 8:15 p. m., 2613 Hirsch Blvd Earl R. Browder, instructor. All comrades entered in this class are required to be present this week; failure to appear or to present valid excuse will result in being dropped from the roll.

Text for this week's lesson is "The Peoples' Marx," 1921 edition, Chapters I, II, III, and IV. Answer the following questions with material from these four chapters but in your own words:

Questions.

1. Show that it is impossible to find the determining factor of prices in the "cost of production."

2. Explain how the existence of an average rate of profit creates the illusion for the capitalist that his income is the natural fruit of his capital.

3. Show the contradictions that are involved in the theory that a commodity increases in value thru the process of purchase and sale.

4. Show the contradictions that follow from the idea that commodities are sold above their value.

5. What relation has the useful quality of a commodity to its rate of exchange with other commodities?

6. Explain briefly why "labor-time" is the only possible basis of measurement of value, and how this "labor time" must be understood as "social, necessary labor-time."

7. Show that the surplus value realized in the form of profit during the process of circulation of commodities must necessarily have its origin in the process of production.

8. Explain how the capitalist can follow the law of exchange of equal values for equal values, in the purchase of all things necessary for production, and yet, after employing these commodities in production, find him self with a greater value than he expended.

9. Explain the vital difference for the capitalist between capital invested in raw material and means of production, on the one hand, and capital invested in labor-power on the other hand.

10. Does the capitalist advance the wages to the worker, or is it the worker who advances credit to the capitalist? Explain.

The review of "Value, Price and Profit," required from all students of the class, are not yet all turned into the instructor. Please send them in as soon as possible. One of the best submitted so far is that by William Edwards. It will be published tomorrow. Others will follow.

'OUTLAW' STRIKE OF SWITCHMEN IS UP IN COURT

Buffalo Hearing Reveals Treason of Officials

By JOSEPH SIMINOFF.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUFFALO, Dec. 14.—The "outlaw" switchmen's strike of 1920 was up in the supreme court in Buffalo. The widow of Simon J. Mahoney, an alleged "outlaw" striker, is suing the Switchmen's Union for insurance due on the policy held by her husband while a member of the union.

During the proceedings in the case a number of facts have been brought out as to the part that the officials of the Switchmen's Union played in betraying two thousand railroad workers in that strike.

Morris Welsh, grand secretary and treasurer of the union who appeared in behalf of the union testified that the 2,000 workers who in 1920 took a fishing vacation, violated the constitution of the union and struck against the United States government.

Conditions Grow Worse.

Worker after worker who was called on the witness stand pointed out that the conditions on the railroads for the workers were becoming more unbearable from day to day. The wages paid to these workers were so low that it was hardly sufficient to keep body and soul together, let alone of getting the necessities of life.

The men who were then well organized in Buffalo appealed to the grand lodge officers for action to alleviate this situation. But the bureaucracy of the Switchmen's Union, instead of acting in this situation, have been feeding these workers on promises for a number of months.

They realized that they could not expect anything from these bureaucrats, and called to take a vacation in April 1920. The officials of the union have enlisted the aid of the railroad managers and the United States government to drive these 2,000 workers back on the railroads. Sooner than go back to the slavery endured by them on the railroads, they have found other employment.

In private conversation with some of the former switchmen, they informed me that the former grand lodge president, Aitherig, the man responsible for the calling of the switchmen's strike, while president of the union, instead of looking after the interests of the workers, has been traveling around selling oil stock for some western concern. This henchman of the capitalist class and betrayer of thousands of railroad workers, at the national convention of the union following the "outlaw" strike refused to stand for re-election as president, knowing that the membership of the union were up in arms against his vicious betrayal of the workers to the capitalist class. He went west and became the president of a western mining company.

Thru the action of these leeches of the Switchmen's Union of North America, they have succeeded in smashing the organization in Buffalo, where today there is hardly any organization left to speak of. These misleaders have served the interests of the railroad capitalist as well as could be expected.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE socialist party leaders boasted that the four or five million votes cast for LaFollette were socialist votes and pointed with scorn to the showing made at the polls by the Workers Party. They said: "Where do you land with your sectarian tactics? A paltry twenty-five thousand votes against our five million." But now a section of the socialist party has summed up the election course to come out with the unpleasant truth. The votes are counted but the S. P. is wrecked. Their few remaining papers are dying." They gambled on the formation of a farmer-labor party or a third party. Even the most optimistic do not expect a labor party and the formation of a "third party" is in the lap of the gods.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW pours ridicule on the Communist International and holds that H. G. Wells' "Outline of History" is a great advance on Das Kapital, the monument of work of Karl Marx. Somebody suggested that artists of all kinds, including poets, painters, cartoonists and fiction writers, should be conspired against, to the extent of preventing them from securing positions that would enable them to vote for politicians calling for good or ill the destiny of the workingclass movement. The idea back of the suggestion is that the type of mind necessary in order to excel in any of the above pursuits is entirely unfit for political activities. The suggestion is given here without comment.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

HUNGARIAN CONVENTION CAPTURED BY FARMER-LABOR PARTY IDEA

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

(A Report to the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party on the Convention of the Hungarian Section of the Party.)

If there was any additional proof needed of the menacing nature of the minority the convention of the Hungarian section of the Workers Party supplied this proof. For nearly four hours the convention debated the thesis of the C. E. C. and of the minority. Nearly everyone who spoke, with the exception of one delegate, seemed to be dominated by one idea—namely, that if we drop the farmer-labor party slogan we thereby sign the death warrant of the Communist movement in America. It seemed as if the farmer-labor party idea had become an obsession with the comrades who cannot imagine the further development of our movement without this slogan.

In one of the resolutions adopted by the Fifth Congress of the Comintern we find the following idea expressed: That our struggle against the petty bourgeois pacifist illusions dominating at present the minds of large sections of labor thruout the world, is bound to be successful provided the Communist parties themselves do not become contaminated with these very same illusions. The impression forced upon me by the debate at the Hungarian convention was that at least some sections of our party are becoming infected with such illusions. That this is a menace to our party everyone will admit.

Some Peculiar Arguments of the Minority.

There is no need here for going into detail of the report of the central executive committee as well as of the report made in the name of the minority by Comrade Gitlow. It is necessary, however, to relate some of the features of the arguments used by Comrade Gitlow. Comrade Gitlow resented very much the charge of opportunism directed by the central executive committe against the minority for its policy of emasculating the Workers Party and of building a substitute for it. In reply to this charge Comrade Gitlow advised the Hungarian convention to examine the personnel of the majority and minority of the central executive committee.

To assist the convention in this examination of personal records, Comrade Gitlow volunteered a bit of information. He said the minority is composed of comrades of long standing in the labor movement, people who have sacrificed for the movement, have served prison terms for their ideas, and have thereby proved their fitness for leadership in the American Communist Party. I do not recall whether Comrade Gitlow volunteered any information on the record of the members of the majority. But the conclusion to be drawn from his statement was that the members of the majority of the central executive committee do not possess the virtues attributed by him to the minority, at least not in the same measure, and therefore the contentions of the central executive committee must not be taken seriously.

Another very peculiar argument used by Comrade Gitlow in the debate was the proposal of the minority to retain the slogan for a class farmer-labor party and carry on an intensive campaign for such a party also finds its justification from the experiences of the Russian Communist Party. He said, the Russian Communist Party initiated a movement for the organization of Soviets. Why did the Russian party do it? Why did the Russian party build non-Communist, non-partisan political bodies, such as Soviets? The answer is, because the Russian party knew that by means of these Soviets it will be able to mobilise large masses of workers and poor farmers, organize them around itself for revolutionary struggle against capitalism. The American party has the same duty confronting it in the United States. It, therefore, must create non-partisan political bodies in order to achieve the above end. Consequently, the Workers Party of America must carry on a campaign for a farmer-labor party.

The above arguments were, of course, not the only ones used by Comrade Gitlow. There were many more of the stock arguments that are handed on the shelves of the minority archives. When, however, a representative of the minority finds it necessary to resort to such arguments as those related above it would prove that his cause is in a very bad way. And so it is. But the majority of the Hungarian convention was so obsessed with the farmer-labor idea and with many more fears and prejudices which I am going to touch upon later that it decided overwhelmingly to support the thesis of the minority. I might as well point out that there were at the convention quite a number of delegates (between 5 and 8) that abstained from voting altogether. The rest of the convention voted for the minority resolution except for one delegate who dared to raise his voice in favor of the position of the central executive committee. And in passing I wish to remark that it really required some courage to do so.

Resolution on Report of C. E. C.

The resolution adopted by the convention is already published in the party press. The following is the resolution on the report of the central executive committee submitted to the Hungarian convention by the representative of the central executive committee:

"The convention of the Hungarian section accepts the report of the central executive committee submitted to it by Comrade A. Bittelman and pledges its full support to the program of Bolshevizing the party as outlined in the program of the central executive committee, particularly the section which calls for an ideological struggle against all opportunistic tendencies in the party.

"The convention of the Hungarian section is in full agreement with the central executive committee on the necessity of concentrating the efforts of the party and every section of it upon the upbuilding of the strength of the party in the basic industries thru the reorganization of the party on the shop nuclei basis.

"The convention is also in full agreement with the central executive committee on the necessity of each language section functioning in closest contact with and under the supervision of the general party organization.

"The convention recommends to the Hungarian branches of the party a thoro discussion of the theses of the central executive committee and of the resolution in order to participate intelligently in the solution of the problems immediately confronting the party."

This resolution received only one vote at the convention, not because of its merits but because of the definite line-up effected by the minority even before the convention came into session. One of the Hungarian comrades remarked to me hours before the discussion on the report began that the central executive committee position will be defeated overwhelmingly at the convention.

Before proceeding to the other phases of the convention I wish to make a few comment on one particular section of the minority resolution which was adopted by the convention. It is section 3, point c. It reads:

"The complete reorganization of the industrial department of the party in order that it may carry out the tasks laid down for it by the R. I. L. U. in its recent decision."

Now, as this thing stands, one would get the impression that the convention had before it a special report of the industrial department, that the convention discussed that report and found that there was something wrong with the department, and was, therefore, in favor of reorganizing it for more effective work. As a matter of fact the convention hardly touched upon the industrial department of the party. Very little if anything has been said about the industrial department. No proposals whatever were submitted for making the department a more effective instrument in the hands of the party. In other words, the convention neither said nor did anything to justify the insertion of such a paragraph in the resolution. And yet it is in there. And for no reason, so it seems to me, but to insinuate something which no one had the courage openly to state. Such practices, whatever their intrinsic merits, will hardly contribute to make our party a better party.

Comrade Amter Raises Issue of Program.

Altho not officially delegated by the central executive committee, Comrade Amter appeared before the Hungarian convention and delivered a speech This rather irregular procedure is explained by the "special invitation" extended to Comrade Amter by the convention. This however is not the main point. The important thing is what Comrade Amter told the convention. And what he told the convention is no many words was this: Comrade Pepper was no longer in our midst the Workers Party has been steadily going to the dogs, and that he hopes and is convinced that Comrade Pepper will some day again be in our ranks and will then lead us to the final victory over capitalism. There was, as the report goes, "Tremendous applause and great demonstration." The point that I wish to raise here is, on what grounds does Comrade Amter and the minority justify the raising of this issue in the party? By what arguments will they prove that such speeches as Comrade Amter's are contributing to the welfare of the Workers Party? Factionalism as a rule is most rampant in pre-convention periods, but it would seem that there must be a limit to it somewhere.

Organization and Activities of Hungarian Section.

The field of Communist propaganda and organization among the Hungarian speaking workers of the United States is very large. There are tens of thousands of Hungarian workers employed in the basic industries, such as steel and coal. Yet the Hungarian section of our party (like many others) is still a very small organization. Its membership does not run above 600. The main strength of our Hungarian section does not yet lie in the basic industries of the country The need for the reorganization on the shop nuclei basis as well as the conditions for the success of such reorganization are very strong in the Hungarian section.

There were present at the convention 24 delegates representing Hungarian-speaking branches of the party. 2 delegates from the National Hungarian Propaganda Committee of the Young Workers League, and 7 fraternal delegates representing the Hungarian Bureau and various benevolent and fraternal organizations among the Hungarian workers.

From the report of the bureau it could be seen that the Hungarian section participated in every political campaign of the party and in some places quite effectively. But the major activities of the section on the field of Hungarian work were the activities of the section among the benevolent and fraternal organizations among the Hungarian-speaking workers. In one of these organizations having a very large membership our Hungarian comrades were able to win the practical leadership which was of tremendous importance in the activities of our Hungarian section. The convention devoted a large portion of its time to outlining political and organizational means for the extension of the influence of the Hungarian section among other fraternal organizations, particularly among those which are dominated by petty bourgeois leadership.

The convention adopted an extensive plan of education designed to Bolshevize the Hungarian section. It is a good program so far as programs go. From the debate it was apparent that this was not the first program of the kind adopted by the Hungarian section, only it was not as yet put into effect. There is no reason why the incoming bureau should not be able to develop this program of education on a really large and effective scale, particularly since it has for its service a daily newspaper, the New Elore. This Hungarian organ of the party enjoys a good reputation among large sections of Hungarian speaking workers. By proper organization among the New Elore should prove an excellent means not only for gaining influence among the masses but for Bolshevizing the Hungarian section itself.

Of the other problems discussed by the convention I must mention the problem of Communist work among working class women and among the working class youth. Programs have been adopted for each of these phases of our activity. We must, however, impress the Hungarian comrades as well as the other sections of the party that our work among working class women must be concentrated mainly on the women employed in shops. The usual practice is to devote most of the attention to housewives, which should not be the case. And inasmuch as Communist work is carried on among housewives it should be linked up with our Communist activities among the women employed in shops and factories.

The convention elected a bureau of nine workers to carry on the work of the organization. It might be well to point out in this connection that there was a strong sentiment at the convention to bar paid officials of the organization from being elected members of the bureau. This sentiment, whatever its basic reasons, is not a very healthy sign. The representative of the central executive committee explained to the delegates that to be a paid employee of the party in itself is no crime to be punished, but that if some paid officials do not deserve to be elected on the bureau they certainly are not fit to hold any responsible position in the organization. The convention accepted the point of view of the central executive committee as expressed in a special resolution. However, the leading comrades in the Hungarian section would do well to examine and remove the causes producing such a sentiment.

The Hungarian section of the party has before it a great field for work. By paying more attention to the basic industries, by assisting the party in the process of reorganization on the shop nuclei basis, by Bolshevizing the minds of its own membership, and by living in closer contact with the life of the general party organization, the next convention of the Hungarian section will undoubtedly register greater achievements for the Communist movement in America.

THREE INTERESTING ARTICLES.

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE December issue of the Workers Monthly can be read from cover to cover with benefit by the members of our party as well as by non-members, but there are three articles in this number that should prove of unusual interest during the period of intense party discussion.

The articles referred to are by Comrades Foster, Ruthenberg and Bittelman, and discuss the policies of the Workers Party. Foster and Bittelman treat the farmer-labor party very much like a nightmare while Ruthenberg appears to be still hugging a political fantasy. Foster and Bittelman figuratively scan the horizon for a glimpse of farmer-labor party sentiment and cannot even see a coon whisker, while according to Ruthenberg, embattled farmers "dirt" and otherwise form a black cloud on the landscape.

Enough could be written about the title of Comrade Ruthenberg's article to fill several columns of space on the DAILY WORKER: "Is the movement towards class political action dead?" This title immediately raises the question in the mind of a Communist, "What is the Workers Party if not a class party?" Precisely! What have we been cuddling to our bosoms for so many years? The theme of Comrade Ruthenberg's article is that there is only one form of working class political action and that is thru a so-called farmer-labor united front in election campaigns. The minority can squirm and try to evade this indictment, but not even so clever a journalistic painter of images as Comrade Robert Minor can succeed in hiding this issue behind a fog bank of phrases.

Comrade Foster's article is entitled: "The significance of the elections." It explains the absorption of the farmer-labor party movement by the progressive movement on the LaFollette movement as it is popularly known. LaFollette being its principal standard bearer and ideological leader. It is pretty bourgeois minded and quite happy plugging along toward the swamp of illusions behind the petty bourgeois "Indian guide," LaFollette. Foster tells how the central executive committee decided to drop the dead farmer-labor party and the just as dead farmer-labor party slogan. He goes on to give a brief and lucid history of the reason why our party adopted the slogan of "For a mass, farmer-labor party" in 1922. When this slogan aroused the enthusiasm of the workers, when it was a fighting slogan, that enabled the Communists to make contact with large masses of workers and secure leadership over them it was a Communist slogan. When that slogan no longer arouses the interests of the workers, when "it leaves them cold," so to speak, it has no value for the Communist Party.

You will gather from Foster's article that slogans in themselves are not sacred things to be worshipped as an ignorant Russian peasant would worship an ikon, or an Irish catholic would prostrate himself before the statute of a saint. They are means to an end, not merely ends in themselves. Foster does not believe in setting up a cordon sanitaire of alleged progressives around the Workers Party in order to inveigle the workers into our red parlor as the clever spider would seduce the fly. While it is true that you can catch more flies with molasses than with vinegar, it is also true that the Workers Party is not in the fly-catching business, but in the business of creating a political party for the overthrow of capitalist rule. To accomplish that purpose revolutionary workers and not human flies are needed. Our leaders must not be spiders. They must show their Communist faces to the working class.

Another article, which goes more completely into our whole labor party policy than any of the others, is one entitled, "In retospect" by Alexander Bittelman. Comrades Bittelman and Foster take the same position, in the present controversy in the party. They are for the farmer-labor party in deed and no longer serves the purpose of helping us to build up the Workers (Communist) Party. Bittelman, in brief, points out that we had a farmer-labor party policy when there was a farmer-labor party movement that is none of our business as Communists to create. Creating out of nothing, to create two parties where one exists now, in other words to build a party dual to and in competition with the Workers Party. Aside from the financial drain on our party membership of maintaining a useless political semi-uniform appendix, the effects on their morale would lead to disaster.

Bittelman quotes from the various theses and C. E. C. statements written on the subject since 1922. He analyzes our united front with Fitzpatrick and our orientation towards Mahoney, from Chicago to St. Paul, then towards reality and the waning of an election campaign under the banner of Communism. The last paragraph in Bittelman's article is herewith quoted to relieve the fears of those who believe with Comrade Ruthenberg and his minority faction that the central executive committee has dropped the united front tactic because it has spurned the illusion that an entente with Sidney Hillman, Mahoney, or Morris Hillquit is the road of a united front with the Communist International has laid down as the basic tactic of its various sections.

Bittelman finishes his article with this paragraph: "We shall now have no labor policy because there is no farmer-labor party movement. We shall have no labor party slogan, because such a slogan will now have no dynamic appeal and will offer no basis of struggle to the masses of workers and poor farmers. But we will have united front campaigns on the political field (not only in elections) as well as on the economic field, on the basis of the immediate struggles of the working masses. Thus we shall build our our Workers Party into a powerful mass Communist Party."

Of course, it is impossible to give anything except the barest sketch of the contents of the December issue of the Workers Monthly in a brief review. To do justice to anyone of the articles would require at least two columns. The three articles referred to are selected because of the tremendous value to the party of the present discussion on the farmer-labor issue. This question is followed with keen interest by radical workers not yet in our party. Both sides are entitled to and are given unlimited freedom and opportunity for discussion within party bounds of discipline by the C. E. C. Ruthenberg's article should be read carefully and so should the articles of Comrades Foster and Bittelman. Our members will thus be able to form their own opinions as to which policy is the better for the Workers Party to adopt. The writer has not doubt but the overwhelming bulk of our membership will repudiate farmer-laborism.

WILL THE MINORITY EVER LEARN?

By JOSEPH R. BOOTH.

THE minority thesis is quite astonishing, judging it in the light of evidence staring at the face of our gross, expensive, experimental failure in the past, by wasting most of the party's energy in building the "farmer-labor party," which was inflicted body and soul by LaFollettelism.

What brand of a farmer-labor party is now possible? Without the LaFollettes and Gompereses it becomes numerically insignificant, and with them it forms a rotten, petite-bourgeois dump to dump the discontent of farmer-labor and it is bad enough to contend with such an evil when it exists, without trying to create it, especially now when the working masses don't hit this trail. It is, then, not in the least a natural process, but only a mechanical absurdity.

Yes! It is high time to sober up and to state the exact truth that while our party is still weak our influence is not enough to bring about a farmer-labor party. On the other hand when we get powerful we may not need such a party.

Furthermore, to ripen the working masses politically does not require to play with the tragic-comical role of leading them step by step, first into a farmer-labor party, then into the S. P., S. L. P., proletarian party and finally the Workers Party . . . so long as we possess a real effective method of bringing them under our leadership, by firmly participating in their everyday bitter political and economic struggles.

In political election campaign, we must come out with our own full program, under our own name; to do otherwise means misrepresentation to the workers, the losing of our identity, and bringing chaos in our own ranks.

All we have to do is to observe the supreme lessons in a comparison of our last splendid political campaign, carried on under our own revolutionary banner, and that of the farmer-labor party reformistic agitational bunk.

Of our young party, a good many members had to be expelled for going wrong, over our experienced political policy, and many others got principally loose and demoralized. So for the sake of Communism let us stop the rainbow chasing for political tricksters and instead, centralize all party activities into fruitful channels, that will raise the prestige of our cause, and in the meantime strengthen our own Workers Party!

"PROGRAMS" FOR ACTION— WORDS FOR DEEDS!

By MAX BEDACHT.

COMRADE CANNON in one of his recent contributions to the party discussion digs down deep into mud to get epithets to hurl at the minority. But the mud of sentiment he wears as a rule falls off him and instead of the Communist, discussing with other Communists, there stands revealed the bullying brawler. There is little to be said about such "convincing" arguments. They answer themselves.

If the minority were convinced that their opponents are crooks it would meet them as accusers, not in a party discussion, but in a party trial. But since our opinion of the majority is that they are totally unfit for leadership over our party, we meet them in discussion before the membership and call upon the latter to judge not their political honesty but the political service of the majority.

The issue in the present discussion is action versus propaganda, campaigns versus "programs." The issue is whether the party shall continue to be a political party, or whether it should become an educational league.

Labor Party Welcome as Long as We Only Talk About It.

The labor party issue was welcome as a basis for a campaign by all as long as this campaign confined itself to the introduction of resolutions in trades unions demanding the endorsement of the idea of a labor party. But when this educational campaign was to be turned into one of action, when the party was called upon to take load not only in talking about the labor party but in actually forming it, then the trouble began.

The majority is at present engaged in proving that the labor party as such is a bad, a dangerous, a damnable thing. But in his report to the Fourteenth, made by Comrade Foster in May of this year, thought so much about the idea of a labor party that he even robbed the Workers (Communist) Party of the credit of having initiated a movement for it. He thought so much of it at that time, that he took full credit for the Trade Union Educational League for having initiated the labor party idea. Foster even takes credit for the July conference in Chicago in 1923 and maintains in that report that the T. U. E. L. succeeded in getting representatives of 700,000 workers to assemble on that memorable occasion. But the achievements of the T. U. E. L. in Moscow turn into crimes of the minority in the U. S. Why so? Because up to the conference the present majority could subscribe to all of the actions of the party. The present majority carried out these actions in some form of a united front movement in Chicago, in which our party and its members took the initiative for the introduction of the idea by our party, in the trade unions. But the credit for these activities fell as a ripe fruit into the pockets of the reactionary leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and earned for them the fame of intrepid progressivism. Now, in this conference of July 3, 1923, the executive committee of the party demanded a change. It demanded that our party, the Workers, the Communist Party should take its rightful place as the leader of the movement. It demanded that the party come out from under its cover of Fitzpatrick's progressivism and operate as the Workers, the Communist Party. No one in the party closed his eyes to the fact that this step might lead to a conflict with Fitzpatrick. The ones that dreaded this conflict most were the comrades that were responsible for the united front in Chicago, and who, as the head of the Chicago Federation of Labor thru Fitzpatrick, but that they had made no attempt to hold Fitzpatrick by winning the Chicago Federation of Labor, the rank and file unions. Foster condemned that conflict with Fitzpatrick and preferred a conflict with the executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.

From then on the present majority began its struggle for power in the party. And the outstanding reason for this struggle for power was, that the Foster group wanted to be sure that in a similar situation like that of July, 1923, there would be no Communist executive committee of our party that would force Foster to break faith with some Fitzpatrick.

Majority's Activities Consist in Passing of Resolutions.

As long as our Trade Union Educational League confined itself to the introduction and the passing of resolutions for this and that the league met comparatively little opposition. The outward acceptance of such resolutions even helped many an old reactionary labor leader to get crowned with a halo of progressivism. The trouble only started when the Workers (Communist) Party did its duty and initiated action in the place of mere propaganda. Our majority is so stuck on the idyllic days of old, when we introduced resolutions galore but lived in peace, that they insist on killing the last remnant of any large scale activity that the party has initiated in the past.

To achieve this end the majority must discredit the minority. This they cannot do without trying to prove that the minority not only proposes a wrong policy, but that the minority is an outright traitor to Communism. To accomplish this the majority is forced to set up a theory about labor parties. Labor parties are bad so ipso, because they are reformist, because they compete with the Workers Party for leadership, etc. And after our majority has proven to its own satisfaction that any proponent of a labor party is a traitor to Communism they say that if the masses would demand a labor party, then, of course, the majority would be willing to work for it. Wonderful Communism, is it not? A damnable thing is the labor party. But if the masses want it, then we will raise the slogan and work for the formation of one. We ask the majority: Is it really the task of the Communists to oblige the workers by taking up and aiding all their whims and notions? Our answer is, No! It is one thing to be with the workers in their mass movements, even if they go in the wrong direction, but for the purpose of changing the direction, with a view of righting the wrong. But to claim that the party must aid and support any, even a fundamentally wrong, movement of the workers, just because the workers want this movement, is surely anything but Communist. But it is the majority's view. It is the majority's desire to swim with the broad stream of the labor movement, not only economically, but also politically, so that serious conflicts may be avoided, so that Comrade Foster may not be forced at some time or other to break faith with some Fitzpatrick or other.

All the activities of the majority give conclusive proof that this is not a campaign accusation but a statement of facts. All the campaigns of the Trades Union Educational League insisted on sticking to the surface. Two million organized workers declared themselves for amalgamation. That is at least half of the organized workers of the United States. What campaign was ever initiated, what plan was ever made to amalgamate? Nothing whatever. Two million had declared for thru conventions, etc. But now the same conventions declare against. Such declarations express sentiment. But what has ever been done to crystallize this sentiment into action. Nothing. And what is more, nothing will ever be done, because that might lead to serious conflicts with some Fitzpatrick or other.

The majority in all its proposals has always insisted to stick to the surface. I repeat here, and will repeat again and again, the majority solves all the problems of the party with resolutions.

Majority Had No Program For Pan-American Labor Convention.

A few days ago there took place a convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor in Mexico. As early as in April, 1924, eight to nine months ago the minority raised the question of preparing for this convention in advance. No action was taken. Again in May, 1924, the minority brought the question before the political committee. Nothing was done. In December, practically a few hours before the opening of the convention, when the representative of the T. U. E. L. was half way down in Mexico, the majority, at least, brought in—resolutions and manifestos. The representative of the party had to receive the instructions by special delivery and had to be informed by wire to wait for them.

Is it not obvious that the work of an organization as the T. U. E. L. for a gathering like the conference of the Pan-American Federation of Labor cannot begin on the eve of the conference? Is it not obvious, that it is totally inadequate for a revolutionary party to confine its activities to conventions? If is not clear that the occasion required months of preparation, in conjunction with the Communist parties of other Central and South American countries and among labor federations in these Central and South American states? Yes, that is obvious to all, except to our majority. I am sure that if this criticism does not spur the majority to some action, the passage of some resolution in the matter, then the Pan-American Federation is a closed incident for the majority until 24 hours before the opening of the next convention of that body.

Every problem under the sun is solved by the majority with a resolution. Some short while ago the executive secretary of the party sent instructions to all district organizers, pointing out the necessity of action in the field of unemployment. In the meantime some hobo organization in Chicago took up the organization of some sort of unemployed council (to boost its soup kitchen, it is claimed). Even tho this unemployed council may not be genuine—but it is safe to assume that the unemployed are genuine. Seeing that the party is inactive in the field of unemployment and leaves that field to others, the minority introduced the following resolution in the political committee of the party:

Unemployment.

WHEREAS: The DAILY WORKER of Dec. 8 reports that "Chicago's army of unemployed have formed a council";

WHEREAS: The central executive committee in its various programs of action has declared itself in favor of organizing councils of the unemployed in order to enable the party to mobilise the masses for action in such a campaign;

THEREFORE: The central executive committee emphatically instructs the Chicago district executive committee and city central executive to take steps immediately to have the Communists, the Workers Party members, to put themselves at the head of this move towards organization of the unemployed begun spontaneously by the masses themselves;

THEREFORE: The central executive committee further instructs the district executive committee of Chicago to take steps to organize unemployment councils in industries where unemployment has already reached a mass character as, for example, in the bituminous coal mining industry.

THEREFORE: That the central executive committee write a letter to the Chicago district executive committee pointing out to it that it is the task of the Communists to hasten and to take the lead in action by the masses and not merely to fall in line with the masses. That we emphasize the need of the district executive committee taking effective steps to make the Workers Party the leader of this and any other unemployment councils, which may be found in the Chicago industrial area, particularly because we are now in the position of not having had the initiative in this organization of the unemployed;

THEREFORE: That the central executive committee draw up a statement for the whole party pointing out the need of the Communist, the Workers Party, avoiding the situation which occurred in Chicago where we lost the initiative in launching an unemployment council to a non-party, non-Communist organization, and drawing the basic Communist lessons therefrom as to leadership of the masses.

Congratulate Chicago District Executive for Doing Nothing.

Our central executive committee majority was in a fix. Action was required. A thing that they dread at all times. But what is a majority good for if you do not use it. It is generally said that the powers of the English parliament are unlimited. That body can do anything, except change the sex of man or woman. Well, our majority wants to prove that the English parliament is a piker when it comes to powers. A resolution was introduced by the majority, congratulating the Chicago district for its splendid work in the field of the unemployed. Here is the resolution:

"That the central executive committee takes note of the fact that the Chicago organization has participated in the organization of the unemployed and has put an organizer in the coal fields. And the central executive committee commends these comrades for that work."

What is wrong with this resolution? Oh, nothing, except that the district organizer of this same district that was to be congratulated for its splendid work, had sent into the national office of the party a letter just the day previous in which he says that he did do—nothing. He reports: "In Chicago altho unemployment is marked in some instances, as, for example, the needle trades, it has not yet assumed mass character. The Hobo College of Chicago took the initiative to form a so-called unemployment council a few days ago. Altho, of course, little can be expected from it, we are keeping in touch with it, by a member on their advisory committee as a matter of having a connection. However we have not as yet taken actual steps towards formation of the councils due to the fact of the conditions already mentioned." (Our emphasis.)

For these steps "not as yet taken" the majority of the central executive committee insists on congratulating the district. The steps "not as yet taken" are touched by the magic rod of a central executive committee majority and, presto, they change into steps accomplished. Even old Jehovah has nothing on the central executive committee majority when it comes to create a universe—out of nothingness.

But the resolutions of the central executive committee do not make a Communist party out of our organization. The "programs" and resolutions of the central executive committee majority do not help to revolutionize the labor movement in America. The resolutions and "programs" of the central executive committee majority can at best satisfy a demand for propaganda, but are bound to result in a backward development of our party from a political party of action into a propaganda sect.

THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL AND THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY

By ISRAEL AMTER.

IT might be called to the attention of all members of the Workers Party and especially of the majority of the C. E. C. and their followers who are so loud in their claims that the Communist International supports their position, that the executive committee of the Communist International recently expressed itself on the question of the farmer-labor party.

A delegation expressing the three viewpoints on the LaFollette issue was in Moscow in the month of May. The executive committee of the Communist International, after hearing the three comrades, and entering into a close analytical discussion of the situation, decided as follows:

1. "The United States of America is at present going thru a great social and political crisis which is bound to become more and more aggravated. The agrarian crisis causing the bankruptcy of millions of farmers and, at the same time, causing many others to completely get into the clutches of the banks; the oil scandal which has accelerated the process of disintegration of both capitalist parties, all this is setting in motion tremendous masses of workers as well as of the urban and rural petty-bourgeois population. The efforts of these masses to establish a third party represent their endeavor to emancipate themselves from the domination by the trusts and their political machines. But the capitalist class will undoubtedly endeavor to retard the movement by establishing the leadership of petty-bourgeois politicians over the third party movement; it will make an effort to place it into the hands of old politicians bound by thousands of threads with the capitalist class . . ." The analysis further points to the necessity the Workers Party felt of entering into this movement so as to assist the masses of the petty-bourgeoisie in detaching themselves from the capitalist class and of organizing the most advanced elements of the workers in the ranks of the Workers Party.

The Communist International then proceeds: "The first task of the Workers Party is to become a mass Communist Party of workers. It can fulfill this task ONLY by most actively PARTICIPATING IN THE ESTABLISHMENT of a labor party which will embrace ALL ELEMENTS OF THE WORKING CLASS WILLING TO CONDUCT A POLICY INDEPENDENT OF THE CAPITALIST CLASS, and by establishing a bond between farmers who are at present in a state of strong fermentation. These two independent tasks—the task of building around the Communist Party a broad CLASS labor party and of establishing a bond between the labor party and the poorest elements of farmers—have developed in the United States, thanks to the peculiarities of historical evolution, as one problem, namely, the building of a common party of workers and exploited farmers . . ." (Heavy type and caps, mine, I. A.)

Before entering into an analysis of this definition of the tasks of the Workers Party, it is necessary to insert a few remarks. A tendency was represented at the Comintern by Comrade Olgin, who, because of the antagonism manifested toward Comrade Lore on account of his non-Communist position on various questions, quickly dissociated in Moscow himself from Lore. Olgin, however, represented the viewpoint of what had been termed the Lore group. He declares that he wrote the anti-LaFollette thesis—nevertheless it was approved by the group that has been termed the Lore group in the party—a charge that Comrade Olgin did not and does not deny. What did Comrade Radek, who was the reporter of the American commission to the presidium of the Comintern state? "Aside from the group which sees no political crisis in America and does not recognize the importance of the agrarian question, the differences between the other two groups represented by Comrades Foster and Pepper are . . . etc., etc." Radek made this statement because of the analysis made by Comrade Olgin, who tried to demonstrate that, as is natural in capitalist society, there are recurring crises, and that the period of 1920 to 1921 was a crisis of similar nature. An un-Marxian analysis, not taking into account the crisis that led to the world war, the Russian revolution, the chaos in Europe, the Dawes' plan, the revolt of the colonies, the agrarian crises, etc., etc. As a consequence, the point of view of the anti-LaFollette group of Olgin-Lore was given no support for the reasons that they gave—the Communist International adopting a Communist position on the latter. So much for the then Lore Olgin group.

The Communist International states so many words that the Workers Party can become a mass Communist Party "ONLY by most actively participating in the establishment of a labor party." The majority of the C. E. C. contends that the Comintern made this decision on the basis of the situation that existed in the United States up to the month of May. Does the majority pretend that the presidium of the Comintern believed that we should be able to develop the Workers Party into a MASS Communist Party during the few months of the election campaign? Does the majority of the C. E. C. believe that the leading Bolsheviks in the presidium of the Comintern have not a better understanding of Marxian-Leninistic methods as to suppose that this could be anything but a PROCESS OF YEARS?

The decision says, however, that ONLY by performing this task can the Workers Party become a mass Communist Party. In other words, the presidium after analyzing the situation together with the representative of the majority of the C. E. C.—WHO CLAIMS THAT HE WROTE THIS SECTION OF THE DECISION HIMSELF—declares that only the activity for the formation of a labor party will develop the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party. Again, I ask, did the presidium think this could be fulfilled during the course of the six months between May and Nov. 4? The supposition is ridiculous.

The decision says further that we must not alone participate in the labor movement, but must "actively participate in the establishment of a labor party." The Communist International is made up of parties that are supposed to represent the vanguard of the working class. Communists are supposed to be leaders, not trailers of the working class movement. They are supposed to study the development of the struggle, noting its tendencies, analyze conditions and thereupon base their policies. The presidium of the Communist International is made up of men of this character. With the assistance of the American comrades, they laid down a policy and tactics and declared not that we must wait for a movement for a farmer-labor party to arise in the United States—which the majority says may arise in the future—and then participate in it. No, the presidium states quite clearly that conditions are bound to lead to the masses of the workers as well as of the petty-bourgeoisie making endeavors to emancipate themselves from the domination of the trusts and their political machines." As Communists we are interested in separating the workers and poor farmers from the petty-bourgeoisie and getting them under revolutionary leadership. The presidium, therefore, declared that we must actively participate in establishing a party of the workers and poor farmers—recognizing that thus we would be able to contend for the leadership of this party. By this activity and this leadership, we will increase our prestige among the masses, influence them toward the Communist position and thus draw them into the Workers Party.

The Communist International does not believe that mere participation in a movement of this kind will make the Workers Party a mass Communist Party. If, as the presidium declares, the masses must needs make efforts to separate themselves from the domination of the capitalist parties, and the peculiarity of this movement in the United States is that it takes the form of a labor party establishing a bond with the poor farmers—in a word a farmer-labor party—then it is the duty of the Communists, as Marxians, to lead this movement, thus developing their party into a mass Communist Party.

It would appear that the majority agreed with analyses and policies in Moscow, but rejects particularly their application in America. There are many instances of such acceptances in the Communist International. The Norwegian labor party under the leadership of Falk and Traenmel likewise agreed to proposals and decisions of the Comintern—then in Moscow. Hoeglund up to the Fifth Congress did the same—when in Moscow. Smeral of the Czecho-Slovakian party has done the same. Is the majority of the C. E. C. following the same course? The fate of these leaders was decided by drastic steps on the part of the Comintern. That should serve as a warning.

There is another point in the resolution of the presidium of the Communist International. The resolution states that this labor party shall be composed not of ALL labor, but of the elements of the working class willing to conduct a policy independent of the capitalist class. From this statement it is clear that only the more radical elements will be willing to enter into a united front with the Communists for the formation of a labor party. Does the Comintern reject the formation of a party, which doesn't embrace the whole working class—say, a party like the British labor party? Most certainly not. The Comintern is interested in a labor party within which the Communists can work, for otherwise there would be an organized body under leadership closely linked up with the bourgeoisie. Hence the presidium prescribed the nature of the elements out of which the Communists must form a labor party.

This was the nature of the federated farmer-labor party, which the Comrade Manley calls it a "fake" farmer-labor party. It may have been—but if so, then Comrade Manley and the present majority of the C. E. C. sabotaged the organization of a real farmer-labor party. Even at that time, the present majority could not understand the nature of a real labor party, for, as they maintained, it would mean a split in the trade union movement, a split of the organized labor forces on the political field—and that they refused to support. And yet what did Comrade Zinoviev say in the presidium regarding the federated farmer-labor party—of course, not knowing that we had comrades in the American party who go about forming "fake" parties? After hearing the reports of all the American comrades, after listening to their analysis of the political conditions in the United States, after hearing Comrade Foster declare that there were between 500,000 and 1,000,000 workers represented at the convention of the federated farmer-labor party convention, he said: "We must not regret that we formed the federated farmer-labor party." Further he said, "I believe that if we study everything we will say that in the year 1924 things are not so elementary . . . that we cannot propagate the idea of an independent labor party. We must dare to put forth this idea and it must be realized, namely, a separate labor party. IT IS OUR MAIN DUTY TO SET THIS IN MOTION."

Comrade Zinoviev recognized that there might be a reaction to the policies that were laid down by the Comintern. He had a keen insight into the nature of comrades who, pursuing a dangerous course, are withheld from this course and lose heart. He said: "In America there is DANGER OF OUR FALLING INTO DE LEONISM. We must state quite openly. We must hesitate about following in his footsteps. We are at the BEGINNING of a mass labor movement which will be independent. The idea of an independent labor party will be realized."

To these remarks Comrade Foster had nothing to say. They were based upon the analysis that Comrade Foster himself had given. That was very good in Moscow—but in America it seems that it no longer applies.

There is one other point that was dealt with in the Comintern resolution. The resolution states that we must "build around the Communist Party a broad CLASS labor party." Undoubtedly the presidium of the Comintern is made up of Two-and-a-Half internationalists, who conceive as the function of the Communists the "building of a party of the Two-and-Half International in the United States. Undoubtedly, the presidium is made up of mensheviks who want to liquidate the Workers Party by proposing the idiotic idea that any other but the Workers Party can be a CLASS party! Comrades Foster, Dunne, Cannon, Browder and Bittelman! You know very well what the meaning of this term is. You know very well that the presidium of the C. I. recognizes that such a labor party is in no way to REPLACE the Workers Party; that nonetheless it is a class labor party. It is made up of elements willing to fight against the domination of the capitalist parties, but are not clear-cut revolutionists conscious of their position. Were they such, they would be in the Workers Party. The presidium conceives of this party as a party of workers willing to co-operate with the Communists in the struggle, a party from which the Communists will recruit the best elements into the Workers Party for the purpose of converting the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party.

It is highest time, therefore, that this stupid, childish talk about the impossibility of a "class" party outside the Workers Party be stopped—unless the comrades of the majority, who no doubt, are better Marxists and Leninists than the leaders of the Communist International, prefer to take up the issue with these leaders. It is time to stop befuddling the minds of our membership and get down to an earnest discussion of REAL policies.

This, however, the majority dare not do. For the majority of the C. E. C. will have to answer the following two charges:

CHARGE 1. THE LAST CONVENTION OF THE WORKERS PARTY APPROVED THE SLOGAN OF A FARMER-LABOR PARTY AND INSTRUCTED THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE TO CONDUCT AN ENERGETIC CAMPAIGN FOR ITS REALIZATION.

CHARGE 2. THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL TWICE APPROVED THE FORMATION OF SUCH A PARTY—FIRST, IN THE LETTER TO THE LAST PARTY CONVENTION; SECOND, IN THE DECISION RENDERED IN THE MONTH OF MAY, WHEN YOUR REPRESENTATIVE WAS IN MOSCOW.

YOU ACCEPTED THE DECISION OF THIS PARTY CONVENTION AND OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL.

You dropped this policy before November 4, when deciding what questions you would place before the convention of the American Federation of Labor. You corroborated the discontinuance of the use of the slogan in your "Election Statement."

YOU HAVE FLAUNTED THE DECISION OF THE PARTY CONVENTION AND OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL, WITHOUT EVEN CONSULTING THE MEMBERSHIP WHO GAVE YOU THE RIGHT? YOU DECLARE THAT YOUR POSITION IS THAT OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL. THIS IS ABSOLUTELY UNTRUE.

The presidium of the Communist International endorses its decision and you broke it. You will have to answer to the Communist International and the party convention.

We who accept the minority position abide by the decision of the Communist International and the party convention.

A CORRECTION.

In Comrade Foster's article on "Farmer-Labor Opportunism," which appeared in the issue of Dec. 13, the following sentence, dealing with a speech delivered by Comrade Foster at St. Paul, appears: "But the speech was in harmony with the point of view of the whole C. E. C. majority." The words "and minority" should have appeared at the end of this sentence and were dropped owing to a typographical error.

GERMAN SECTION CONVENTION APPROVES REPORT OF C. E. C.

Resolution on Report of the Central Executive Committee, Adopted by the Convention of the German Section, Workers (Communist) Party of America.

1. The National Convention of the German Section accepts the reports of the Central Executive Committee on the past activities of the party and its recommendations on the tasks of the German Section.

2. On the future policy of the party the convention recommends to the German branches a thoro discussion of the three points of views represented by the Central Executive Committee, by the minority and by Comrade Lore respectively.

3. The convention greets the declaration of Comrade Lore that he was mistaken in his views on Levi, Serratti, and on the possibilities of the labor government in England, as expressed in several editorials, and "that the Comintern was right on all these questions." It sees in it a determination on the part of Comrade Lore to solidify himself completely with the spirit, ideas, policies and leadership of the Communist International.

4. The convention accepts the conception of the Central Executive Committee on the Bolshevization of the party and its German section, and pledges all its support in carrying out the Bolshevization program of the Central Executive Committee. The convention will do all in its power to connect the German branches more completely with the general party organization and to provide all necessary means for the complete control and ownership of the German party press by the party.

5. The convention will provide all neccessary means for the preparation of the German-speaking branches for the reorganization of the party on the shop-nuclei basis.

Show Red Army Film In Waterbury, Conn., Success Everywhere

That Russia can produce anything but stark tragedy is a surprise to American movie-goers, and that the terrible Red Army could lay off its job long enough to make a boisterous romantic comedy is almost unbelievable to them.

Yet this is exactly what happens in the new Russian feature "Beauty and the Bolshevik" which played at the Rialto Theatre, East Main Street, Waterbury, Connecticut, on Sunday, Dec. 14, at 2 P. M. The Red Army soldier, in the course of the courtship of a rich land-owner daughter, has a propaganda book "The A. B. C. of Communism, thrown at his head and goes out into the night in search of another boarding house. One of his private fares but little better. The picture ends happily.

The picture met with exceptional success in New York, Philadelphia and many other localities. Acting, photography and scenic are praised by the National Board of Review.

The program is filled out with a highly educational picture of industrial life called "Russia in Overalls." The oil fields of Baku, clothing and shoe factories, steel mills, locomotive works and many other enterprises are shown, especial emphasis being placed on those in which American labor is directly interested.

FINK BUSINESS FLOURISHES IN BADGER STATE

Militant Workers Are Weeded Out for Bosses

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 14.—Detective agencies are active here preying upon the workers, earning big profits by manufacturing fake "red scares" and permeating the industries with spies who are paid to talk against unionism.

Some of the agencies have sent out letters to the employers, boasting about their methods of having employes who belong to unions uncovered and discharged.

The Howard W. Russell "secret service" agency, in the Caswell block here, has sent out letters begging to be allowed to infest the industries with stool pigeons in order to aid the employers in keeping down the standard of living by firing union men. "Careless, indifferent, disloyal, and dishonest employes may be preying on you and skillfully covering their tracks so it is difficult for you to detect them," says the letter sent out by the finks.

"When your employes seem to be satisfied and faithful, look out! Silent subtle forces may be undermining your business," the dispenser of stool pigeons writes. "Suddenly and unexpectedly something might happen that will cut a big hole in your profits. Successful conduct of your business may depend upon a more accurate knowledge of conditions prevailing among your workers."

The letter is signed by Walker C. Russell, secretary-treasurer of the specializers in scabs and stool pigeons.

BLOODY PERSECUTION BY WHITE TERROR CONTINUES IN FINLAND

Bloody pages of history have been written in Finland since the heroic revolution of the workers in 1918 was crushed by Finnish whites and Germans. Fifteen thousand workers were executed without any legal trial and about 90,000 were sent to prison camps, where fifteen thousand starved.

And the white terror of Finland is not yet at an end. There are still several hundred workers who have not been given "amnesty." These facts are released by the Finnish newspaper, "Eteenpain."

When the horror of white terror became less severe, the workers started to reorganize. The white government wanted to prevent this, and with the aid of secret police, "ochrana," a drive against the "preparation of a new revolution" was started. All party organs were suspended and the printing plants confiscated. All the leading members of the newly organized party were sent to prison.

White Terror Continues.

Even at the present time a huge drive against the revolutionary workers is going on. "Ochrana" wants money for its maintenance, and wishing to show the "respected" people the importance of its existence, it has started a new drive against the reds under the pretext that a new, illegal, underground movement has been organized. The few party organs that succeeded in freeing themselves from the confiscation report many new persecutions.

This cannot discourage the workers of Finland. But their struggle is overwhelming—without the aid of fellow workers who are in a more fortunate position. Without the funds, the workers of Finland cannot defend their persecuted comrades and support the families of political prisoners. Twelve hundred workers are in prison today. And the need for funds is urgent.

Prison conditions in Finland are notorious. Many appeals have come from the jails and prison camps, where imprisoned workers slowly languish and die. The workers of the world cannot allow this to continue. Help the political prisoners of Finland! Help the victims of the capitalists in every country!

BAKING TRUSTS AMALGAMATE, SO MUST UNIONS

Machine Process Kills Craft Organizations

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—"The change in baking has caused a change in unionizing," claims Secretary August Burkhardt of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union in discussing the activities of the combined bakery locals in organizing counter to the rapidly forming bakery trust. The half billion dollar bakery consolidation announced under the name Continental Baking Corporation is expected to take in the two largest bakery concerns in the east, United Bakeries (11 factories) and Ward Baking company (14 factories).

The International Union of Confectionery and Bakery Workers, affiliated with the A. F. of L. has carried on a long consistent campaign against Ward's particularly. Every issue of their official journal bears the streamer declaring that this company is unfair to organized labor.

For United Drive.

Nine branches in New York and Brooklyn of the Amalgamated Union's bakers have won demands for 10 per cent wage increase and have secured full union regulation in shops controlled. The Combined Bakery Locals are now making a united drive on the large factories and will be joined by locals in Hudson county, N. J., which includes Jersey City.

Burkhardt points out problems facing union organization efforts today. "Before the war," he says, "baking was done largely in the small shop with three to eight hands. These were skilled workers, and consequently, it was easier to organize them. Outside of these and apprentices, or helpers, no other workers were organized." Most of these small shops have disappeared or do only cake baking or specialties such as Jewish or Italian bread or cater to a small neighborhood, Burkhardt claims. He says 80 per cent of these shops are union now.

To Fight Big Trusts.

"But the baking of bread today is done chiefly in the factory," he asserts, "where machinery is utilized." Unions have not made so much headway in these big companies, most of which will be included in the merger amounting to a bread trust. Against these union energies will be more than ever directed," he continues.

"Before machine baking the journeyman baker had to know every process and be able to do it by hand," Burkhardt states. "He had to mix, scale, knead and bake. Today in a large factory which turns out several thousand loaves an hour, there may be only a dozen men who can be called bakers and their work is limited. A mixer supervises a machine which does the actual mixing. He must be skilled to do that but not so skilled as the first hand in a small shop."

The Machine Process.

Because the organization of unskilled workers is made less effective by the machine process, mass organization, "mass unionism," Burkhardt says, must come. "We strive to organize every one connected with the work of baking and delivering of bread. Despite the introduction of machinery, there is much heavy work in the modern bakery and the 'speeding up' process has brought many evils. Hours are long, wages low, conditions bad." And so the union is renewing its fight for organization of all workers with greater energy than ever.

RUSSIA IMPOVERISHES CINCINNATI

A likely story we heard the other day! Here it is. In 1919 the Russians could not buy tea. India, which raises it for them, as a consequence, could not buy textiles of England. England, great textile country, therefore, could not buy cotton from the South. Cotton dropped in price, wholesalers all along the Ohio river failed because the South had no money. Thus Cincinnati families suffered because the Russians quit drinking tea!

We have a better story than this. True, too. In 1914 the world war began. After three years of war the Russians decided to quit. Consequence, the Russian revolution of 1917. This inspired the workers of the whole world. It led to the organization of a real revolutionary party in the United States so determined in character that a few years after its formation it began the publication of the DAILY WORKER. Thus the world war which began in 1914 resulted in the birth of the DAILY WORKER on January 13, 1923.

And now that we've got it, let's keep it. There is only one way to keep it. That is to buy INSURANCE POLICIES and help

UNEMPLOYMENT TAKES BIG JUMP SINCE NOVEMBER

Cities in Illinois Are Hit Hard

Unemployment increased during November and now exists "in a substantial degree" in every Illinois city with the exception of Rockford, according to a report just issued by the Illinois department of labor. "The expected pickup in industry has not yet materialized to the extent of affecting the volume of employment in the factories of Illinois," the report declares.

Thousands Out of Work.

"September, October and November, the usually busy months, have passed without resulting in any substantial restoration of the jobs of those thrown out of work by the decision of business that set in more than one year ago. Illinois industries generally react in December and January and this period of perennial slowing down we now face, with many thousands already out of work."

The majority of the principal cities of Illinois did not expand during November, according to the department of labor report. At the Illinois free employment offices during November there were 140 persons registered for each 100 jobs as compared to 139 registered for each 100 jobs in October and 131 registered for each 100 jobs in November 1923. The number placed in jobs available fell to 10,861, which is the smallest placement for November in five years with the exception of 1921, when only 8,737 were placed in jobs.

In Chicago, according to these figures there are 156 people to every 100 jobs.

Mining Operations Go Down.

Contrary to expectations of business men, the mining operations were reduced in November as compared to the month of October. The same number of employes at work in November as in October received 10.6 per cent less earnings in November than in October. This was a decline in average weekly earnings from $36.17 to $29.78.

Building permits issued in November increased in value two million dollars over those issued in November of last year. There was a sharp decline in building permits thru the country as a whole both as compared to October of this year and November of last year.

BUILDING WORK SHOWS BIG DROP IN ONE MONTH

Permits Decrease 16 Per Cent Since October

Building permits filed in the country in November showed a sharp decline as compared with the value of such permits filed in the same month in 1923, according to Dun's review, which has just been published The decrease from Oct., 1924 is sixteen per cent.

"This a larger reduction that occurred in November of last year," says Dun's Review, "and the aggregate value of such permits is 12 per cent less than that for the same period in 1923.

Until October 1 Records High.

The drop in the November building records in the entire country as a whole is significant because the building records in former months have been slightly higher than in corresponding months of 1923. Until Oct. 1 in the country as a whole building records had maintained or slightly exceeded the 1923 record.

New York City until November, kept the building records of this year up to last year's records. In New York building was higher, month by month in 1924 than corresponding months of 1923. In the entire country outside of New York, however, building for 1924 has slumped below the 1923 records.

November Shows Decided Slump.

During November, New York, the mainstay of the building activity this year, took a decided slump, and consequently the building for November is decidely below building for November 1923 both in New York City and the country as a whole.

Permits in November called for construction work to cost $190,611,600 as compared to $217,656,300 in November last year.

In the central western states, including Chicago, the 1923 building figures were slightly surpassed, but no enough to compensate for the slump in other parts of the country. In November, 1924, building permits, issued in the central west were valued at $63,485,800 while permits collected from the same cities in November 1923 were valued at $62,092,000.

Building permits issued in the south fell off in value more than $4,000,000 in November this year compared to the same month last year. Decreases also occurred on the Pacific coast usually a booming center and the middle Atlantic section which includes New York. New England building permits were two million dollars higher this November than last.

In New York City this November the permits were valued at $44,832,000 a startling drop from the $70,643,400 registered last November.

TEACHERS' UNION URGES SCHOOLS TRY NEW METHODS

Urges One Experimental School First

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—A plan for an experimental school within the New York City school system has again been laid before the board of education by the Teachers' Union, Local 15, American Federation of Teachers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The proposal for the unusual new school was first sent to the board in May. The board replied upon recomendation of the superintendents that the proposed organization "would be contrary to law," because the director of the school would be chosen by an advisory board most of whose members would be outside the public school system.

Not Controlled by Old Officials.

The proposed experimental school would do away with most of the conventional equipment of the public school, according to the outlined plan issued in pamphlet form by the Teachers' Union, 70 Fifth Ave., New York City. The teachers would be specially trained or selected, and not supervised by the regular school officials.

The school would let children learn by living rather than by mastering formal texts and lessons. The children would teach themselves with a minimum of direction, the school furnishing adequate material for the children to work with. The Teachers' Union suggests that a "moderately crowded district where the children of more than one racial stock will attend the school" would be advisable. Children of four to six would first be taken, in classes of not more than 20 each, and each year additional young children taken into the school.

Present System Mechanical.

President Linville of the teachers says teachers in the public school system are becoming interested in the experimental idea for education as the present system attempts to justify itself by becoming more mechanically perfect by burdening the teachers with still more activities, such as clubs. Parents also seem receptive. Because of the crowded conditions in schools, more parents have had to sent their children to private schools and many have discovered experimental schools which are successfully operating.

This affair is being offered for the benefit of the Russian daily, Novy Mir. It is the first time that an entertainment of any kind has been run by the District Committee for this purpose.

They ask that all party members reserve this date and not to arrange other doings that will conflict with this one. A good time is assured, with good music and prizes for best costumes. All readers of the DAILY WORKER and the public are invited.

CLEVELAND STATE HOSPITAL PATIENTS VICTIMS OF GRAFT

By GEO. PAPCUN.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 14.—Insane patients at the State Hospital here are herded together under the most deplorable conditions.

Jammed into an old worn out shack ready to tumble down, 1,930 of them are huddled together in a building that was built to hold not more than 1,200. They sleep in the hallways and in every conceivable nook and corner in the old shack. There are no facilities for cleanliness anywhere—even the laundry in the basement of this horrible place is inadequate to meet the most dire needs.

The employees around this living hell get $30 a month without any days off and they work 12 hours daily. While they sleep in this damp hole, plaster drops upon them from the ceiling and walls.

Death must come to relieve 202 of the inmates of their misery during the year ended June, 1924, more than one out of every ten in the institution.

These are the conditions under capitalism as they exist today in the State Hospital of Cleveland.

ATTENTION!

All friendly organizations are requested not to arrange any affairs on SATURDAY, DEC. 27, as the Workers' Political Aid to Soviet Russia will give a performance on that date at the Soviet School, 1902 W. Division St. "Coal Miner's Kort," a revolutionary drama, will be presented in the Russian language.

In the Anthracite Region

Not the least encouraging feature of the battle now being waged by the coal diggers in the Scranton district, against the coal companies and the bureaucratic officialdom of the United Mine Workers of America, is the tendency displayed by the miners to rely on their own efforts and on their collective power rather than on the promises of class collaborating officials and capitalist mediators.

To date the main efforts of the agents of John L. Lewis seems to be in the direction of driving the miners back into the mines at all costs and regardless of conditions. The renegade Cappellini, who was elected to his present position under the illusion that he was a radical, is now between two fires. The Lewis gang whom he displaced has no love for him and the miners he betrayed have still less. That the miners have lost confidence in him is shown by the fact that despite the assistance of a government "mediator" the miners have refused to accept Cappellini's proposals and are acting on their own initiative.

The miners will win their immediate demands if they persist in their present policy of refusing to allow the bosses thru Lewis and his agents to pull the wool over their eyes. But unless the rebellion of which the Scranton affair is symtomatic is organized and linked up with the progressive movement in the U. M. W. A. on a national scale the present splendid fight will be futile to a great extent.

The Progressive Miners' International Committee is blamed by the Lewis stoolpigeons for the strike in order to scare the miners. But that fright will not last long. The coal diggers will soon realize that they have nothing to fear from the radicals but that on the contrary their leadership is vitally needed if they are to get out of the bondage of the coal barons and their labor lackeys who dominate the miners' union.

There is a splendid opportunity and a vital need for the work of the Trade Union Educational League in the miners' union. That this work is bearing fruit is proved by the attacks of the Lewis henchmen.

William Randolph Hearst, in boosting for a large navy declares that he is a pacifist, but thinks that in order to have peace we must first have several wars. When the United States capitalists have the rest of the world under their heel, then we may be able to enjoy peace. But long before then the working class of the world will enforce peace by eliminating the capitalist system. The workers are not pacifists either, Mr. Hearst.

In the notoriety given by the capitalist press to the passing away of Samuel Gompers, the death of August Belmont, traction multi-millionaire, was slightly eclipsed. Since Sammy and August were bosom companions, however, in the pet organization of the class collaborationists, the national civic federation, they can even things up in the next world, in which they both so devoutly believed.

Count Leo Tolstoi's niece is not as good a drawing card as the Duchess Cyril. Joseph Pulitzer, owner of the New York World, gave a dinner in honor of the latter. Joseph is a democrat. The Countess Tolstoi declares that Cyril's stocks in Paris are far below those of Grand Duke Nicholai Nickolaivitch. But the czar's are away below both.

There is an explosion in a loop garment factory and immediately the capitalist press circulates the report that it is the work of "labor agitators." The police are responsible for the yarn. The capitalist press is one of the most effective weapons in the hands of the employers. Another good reason why the workers should support their own organ, The DAILY WORKER.

The Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia (that's what the lady calls herself) is mixing business with politics. She may not be able to convince many people that she has much of a chance to line up any support for her husband's ambitions, now that Gompers is dead, but she has half a million dollars' worth of gems that she wants to turn into cash.

The Italian government asked Harry F. Sinclair for information about the teapot dome scandal and Harry got sore and renounced his oil concessions in Italy. The man who could purchase the government of a mighty nation was not going to be insulted by a bandit chief like Mussolini.

Liberating Education

The intense energy displayed by big business in combatting every attack on child labor finds its conterpart in the renewed efforts on the part of the big capitalists to control education.

If the brain-numbed children of the working class escape the factory prisons, and win an entrance into the much boasted American educational system, they find that "the dope" is there awaiting them, in proper quantities and qualities, to hold them in its power.

The "higher institutions" of learning set the pace for the public school system. It is in the colleges and the universities that big business sinks its gold as a contaminating influence over all education.

There is now a Tobacco University, added to the long list of subsidized seats of learning. J. B. Duke, the tobacco king, employer of child and woman labor, out of his swollen profits has set aside $40,000,000 for Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., that will hereafter be known as Duke University. Thus another polluting stream of knowledge will be added to the many now gushing intellectual poison. To labor long hours under inhuman conditions in the tobacco fields and factories of "the south" will be heralded as god's decree, against which no one should rebel.

A group of trustees will see to it that the $40,000,000 are properly spent. This group includes such notorious specimens of the enemy capitalist class as the president of the Garland Steamship Corp., the president of the Copper Plate and Tube Co., directors of the Southern Power Co., and the vice-president and secretary of the United Retail Stores Corp., the giant distributing organization of the tobacco trust.

The Tobacco University is the latest addition to a long list of similarly endowed outfits. Among the first on the list was the Chicago university of oil, backed by the Rockefeller millions. Then came the Pittsburgh university of steel, endowed by the multi-millions of the United States Steel corporation; Harvard's university of power, supported by the New England public utility lords; Montana's university of copper, dominated by the Anaconda copper trust, the Kodak university at Rochester, N. Y., of the Eastman Kodak trust, and Columbia's university of Wall Street, under the influence of Morgan.

Some of the gifts that have brought educators, religious leaders and charity workers, completely under the thumb of the almighty dollar in recent years, are given as follows:

John D. Rockefeller	$575,000,000
Andrew Carnegie	350,006,000
Henry C. Frick	85,000,000
Milton S. Hershey	60,000,000
George Eastman	58,000,000
James B. Duke	41,500,000
Mrs. Russell Sage	40,000,000
Henry Phipps	31,650,000
Benjamin Altman	30,100,000
John Stewart Kennedy	30,000,000
John W. Sterling	20,000,000
George F. Baker	11,900,000

All of this wealth has been stolen from labor. This surplus has been stolen from the workers to be used against them. Yet this well-nigh impregnable position of the capitalist class would crumble if labor would but unite its numbers in the revolutionary struggle for its emancipation. Education can only be liberated from the contaminating influence of capitalism, thru the destruction of capitalism itself. That work of liberation is the task of the working class itself.

Peruvian Workers Revolt

A revolt is on in Peru against the dictatorship of American capital and President Liguia, its lackey.

It will surprise most American workers to know that in this little state in the northwest portion of South America there is a semi-labor, semi-peasant organization of Indian workers numbering close to 2,000,000 and that it had a delegate at the Third Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions and is now a part of that revolutionary union body.

The agrarian problem is the major question in Peru. The bulk of the workers labor for the owners of large estates, but some thousands are employed in the silver and copper mines. Peru is rich in natural resources and long ago attracted the avaricious gaze of English and American capitalists.

The present revolt appears to be a joint effort on the part of the working class proper, and the intellectuals who want national independence. In this it is the forerunner of other revolts all over Latin-America that are bound to arise as the masses of the people come to understand that American capitalism in South America is synonymous with slavery.

The task of Gompers at the Pan-American Federation of Labor convention was to prevent the Mexican labor movement taking a leading part in launching a continent-wide movement against American imperialism, to halt the unity of Latin-America against aggression from the north.

This explains the Gompers-Morones attack on the Communist Party which initiates a drive for linking up the scattered protests and revolts into a gigantic organization that can and will act to prevent the crushing of mass movements like that now under way in Peru.

Two more universities sink deeper in oil. Rockefeller has just handed the University of Minnesota $1,250,000 and given $100,000 more to Skidmore College, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Chapel exercises at these two goosestep institutions will hereafter be opened daily with the singing of "Praise Oil from Which All Blessings Flow."

ANOTHER LABOR LEADER SELLS OUT TO BOSSES

"Labor" Senator Gets on Bosses Payroll

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 14.—Another "friend of labor" elected on the democratic ticket to the Connecticut legislature by the aid of the workers' votes has at last succumbed to the fleshpots of Egypt. He is Senator Joseph Tone, former organizer of the International Association of Machinists and prominent leader in the shopmen's strike against the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, from which he now accepts a lucrative position.

Senator Tone was elected senator because of the popularity he enjoyed among the workers thru his activity in the strike that started in 1922. He traveled all over the New Haven system exhorting the strikers to hold out to the bitter end. He was one of the most aggressive in attacking the New Haven for its refusal to treat with the men. The strikers who now look upon him as a traitor are not so certain but he was then as now on the railroad payroll.

Workers Nominate Tone.

The strike was four months old when the workers of the tenth district in New Haven decided to nominate Tone for the senate. After his election Tone displayed a strange apathy in carrying out his promises. The New Haven lobbyists had several bills saddling the cost of bridges on cities and towns, but instead of Tone being on his uppers attacking the New Haven bills he was off on a funketing trip over that company's lines on "business of state" as he explained.

Fought With His Mouth.

The workers, confiding and gullible, accepted Tone's excuses. At this time he persisted in attacking the railroad but the fighting was all done with his mouth. He even put forward the deception that he was "boring from within" the magnate's ranks and getting "valuable information."

When the LaFollette movement swept the farmer-labor party before it and rallied millions of workers behind the Wisconsin senator, Tone, seeing a big thing as he thought, hopped on the bandwagon. But when he failed to secure the LaFollette endorsement, his enthusiasm for that gentleman's movement waned rapidly.

Strikers Were Deluded.

In the last election Tone was the only democrat elected from New Haven, largely because of his popularity during the strike. The deluded strikers expected great things from him in the legislature, but this week he was appointed freight agent of the New York, Ontario and Western railroad which is one of the chief subsidiaries of the New Haven.

Hundreds of those who quit their jobs on the New Haven in 1922 are still on strike and facing a bitter winter. The Judas who drew his salary from the Machinists' Union during the strike is now in the open employ of the enemy.

A Bulgarian Comrade Explains.

To the DAILY WORKER: The special correspondent of the Duluth Herald and the Chicago Daily News Foreign Service, A. R. Decker, spills alligator tears over the Bulgarian farmers who, he claims, just cannot help going over to Communism unless the capitalists of the United States hurry up and send them a Dawes plan.

That the bloody reign of the Bulgarian bourgeoisie is crumbling and that the farmers are rapidly going over to the Communist Party is true but that Dawes plans or any capitalist schemes whereby it can save nations from the rightful leadership of workers will take with the Bulgarian workers is a false notion and the eloquent correspondent for the kept press may just as well save his breath.

Bulgaria Knows Better.

It is too late. The the reactionaries who killed Stamboulitsky and bred on a reign of terror against all Communists, killing and imprisoning them, and starving their families, still reign over Bulgaria spilling the blood of the workers, the united front among the Bulgarian workers and farmers and the Macedonian revolutionists is deeprooted, and the days of the bourgeois kingdom are counted. Any day may see the final crash.—George Zalckoff.

Klan Weekly Runs Out of Kash.

To the DAILY WORKER: The Illinois Kourier, a Ku Klux Klan Nigger-baiting weekly, which has constantly played on the delicate strings of sex, in order to stir up anti-Negro prejudices, failed to appear on the news stands the last two weeks, and must have given up the ghost. Nigger baiting did not prove so successful to this Ku Klux weekly.

While alive, the Illinois Kourier, constantly attacked the DAILY WORKER, calling same an un-American newspaper. The DAILY WORKER is still thriving and flourishing, while the Klux rag is no more.—Gordon W. Owens.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Timas Wilfred, the inventor of the clavilux, an instrument for projecting light in abstract forms, gave a recital at the Blackstone theater last Sunday afternoon. The use of the principles of color, and design in abstract forms is, of course, nothing new. Painted on a canvass the result is a pattern, pretty to look at but simply a pattern. With the introduction of rhythmic motion, a new art is produced. This is what Wilifred has done.

His instrument looks like a group of four long, narrow and deep steel boxes set some twenty feet from an ordinary motion picture screen. From this instrument designs are thrown onto the screen. It is difficult and all but impossible to describe them in words. One of his studies consisted of a large triangle outlined in red at the start, widening out in white, changing to a green one, back to the red triangle, always in motion, always surrounded by the most gorgeous halo of orange and purple.

"The use of vertical design," said Wilfred, "tends to call up ideas of infinity, while horizontal motion suggests concrete ideas." As an example of the latter he played a work that looked like a formless mass of bars moving backward and forward before a sun whose rays were red and orange and green. The whole resembled some of the cubist impressions of machinery that used to be run occasionally in "The Liberator."

He played a short composition called "Grotesque." Shapeless forms of black and white flashed jerkily on the screen. They seemed to wiggle in a sort of jazz rhythm. It was distinctly funny, and yet there was no attempt at a picture. One laughed at an abstract pattern in black and white.

Wilfred also built up a picture of a seacoast. There was a motion of long waves in green up to a gray horizon. There were sunsets over the sea such as never occurred on this earth. The sun rose in five seconds to the zenith and its rays were blue, orange and violet.

But no amount of words can convey an impression of this wonderful new art. Its possibilities are limitless, and its value is beyond calculation.

SEX AND RACE

Book Review.
By MIRIAM ALLEN DeFORD.

The Dominant Sex

The thesis of the author of "The Dominant Sex" may be briefly stated thus: We are living in an era of masculine dominance. The qualities which we are pleased to call masculine and to consider as secondary or tertiary sexual characters are for the most part not masculine, but simply the normal qualities of the dominant sex, be that sex male or female Conversely, most of the qualities we call feminine are not feminine, but those of the subordinate sex.

To illustrate and verify this principle, the Vaertings have devoted nearly 300 pages to examples from contemporary peoples now or recently under female dominance, and from the history of ancient peoples in the same phase of social development, most of all from Egypt, a civilized state for thousands of years under the regimen of women.

Women As Rulers

Where women rule, the authors show, women are the wooers. The man is given in marriage, and is expected to be chaste before and after, displaying the modesty and "innocence" that today are taken as feminine traits. The women on the other hand are sexually as well as politically and economically free.

It is the custom in women's states for men to marry wives older than themselves. Youthful marriage is incumbent on the men, who are disgraced if they do not obey it; it is of no moment as regards women. Birth control is legal as a matter of course, and female prostitution is unknown. There is even a tendency toward male prostitution.

Among the Kamchadales, of Kamchatka, the men are absolutely dependent on the women, the men attending the household affairs and the children, while the women do all outside work.

Inferior—Physically Weak

But what about the inferior physical strength of women? The authors show that this too is a subordinate sex characteristic. It is the sex which sits at home over the loom or the cook-stove which is physically weaker; it is the sex which goes about the world earning in living which is not only stronger, but larger. Under sex equality, the two sexes, are about even in strength and size, just as many animals are. Moreover, it is the subordinate sex which is plump and prettily curved, while the dominant sex is lean and hard muscled. This holds good whichever sex is dominant. In every state the dominant sex is considered to excel in intelligence the subordinate in beauty. Among the women soldiers of Dahomey in Africa the reproach for cowardice is "You are a man.

Historically the present male phase will end in an era of female dominance. The Vaertings hope that we have advanced sufficiently to arrest the movement at the equal rights stage, in every way the best for both sexes and for humanity in general.

The Dominant Sex, by Mathilde and Mathias Vaerting (translated by Eden and Cedar Paul); George H. Doran, Co., New York, $3.

WHAT CAUSES OUR POORNESS?

Part 3.

To get a clearer understanding of how the workers are being robbed in a capitalist government we will take a look into the sums of money made by the United States Steel corporation of which Elbert H. Gary is the owner. Capitalist Gary during the months of July, August, and September of this year made $30,718,415. Do you see how much this is?

Now find out how much Capitalist Gary makes in one week, in one day. Ask your father how much he makes in one day and send a letter to the Children's Column so that we can all learn by these examples.

And bear this ever in mind. Capitalist Gary or any other capitalist does not work as hard as our fathers do. He only looks on while his riches pile up. The capitalists can pile up their money from our fathers' earnings because the capitalist system we live under helps them.

Those workers who do not understand the cause of this poorness and do not see any way out of it want to die. But those workers who understand have joined the Communist Party to work to destroy this system.

When this system will be destroyed and Communism take its place, the workers and not the capitalists will rule. The workers will get the full benefits of their labor. There will be no rich living on the labor of the poor. Gary will have to go to work like the rest of us.

In Russia there was a revolution of the workers against the capitalists Thru the great leadership of Comrade Lenin and the ardent perseverence of our wonderful, self-sacrificing Russian comrades, the masses won! And in Russia there is a WORKERS' GOVERNMENT!

But the workers of America are slowly beginning to understand and we little juniors as we learn more and more about the cause of our poorness will go out and tell other workers until we all together will destroy this capitalist government and put up in its place a workers' Soviet government.

The End.

Review of "Orphans of the Storm"
By A Junior Age 13

The capitalists cover up the naked truth with veils of lies in which they state they present her to the children in school. When the children grow into manhood and womanhood the capitalists fear the evils of lies will not be sufficient so they reinforce them in many ways. They tell you to look at truth how beautiful she is and when you want to remove the veils to see her you are prohibited thru different plots.

One of the new veils to cover up truth is the motion picture "Orphans of the Storm" written by that superb liar D. W. Griffith. The whole story is written to say "Bolshevism is terrible."

The program gives an introduction to the play. Any person who thinks for himself immediately see the willful misrepresentation of facts. For instance, the inference is made that Bolshevism and anarchism is one and the same thing when everyone knows they are entirely opposed to each other.

In the play Griffith makes one character interpret what he wants us to believe is a noble capitalist soul. Vandrey, (I believe I got his name right) an aristocrat, after being served by his servants and after eating his fill, walks out of the house where he sees some starved workers crying for a crumb of bread, which he gives them.

But we juniors ask Mr. Griffith why should workers who make everything have to beg for bread? And we want to tell him that we, the workers don't want charity. We are the creators of all things and we want all in return.

Juniors, children of the working class, we will not listen trustingly to their lies. We will measure everything with a class conscious point of view, use our common sense and show such liars as Griffith and the rest of them that their days for fooling the workers are over.

Look around on this page of today's paper. You will find a cartoon entitled "One Bandit to Another" by Abe Stolar. Abe Stolar is 12 years old and a member of the John Reed Junior Group in Chicago.

I am sure there must be many little Juniors reading this column who love to draw pictures. Perhaps they often feel after reading the column that they too would like to send something but they can tell their story more effectively in pictures than in words. Fine! Send pictures! Your cartoon will express your idea, the idea that has been born in your mind. That is the kernel of every good cartoon.

Send in pictures!

MOST SAVAGE ENEMIES OF LABOR ALONE HAVE CAUSE TO MOURN PASSING OF GOMPERS

The membership of the labor unions of America which take the viewpoint of the Trade Union Educational League are shedding no crocodile tears over the death of Samuel Gompers.

They see that their most savage enemies in industry, politics and government are those who have cause to mourn.

The DAILY WORKER gives below, a statement issued by the National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League to the workers of America. It is as follows:

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IN an article entitled: "Shall the Progressives Organize?" the editor of The Nation, Oswald Garrison Villard's weekly, patronizingly offers "labor" a place in the new movement which Villard is so anxious to see set on foot. Dealing with the proposed convention of the C. P. P. A. which will be held in Chicago on Feb. 21, Villard says: "One of the difficult questions which will arise at the convention . . . convention is as to the respective roles to be assigned to the several elements in the movement. Labor should, of course, be the nucleus and take a leading part the not a dominating part. We cannot feel that all its leaders are sufficiently educated politically and politically trustworthy enough to take the lead.

"WHAT place the socialists will take is for them to say. They fought well for the ticket, showing loyalty everywhere and a readiness to subordinate themselves . . ." What our sophisticated liberals want is an organization in which labor would supply the ballast and the cash while the liberals would do the talking and the leading. The only section of the labor movement that is "educated politically" is the radical section led by the Communists. And it is safe to say that the liberals would rather trust to the political immaturity of the labor leaders than to the Communists. "Untrustworthy" labor fakers are preferable to revolutionists who believe in the class struggle and who hold that only thru the overthrow of the capitalist system can the workers be freed from their chains.

THE Nation boldly plunges into the task of building a platform for the new party. A few "fundamentals" are stressed, such as, the conservation of national resources and perhaps a free trade plank, but if the latter would look too "revolutionary" it could be dropped for the sake of harmony. The party might also be asked to declare for "peace, disarmament, and the complete reversal of our anti-imperialistic policies in the Carribean and elsewhere." This is Oswald Garrison Villard's conception of a program for the farmer-labor-intelligentsia-petty bourgeois, etc., party which he hopes will be formed at the Feb. 21 convention of the C. P. P. A. Class conscious workers who have seen the British labor party in action will look with green eyes on this abortion. The Workers Party is here in the flesh; it is the party of labor. There is and can be no other.

EMMA GOLDMAN, anarchist and darling of the bourgeois intellectuals, is hibernating in London. She is anxious to make headway in England but the path of the renegade is not easy. The workers have contempt for her and the capitalists treat her as a political prostitute who has sold herself and can now be handled without gloves. The revolution that Emma Goldman talked so long about came and she did not recognize it. As

TOLEDO COMRADES SAY EVERY TRUE COMMUNIST SHOULD RUSH TO AID OF DAILY WORKER DRIVE

TOLEDO, Ohio, Dec. 15.—Comrade Alfred Wagenknecht spoke here before the local Toledo membership meeting and now our comrades realize more fully than ever before the absolute importance of the DAILY WORKER not only to the American movement but also to the international movement as well.

We have not only pledged ourselves to raise the quota assigned to us which we have already done but we are also determined to double that amount.

Expressing the sentiment that the comrade who does not rush to the aid of our DAILY WORKER at this time to insure its existence for 1925 is no Communist, every comrade in local Toledo has taken it upon himself to do his share to put this job over big.

BANKER SAYS DAWES AND MUSSOLINI ARE NICE—FOR BANKERS

OTTAWA, Canada, Dec. 15.—Otto H. Kahn, international banker, who is making money out of the European financial transactions of the Morgan clique of bankers, praised the Dawes plan in a speech here. Kahn also heaped unstinted praise on Mussolini for his work in crushing workers' organizations in Italy.

Gunman Shoots Union Worker.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—The withdrawal of union molders from open-shop plants continues in the bay district. The latest development is the shooting of Frank Brown, business agent, Molders' Union, by an unknown person. Brown was shot four times as he entered his home, and is in a serious condition, the doctors say he will recover. He states he has no personal enemies, and that his assailant must have been a gunman hired by anti-union forces.

"AMALGAMATED" MILITANTS URGE MEMBERSHIP CONTROL OF UNION; SHOP COMMITTEES AS BASIC UNIT

The left wing in the Chicago Amalgamated Clothing Workers has formed a progressive campaign committee to conduct the left wing fight in the coming election. This committee has issued a leaflet that outlines the policies of the left wing as against the class collaboration policy of the administration. Particularly important is the demand for membership control of the union by the introduction of shop committees as the basic units of the organization, and "no secret diplomacy with the bosses" in the wage negotiations which will soon begin. The leaflet reads as follows:

Members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers! Fight with the Left Wing for Militant Unionism!

While thousands of our members are today walking the streets, the majority of those employed are working only part time. Yet the profits of the manufacturers are increasing, aided by the collaboration policy of our officials. The militant policy of fighting the bosses, which built up our organization in the past, has been substituted by the method of aiding the employers at the expense of the workers.

Co-operation with Bosses Betrays Interests of Workers.

This unemployment situation is mainly the result of this policy of class collaboration. Adjustments in rates of wages and methods of work have been consented to by our officials, which turned out to be to the full advantage of the bosses, enabling them to get more production out of the workers, and increasing the unemployed army. Our officials also permitted the employers to shut down shops and get their work done in contract shops.

Instead of making a militant fight against these wage cuts, increased exploitation, and infringements upon the rights of our union, our officials submitted to the wishes and dictates of the bosses.

Instead of fighting against unemployment our officials are actually sabotaging the union's Employment Exchange, by job juggling handing out jobs to whatever member meets with their personal favor, instead of having such transactions go thru the Employment Exchange regularly established by the union. While members who seek jobs outside the regular channels are rightfully disciplined, yet the business agents are permitted to dispose of jobs privately.

Fake "Unemployment Insurance" Schemes.

Instead of leading the fight against the encroachment of the bosses, our officials busy themselves with devising petty insurance schemes. We all know that these schemes are fake, and do not materially aid our membership. The sums received by partially employed members under the schemes are so small as to be of no use at all, and only those who have a boss get insurance; those who are totally unemployed get nothing.

Our active union members are constantly discriminated against. The bosses know that a militant union is a menace to their profits and their power of exploitation; hence they spare no efforts to win the union officials for their plans of co-operation. The employers recognize the class struggle and act unitedly in behalf of their class. By co-operating with them, our leaders betray the membership of the union. It is necessary for the membership to adopt the fighting left-wing policies which the officials have repudiated.

Only Militant Policies Can Build and Strengthen the Union.

The left wing recognizes that the class struggle is a struggle for power. That all the gains made by the workers are made thru a fighting policy. The duty of union officials is to lead the fight against the bosses, not to devise ways and means for aiding the bosses to squeeze more profits out of the workers.

Down with class collaboration!

Support the militant policies developed by the left wing in the Trade Union Educational League!

Direct Negotiations with the Bosses by the Workers.

The left wing opposes the present method of secret diplomacy with

MOORS PUTTING FRANCE, SPAIN IN NEW DILEMMA

Rivera Dictatorship in New Setbacks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TANGIER, Morocco, Dec. 15.—The Anjara tribesmen of Abdel Krim are putting the imperialist positions of both France and Spain in a bad fix.

By the retreat of the Spaniards, acclaimed by the military dictator of Spain, Primo de Rivera, as a "strategic retreat," a new position was taken which was thought secure.

Face New Uprising.

Now an uprising has taken place behind the new lines and the whole Spanish army is in peril. Moreover, it menaces the Tetuan-Tangier road and the Tetuan-Ceuta railway.

The natives have already taken the Spanish post at Alcazarquivir—and are holding the officers as hostages while offering the private soldiers positions in their army, in which they are must better treated than in the Spanish army. Steamers have ceased calling at the post of Tetuan which is under fire of the rebels. Other posts have been reported fallen. Many are known to be beseiged.

The consequences of this collapse may have political reverberations on the European continent. The Spanish dictator has proven himself as incompetent as Mussolini, even in his chosen business of fighting a weaker enemy. Everyone laughs at Primo de Rivera's speech praising his soldiers for the retreat. He said, "This retreat was far more difficult than an advance and required more sacrifice

Notice! Carpenters and Miners!

It is essential that we have information as soon as possible regarding the vote cast for the left wing candidates in the recent elections in the carpenters' and miners' unions. The reactionaries at the head of these organizations may be depended upon to rob us of our vote wholesale and thus to minimize our showing. Therefore, it is the duty of every left-winger in these unions to let us know at once how his local voted. You should take this matter seriously and act upon it without delay. Please let us hear from you.

SECRETARY OF NAVY DEMANDS WAR ON JAPAN

Makes Secret Report to Senate Committee

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur is enjoying extraordinary immunity in his fire-eating speeches against Japan, nowadays.

It will be remembered that prior to the election he was recalled from a speechmaking tour because of his unbridled language in boosting a large navy for the purpose of contesting the supremacy of the Pacific Ocean with Japan.

A Piece of Bluff.

The capitalist press pointed out that his recall was due to differences of opinion between the navy secretary and Calvin Coolidge, but the DAILY WORKER held that there was no fundamental difference between the attitude of Coolidge on the question of naval forces and that of Wilbur.

His recall was a political maneuver in order to maintain the fiction that Coolidge was deeply interested in the maintenance of peaceful relations between Japan and the United States.

Now that the election is over, the burning issue of economy is not allowed to interfere with the task of increasing the size and efficiency of Morgan's navy. The big $140,000,000 appropriation was slipped thru without a murmur of opposition, while "Cal's" press agents boasted about his saving the treasury a small sum in traveling to the Chicago stockyards in a pullman instead of in a special train.

At Secret Conference.

At a recent meeting of the house committee on appropriations, Secretary of the navy, Wilbur, declared that war between the United States and Japan was not alone inevitable but imminent.

In arguing for the proposed naval maneuvers around Hawaii, which are the object of attack in Japan, he asserted that the Japanese navy, recently, as a cost of over two million dollars, engaged in maneuvers on a large scale involving the use of the entire navy.

No Talk of Peace.

Secretary Wilbur also declared that all the leading nations of the world are increasing the efficiency of their naval contingents. According to the secretary, Japan is building a fleet designed to surpass that of the United States within a few years. Captain Henry H. Hough, who is in charge of the espionage department of the navy, told of inside information gathered by his spies in Japan.

There is no doubt but the United States capitalists are rapidly preparing for a war with the capitalists of Japan.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Dec. 15.—The American Legion, the aspirant to the role of white guardism and one of the leading forces in crushing strikes of organized labor, at a special meeting of its Illinois executive committee, has adopted a resolution regarding the death of Gompers.

It says, "The removal from the nation's service of this man is a loss which will be felt in the nation for many years, due to the fact that he has always been a loyal supporter of the nation's ideals and institutions."

LEWIS WORKS RED BOGEY ON COAL STRIKERS

Cappellini Thinks He Has Been Framed

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 15.—After definitely refusing the proposal of Rinaldo Cappellini, president of District No. 1, that they select one of their number to be appointed by him as a district organizer, this being recognized as a ruse to defeat their aims, the general grievance committee of the local unions on strike here, made a counter proposal that a sub-committee of ten meet with the district officials and the international board members sent here by Lewis, to consider all the grievances at issue and effect a satisfactory settlement.

It is understood that this sub-committee will be made up of the presidents of all the striking locals. The decision to make this their counter-proposal was reached at the meeting on Wednesday, but it was reported that the officials had refused to consider it.

Strikers Meet Again.

Today the committee of strikers met again and word has reached them from some source, that the officials have decided to meet with them tomorrow. Anyway, the decision of a short meeting here today was that the sub-committee would proceed to Scranton tomorrow to lay all the facts at issue before that august body of officials, who are so anxious that the profits of the Pennsylvania Coal Co. again begin to roll in.

For two days long sessions were held by the district and international officials in the Labor Temple at Scranton, but no news could be had. It was impossible for a fly to sneak in the meeting, came from there. It is claimed that Cappellini blames the present and other strikes on some of Lewis' appointees in this district, and that they are created for the purpose of discrediting his administration.

Blames Lewis' Tools.

It is said that he places most of the blame at the door of one William Brennan, who, it will be remembered, was his opponent at the time of his election to the presidency of this district and who was appointed organizer by Lewis as part of the peace terms with Cappellini. It is at least admitted that the secret meetings were held to iron the dirty linen, and it is said that Cappellini is going to prefer charges against Brennan and others for disloyalty to the organization.

Lewis Blames Radicals.

Aside from these charges, it is said that the commission sent here by Lewis seeks to place the blame on the progressive international committee for the recent strikes, as well as for the apparent mistrust that is beginning to manifest itself in this district. Without using names, this insinuance was made by its chairman, Neal J. Ferry, the international board member of district seven, anthracite region, in his first interview with the newspapermen on his arrival here, saying that it was known to them that an agent of this group was in the region and had been for some time.

This belief is considered by members of the strikers' committee, who say that the charge is repeatedly made to them that the strike is the work of the so-called "progressives." While interviewing a prominent member of the grievance committee this morning, he was called aside and told that he was being watched talking to me, but he said that altho it is the first time he has ever met me that he is over the age of twenty-one and will talk to me as long as he wants to, providing I am agreeable.

The Ultimate Aims.

The pity in this situation, as in most others, is that the men affected see only their immediate aims, but the task of teaching them that it is only one of many incidents in the class struggle and that the settlement of their immediate aims will only effect a temporary lull, to be followed by a more bitter struggle, will be made easier in the degree to which we succeed in winning their confidence. It was easy to observe from the facial expressions of some of those I have met that they had drawn some terrible mental picture of radicals, as a result of the things that were said by Lewis in the Scranton and Indianapolis conventions. This wall of fear, however, will soon be broken down and when it is the days of Lewisism and the accompanying treachery will go for ever.

15,000 QUARRYMEN IN ITALY GO ON STRIKE FOR RAISE IN WAGES

ELEMENTARY MARXIAN ECONOMICS

REVIEW OF "VALUE PRICE AND PROFIT."

By WILLIAM EDWARDS.

MARX'S book, "Value Price and Profit" was written in 1865 in answer to Weston's argument that it was useless for the workers to organize for the purpose of raising their standard of living. Weston advanced several reasons for his argument, among which was the assertion that the amount of production, the currency and the real wage, were all fixed quantities. He contended that the real wage could not be raised because if the workers received more money, the capitalists would immediately raise the price of commodities, so that their real wage would remain the same. We are not so much concerned with Weston's arguments, especially the first two, as we are with Marx's answer, which is in part an analysis of the capitalist system of wealth production.

The wealth of our present-day society consisting entirely of commodities, we will begin by defining a commodity, and showing how its value is arrived at. A commodity is an article that satisfies some human want, and is produced for the purpose of sale or exchange. The value of any commodity is determined by the amount of socially necessary labor time required for its production. Any two commodities which require the same amount of this labor time for their production, will exchange equally for each other, and they will each exchange for a third commodity which was produced by the same amount of this labor time, as was necessary for the production of each of the other two. For example, a hat which requires five hours of socially necessary labor time for its production, will exchange equally with a pair of shoes of which require the same amount of labor time for their production. Each of these commodities will also exchange for a quantity of gold (the medium of exchange) which requires the same amount of this labor time for its production.

It will be seen from this illustration, that all commodities exchange with each other in direct proportion to the duration of this social labor time necessary for their production. Their rate of exchange with gold is their "price." The price of the different commodities is seldom the exact equal of their value, but fluctuates above and below value, according to the supply and demand. Over a long period of time, however, these fluctuations balance each other, and for all practical purposes, we may say that commodities are sold at their value. From this it can be seen that nothing can permanently change the price of commodities except a change in their value; and it is equally clear, from the definition of value, that neither an increase in wages (the workers' share) nor an increase in profits, (the capitalists' share) can have any effect upon their value. Their value can only be changed by changes in the methods of production which change the amount of socially necessary labor time required for their production. This clearly shows the fallacy of Weston's assertion that increase in wages would cause a corresponding increase in the price of commodities.

The actual result of a raise in wages for the working class would be to decrease the profits of the capitalists. This can be proven in the following manner: The capitalist class, owning the machinery of production, the working class must sell its labor power to the capitalists. Thus human labor power becomes a commodity, bought and sold on the market like any other commodity. Being a commodity, its value is determined by the amount of socially necessary labor time required for its production, and expressed in the amount of other commodities necessary to keep the worker in working condition and to raise a family to work when he is gone. The modern labor-saving machinery enables the workers to produce the value of these commodities in a very few hours each day; in other words, they produce the value of their labor power, or wages, in the first few hours that they work each day. But they do not stop then, for the capitalist has bought their labor power for the day, so they keep on working, producing a surplus over and above their wages, the value of their labor power, which is only limited by the physical endurance of the workers. Marx calls this "surplus value."

And here Marx brings in another point; if the workers in their struggle with the capitalists can secure a shorter work day, it means a decrease of this surplus value for the capitalists, and thus lessening their power in relation to that of the working class. The shorter work day will also put more workers to work, creating a scarcity in the labor market, which of course, will result in higher wages.

But to return to our contention that the only result of a raise in wages is to decrease the profits of the capitalists. The capitalist employer realizes his surplus value by selling the product of the workers' labor power at value, after paying the workers the value of their labor power, the difference being surplus value. Not all of this surplus value is profit, however, as the capitalist must pay interest to the finance capitalist, (banker) for the use of borrowed money, and rent to the landlord for the use of buildings, land, etc., but what is left over after rent and interest have been taken out, is the capitalist's profit, which Marx calls "commercial" or "industrial" profit.

We see therefore, that the amount of profit, rent and interest is dependent upon the amount of surplus value available to the capitalist class. And it is over this surplus that the struggle between the workers and the capitalists takes place; if wages are increased, it can only be at the expense of the profits of the capitalists, and if wages are lowered, the profits will be greater. This shows that the only effect of raising wages is to lower the amount of surplus value available to the capitalist class, and can have no effect whatever upon the price or value of the commodities produced by the workers receiving the increase. From the foregoing it will be seen also that an increased rate of profit can have no effect upon either the price or value of commodities.

Marx's analysis of the working of this system shows very clearly the exploitation of the workers by the capitalist class. Labor has always been exploited by a master class, but in former systems, the exploitation is much easier to understand and see thru. Under slavery, for instance, the entire amount of the workers' labor appears to have been unpaid labor, but the slave got his food, clothing and shelter, and so received the value of his labor power, the same as the wage-workers. Under feudalism the serf worked for himself a part of the time, thus getting the value of his labor power, (his living) and the rest of the time, he worked for the feudal baron without any pay. Under this system also, the fact of exploitation, as well as the method was very clear.

It is our task to explain the method, as well as the fact of exploitation under the present system, and to educate and organize the working class. To organize them not only for the purpose of getting higher wages, shorter hours, and better working conditions, but for the purpose of destroying the whole system of exploitation.

a matter of fact, the anarchists are very close to the capitalists but it took a great revolution to prove this fact to the workers.

THE Brooklyn man who sold his blood to hospitals at the rate of $75 a quart, when his credit was failed, died recently in Passaic, New Jersey, death resulting from a thinning of the blood stream. Once a man of fine physique, when he died his body had shrunk to emaciation. This man's life is symbolic of the way the workers play in society, under capitalism. They turn their bodies into gold for their bosses, who live in luxury and ease while their slaves go to their graves before their time and live miserably during their existence.

A WASHINGTON despatch informs us that the wife of the "Grand Duke Cyril of Russia" is having a jolly time in Teapot Dome, an alias for the Capitol. Mrs. Cyril visited the grave of the "unknown soldier" and insulted that poor devil by hooting around his tomb. While Mrs. Cyril's visit "has no political significance," so we are told, a dinner given in her honor by Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond was attended by prominent luminaries in the political world. Secretary of War Weeks was there—unofficially, it was stated. There were also present, Senator and Mrs. Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming; Senator William B. McKinley, of Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lansing, former secretary of state under Wilson; George T. Mayre, former ambassador to Russia; Rear Admiral Long, Richard Tobin, minister to the Netherlands, John Barton Payne, and members of the entourage of the Grand Duchess.

THE "grand duchess'" visit is not political, but at one of the fetes given in her honor, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, and Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, were present, and so was Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania. The two former are members of the senate foreign relations committee. What the duchess will whisper into the ears of the senators will not be friendly to the interests of the workers and peasants of Russia.

He was vice-president of the national civic federation, to preach the "harmony" of labor and capital in industry. He was on the council of the national defense to mobilize labor for cannon fodder on the fields of France. He represented "labor" at the conference of ghouls which as a "peace conference" continued the war under the Versailles treaty.

In the interest of Wall Sreet imperialism he withdrew the A. F. of L. from the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions when American capital adopted a policy of "independent action." He was, at the time he died, maneuvering to return to Amsterdam to follow the Dawes plan when Wall Street imperialism had conquered a leading position over western European capital in order that he might, by fighting unity of the Amsterdam unions with the revolutionary unions of Soviet Russia, throttle labor resistance against the enslaving Dawes plan. He was the most vicious enemy of Soviet Russia and all it means to the workers of all the world.

Gompers fought the Red International of Labor Unions internationally just as he fought the Trade Union Educational League in the United States. In both cases he followed the lead of the capitalists. His trip to Mexico was marked by his subjugation of the Mexican and Central American unions to his reactionary policies. On the same day he visited President Calles, and pinned upon him an emblem of "labor," the Calles government negotiated a huge loan with J. P. Morgan's bank in Wall Street.

Gompers is dead. Even his pallbearers symbolize his capitalist connections. They are Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan, of Tammany Hall. Besides, there are Alton B. Parker, and Bernard M. Baruch, the democratic wing of J. P. Morgan's bank, so faithfully served by Gompers. Beside these, is Ralph M. Easley, head of the civic federation.

Gompers himself selected his place of burial. It, too, represents his unshakable affinity for companionship with the enemies of labor. He will lie quite appropriately, between Andrew Carnegie and William Rockefeller, after being prayed over by Jewish rabbis, catholic priests and protestants, and after the mummery of Elks, Odd Fellows and Masons has been ended.

Gompers is dead. But the "evil that he did lives after him." He polluted the American unions with class collaboration. He fought for craft separation against industrial unionism. He built a tyrannical machine of parasites and grafters, typified by hucksmen as Berry of the Pressmen, who plundered his union treasury of great sums; Brindell, the corrupt czar of the New York Building Trades; Tim Murphy, whose career is one long trail of corruption from congress to bankruptcy with labor unions as a sideline, and these were all supported by swarms of sluggers and gunmen that stifled every rebellious expression of the rank and file. Gompers fought every sign of working class politics action. He succeeded in conquering the whole socialist party, including Debs.

Gompers is dead. Let the ranks of the left wing clear decks for action! Forward under the slogan, "Down with class collaboration!" Against the reactionary machine, advance "Control of the union by shop committees!" Forward against all bourgeois political parties, big or little, disguised or open! Let the battle cry be "Only the revolutionary left wing can fight the battles of the workers!" Against the upholders of capitalism in the army of labor, advance the slogan "Forward to a workers' and farmers' government!"

"Bomb Plot" in Cuba.

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 15.— Cuba sends to the world a "bomb plot" story. It is claimed a bomb was placed on the railroad tracks a few hours before the presidential train, containing the president, his cabinet and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt was scheduled to pass. The presidential train was en route to the unveiling of a monument to Theodore Roosevelt at Santiago.

Europe's Fascist Press Also Mourns Passing of Its Ally, Sam Gompers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, American labor looks into the mirror, held up by the death of Sam Gompers, and beholds the reactionary face it presents to the world. It is not sufficient that the blackest American reaction joins in unanimously lauding the "conservatism" of the late head of the American Federation of Labor. The fascist press of London, Paris and Berlin shouts loud "Amens!" in approval of the "moderate tendencies" of the Gompers' policies.

It was only a few days ago that the remains of Jean Jaures, assassinated by a jingo fanatic at the outbreak of the world war, were carried thru the streets of Paris to their last resting place under a forest of Red Flags, with the massed workers thundering "The International."

Communist workers led in the demonstration for Jaures, who had fought the onrushing imperialist war wave. So powerful was the strength shown by the Communists, that this was the beginning of the repressive steps launched by the "radical-socialist" Herriot regime.

What a difference! For one the Red Flag is flaunted in the face of capitalism. Jaures fought the class enemy. Jaures raised the cry for the new day. Jaures was against the capitalist war.

Gompers was in favor of the capitalist war. The journals of capitalist France, like the Paris Intransigeant, now speak of Gompers as "always a staunch friend of France during the war," and by "France" it means the big exploiters, the open shoppers, the imperialist interests that speak for the dominant power in the French capitalist republic.

French socialists, allies of this same capitalist regime, have no word of criticism for Gompers. This is left in very small measure to the German socialists, staunch upholders of German capitalism. The Vorwaerts, organ of the German social-democracy, joins its praise with that of the bourgeois press, the Tageblatt and Vossische Zeitung, but it finds fault with his aloofness toward the yellow Amsterdam Trade Union International. Socialist chauvinism in Germany never forgave Gompers for aiding the war against its pet capitalism.

It is the British capitalist press that gives loudest praise to Gompers' opposition to independent political action for the workers. "The Standard," of London, rejoices that it was Gompers who put his foot down when he felt the workers "drifting toward Bolshevism," and adds that it was Gompers who never allowed trade unionism in America to become a political movement. The Evening News and the Sunday Observer join in this chorus; a double-edged attack on both the Communist Party and the Labor Party in England.

Thus the world mirror reveals the Gompers' leadership, accepted in great part by America's organized workers, as possessing a "vision that never extended beyond the borders of capitalism." It never even sensed the class struggle for the ending of capitalism. Gompers died with praise for American capitalist institutions upon his lips. Capitalist spokesmen from the strikebreaker, Coolidge, to the open shopper, Ralph Easley, chairman of the National Civic Federation, sing his praise. He will maintain his associations even after death. His remains will be buried with those of capitalism's aristocratic dead.

This is a good time for all American labor to take stock of its position. Its great weakness under the Gompers' regime has been due, in very great part, to the collaboration of its officials with the enemy. It is time to make the change to a real class fight against oppression. The class traitors must be weeded out. The class fighters must be thrown into the breach in every struggle. The fight against the Gompers' policies is the fight for the interests of the whole American working class. That is the fight of the Communists that will gradually win the support of the toiling masses.

the bosses in wage negotiations. It maintains that the only successful way to carry on such negotiations and to help win the demands of the workers is thru a committee composed of representatives of the locals. In this way the membership is kept in touch with every development and a more determined struggle for the demands of the workers is assured.

Week Work as Against Piece Work.

The left wing recognizes that piece work is a method of speeding up production and breaking down the standard of wages. In place of that it proposes week work, a maximum standard of production with a minimum scale of wages.

No Suspensions by the Manufacturers.

The left wing maintains that the impartial machinery established must function to try grievances of the members. The present system of bosses suspending members without first preferring charges against them should be abolished.

Down with Fake Insurance Schemes.

The left wing maintains that the insurance scheme devised by our present officials only serve to weaken our union and to turn the attention of our members away from the need of building the kind of a union that will make such regulations which will as far as possible avoid unemployment and put the burden of maintaining those for whom jobs cannot be found upon the industry itself. Full maintenance of the unemployed at the expense of the bosses!

Shop Committee Control of the Union.

The left wing stands for the complete establishment of shop committees. This principle has already been endorsed by the convention of our union. Nothing has been done by our officialdom to put it into effect, which in reality amounts to sabotaging the whole proposition. A DETERMINED STRUGGLE ON THE PART OF THE RANK AND FILE IS NECESSARY IN ORDER TO INTRODUCE SHOP COMMITTEES AS THE BASIC UNITS OF OUR ORGANIZATION.

We demand that the establishment of shop committees be written into the new agreement. That the bosses recognize the shop committees as the representatives of the union, empowered to conduct all negotiations for the workers.

NO REAL PAY INCREASE FOR TRACTION MEN

Agreement Gives Them Increase for Overtime

Trains were again running over the Illinois Traction system thruout southern Illinois, following a compromise agreement between representatives of the 350 strikers and the company.

The employes dropped their demand for a pay increase, but received ten cents an hour extra for overtime pay. The traction company was forced to grant the demand for a closed shop.

Freight Employes Gain by Increase.

The freight employes, comprising half of the workers on the system, are the principal gainers by the settlement, as they work long periods of overtime, and until the strike, received the regular 55 cents an hour rate of pay. The passenger trainmen had been receiving a slight overtime pay on mileage basis. Their rate of 61½ cents an hour remains the same, but the overtime pay of ten cents an hour will slightly increase their wages.

The strike tied up all freight and passenger traffic between Decatur, Danville, Peoria, Staunton, Bloomington, St. Louis and many southern Illinois towns at the busiest time of the year—during the Christmas shopping rush.

Springfield and Peoria business men lost hundreds of dollars, due to the cutting off of the small town shopping trade and the freight tie-up. For that reason, the Springfield chamber of commerce took a leading part in trying to induce the men to accept the compromise.

The strike had lasted a week, and had entirely stopped traffic over the Illinois Traction system. Only one attempt was made to run a car, out of Litchfield, and sentiment expressed by strikers and sympathizers caused the company to hurriedly return the car to the barns.

FOUR HUNDRED MEN LAID OFF IN CAR SHOPS

Union Officials Spurn Unemployment Relief

Four hundred men have been laid off at the Northwestern Railroad carbuilding shops. The layoff is indefinite. Altho the company announces that some of the men may be taken back after a week's layoff, the most optimistic of the employes do not hope for a resumption of work on a normal scale until the end of January at the earliest.

Those laid off include 75 members of the International Association of Machinists. Boilermakers, roundhouse helpers, laborers, steel workers, and many workers, steel workers, and trades are affected by the layoff.

One of the shop chairmen of the Machinists' Union favored the calling of a meeting of all employes laid off, and their continuance at work, the DAILY WORKER learns. He wanted the employes to demand unemployment relief during the layoff, but declared he could not get the union officials to back him.

The Northwestern car shops include many separate craft unions, and it is difficult to secure united action.

Kerosene Blast Finds Many Victims Among Workers' Families

Five persons were burned, three perhaps fatally, and six families were routed here today by a fire started from the explosion of a can of kerosene in a three story flat building.

The victims were Kelly Spaulding, 29, his wife, Ruby, their two children and Earl Carrico a roomer.

Spaulding and the two children were sprayed with the blazing fluid which ignited while Spaulding was using it to ignite a fire in the kitchen stove. Their condition is considered serious.

French Imperialism Worried.

French imperialism is much worried for fear that as the natives take possession of the whole territory between the French part of Morocco and the ever-narrowing strip held by the Spanish on the Riffian coast, that a strong native republic will be built up there to put France's colonial slave-driving business out of business. France has sent a note to Spain about this, and is expected to attack the natives rather than yield to their demand for rule in their own land.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

United Front From Below vs. United Front From Above

By WM. F. DUNNE.

Two tendencies in the application of the united front policy appear crystal clear in every article in the party discussion. One, the tendency towards the united front from below contained in the articles of the C. E. C. and its supporters—the correct line of the Communist International.

The other, that of the minority, is the united front from above—a united front not with the masses but with a chosen few who call themselves leaders of the masses.

This tendency appears in all its coarse splendor in the loud wail of the minority over the fact that the C. E. C. refuses to "endorse the policy of penetration within the C. P. P. A." and in a still more pronounced form in its tears over the C. E. C. resolution submitted at the A. F. of L. convention outlining a program of struggle and specifying the mass organizations to be used for this struggle against wage cuts, unemployment, injunctions, etc., instead of raising the sterile slogan of a farmer-labor party. The C. E. C. laid down a full program of immediate demands for the A. F. of L. convention, which will bear fruit as the class struggle becomes ever sharper.

Has there ever been in any party of the Comintern a more humorous and at the same time tragic spectacle than that of the minority of the American party bringing American capitalism tottering to its knees in the journalistic overture to their theme is followed by the slogan, "Capitalism is failing! Long live a 'class' farmer-labor party!"?

This is a sight that brings no joy to the heart of any worker who is proud of his party, but it is the inevitable outcome of an opportunist policy springing from a wrong tendency in the united front tactic.

The C. E. C. believes and the Comintern believes, that during a crises of capitalism it is the task of Communist Parties to rally to themselves every worker who accepts their slogans and program.

The minority, however, apparently wants to build another roadhouse on the road to Communism, and if its high-sounding phrases of "leadership of a 'class' farmer-labor party" means anything at all, it intends to play the role of landlord and extend the weary travellers toward Communism until they are ready for more lavish hospitality in the little matter of revolution.

The possibility that most of the footsore wanderers might decide to stay in the modest but comfortable "class" farmer-labor roadhouse evidently has not occurred to the minority.

Neither has the possibility occurred to them that they, as the hosts, might find the business unprofitable and the environment so pleasant that they would forget entirely the dictatorship of the proletariat and the Communist Party at the end of the road.

After all, the work of gathering together the elements that would make a "class former-labor party"—in a period when there is no mass sentiment for it—is not unpleasant.

The minority needs only to hold a number of conferences in which its collective soul delights, get a "respectable" program that will not frighten the timid liberals and semi-hemi-demi-Communists, put a seven-column line in the DAILY WORKER on "Class Farmer-Labor Party Formed," announce that the conference elected William Mahoney chairman, and C. E. Ruthenberg (the name of Jay Lovestone may also be used) secretary," and the child is born.

Comrades who feel that this is not an accurate description of the birth-process of "class farmer-labor parties" have not followed closely the Arabian nights episodes in which our party played the part of the genii of the lamp.

If one is not particular about having masses in the party described above—and it is noticeable that the minority does not say "mass class farmer-labor party," one of these parties can be formed every day, or just as long as there are "leaders" with whom to hold conferences and Comrade Ruthenberg does not get tired of writing manifestos.

This is one of the outstanding tendencies of devotees of the united front from above—a predilection for paper organizations, interminable conferences, substitution of powerless groups of parliamentarians for workers in action, manifestos that may raise fighting slogans but which attract workers—if any we ears are attracted at all—not into the Communist Party, but into halfway havens that are fertile breeding places for opportunism and reformism.

There is another characteristic, far more dangerous and inexcusable, that a false conception of the united front tactic develops in its devotees, a characteristic that every distorter of Marxism-Leninism has in common It is the use of quotations from the great teachers of the working class and the use of these quotations for the purpose of giving a Communist color to an opportunist policy.

The worst offender in the discussion so far is Comrade Lovestone. In his article in the DAILY WORKER of Wednesday, Dec. 3, under the sub-head, "Skepticism—A Menshevist Disease"—Comrade Lovestone quotes Lenin as follows:

> "The Marxian doctrine has welded the theory and practice of the class struggle into an INDIVISIBLE WHOLE. He is no Marxist who, to justify existing conditions, distorts the theory which soberly confirms the objective situation, who goes so far as to adapt himself with the greatest possible speed to any temporary lull in the revolution (!) to throw quickly overboard his 'revolutionary illusions' and to set about collecting the 'realistic' shreds."

Comrade Lovestone, with a not surprising jesuitism, attempts to use this quotation to justify what His desire to build a "class" farmer-labor party—a substitute for the Workers (Communist) Party in the daily battles of the working class.

If ever an advocate of the united front from above was hoist with his own petard it is Comrade Lovestone.

Was there ever a more apt quotation to describe a minority that states plainly its disbelief in the ability of the Communist Party to fight, in its own name, for and with the working class in every daily struggle and bring directly into its own ranks the more militant of the workers?

> "He is no Marxist who, to justify existing conditions, distorts the theory which objectively confirms the existing situation, who goes so far as to adapt himself with the greatest possible speed to any temporary lull in the revolution, to throw quickly overboard his 'revolutionary illusions' and to set about collecting the 'realistic' shreds."

These are strange words in the mouth of one who speaks for a minority that bases its "realistic" policy on not one single objective fact except its own opportunist tendency and which brands as "skepticism" a C. E. C. that bases its policy on a revolutionary situation in the whole capitalist world and which does not share—we accept Comrade Lovestone's own definition of the minority policy—the "menshevist skepticism"—of the minority as to the importance of the Communist Party in the class struggle and its ability to attract the masses of America.

It takes the brazen egoism which is another characteristic of opportunist individualism, to quote the master Lenin in support of the minority position in a discussion where the Communist Party is opposed to a hybrid "class" farmer-labor party that the minority visualises as an indispensable organ in the revolutionary struggle.

It is just exactly that the minority thinks it sees—in spite of lip service to Communist theory—that there is a "temporary lull in the revolution," that is their real reason for advocating a substitute for the Communist Party. In this they are not alone.

In almost every party of the Comintern there is or was a rightist group whose disappointment with what they term the "slow development of the revolution" led them to revisions of Leninism.

In the British party this group became clearly defined and most of them finally left the party—Walton Newbold among them. This group lost faith in the British Communist Party, it did not develop a mass character fast enough to satisfy them—(it should be noted here that a mass party to this type of individual means a "big" party that gives them a sense of importance and has little to do with the mass character of its activities), so they openly advocated liquidation of the Communist Party and the establishment of a loose left wing group inside the independent labor party.

It seems to me that when the minority advocates, not a united front with a worker and farmer party, but the organization of its "class farmer-labor party" as a Communist principle without which the united front is impossible on the "political" field, they come dangerously close to the Newboldites.

They do not attempt to show and they cannot show where the Comintern has instructed the American party to enter into such a maneuver when no mass movement existed.

On the contrary, Comrade Lenin wrote that in the case of the British Communist Party that its task was to split the British labor party—to make the Communist Party the party of the British proletariat.

"But," say the minority comrades, "the British labor party was organized in a period of capitalist strength while here in the United States our 'class farmer-labor party' develops during the decline of capitalism and will therefore take a different form and play a different role."

They are modest, these minority comrades. All they claim is that they have discovered a new instrument of revolution outside of the Communist Party.

This new instrument is nothing less than their "class farmer-labor party" that they organize during a period of "capitalist decline," and which is to form the united front on the "political" field.

We must leave England and go to Germany to find a parallel for this tendency. We find it there in the conception held by the right leadership of the German Party, of the "workers' and farmers' government" as an instrument of revolution—a conception and tendency that the C. I. condemned in unmeasured terms.

The minority comrades will feel outraged by these comparisons but they are drawn logically from their thesis,—a thesis which puts forward a "class farmer-labor party" as a Communist principle—a "class farmer-labor party" that they state in article after article is the only form of united front on the political field.

Let the minority comrades protest their good intentions. Policy and not good intentions is what determines the fate of Communist parties and the opportunist believe with Comrade Zinoviev that "theses, resolutions and king. "Old Tivet" was working for articles are the best basis for forming opinions."

Going hand in hand with Comrade Lovestone's attempt to pervert a quotation from Lenin, his attempt to label a C. E. C. that carried out the instructions of the Comintern in the election ever his protest, as "menshevik skepics," is the arrogation of the minority to themselves of the title "old Bolsheviks."

The minority cling fondly to their "class farmer-labor party" and therefore they are "old Bolsheviks."

Their formula is:

"Without a 'class farmer-labor party'," which we must organize, "even tho it has but 5,000 members" as that old Bolshevik Comrade Nat Kaplan states—"we can have no mass Communist Party."

The minority cannot point to one single authentic movement for a "class farmer-labor party" even to any sentiment for it among the masses.

But to them the formula is too precious to discard. The slogan of the C. E. C., "The Workers (Communist) Party against the LaFollette party" does not appeal to them—nor does the daily struggles for leadership in the unions and industries.

Their formula has no connection with reality but they say apparently, "Tis a poor thing but mine own!"

We recall here something written by Comrade Lenin during the strenuous days of 1917. It is from his "Theses on Tactics" published in Pravda, April 29, 1917.

> "Bolshevist slogans and ideas IN GENERAL have been confirmed by history: but concretely things have developed somewhat differently than was expected, assumed a more original, peculiar and varied form. To ignore, to forget this fact, would be to resemble those . . . of our party by repeating senseless 'learned formulae' instead of STUDYING the peculiarities of the new, the living reality that lives before us. We must take into consideration the true facts and living reality of today, and not continue clinging to the theory of yesterday, which, like every other theory, at its best only outlines the fundamental and the general, only approaches a conception of the complexity of life. 'Theory, my friend, is gray, but green is the eternal tree of life!'" (Emphasis in the original.—W. F. D.)

Comrade Lenin was not afraid to take issue with comrades when they clung to a "senseless learned formula."

"WHICH CHANGE?"

By EARL R. BROWDER.

Our right wing minority tries to put the question; "Shall we change our policy, or shall we keep the old one." And Comrade Powell, in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 6, raises a point of order against the C. E. C. declaring that it has no right to say the labor party movement has disappeared from the political arena until the last convention decision has been changed. Both the minority and their champion, Comrade Powell, ignore one factor very essential for Marxists—the objective conditions. A policy formulated for a certain situation when carried over to a later period becomes a different policy in everything except the paper and ink which states it. Our labor party policy under the conditions of last year becomes a very different thing under the conditions of this year. Even such a formalist as Comrade Powell could not evade this fact if he were faced by a revolution which had not been properly predicted by the party convention. "Points of order" are no barrier to the march of political events.

But the Minority Also Wants a Change.

When the minority proclaims their desire to "drop the old policy" they are, however, guilty of something more than ignoring the above-mentioned very important fact. They are guilty of misrepresenting their own position as stated in black ink on white paper.

The minority advances the slogan for the present period, of:

For a Class Farmer-Labor Party.

But I happen to have in my membership book a little stamp which I cannot forget because I paid a dollar for it—one of the $50,000.00 that we spent last year on building a farmer-labor party. On it is the slogan that expressed the party policy laid down by the last convention. The slogan is:

For a Mass Class Farmer-Labor Party.

So we see that the C. E. C. and the minority are united on at least one thing: they both want to change the policy. While the C. E. C. wants to find more effective ways to reach the MASS, the minority clamors for a policy that drops the MASS.

So We Agree That Conditions Have Changed.

In spite of all the protestations of the minority that conditions are just the same today as a year ago, we find on examination of their present slogan that they, too, actually recognize the change. By dropping out the word MASS from the slogan they admit the most vital political change which the C. E. C. has been pointing out in its thesis and articles.

Here is progress, when we can agree upon two such vital points. We agree that the policy must be changed, and we agree that the change is necessary because the masses are no longer moving toward a farmer-labor party. What is the necessary change in order to preserve a real Communist policy for the Workers (Communist) Party? That is the question.

A Substitute for the W. P., or a United Front From Below?

The minority proposes to cling to the farmer-labor slogan, without the masses, and proceed to the "building up of farmer-labor parties," and "by carefully directed agitation" to create a "left class party bloc" inside of the LaFollette movement which, at the psychological moment, is to be split away under the leadership of the Communists, who remain on the outside directing affairs. Insofar as the proposal of the minority is not utterly fantastical, insofar as their "class farmer-labor party" could be crystallized at all, it is a proposal to build an opportunist substitute for the Workers Party in the form it now takes as the organ of struggle politically usurping the place of leadership.

The Central Executive Committee thesis demands that we get down to the realities of the class struggle, and begin to form our united front from below in the actual struggles of the masses. In this united front in the struggle it demands that we shall begin to make the masses acquainted with the Workers Party, not in the capacity of a John Alden pleading with Priscilla Cunningolas to marry Miles Standish Labor Party, but in the role of the actual leader, organiser, and inspirer of the working masses, under its own banner and with its own practical and revolutionary program both for the immediate struggles and the future battles for power.

No John Alden Role for Us!

We must go to the masses! Not to plead the cause of an illusory farmer-labor party! Miles Standish was no damn good anyway, Priscilla would never have been happy with him, and John Alden was a fool not to ask the girl to come himself. There is no reason why we have to be fools in the same way and plead any other cause with the working class than our own, which is the cause of the class struggle and the final emancipation of the working class. The original John Alden was a character and he willed some dignity, but if the minority have their way the Workers Party will be repeating history as a farce. Down with the "John Alden Theses"!

THE WORKERS PARTY IN ACTION.

By A. OVERGAARD.

In the discussion on the thesis of the C. E. C. and the Lovestone-Ruthenberg thesis, it will be well to consider the practical application of the two policies in the field of struggle in order to come to a correct conclusion. It is not enough to consider such an important political question over a cup of tea in social settlements in New York or on the basis of "facts" gathered in a research office but on the basis of actual contact with the masses and our experience in the struggles of the working class.

According to the Lovestone-Ruthenberg thesis we are to create a special non-Communist party in order to attract wide masses. This theory smells too much of the ideology of the Second-and-a-Half International. The political consciousness of the masses develops out of the struggles against the capitalist class and we cannot awaken this consciousness by just giving them new parties or by throwing slogans to them, unless these slogans are based on the actual needs of the workers. We must also examine carefully whether there is actually movements towards the realisation of these demands.

The United Front and a Farmer-Labor Party.

According to the Lovestone-Ruthenberg thesis the united front can only be realized thru the formation of a farmer-labor party. This is sheer nonsense and not in line with the policy of the Communist International. The minority wants a left wing labor party or sort of Number Two, which shall take in all the disillusioned workers in the LaFollette camp and the Workers Party shall be the Number One; we shall then proceed to disillusion these workers into the Number One, the Workers Party. What will be the result?

This policy will no doubt lead to the weakening of the Workers Party by taking from it all the functions of leading the working class in the struggle for immediate demands and these functions will be taken care of by this substitute, it will also tend to liquidate the Workers Party.

According to the minority the Workers Party can not be used to fight for the immediate needs of the working class. That will be taken care of by the so-called "revolutionary" class farmer-labor party as Comrade Amter choose to call it in a recent number of the International Press correspondence. I would like to know wherein such a party will be other than the Workers Party. Traenmael in Norway wants such a party because he is disappointed in the Communist International; I wonder if the comrades of the minority can not be styled disappointed Communists. We have lost confidence in the ability of Communist party to organize the masses for struggle under its own name.

Now let us examine a few facts. Let us take our experience for example in the Machinist convention. In the struggle against LaFollette did we put up the farmer-labor party? No there was only one party in the field for independent political action, the Workers Party. Was it possible to have a united front on other issues in the convention with non-Communist workers? Yes of course. Amalgamation of the Metal Trades' Unions, which is so vitally necessary for these workers, was one of the issues upon which a great fight took place in that convention. In that fight the small force of Communists were able to mobilize the majority of rank and file delegates in the convention. In the struggle for a two-year convention and two-year election of officers the united front of various forces smashed the bureaucracy. In the struggle against class collaboration, the Workers Party and the T. U. E. L. were the recognised leaders.

That the LaFollette movement has swallowed up the farmer-labor party was clearly demonstrated in the convention. Who were the ones that fought for the labor party resolution? The Workers Party. But what was the vote? The same as the vote cast in a straight Workers Party fight against LaFollette, the majority of the delegates were satisfied that LaFollette could take care of their political needs. Our principal task was to disillusion the rank and file delegates in the LaFollette bugaboo and against that we put our united front program for immediate action and the Workers Party.

Let us ask the minority, who is leading the workers in Paterson in their strike against the silk manufacturers? Their answer can only be: the Workers Party. Who was leading the struggle of the unorganized workers against the Pullman company and the West Side Steel company in the sporadic strikes in Pullman and Hegewisch? The Workers Party. The minority thesis fails to state whether or not we were correct in entering the election campaign in the name of the Workers Party. Let us examine what would have happened if we had gone ahead under the name of the farmer-labor party. I can well remember the famous mass meeting in Chicago under the auspices of the farmer-labor party where we launched the campaign for MacDonald and Bouch with farmer-labor speakers. Then the following meeting under the auspices of the Workers Party where the election campaign was launched for Foster and Gitlow. In the former who were participating? Members of the Workers Party and Y. W. L. and a number of sympathisers. In the latter we found the same audience with much greater enthusiasm.

No Disagreement Here!

We discuss the future tasks of the party preliminary to a decision. After a decision is rendered we march forward unitedly to carry it into effect.

CALIFORNIA PROVES MAJORITY POSITION.

By DAVID A. GORMAN.

In discussing the thesis of the C. E. C. that is the majority thesis and the reason for my approval of the majority position, it is well that I relate the experience we had in Los Angeles, Cal. immediately prior to the formation of the Los Angeles labor party, during its existence and after.

Like in all other centers the political policy pursued by the local labor movement was the endorsing of good candidates. That was done thru a joint executive board. Many of the politicians endorsed by the joint board were also endorsed by the chamber of commerce and the Los Angeles Times. Particularly so in the local city elections which the rank and file took more interest in than in other campaigns. The opposition of the rank and file also touched the treachery expressed itself in the labor council thru their delegates.

Early in January of 1923 the labor council passed a motion calling upon the joint board to invite all working class political parties to send representatives to its meeting for the purpose of creating a united front in the approaching city election. At the next meeting of the board the S. P. had two spokesmen. The Workers Party was represented by the writer. The socialist position was to form a loose alliance between themselves and the trade unions for the city election. I presented our party position to immediately form a labor party. Being a member of the joint board, I proposed the calling of a convention of trade unions to decide the future political policy of the local labor movement. A motion carried to call a convention for March 8, 1923. As the call was being sent out to the unions, our labor party resolution passed the Machinists' Union and that resolution was sent to every A. F. of L. union in the city for endorsement.

On March 8 the convention opened with about 175 delegates representing 55 unions. The labor party was formed. The writer was elected chairman. At the next meeting of the L. P. many independent unions joined along with the S. P., W. P., Workmen's Circle and even the proletarian party. The united front was complete.

We entered the city election campaign and we failed to nominate our candidates in the primaries. The unions that remained in the L. P. after the election represented 11,000 members paying per capita tax on the basis of one cent per member per month.

When the call was issued for the July 3 convention the L. P. sent two delegates. We later affiliated with the Federated, which resulted in the withdrawal of the S. P., the proletarian party and many unions. The L. P. later issued a call for a state convention to form a state labor party.

This convention was called off in order to first fight within the state C. P. P. A. Being defeated in the C. P. P. A., we formed a provisional committee for a state F. L. P. Several months later at a state convention the C. F. L. P. was formed. The state F. L. P. and the Los Angeles L. P. send delegates to St. Paul.

After St. Paul the rank and file of the unions went over to LaFollette. The L. P. ceased to be a mass organization. Before the LaFollette wave many workers expressed their opposition to the old parties thru the labor party. It is obvious to every one now that those workers who broke with the old parties are accepting the LaFollette movement instead. Where is the basis for a F. L. P. slogan? Prior to the LaFollette wave those workers who accepted the L. P. were willing to accept our leadership and we were successful in isolating the reactionary officials from the rank and file. Now it is impossible to do that with a F. L. P. We must adopt slogans that the rank and file will fight for, and on that basis destroy the leadership of the labor fakers. Furthermore the masses can be moved effectively with political parties whose program is parliamentary only during parliamentary campaigns. We had that experience in Los Angeles, immediately after the city elections our L. P. meetings were attended by a handful of people. Many unions dropped their affiliation. When mass meetings were called, they were a complete failure. The rank and file of the trade unions did not attend and the militant workers ignored them because they were not revolutionary enough.

Today the F. L. P. slogan will not create any enthusiasm amongst the masses. In fact the common expression amongst workers today is: Wait until 1928 and we will put LaFollette over. We can only fight this LaFollette illusion with slogans arising out of that touch the immediate needs of the workers and not with abstract slogans for new parties.

HOW ABOUT 1925?

Everything that is born does not live! Myriads of fish and insects never see a second day of life. And hundreds of labor papers have been born that never get strong enough to walk. No revolutionary labor paper will ever celebrate its first anniversary if it does not have in back of it the invigorating, sustaining hand of a determined, vital, red proletariat.

HELP! HELP! Give Us a Hand—

We are swamped again. There is just a load of work piling up in our office and our small force is struggling hard to get it done. If any comrades have a day, an hour or a minute to spare, COME ON OVER—GIVE US A HAND!

Comrade Ruthenberg in his article in the DAILY WORKER for Dec. 1 wants to create the impression that some other party than the Communist party can better fight the coming battles of the workers. Comrade Ruthenberg also seems to create the impression that half a million workers were organized into a farmer-labor party. I would like to be shown the correctness of this statement. It is true that representatives of that many workers were brot together for conference, but Comrade Ruthenberg forgets that after each conference a split took place and that in the meantime the LaFollette movement swallowed up the labor parties.

The majority thesis is correct in that it examines whether or not there is an actual demand or movement toward a farmer-labor party, whether this slogan for a farmer-labor party can move large masses of workers and farmers and base their conclusions on the actual conditions existing at this time. The majority thesis also proposes to apply the united front from below in the actual everyday struggles of the workers; it proposes to Bolshevize the party, thru systematic education of our members, not in farmer-laborism but in fundamental Communist principles, thru the building up and re-organization of the party on a shop nuclei basis, the strengthening of our industrial work, thru the shop committee movement, our participation in strikes, the struggle against the trade union bureaucracy, etc. By this correct application of the united front thru struggle the Workers (Communist) Party will become the leader of these struggles and develop into a powerful mass Communist party and realize the proletarian dictatorship in the United States.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

THE BANKRUPTCY OF THE C. E. C. MAJORITY POLICY

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

THE most illuminating test of any policy is its application. Judged in the light of such a test the policy set forth by the majority of the central executive committee, which it is not only proposing to the party but applying in practice at the present time, has already done great harm to our party and threatens the party with even greater injury.

In order to make clear the injury which has already been done the Workers Party thru the application of the majority policy and the danger which threatens the party thru the continued application of this policy, it is necessary to restate a few fundamentals. It is the error of the majority that it is basing its policy upon temporary surface conditions in relation to the movement toward class political action and not upon the stronger, underlying forces which have produced and are developing this movement.

The movement for independent political action by the workers as a class has been slow in developing in the United States. While practically every developed capitalist country of Europe has had class political parties of labor supported by masses for decades, in the United States such a party has developed. The historical reasons why no such party has developed in the United States have often been stated and I need not go into them here. The fact which we have to deal with is, that after the close of the war, thru the intensification of the class struggle which has grown out of the war, a movement by the workers and at the same time a movement by the exploited farmers, toward independent political action and for the formation of a party representing the class interests of these two groups, has arisen.

The fact which we must bear in mind in discussing the question of our party policy is, that this movement is not a chance thing growing out of temporary conditions which may quickly disappear. As Marxians we recognize that the development of a movement among the working masses toward a political class struggle is a logical and inevitable outcome of class relations under the capitalist system.

It was upon the basis of the fact that this movement had begun and was developing that our party, two and a half years ago, formulated its united front labor party policy. What was the problem which we as Communists, organized in the revolutionary Workers Party, faced at that time?

We had organized the vanguard of the working class, the revolutionists, the Communists, in our party, but the mass masses of the American workers were still supporting the parties of their class enemies—the capitalists. Our aim was to build our party of the vanguard, of the revolutionary workers into a mass Communist Party. We rejected the theory that our party could be built into a mass Communist Party thru abstract propaganda of our principles. We accepted the Communist concept that a revolutionary mass party of Communists can only be created thru the revolutionization of the working masses. We saw the beginning of the process of the revolutionization of the working masses in the movement for independent political action.

We argued: In this movement toward independent political action by the workers and exploited farmers there is our point of contact with these masses. We will enter into this movement. We will endeavor to hasten the development of this movement. We will seek to become the leaders of this movement and thru our leadership we will make it more conscious and drive it forward. We will crystallize this movement by organizing delegated bodies consisting of delegates from the organizations of workers and exploited farmers who become politically conscious of their class interests. We will enter into common struggles, not merely election campaigns but struggles upon all issues arising in the class struggle, with these workers and exploited farmers, struggles in which we will play the part of the initiators and driving force. Thru this policy we will carry out our duty as a Communist Party—we will be carrying on the work of revolutionization of the masses and in the process we will build our party into a mass party of revolutionary workers.

The slogan which we raised to express the crystallization of the movement for independent political action was, "For a farmer-labor party," and later, when the LaFollette movement took form, in order to sharply distinguish our aim from the petty bourgeoisie character of the latter, "For a class farmer-labor party." This slogan historically and thru the content we have given it has come to stand for the first step in the revolutionization of the working masses, the development of political action on the basis of their class interests.

In my article in the Workers Monthly, directed against the policy of the majority of the central executive committee, I asked, in considering the present situation of the movement toward independent political action described above: "Is the movement toward class political action dead?" Various supporters of the central executive committee majority have risen to give the childish answer: "Of course not, because the Workers Party is not dead." Such a silly answer shows a lack of understanding of the whole problem. We are not considering in the party discussion whether there exists in the United States a Communist Party which has as its aim the mobilization of the working masses for a revolutionary class struggle against the capitalist state power. It ought not be necessary to remind ourselves of that fact in every second sentence. We are considering thru what strategy and tactics can our Communist Party revolutionize the masses and build itself. It seems, however, that for the supporters of the majority thesis it is necessary to formulate the question in every detail, thus: Is the mass movement toward class political action, which has developed in the United States thru the intensification of the class struggle since the end of the war, dead?

The minority thesis emphasizes that the economic conditions which produced this movement do not only exist but will be intensified and will produce even a greater movement for class political action. The majority agrees that the economic conditions which developed the movement still exist and will be intensified, but that the movement of the workers and exploited farmers resulting therefrom has been "swallowed up" or "come to rest" in the non-class, third party LaFollette movement, and that the slogan, "For a class farmer-labor party," has lost its potency as a means of developing class political action on a mass scale, and for building the Workers Party in the process of developing such class political action.

With this review of basic reasons for our policy and the forces underlying the movement for class political action we are in a position to apply the test of actual application to the present situation of the policies proposed in the central executive committee majority and minority theses, and thus come to a conclusion as to the present potency of the "For a class farmer-labor party" slogan for the development of class political action and the building of our party.

The A. F. of L. Convention.

The question of independent political action by labor was an issue in the A. F. of L. convention. The Potters, Molders and Stonecutters, three international unions, had resolutions before the convention calling for the endorsement of the formation of a labor party. That in itself is a good proof that the movement for the formation of a labor party is not dead.

What was the position of the majority of the central executive committee? It voted down the proposal of the central executive committee majority that we introduce and champion a resolution calling for the formation of a class farmer-labor party. In place of such a resolution it proposed a resolution calling for a general labor congress. The minority opposed an amendment to the general labor congress resolution, that there be inserted as one of the points of the program of such a general labor congress the formation of a farmer-labor party. Two or three weeks later, as an afterthought, the majority inserted in its general labor congress resolution a clause calling for support of the Workers Party.

What was the consequence of this abandoning of the slogan "For a class farmer-labor party?" The delegates of the Potters, the Stonecutters appeared at the A. F. of L. convention as the exponents of independent political action by labor, the general labor congress resolution was not heard from and the Workers Party abdicated its position as leader of the movement of the workers toward class political action.

Which course would have brought the greatest results for building the Workers Party, the introduction of a meaningless general labor congress resolution in which no one was interested and which was in no way a live question, or a militant espousal before the convention by our party of the slogan "For a class farmer-labor party?" Which tactic would have promoted most what is and must be our major strategy, to develop class political action, and eventually revolutionary political action by the worker?

The question answers itself. The tactics in the A. F. of L. is point one indicating the bankruptcy of the majority of the central executive committee

The Massachusetts C. P. P. A.

On Saturday, Dec 13, a telegram was received by Comrade Foster from Comrade Ballam, advising that the conference for progressive political action was holding a convention in Massachusetts to which quite a number of members of the Trade Union Educational League and party members had been elected as delegates from their unions. The telegram further advised that a conference of the members of the Trade Union Educational League in Boston the members had voted to introduce a resolution in the C. P. P. A. convention calling for the formation of a class farmer-labor party, and if the resolution was defeated to lead a split from the convention of all the elements favoring the formation of such a party.

The majority of the central executive committee sent instructions to Comrade Ballam that the resolution for a class farmer-labor party must not be introduced but that a resolution criticising the LaFollette movement as a petty bourgeoisie movement and calling for endorsement of the Workers Party be introduced. The minority of the central executive committee proposed that our party be to introduce a resolution for a class farmer-labor party, and split if it was defeated and organize group splitting away into a provisional committee to carry on a campaign against the C. P. P. A. and LaFolletteism in the Massachusetts trade unions.

Here again we have proof, first, that the movement for a class farmer-labor party is not dead. If a considerable number of delegates can be elected from the Massachusetts trade unions pledged to fight a farmer-labor party against the C. P. P. A. and LaFolletteism, that is the best evidence of the potency of the slogan. Second, we have again the bankruptcy of the central executive committee majority policy for the central executive committee majority did not and could not, according to its policy, give any organizational expression to demand for class political action of the trade unions represented in the C. P. P. A. convention

The Minnesota Situation.

In the Minnesota the Farmer-Labor Federation was organized largely thru the efforts of our party, as a means of giving expression to class party elements in the Minnesota farmer-labor party. The petty bourgeois elements in the Minnesota farmer-labor party are at present waging a campaign to throw the Communists out of the Farmer-Labor Federation. What is the policy of the central executive committee majority? It has not dared to make a declaration of policy on this situation. If it follows the logic of its thesis it will voluntarily withdraw our members from the Farmer-Labor Federation and thus isolate us from the mass movement of workers and exploited farmers in Minnesota, and thus make another attempt at bankruptcy. Incidentally, it might be mentioned that it is in Minnesota, where we have been most active in the farmer-labor party, that our party polled proportionally the largest number of votes for the Workers Party presidential ticket. This in itself is good evidence of the effectiveness of the farmer-labor party campaign for building the strength and influence of the Workers Party.

The Coming C. P. P. A. National Convention

The strongest evidence of the bankruptcy of the policy of the central executive committee majority comes to light in the application of its policy to the situation we will be facing in relation to the coming convention of the C. P. P. A. The national committee of the C. P. P. A. has called a national convention to be held in Chicago on Feb 21 for the purpose of organizing the third party. The third party is not yet organized. It merely built machinery for an election campaign. The issuance of the call for the convention Feb. 21 brings the question of the form of political action which the workers and farmers are to take before every trade union and organization of exploited farmers in the United States in the sharpest form imaginable. In every such organization this issue will be fought out. For the next two months the issue of independent political action, of a LaFollette third party or a farmer-labor party, will be the biggest question which will come before the trade unions and organizations of farmers.

What are our tactics in this situation? The only tactic possible under the policy of the central executive committee majority is to offer resolutions for the endorsement of the Workers Party against the call for the C. P. P. A. convention. Endorsements of the Workers Party are very fine, but in the first place they will be few and far between, and secondly, they will leave us in the same position that we are left in by the paper endorsements of amalgamation by two million trade union members which Comrade Foster boasts about. We cannot affiliate trade unions and farm organizations with the Workers Party. Our party as a Communist Party is based upon individual membership. It is a utopian notion to believe that we can during this campaign move more than a few thousand of the millions of non-party members of the trade unions and farm organizations who might be put on record against the LaFollette third party and for a class farmer-labor party thru a militant campaign by our party, to join the Workers Party as individual members.

It is a Communist tactic to build a united front in order to enter into a common struggle with such organization. The farmer-labor party slogan expresses the form of the united front we can build with those elements which we could win in such a campaign against LaFolletteism. The raising of the slogan of "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party" would be our most effective means for fulfilling our major task, for the development of class political action and our campaign in support of that slogan would do more to build the Workers Party than any number of sterile resolutions for the endorsement of the Workers Party.

It is only necessary to study the situation as here outlined in regard to the C. P. P. A. convention to see that the policy of the central executive committee majority is sectarianism and a repudiation of the united front tactic in relation to the most significant development of the American labor movement, the movement toward class political action

The central executive committee majority says: Oh, but we propose united front on other questions, unemployment, child labor, etc. Well and good. We have had such united front and we must continue to enter such campaigns as often as possible, but such united front campaigns are not the answer to the requirements of the development of the movement for class political action. The C. P. P. A.-LaFollette movement is offering an organizational crystallization to workers and farmers organizations in the fields of the petty bourgeoisie third party. Shall we abandon the field and permit this crystallization to take place? That is what the abandonment of the slogan "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party" means. The raising of the slogan means to call to the most conscious elements a crystallization around the Workers Party in a united front organization. The central executive committee majority policy abdicates our leadership and hands it over to LaFollette, to permit the workers and exploited farmers to remain "at rest," in the third party.

The few facts cited show where the central executive committee majority policy is leading us to. It is taking us out of the main stream of the movement for class political action by the workers and exploited farmers which has sprung out of the life experiences of these classes in new world war. The majority policy spells bankruptcy both in leadership in developing class political action by the working masses and in building up our party into a mass Communist Party.

A QUESTION OF LENINIST LEADERSHIP

By H. M. WICKS.

SINCE efforts to apply the united front on the parliamentary field have proved very difficult for the political leadership of the Foster-Cannon group of the central executive committee and since a frank admission of their blunders would prove their undoing as leaders, they now endeavor, by decree, to abolish the farmer-labor movement so they will no longer be required to test their ability in this field. A few more experiences such as the party has endured lately would soon expose their incompetency to even the merest novice in the party, so they are determined to take no more chances.

Their action is the first time in the history of the movement, to my knowledge, that leaders of a party have tried to exercise a ruling simply because they found it inconvenient for their purpose. Such efforts have been made elsewhere, but not in the labor movement. The most notable historical endeavor in this line was when the pope of Rome issued a bull against the appearance of Haley's comet. When astronomers predicted, with mathematical accuracy, that the comet would appear, His Holiness consigned them to the infernal regions. But tho he forbade the appearance of the comet, he lived to learn that natural forces have a habit of contemptuously ignoring the whims of individuals, even tho it come in conflict with holy writ.

We are convinced that the decree of the majority, exorcising the farmer-labor movement, will prove as unavailing against historico-economic forces as was the bull of the pope against natural phenomena. Furthermore, we assert that just as the comet ignored the pope, so the development of a class labor party in the United States will proceed in spite of the delusions of the majority thesis.

From the Bottom Up.

The majority favors abandoning the struggle to create a farmer-labor party and asserts that it will devote its time to applying the united front "from the bottom." But, tho we do apply the united front from the bottom, that is not a reason for scrapping the slogan for a labor party. A perusal of the thesis and polemics of the majority is illuminating in this connection, inasmuch as it reveals their whole conception in relation to establishing a labor party united front and explains their signal failure properly to carry out a Communist policy in their maneuvers during the eleven months of their control of the party.

Whereas the present minority, last year known as the Pepper group, viewed the united front as a mass movement from the bottom and exerted great efforts to gain influence over the majority of the rank and file of labor, the Foster-Cannon group devoted its time to compromises, negotiations and vacillations with the so-called left leaders of labor. Let us review, briefly, a bit of history.

I will cite the two instances of creating labor parties that I was charged with directing for the then central executive committee. First, the organization of the Buffalo labor party was distinctly a movement from the bottom. Instead of dickering with the labor leaders, the Buffalo comrades assisted me in reaching every local union in the city. We went direct to the rank and file, appearing night after night before scores of local unions and, after winning them to our position, deliberately forced the politicians of the central labor council to yield to our demands. The result was a real united front party embracing over 50,000 organized workers and composed of the local trade unions, a number of workmen's fraternal societies and the Workers Party. Today, according to information at hand from Comrade James C. Campbell, the leader of that party, there is a demand for its revival, which tends to discredit the claim that LaFollette swallowed the whole movement.

Secondly, the creation of the Minnesota farmer-labor federation, which was assigned to me by the C. E. C. was, for the most part, a movement from the bottom. During the time I was in Minnesota, our comrades lined up many of the local unions and other organizations in support of the creation of such a movement, and succeeded in winning influence and membership for our party. The rank and file support was the basis of our negotiations with Mahoney and others in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Unfortunately some of the Minnesota comrades, who are now in the majority, entirely lost sight of the rank and file support and considered the end and aim of the movement as based upon the success of placating Mahoney. The Minnesota comrades will well remember my vigorous objection to the refusal of our delegates to take issue with Mahoney on the question of sending delegates to a proposed convention of the federated farmer-labor party that was to have been held in Chicago the early part of this year. In spite of my instructions to the contrary, those enamored of the united front from the top, refused to fight for this measure at the September, 1923 convention that organized the Minnesota farmer-labor federation.

Both Buffalo and Minnesota were bona fide movements from the bottom up and were real, and not imaginary, organizations. They may not have been the case with all our labor party organizations. The majority claims such was not the case with others, but they cannot dispute the fact that in these two instances the motivating force was from the bottom under our direction. As a matter of fact, some of the majority brazenly proclaim the fact that they organized "fake" labor parties. If that is true, they concealed the fact from the membership by numerous subterfuges. Such admissions are distinctly shocking to those who take the movement seriously and consider the future of the movement rather than the temporary victory of a faction in the party. With such admissions as this, how is the working class to judge us in the future? I, for one, refuse to malign our party with the charge that we did organize "fake labor parties." That unenviable achievement may remain the distinction of the majority, but it never came to my notice, as a member of the former C. E. C., otherwise there would have been an explosion.

United Front With Leaders.

There was certainly a serious error made in the Minnesota situation because some of our leading local comrades had too much confidence in Mahoney, an attitude I personally warned against. Their error, however, was not confined to them alone but was shared by the present majority of the C. E. C. After the organization of the farmer-labor federation the center of gravity of the labor party movement shifted to Minnesota and finally culminated in the June 17 convention.

At that convention every effort was made to conciliate Mahoney and Co.

"Splitting tactics," according to the majority, were decisively repudiated Pepperism, which was responsible for the split at the July 3, 1923, convention at Chicago, was deeply buried. The majority bitterly complained about the split with Fitzpatrick at Chicago. They were determined that there would be no further splitting on their part.

The majority failed to understand the united front. They failed to perceive that there must be a split sometime, that splits are necessary, especially when dealing with leaders. Some of them will go a short distance with us, others quite far. But on the path of revolution there inevitably comes a time when even the most conservative labor leader is the choice between going forward with us or backward into the camp of the reactionaries. Failure to estimate the decisive moment is frequently fatal.

So anxious were the majority to maintain unity with the leaders that they completely forgot the masses on the outside. So depressed were they after the Chicago convention that they made no serious effort to consolidate the brilliant victory of our party at that convention by building up the federated farmer-labor party. When, a short time after the convention at Chicago, Comrades Ruthenberg, Pepper and the present minority advocated taking energetic steps toward building the federated, as a mass movement thru which we could wield influence as a Communist vanguard and bring thousands upon thousands of workers under our influence, we were bitterly opposed by the Foster-Cannon group.

It is precisely this policy of trading with leaders, of yielding to their demands, of failure properly to apply the united front that did dominate and still dominates the majority's conception of this tactic in relation to the labor party movement. Since, in their labor party tactics, they never attempted to build the united front from the bottom, they imagine it cannot be achieved. That is why they visualize any movement for a farmer-labor party as the united front "from the top."

But because they themselves failed to carry out the united front from below is no good reason why they should accuse the Marxian group in the party of inability to apply this tactic correctly.

Error Still Prevails.

Because, in this election, the leaders of labor were able to swing the farmer-labor movement behind LaFollette the majority then proclaims to the world that LaFollette has swallowed the whole farmer-labor party movement. Again they see the actions of the leaders and fail to perceive the movement of the masses. Since the leaders went into the LaFollette camp the majority asserts that the movement has been annihilated, or that it will rest for a long time content with LaFollette, altho admitting in their thesis that industrial depression, which forms the economic basis for such movements, will intensify in the near future.

Here is revealed a faith in the ability of leaders to control whole movements that is appalling. The majority actually believes in the ability of leaders to divert the labor movement into channels at variance with the economic conditions in which it functions. The leaders have misled the workers into the LaFollette camp where they have been swallowed. This is proclaimed in the thesis of the majority. It is defended in their polemics.

In their thesis they assert that "1925 holds the prospect of repeating the experiences of 1920-21, when 6,000,000 workers were unemployed."

Majority Leninism.

The majority pays lip service to Leninism; always admonishing the members to Bolshevize the party. Yet the essense of Leninism is realism in a given situation. Every Marxist (and therefore every Leninist) knows that periods of industrial crises furnish the bases for the rise of working class political parties. We know that the workers, no longer able to achieve victories thru their trade unions, turn to parliamentary action, as long as they are under bourgeois-democratic illusions. This has been and is the case in every capitalist country in the world. Yet the majority, admitting that the crisis will intensify, admitting also that vast masses of farmers and workers did break away from the two old parties because of the prevailing economic conditions, claims that the workers will not in the future react to those conditions as they have in the past. No longer will a given economic condition produce a given reflex, but something entirely different.

And all this just because LaFollette has swallowed the whole movement!

In such a conception of historical movements there is not a scintilla of Marxism. With what withering scorn did Marx excoriate those participants in the February action of 1848 in Germany who explained their failure on the grounds that leaders had betrayed them. The important task is discovering how the betrayal was possible.

The political immaturity of the masses, the recent emerging of the United States from a predominantly agricultural country to a condition where the majority of the population are wage workers in industry, the weight of traditions of the past, the utter confusion between the third party movement and the labor party movement all are ignored or minimized. The workers fell for LaFollette and there they will remain.

The bete noire, the malignant monster, that has stifled the farmer-labor movement is LaFollette. This conception on the part of the majority is not accidental, nor is it new in their "theoretical" arsenal. It is the same erroneous notion that attributes the failure of the revolution in central Europe solely to the treachery of the leaders, while ignoring other factors, especially the war-exhaustion of the masses. So also is it part and parcel of that delusion that the pathetic condition of the American labor movement can be attributed to Daniel DeLeon's duel unionism. It is an individualistic non-Marxism conception of historical movements.

The Task of Leadership.

In such a situation as the present we have the real test of leadership. Are we, as Communists, going to stand aside and permit the same elements that led the workers into the LaFollette movement to maintain control over them? Shall we surrender the leadership for a class party of labor exclusively to them?

Here the Foster-Cannon group demogogically bellows: "There is already a class labor party—the Workers (Communist) Party."

Of course, we are a class party. We are the revolutionary party of the working class in this country, the party that must eventually secure leadership of the masses and lead them to the final overthrow of capitalism. But that does not mean there cannot also be a labor party composed of groups of workers that can be stamped as a distinctly class party. On a local scale the Buffalo labor party was such a party. Can anyone deny that it was a class party? Also did not our party function more effectively within it than ever before? No honest person can deny that! And our relation to that party was the same as our relation ought to be to a class farmer-labor party—we were the vanguard.

If the movement to revive the Buffalo labor-party now exists, can any one claim that it is not our duty to try to accelerate it? If the question comes up again should our comrades in the central labor council arise and invite the affiliated unions to join the Workers Party? To state the question is to realize its absurdity. That party was based upon trade unions; a group organization composed of members of the working class. Our party is a Communist Party based upon individual membership of those who accept our principles and program.

Thruout the nation there are many symptoms of breaks within the La-LaFollette movement. Many farmer-labor groups claim that LaFollette has disappointed them and helped no one and they are preparing for a break. If any appreciable number of such organizations break away, should not we, as the vanguard of the working class, endeavor to galvanize them into a class party? Must we wait, not, as a matter of Communist strategy, help them break.

To claim that just because they stand for a class labor-party they can also be brought into the Communist movement is absurd. They still suffer from a blind faith in the efficacy of parliamentary action; they still believe the capitalist state an instrument thru which they can achieve their aims. It is our mission to dispel these illusions. How are we to proceed about this task?

In their arguments the majority asserts that we will achieve this by participating exclusively in the various other applications of the united front and wait for the mass movement of the workers toward a farmer-labor party to develop. In plain words we, must wait until such a party is actually in process of formation, then we will take our places at the head of the procession and solemnly assure them we are their leaders—the vanguard. Such would be the second fiddle if we expected them to take our attitude seriously on such an occasion. Should we tell them we were waiting for them to discover the error of their way they would laugh at us. Yet that is the wonderful strategy of the majority in its attitude a puerile conception of Communism!

The function of a Marxian, a Leninist, leadership is to carefully analyze economic conditions—and be able to anticipate the movement of the masses in response to these conditions. Not to wait until the movement has developed spontaneously, but to understand its direction and endeavor to develop it along lines favorable to the revolutionary movement.

In the present controversy the minority can point to the fact that history is on our side and that the forces that are now developing in the womb of social forces in this country, will furnish the final refutation of the Foster-Cannon illusion, just as surely as the comet justified the contentions of the astronomers against the pope of Rome.

SAY RIGA—AND WE DOUBT!

Riga is in Latvia. It is here that we find one of the first outposts of the whites, the counter-revolutionaries who await the overthrow of Soviet Russia like a pack of hungry wolves.

It is the whites that inspire news dispatches that come from Riga. And so again, the other day, a Riga dispatch told us that the Soviet is alarmed at the Russian situation, that hard times and discontent may cause revolt.

FIND COMMUNIST LITERATURE AND ARREST 21 I. W. W.

Leaflet Was Issued by Workers Party

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—Receiving complaints that "school children were being urged to join the Communist International," thru the spreading of literature in the public schools, the police swooped down on the I. W. W. hall here and arrested 21 I. W. W. members.

They were charged with "vagrancy" and their bail was fixed at $1,000.

Leaflet Denounces Profit System.

Newspapers have been carrying eight-column front page headlines declaring that "Reds Invade San Francisco schools." "The extent of the Soviet plot against which authorities are fighting is indicated by the fact that an organization called the 'Young Workers' League' has been formed among school children" says the San Francisco Chronicle. This news has shoved President Coolidge off the front page.

The police here were angered that the Communists would dare to distribute literature denouncing the profit system and praising a government run by workers and farmers. They smashed in the doors of the Marine Transport Workers hall in spite of the fact that the I. W. W. had nothing to do with the distribution of the Communist "anti-Coolidge education week" program, and arrested 21 men who did not know what it was all about.

"The I. W. W. is trying to make the public schools a training school for their organization," said one of the school officials here. The police objected particularly to the fact that telegraph poles around the schools, according to their version, were plastered with posters advertising that "Mother Bloor" was going to speak on "How boys and girls of Russia live." The police were also incensed that Miss E. Bassi, was going to speak. Miss Bassi, it is admitted by the Mission High school dean, Miss Ada Goldsmith, is the star debater of the high school debating team.

The police, in a statement widely quoted thruout the Pacific coast, declare, "A plot for the spreading of Communism among the thousands of high school students in this city has been under investigation for weeks. There is an insidious campaign of handbills, posters and mass meetings. Scarehead Red literature has been found among school pupils.

Charge is "Vagrancy."

The 21 I. W. W. members, charged with "vagrancy," will be lined up before a committee of teachers from Mission, Galilee and other high schools "in an effort to identify the Reds who have been peddling anti-American handbills to school children." What this matter has to do with vagrancy the police did not say.

The leaflet which angered the police was issued by the Workers Party of America. Among the paragraphs objected to were the following. "Workers of the United States, do not permit Coolidge's American Education Week to fool you into believing that the constitution and American government exist to give you life, liberty, security and opportunity. They exist to make secure the right of the capitalists to exploit you and amass enormous fortunes out of your labor."

"The form of the workers government is not the form of the American constitution. The workers can rule only thru creating their own organ of government. The Soviet or workers' councils."

"The constitution stands for the rule of the capitalists, the Soviets stand for the rule of the workers—forward to the Soviets."

Miss Goldsmith kept her pupil Miss Bassi away from the meeing she was to address, it was learned later.

The police raids were made at the instance of Superintendent of Schools, Joseph M. Gwinn, the McAndrew of San Francisco.

The raiders damaged the headquarters of the Marine Transport Workers' Union, located at 84 Embarcadero.

British Pay $91,000,000.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Great Britain prepared today to make a payment of $91,000,000 to the United States as an installment on the four billion war debt.

HIGHER FOOD COSTS SHOW WHERE MONEY IN PAY ENVELOPE GOES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Wholesale prices of commodities averaged one-half of one per cent higher in November than in October, the department of labor announced today. They were higher than in November last year.

Food articles in November were 1½ per cent higher, due to increases in butter, coffee, eggs, cured and vegetable oils. Clothing materials, metals and chemicals and drugs also averaged more than 1 per cent higher than in October, while in the group of miscellaneous commodities, including such important articles as cattle feed, leather, wood pulp and wrapping paper, prices were 2½ per cent higher.

'COME OUT OF THE KITCHEN' RUSSIA CALLS TO WOMEN

Chain Restaurants Take Cities Like Wildfire

By ANISE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KIEV, Nov. 20.—(By Mail)—I had dinner yesterday at a narpiet, it cost me 17½ cents and it was a good dinner. Borscht, a nourishing cabbage soup with meat, then round beef balls with kasha, carrots and cabbage. All the bread I could eat thrown in.

And what is a narpiet? It is a government owned chain restaurant, which is attempting boldly to colonize with home cooking and so to raheom women from drudgery in the very inconvenient kitchens of Russia. The literal translation of its name means people's eating. There are hundreds of them already, sweeping like wildfire thru the Soviet Republic.

I saw the sign over an entrance to a court on the main street of Kiev. Back thru the court, up half a flight of stairs, I came to it—a large, light room well filled with people. Working people, most of them, from the obvious look of them. Tables covered with white cloths, and again with white paper.

Lenin Quotations on Wall.

As I was eating I looked up at the signs on the wall. "Every new general dining room is another argument for the social revolution," a quotation from Trotsky. And beside it these words from Lenin: "Housework is the most unproductive and primitive work which woman can do."

It was evident that this narpiet was founded on some general principle, so I went back to the director to ask about it. "Yes" he said, "we plan to compete with cafes, so that the man and wife and his whole family will find it easier to eat with us. At present many women who are working must come home and work for hours in the evening. In many other families, they eat only cold food all the time because of lack of time.

"Well Fed Workers" is Aim.

"Our first aim," said the manager of narpiet, "is to feed workers so that they shall be well fed and contented. Our next aim is to make it cheap. We get low taxes and low rents from the government, and cut our price so that it just covers cost of materials and wages, with a little over for upkeep and improvements. In this restaurant we feed 500 people a day; but we have only been running for three months. In England there are restaurants that feed thousands a day, but Russian workers are not used to eating in public eating places.

"There are now ten narpiets in Kiev and two tea houses, in many parts of the city."

"But," I protested, "yours is marked Dining-Room No. 1 on the sign, and you have only been running three months."

"Yes," he replied, "the others started only two months or even one month ago. We shall open several more this coming month." He explained that they did not take profits from one restaurant to open another, as this would make prices too high and unpopular. They got new capital for each restaurant.

Meals 15c at Factory Narpiets.

"The workers all over town are asking for them," he said, and when I asked for a list of the various narpiets, I found it was indeed a survey of the working life of Kiev. There was one at the Red Arsenal, and one at the electric station, and one near the Telegraphers' Club, and one at the Bolshevik steel factory, and one at the Lenin iron works, and one at the Red Army barracks, and one near a big shoe factory, and one at the Communist Party club. There was also one near the famous big bridge which was destroyed by the Polish invasion and is now being rebuilt; this narpiet serves the bridge workers. The two tea-houses in the center of town cater to office workers, serving tea, coffee, cocoa, pastry, cold meats and various lighter dishes.

"A new narpiet starts in this way. The workers of some factory send us a delegation saying that it is hard to go home for dinner and that they want a narpiet. If there is a room available in the factory itself, this is given to us free of rent. Very little capital is needed; this is subscribed by different government trusts and departments and unions. The meals in the factories cost only 15 cents, because we have no rent to pay."

"We intend to expand" he concluded, "to serve all the working class districts. In Russia they have had narpiets for a year now, but they have only begun in the Ukraine. They are going like wildfire."

'ZINOVIEV' NOTE FORGERY, SAYS UNION CHIEFS

Express Satisfaction with Soviet Progress

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, December 15.—The Trade Union Congress delegation to Russia in a telegram to the Daily Herald brands the "Zinoviev letter" a forgery. The message declares that the delegation was allowed to look over the confidential files of the Communist International. It reads as follows:

"The British delegation has had striking evidence of the bad impression produced by the arrogant tone of the British notes on official and public opinion in Russia.

"It is looked on here as an attempt to prevent any further impartial inquiry into the evidence of the authenticity of the Zinoviev letter, such as is justifiably desired by Russia.

"The delegation has gone into the matter with Zinoviev. He maintained strongly that the letter was a forgery, and actually placed at its disposal the confidential records of the Communist International.

"The delegation is bringing home the full results of its detailed investigations.

A Palpable Forgery.

"As a result, the delegation is absolutely satisfied that the document is a forgery, that no evidence of the contrary can be produced, and that the refusal of the Russian offer of arbitration can only be explained on that ground.

"The delegation is convinced from conversations with prominent members of the Russian government, that unless an impartial inquiry is accepted the conservative government will stand condemned in the eyes of all Russia as having used a forged document for party purposes.

Wants Good Relations.

"These conversations have also satisfied the delegation that the earnest desire of the Russian government for good relations with Great Britain would of itself preclude the possibility of any such aggressive action in the circumstances by the Communist international.

"Signed: John Bromley, Locomotive Engineers and Firemen; Allan Findlay, Patternmakers; Ben Tillett, Transport and General Workers; John Turner, Shop Assistants; Herbert Smith, Miners' Federation of Great Britain; A. A. Purcell, chairman of the delegation, and ex-chairman of the T. U. C.; Fred Bramley, secretary, Secretary to the General Council in the T. U. C."

Great Improvement.

The British delegates in letters to friends in this country express great enthusiasm over the improving conditions of the workers in Russia. While the Soviet government is making strenuous efforts to improve the workers' and peasants' standard of living, the tory government in England is threatening to make an assault on the trade unions by reviving the old law which held the unions responsible for the acts of individuals.

News that an Anglo-Russian committee for world trade union unity has been set up, is received with rejoicing in labor circles thruout England. The British delegates made it quite clear that they were out for real unity and would oppose placing any obstacles in the way of a united front of world labor to fight capitalism.

How We Live and Work

Editor's Note—This paper is printed for the workers, poor farmers and those who work and sweat under the present system of society. It is a paper of the workers, by the workers and for the workers. We want to reach every corner of this country where labor is being exploited for private gain for profit. We want the workers and farmers all over the country to read the DAILY WORKER. In order to make it more interesting and be able better to reflect the life of the wide laboring masses, WE WANT OUR READERS TO WRITE TO US. This new department "HOW WE LIVE AND WORK" will appear as often as there will be sufficient letters from our readers about the life and working conditions under which our masses struggle. Try to make the letters interesting bringing out facts which may not be known to workers in other sections of the country. Try to make them short and to the point.

How They Put Over "Cal".

To the DAILY WORKER: We, workers of the steel mills, are already beginning to feel the effect of the election of "Silent Cal Coolidge," but not as the press of big business says. We are not getting more work or more money, but we are getting laid off in hundreds or being put on slack time more than before the election. About two weeks before the balloting took place, there came a great rush of work in the mills here, and they started hiring to beat the band. In one section alone they hired from two to three hundred men between the three shifts which they work in that section.

Told Must Vote for "Cal."

A few days after these men had started, a meeting was called. It was supposed to be a safety first meeting, but in reality it was a political one. One speaker got up and gave the usual line of bull about "Silent Cal" and attacked the "reds." Of course Foster came in for a good bit of it, but the climax came when when the general manager got up and stated quite plainly that if the men wanted to work in that mill they had better vote for "Cal." He stated that the mill would shut down if any of the other candidates got in but that there would be work for all and some to spare if Coolidge got in.

Well, Coolidge got in, but did we have the promised work? No. A great change came over that place. Everything went slow, furnaces were shut down and the second day after the election the foreman called all the men together and told them that he would have to lay off all the new men, the reason given was that they had not produced good work and that the company had lost a bunch of orders thrue bad work. None of these new men were on jobs where they could have done bad work. That part of the work left to the older men, some with twenty-five and thirty years experience. The new men were loading cars and doing all kinds of laboring work, so that shows how foolish their excuse was.

Cut in Wages Certain Jan. 1.

There is a lot of talk here that the company is going to cut down the wages at the beginning of the new year which to me seems very probable, owing to a statement made by the superintendant at another safety meeting that they had orders, but were waiting developments which were to take place at the begining of the new year. He also told the new men to come around at that time as he may need them. These two statements make it look very probable that there will be a reduction in wages. The fact that he will have a bunch of men outside the gates ready in case some of the slaves will kick over the traces will help them to do as they please.

After making the above statements a great appeal was made to us to be willing and obedient workers. While we are in the mills we should put out every ounce of energy for the sake of the company. That they were our great benefactors. Some benefactors—workers have been taking home $12.00 a week for last three months, previous to the gigantic bluff which they pulled off just before.

Slave for Bare Existence

There are about twenty young men working here who fought in the "War to End War" and now they have to fight for food and clothes for their wives for children as I don't believe they can live on what they get here. These men are doing the work of three. In one section (The Mine Lie Section) there used to be 15 men working. Now there are only six and these men are forced to do the same amount of work as the full crew used to do. Of course if you don't do it they tell you to get out, as they could get somebody who could do it, and they keep the men scared with this threat of throwing them out of work.

Worker Maimed and Thrown Out

Another thing that goes to prove that their idea of safety is all bunk. One of the workers had cut his fingers very badly. He had to attend the company hospital for treatment. He was allowed to go from his place of work. The rule is that no worker shall lose any time with an injury unless he is almost dead. Well the worker had just came back from getting his fingers treated, when the foreman ordered him to go into a box car and load splice bars, each load weighs about twenty pounds. The worker refused to do this as the load was too heavy for his fingers. He could lift nothing with his sore hand. The foreman reported him to the superintendent, who fired him straight away.

Doctors Work for Company.

The worker went to get the doctors' word to prove that he was not fit for that work, but he was not quick enough, the phone had been at work before he got there. He was told by the doctors that his hand was fit and that he had been declared off the hospital books that morning, despite the fact that they had told him that morning to be sure to report every morning for the next week. That man has been thrown out on the streets with a ruined hand which will take three months in the least to set, that is, if nothing else set in. Besides a doctor bill of about $200.00. I do not know whether he is married or not, but then if he is, God (?) will take care of his wife and children. It is a common thing to see men get fired here and not know what for.

Wounded Must Work

The sight of the parade of injured that go into the works every morning is the most cruel sight that one could wish to see. Men who should be at home resting their injuries have to struggle into work to lay around for eight hours doing nothing with no rest for their bodies, just so there won't be any lost time cases in the mill. I have seen an ambulance car go for men who live a good distance away to fetch them to work, that is the reason why the accident lists of the steel works are so low. They try to make use of that for anti-union propaganda. We get figures given to us every week, of how many deaths and accidents took place when it was unionized and how many there is now. You no doubt will guess that their record will win, tho that the union had to do with their accident list I have yet to find out. I believe that if we could only get the correct figures for now and twenty years ago there would not be much difference in the toll of workers lives going to make the profits for the parasite class. Here is hoping we will soon get a real workers' government.

Gompers' Successor

The capitalist and reformist press is greatly exercised over the choice of a successor to Gompers, but we Communists are not so interested in the individual who will step into the dead man's shoes, as we are in the fact that, whoever he may be, he will continue the policy of class collaboration and servility to imperialism that makes of the A. F. of L. machine the most reactionary combination with a labor label in the whole world.

There is not a single official among those from whom the next president of the American Federation of Labor will come but that is as wholly reactionary as Gompers was. There is not a single member of the official family that does not worship at the shrine of American capitalism, not a single one that is not against the doctrine of class struggle, not a single one that is not as devoted an upholder of the existing order as Gary or Rockefeller.

From this precious crew the workers of America can hope for nothing but betrayal—betrayal studied and constant. The officialdom of the American Federation of Labor has embarked upon a conscious policy of imperialist activity that expands in proportion to the aggressions of the American ruling class.

The American labor movement was left by Gompers at the bottom of the pit. It can sing no lower but it will continue to play the role of watchdog for American imperialism at home and in the subjugated nations. There is no successor to Gompers that will make the slightest effort to change this role.

The only result that may come from a change in individual leadership is that internal rivalries and dissensions, a struggle for power among the bureaucrats, may disrupt the official machinery and make it less efficient. There may set in a process of decay that the aged but firm hand of Gompers was able to check.

The tendency in the American Federation of Labor is towards closer unity of the most reactionary sections internally and internationally towards unity with other reactionary groups in the Amsterdam International. It would not be surprising therefore if the railway brotherhoods came into the A. F. of L. to consolidate behind the successor to Gompers a solid bloc of the labor aristocracy that would tend to make the A. F. of L. a more efficient instrument of imperialism.

These then are the two possibilities—a struggle for leadership that may weaken the bureaucracy or a compromise that will line up the most backward elements in the organized labor movement.

The latter is the more probable because American imperialism needs the A. F. of L. to block the rise of a fighting labor movement.

The task of the left wing organized around the Workers (Communist) Party will not be changed by a change of leadership of the trade unions. Its task of breaking the grip of reaction on the organized workers may be made easier by a weak successor to Gompers, but back of him, whoever he may be, there will stand the full power of American capitalism.

The Capitalist Assassins

The attempt to assassinate Leonid Krassin, Soviet ambassador to France, was dismissed by the capitalist press with very scanty notice. But the news that filtered into the papers from Paris sought to justify the act of the would-be murderer by mixing the news of the attempted assassination with a hash of atrocity yarns supposed to have been seen by the female killer. A similar effort was made to justify the dope fiend who murdered Comrade Voritsky in Switzerland.

While the capitalist press indulged in an orgy of big headlines over the imaginary "red plots" that convulsed the panicky French bourgeoisie, and pointed out the coincidence of these "plots" with the arrival of the Soviet envoy, dismissed the assassination plot, a very real thing, as a matter of no importance. It did not happen to suit their main purpose, which is defaming Soviet Russia.

The capitalists will never let up in their fight against Soviet Russia. The workers' republic stands as a perpetual challenge to the dark forces of capitalism. They try mass force and they try starvation and the boycott. They are not beyond using the assassin's dagger and the bullet.

But all their attempts will fail. Behind the Soviet government there is the immense power of the millions of workers and peasants while within each capitalist nation there are in reality two nations, the capitalists on one side and the workers on the other. It is this fact that stands like a dreaded ghost over the couch of the bourgeoisie. It is this fact that is responsible for their panic, which manifests itself in "red raids" and assassination plots against the leaders of the workers' revolution all over the world.

Proud of Their Treachery

Fritz Ebert, socialist president of capitalist Germany, is growing offensive to the monarchist and extreme nationalist elements of that country, now that they are somewhat less nervous over the inner political situation than they were at any time since the defeat of the imperial armies on the western front in 1918 sent the kaiser on an extended pilgrimage to Holland.

In justice to Ebert, it must be said that he has done his level best to serve his masters and it must also be admitted that he pulled out of a nasty hole when he and his party prevented the German workers from following in the footsteps of their Russian comrades and erecting a Soviet Republic on the ruins of capitalism in 1918. But the big capitalists and landowners of Germany, like their prototypes in England, do not consider gratitude a serviceable virtue. Ebert having, in their opinion at least, outlived his usefulness as a decoy duck with which to deceive the masses, they decided to confer the order of the boot on him.

The monarchists charge the socialists with having aided the munition strikes in 1918 and thus helping to defeat the German armies. To this charge Ebert and Scheidemann enter vigorous denial, offering proof that the executive committee of the social-democratic party refused to support the munitions workers' strike and urged them to obey the conscription laws. In order to completely knock out the monarchist charges, Ebert read a letter from Von Hindenburg, praising the socialists for their services to the kaiser during the war.

After reading the letter, Ebert leaned back with a satisfied smile on his greasy countenance. In the face of such a recommendation from the leader of the German armies during a period of the war, what more could be said in the way of testimony to the loyalty of the yellow socialists to the German plunderbund and their treachery to the German working class?

And it is because Ebert is showing his true face more and more to the workers as their enemy that his usefulness to the big capitalists is decreased. The evidence that may acquit him of the charge of treason to the German government during the war, will automatically convict him of treason to the German working class.

Democracy at Its Best

Those who glorify American pure democracy usually do so with considerable volume of speech. Nearly every effort made by these defenders of the most notorious fraud in existence aims to hide the real character of our emloying class dictatorship behind a smoke screen of meaningless abstractions.

The loyal lackeys of our capitalist system are especially vociferous in their praise of the extension of American democracy as a civilizing force among the so-called backward colonial peoples.

We have in mind a genuine manifestation of the kind of democracy our ruling class transports to the economically weaker lands. We have in mind the last election in Porto Rico. American sugar interests and Yankee tobacco interests have for many years been raising havoc with the will of the mass of Porto Ricans. Even the slightest pretense at liberalism in politics was bitterly fought by our capitalist group. The matter has now assumed a character which is forcing the Porto Ricans, even the meekest of them, to protest vehemently.

In Washington, the headquarters of our bosses' democracy, the Porto Ricans have established a protest committee. These Porto Ricans are still illusioned as to the place where they can get help for their national freedom. Their statement characterizes the last election in Porto Rico as reeking with "fraud, violence, corruption and wholesale robbery." These elections held on November 4 are branded as "the greatest outrage upon American citizenship ever committed."

Washington is the last place on earth where these wrongs will be righted. Washington is the city where all the criminals who perpetrated the ghastly crimes against the Porto Rican masses draw their inspiration. If the Porto Ricans ever hope to win national freedom they will have to fight to the bitter end against those who dominate Washington. They will have to ally themselves with the working and poor farming masses of this country who are fighting the very same enemy.

The sham of American democracy is a menace to the workers at home as well as the masses abroad.

Insuring "The Daily"

Comrade Alfred Wagenknecht, who is on tour for The DAILY WORKER campaign to raise funds so that it can be developed into a bigger and better paper in 1925, is meeting with success. At a meeting of Workers Party locals in Youngstown, Ohio, representing a membership of 308, one thousand dollars was pledged and this money is to be paid to the DAILY WORKER within thirty days.

This enthusiasm for our daily is typical. From every section of the country our members are rallying in a most satisfactory manner to the call of the Central Executive Committee to make the DAILY WORKER campaign the first order of business at all Workers Party meetings. The increase in circulation made by the first Communist daily in the English language since it was founded and particularly during the election campaign, is a healthy sign and proves that with more effort our paper can become a tremendous weapon for bringing the message of Communism to the masses. It is the best weapon in our arsenal for making contact with the masses. Get behind it.

Organize the Party - -

By Wm. Z. Foster

In these days of intense party discussion on the theses of the C. E. C. and the minority we must not overlook the important task of building our organization. On the contrary, we should take advantage of the situation by bringing to the forefront the necessity of bending every effort towards building the Workers Party in a mass Communist party. The task of getting new members should be one that is never lost sight of.

In the program of action, which was adopted unanimously by the C. E. C several months ago, and printed in pamphlet form, one of the most important items was exactly this strengthening of our party membership. The program of action proposed that in every unit of the party there should be membership committees created. This was intended to be taken seriously by our party and it should be put into effect everywhere. Up to date, however, most of the branches have not given this vital matter the attention that it deserves.

Another principle of the program of action was that the mere creation of committees to carry out certain functions, such as membership committees to get members, was not sufficient. These committees had to be made to function. Hence, at every branch meeting a call should be made upon the membership committee to make a report of its activities. In case the committee does not function liver elements should be injected into it. Under no circumstances should it be alowed to degenerate into a paper organization. The life of such committees depends upon demands being made upon them for results.

The Communist International has emphasized time and again that the great task before the Workers Party is to build itself into a mass Communist party. The Workers Party fully aware of this necessity, has likewise repeatedly urged the members to give this matter of getting new members more consideration. One of the leading points to be borne in mind in the membership campaign is to utilize all our party movements around the varous slogans for the securing of new members for the Workers Party. It is not enouge simply to advocate class political action, amalgamation, organization and relief for the unemployed and the other various campaigns of the Workers Party. The very essence of these is that they shall be utilized for the building of the Workers Party if we fail to use them for this purpose, we fail in our Communist duty.

We must build our membership. An increased strength to the party means greater power in every direction. And the material is at hand for us to do this building. There are large numbers of close sympathizers who should be brot into our party, there are many former members who have allowed themselves to drop out for various reasons. The available elments amongst these should be brot into the party. Every worker has a circle of friends. He should carry out a systematic campaign to bring them to our party. Our slogan should be "Every Member Get a Member." Just a little activity in this direction by the masses of the rank and file will mean a tremendous strengthening of the Workers Party in every direction. Let us therefore put on the first order of business in all or acitivies the constant and systematic building up of the Workers Party into a mass Communist party.

CAL SCHEMES TO FORESTALL VOTE ON POSTAL RAISE

Higher Rates for 2nd Class Mail Subterfuge

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 15.—President Coolidge is working hard to prevent a vote recurring in the senate on the bill providing pay increases for postal employes, which he vetoed.

It is known that the vetoed bill is likely to pass over Coolidge's veto, and in order to forestall a vote, Coolidge held a conference with two favorable senators.

New Takes Fight Out of Senate.

Postmaster General New is trying to rescue Coolidge from this political pinch by advocating advances in postal rates on second class mail. The newspapers of the country are protesting against this increase, however, and it is hoped by Coolidge backers to keep the discussion going until it is too late to take a vote.

Coolidge told the senators that he fears another attempt will be made to arrange a date for voting on the bill increasing the postal employes' salaries. Coolidge is not going to raise their pay if he can help it.

Senators Reed of Missouri and Dill of Washington blocked an attempt to postpone vote on the bill until January 5, charging it was "subterfuge attempting to prevent the senate from overriding the president's veto."

150,000 Workers in New York Lose Jobs Since October, 1923

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 15.—About 150,000 workers who were on the payrolls of factories in New York state in October 1923 are on the streets looking for work today, according to the November employment report of industrial commissioner, Shientag. His report shows that changes in employment since September have been merely seasonal with no effective break in the depression which hit wage earners in the spring.

Shientag's statement contains a chart which shows that this employment slump which reached the low point in July and August was far more serious than has generally been admitted by the capitalist press. The line falls rapidly from a level nearly 3 per cent above the average of 1923 to a level more than 15 per cent below that average. This represents a 12-month decline of about 17½ per cent.

Factory employment in New York state, says Shientag, showed practically no change in volume from October to November. The usual seasonal decreases in some lines tended to effect improvements in textiles, wood manufacture and some metals.

Changes of importance noted in the report are increase of 1,500 employed by railroad equipment manufacturers; reporting to the commissioner; gains of several hundred workers in both textile and furniture industries; addition of 1,500 in the last two months to the forces employed by steel mills in the vicinity of Buffalo; decrease of 1,500 in sugar factories; and layoffs in the clothing industry including more than 1,000 workers in the women's garment trades.

British Miners Defend 7-Hour Day.

LONDON.—Not a chance in the world of getting the Miners' Federation of Great Britain to give up the 8-hour day, declares Gen. Secy. A. J. Cook. Before the employers can restore the 8-hour day there will be the fiercest strike in the history of British mining, Cook promises. When the contract expires in June 1925 the miners will demand continuance of the 7-hour day with increased wages.

GOVERNMENT IS URGED TO DEPORT LASSEN, HUNGARIAN COMMUNIST, TO DIE AT HANDS OF HORTHY

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The United States government, which recently made a loan to the Horthy fascist government, is now ready to assist that government once more.

The defeat of the Hungarian proletarian revolution in 1919 was followed by a government which began a systematic campaign to root out, not only the Communists, who had led the revolution, but every working class organization. Horthy's regime has been one of blood.

The heel of the dictator—whose government is under the control of the league of nations—has been felt by every member of the working class who showed any militancy.

The Communists did not cease their activity in behalf of the oppressed workers. Many of them were shot, many sent to prison for long terms. Many of them were forced to flee from the white guards, who hounded them all over Europe. The trade unionists were persecuted: all the active workers were terrorized. The social-democrats worked openly with the government, denouncing the Communists and revolutionary workers.

Among the active workers in this period of the history of the Hungarian working class movement was John Lassen. Lassen was not a man of words alone—he was a man of deeds. As a consequence, he was forced to flee from Hungary and came to the United States. The Horthy fascist government would like to put its hands on Lassen, for since his coming here he has been active in editorial work, being editor of the Uj Elore, the Communist Hungarian paper. This paper has helped to keep the revolutionary movement alive in Hungary, at a time when all Communist and revolutionary papers were forbidden. Hence the Horthy government hates and fears Lassen. The Uj Elore has also been most effective in revolutionizing the Hungarian workers in the United States and bringing them into close touch with the Communist movement. For this reason the Uj Elore and its editor, John Lassen, are hated by the capitalist-controlled American government.

No wonder, therefore, that the American government scouts at an opportunity to stop Lassen's effective work both in the United States and in Hungary. Horthy would like to lay his hands on Lassen—it seems there is no friend more willing to help him in this case than the United States government.

Just before the elections, Lassen wrote a poem on the significance of the ballot. Lassen is a poet known on both continents. For the content of this poem Lassen was arrested and now stands before the capitalist court charged with stirring the masses to violence. This looks like a trick of the government, playing hand in hand with the Horthy fascist government.

The Hungarian workers in the United States know what Lassen means to the revolutionary movement of this country. This is a matter, however, that affects not only the Hungarian workers, but the WHOLE American working class. LASSEN MUST BE DEFENDED BEFORE THE CAPITALIST COURT. The American workers must demonstrate that neither the capitalist class of the United States nor the fascist dictatorship of Hungary can make a victim of John Lassen. This case must be fought thru the courts—but that will mean a large sum of money if Lassen is to be saved for further work in the labor movement. If the government succeeds in convicting Lassen, it will be easier for them in the future to intimidate and persecute the revolutionary and labor press of this country.

The workers Party calls upon all revolutionary workers and sympathizers with the militant and revolutionary labor movement of this country to assist in the defense of this comrade. Thousands of dollars will be required—hence every worker and militant in the labor movement must assist. The legal defense of Comrade Lassen is being handled by the Labor Defense Council. Skilled Workers Fill Unemployment Lines in Tacoma, Wash.

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 15.—Unemployment has increased sharply here. An average of 500 unemployed workers seeks jobs in the city-state free employment office daily. This does not include the hundreds who wait at the gates of factories and sawmills in this town every morning.

The Todd steel shipyard recently closed down, throwing nearly 1,000 skilled men out of work.

Views of Our Readers

To The DAILY WORKER:—As a worker like millions of others under the capitalist system, who go from place to place with the jobs, I was lucky enough to secure a job around Oakridge, Oregon on a construction job.

All I want to write about is something of the officials of the I. W. W, or rather the anarchists who work inside the I. W. W. whom I consider the most reactionary element in the class struggle. I do not mean to say anything about the members of the I. W. W., as they are as good as any workers anywhere. But I do dare to speak against the editor of the Industrial Worker, whom Harrison George rightly calls the "funny editor."

If you get the Industrial Worker for November 15, you will find on the first page an article entitled "Camps on the Natron were hell holes." In that it says:

"Trouble has also come because of the greed of the steam shovel men who are continually seeking overtime. These men are organized in the A. F. of L. and have what they call a basic 8-hour day, but these steam shovelers in every camp asked for overtime, and if they are once responsible for the 10-hour day on the Natron Cutoff. It was impossible to give them their overtime and not have the muckers work longer shifts. Do these steam shovel men believe in the 8-hour day?"

In this, as in other things, the editor of the Industrial Worker is lying. The trouble did not come because some of the workers have been working overtime thereby forcing other to do the same. There were on this job and working overtime not only non-union men, but members of the I. W. W. also working overtime and anxious to do so.

When I asked some of the members of the I. W. W. "Why do you go out of the camps, fellow workers, before the time?" And when I told some of them, "Come, sit down here, wait for the time to come." Then a fellow worker whose name I give here as Pete Merry, told me, "It's none of your business."

Now you can see who is acting like the A. F. of L.

Yours for the Workers Party.—S. G. G.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

ENRICO TRAMONTI, first harpist of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, made his annual appearance with the orchestra on the regular program of Dec. 12 and 13. He played a chorale and variations by Charles Marie Widor. No week ever goes by without some new organist in a church of God playing one of this man Widor's mediocre symphonies for organ. He is still grinding them out, but he occasionally changes the instrumentation a bit, as in this harp work. Mr. Tramonti surely could have picked something better to play.

Ferruccio Busoni died last July. As a memorial to him Mr. Stock opened this program with the Italian musician's "Berceuse Elegiaque," a lullaby sung by a man at the coffin of his mother. Busoni's treatment of the theme is quite simple and severe but conveys in a deeply affecting way the sense of the stillness and the majesty of death. The only work that comes near to it in power of expression is Rachmaninov's "Island of the Dead."

Busoni was one of the great men of the day, and his passing is greatly to be regretted. As a pianist, arranger and editor, teacher and composer his ability was preeminent.

A new suite in four movements called "From Finland," by Selim Palmgren was given its first Chicago performance on this occasion. The music as indicated by the titles of each movement, ("Spring Dreams," "Minuet in Popular Style," "Dance of the Falling Leaves," and "Sleigh Ride") is anything but the work of an over brilliant imagination. The suite might be really more effective if arranged for piano solo.

Music with a social significance is Alfredo Casella's Italian rhapsody which wound up the program. Casella did not take a couple of dance tunes and shove them at us as representative of his country as he took a grim, acrid tune of the slaves who work in the sulphur mines of Sicily, a hopeless, beseeching prayer of fishermen and a pitiful little melody sung by the women who work in marble quarries near Palermo and built up an opening slow movement on them. And the rhapsody winds up with a brilliant use of the Neapolitan song "Funicull-Funicula" and as it never has been handled before. This rhapsody is one of the big contributions of the new Italian school.

The Beethoven eighth was the symphony of the week. And that is too well known to require comment here.

HUMAN EMOTIONS.
Book Review.

"Crime, Its Biology and Psychology" by Duren J. H. Ward, is a little pamphlet which undertakes to explain the true nature of crime and the reason why crimes are committed. Ward's purpose in writing of this booklet was advocating prison reforms. He argues that the criminal instead of being locked up in our present form of prisons, should be removed from the society whose laws he violated to an institution which is an organized society of its inmates and undertakes to train men how to function as citizens in an organized society. As soon as he enters this new "society" he is at once to be made a responsible participant in its civic duties and social functions.

The pamphlet insofar as it is scientific contains a valuable analysis of human instincts, their influence on behavior under normal conditions and how extreme emotions cause perversions. For instance, the instinct of feeding is expressed in chewing, the usual feeling is appetite, but the extreme emotion of that instinct is gluttony. The instinct of roving is expressed by migration, the usual feeling is wanderlust. The extreme emotion is vagabondism.

Anyone interested in psychology will find this pamphlet a handbook of useful information.

RICH WIDE BIG LOOT FOR XMAS

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

INGENUITY is by no means a monopoly of the circulation departments of the capitalist papers. The latter have regularly helped to drive their readers crazier than usual, with their cross word puzzles and other crooked stunts. The object is to get advertising. That "the end justifies the means" is supposed to be the wicked slogan of the Jesuits. Not a bad slogan in a period when dead ones are so popular. But the circulation manager of the DAILY WORKER translated this slogan into action, which is the only way to treat a slogan. Having your curiosity sufficiently aroused by now, I shall let you in on the secret.

EVERY subscriber to the DAILY WORKER and every member of the Workers Party is provided with a tool box. Not a heavy load to carry, just the kind of a tool box that will work wonders in getting subs for our daily. It is nothing more nor less than a neat little red book with a significant picture on the outside of each cover, and on the inside a calendar, important dates in the history of the international working class movement and high spots in the history of the American labor and revolutionary movements.

IN this little "tool box" you have 1 subscription blanks for the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Monthly, application blanks for membership in the Workers Party, space for addresses and telephone numbers and a little pocket in which to carry your membership cards, in the party or in your union. It strikes me as being a very useful weapon for the live wires who are building up the greatest labor daily published in the English language and in doing that are building up the labor movement. Every reader of the DAILY WORKER should carry this "tool box" with him and use it. The supply is unlimited.

"OUR leader is gone" shrieks the Seattle Union Record in an editorial commenting on the death of Samuel Gompers. That is right. After all, Gompers was the leader of that type of fake progressive. Silk purses cannot be made from sows' ears and the difference between most of our erstwhile progressives and Gompers was a difference in the degree or method. The editorial ends with: "He devoted his life to labor's cause. May he rest in peace." Amen! At least we hope he does not pull off a resurrection. We have had enough of him.

TODAY the capitalist press shed gallons of inky tears over the death of Gompers. But at times, when the labor chief made some play that the capitalists did not understand, they were not so enthusiastic about him. One of Sam's favorite gags was to defy injunctions and then forget about them. He never forgot to brag about the famous Buck Stove and Range case, when, by heck, he almost went to jail and, goldarnit, was perfectly willing to go." But he did not. These fiery words were the necessary introduction to a later counsel of surrender, in case any group of workers took Sam seriously and started out to fight the injunction.

GOMPERS was here in Chicago in the early part of this year beefing about an injunction that was levelled against the members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by the clothing bosses. Sam came, talked, smoked several cigars and went away. The injunction held, hundreds of members of the union were clubbed and sent to jail. The Tribune now vies with the yellow socialist press in showering tributes on the departed labor lieutenant, but only a year ago it threw several harpoons into the old faker's side, not because he was too reactionary, of course, but because his

CLAIM ALL U. S. WILL BE HIT BY AN ALASKAN COLD WAVE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—For the first time in many years, the entire United States, from the Pacific to the Atlantic, is to suffer simultaneously from extremely cold weather, the United States weather bureau announced today.

The cold wave, coming down out of Alaska, has already struck the Pacific northwest, and will move slowly across the country during the next two days.

SIX BURNED TO DEATH IN N. Y. EAST SIDE FIRE

Blaze Takes Big Toll in Night Disaster

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Six persons were burned to death, two of them women and four men, in a mysterious fire which swept thru a five story tenement at 13 East 98th Street early today. Five others are missing.

Charred Beyond Recognition.

Edward Russell, 64, tenant on the fifth floor, was positively identified. Of the other dead the police said they believed two of them to be Miss Ida Goldberg, who had been living with a family on the fourth floor, and Mrs. Minnie McShane, whose husband is a prison turnkey. Other bodies, they police said, were charred beyond recognition.

There were 50 or more tenants in the building. Authorities said they were unable to account for a considerable number of these.

Tried to Escape.

It was tragically evident, as the police searched the charred structure for victims, that the tenants had made desperate efforts to escape after the alarm of fire had been sounded, for all bodies except that of a woman, were found in the hallways. The body of the woman was discovered in the McShane apartment on the fifth floor. The police believe that she was suffocated by smoke.

Dies in Long Plunge.

From the roof of an adjoining structure firemen saw a man hanging from the sill of a fifth floor window. Below him was a vacant lot. A life rope was let down to him and the firemen called to him to knot it about his waist. Instead of doing this he grasped the rope and started to climb hand over hand to the roof. Already seriously burned, and his strength weakened by hanging to the window sill, he had climbed only a few feet when his grasp on the rope loosened and he plunged to the ground. He was killed.

The body was partly identified as that of a man whose name was Russell. His sister, Mrs. Anne Nugent and her three children, Barbara, 12, Antonette, 22, and Fred, 16, made their way to the ground down a fire escape. Mrs. Nugent and her son were slightly burned.

Tried to Save Insurance Papers.

Mrs. McShane, believed to be one of the dead women, would be alive, her husband said, had she not gone back to get fire insurance papers which were in their rooms. McShane said he, his wife and their two children, Florence and William, 12 and 17, fled in their night clothes to the fire escape. Once outside, and with safety at hand, McShane said that his wife suddenly remembered that insurance policies covering their furniture were in a tin box in their room.

For a time there was a near-panic among patients in the Mount Sinai hospital nearby. Nurses and interns went from room to room, reassuring patients that there was no danger, and pulling down window shades so the patients could not see the fire.

Investigation by the authorities revealed that the fire started in the room of Joseph Ackerman, a lodger in an apartment on the ground floor.

FOSTER RAN SECOND WITH THESE FARMERS OUT IN NORTH DAKOTA

That the poor farmers are not afraid of voting for the Communists under their right name and their own banner and will give the Workers Party their support as against LaFollette, is indicated by the report from Comrade W. J. Husa, branch secretary at Belden, North Dakota.

Comrade Husa writes: "In this county of Mountrail, only 48 votes were found for Foster, and we believe that it is correct. Of that number Sikes township, where this Inland town is located, the vote was as follows: LaFollette, 36; Foster, 29; Coolidge, 3; Davis, none. This isn't so bad at that.—Signed, W. J. Husa."

SEND HATHAWAY, COMMUNIST, TO LABOR COUNCIL

Machinists Do Not Fear Gompers' Terror

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 16.—C. A. Hathaway, district organizer of the Workers Party, was unanimously re-elected as a delegate from the Machinists' Union, local 91, to the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Council after that body rejected Hathaway solely on the grounds that he is a Communist.

Vote Confidence in Hathaway.

The union approved a statement, drawn up by a committee of three, expressing complete confidence in Comrade Hathaway.

When Hathaway at first presented his credentials, Paul Smith, "special representative of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor," refused to seat Comrade Hathaway.

Smith overrode the will of the large majority of the delegates present who wanted to seat Comrade Hathaway. Smith threatened to revoke the charter of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly if Hathaway were seated.

Can Only Revoke Charter.

Smith admitted there is no rule of the A. F. of L. by which he could legally prevent Hathaway from being seated. He declared: "The American Federation of Labor has no authority or regulation which can be used to prevent the seating of any delegate elected from any local union, but we can revoke the charter of the central body as a last resort."

Finding that the Minneapolis trade unionists resent his uncalled interference, Smith is planning to wreck, if possible, the entire organized labor movement of the city.

Hopes to Exclude Militants.

Smith plans, it is declared, in following out Gompers' policy of retaining the conservative rule at all costs, to revoke the charter, and re-organize the assembly, excluding the most virile elements which either belong to the Workers Party or are favorable to the Communists.

MINERS OF SOUTHERN ILLINOIS WORK TWO DAYS A WEEK AND GIVE ONE DAY'S PAY TO DAILY WORKER

The coal miners of Southern Illinois are responding heroically to the campaign to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. Unemployment has prevailed in the mid-western coal fields almost continuously for the past two years.

Workers who are digging coal only one or two days a week are sending a day's wages to their working class daily newspaper. Coal miners who have been out of work for many months have pledged a part of their first pay to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

The following is a typical letter from Andrew Young, O'Fallon, Illinois, and demonstrates that the coal miners are determined to make the DAILY WORKER a better and bigger fighter for the workers next year.

Pledges First $5 to DAILY.

Editor of the DAILY WORKER:—I am the sorriest man in this country today because I am not in a position to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925, with a policy of $10.00.

On account of the representatives of the coal operators who are at the head of the Mine Workers' Union, I have been denied the right to make a living all over the state of Illinois.

I have been unemployed since the middle of March. But I here pledge the first $5.00 I make to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. A better weapon to kill the capitalist system does not exist.

Andrew Young, coal miner from Local Union 706.

THE INCENDIARY

CONGRESS speaks of Peace, and Coolidge speaks of Peace, but only to cover their preparations for war. The naval appropriation of $140,000,000 for warships is made both in anticipation and in provocation of the deadly universal "War of the Pacific," which Wall Street intends shall mean the military conquest of the world by American capital.

U. S. WAR DEPT. MOURNING FOR SAM GOMPERS

Recognizes His "Conspicuous Service"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 16.—Samuel Gompers came back to Washington yesterday, Washington the scene of many betrayals of labor to the interests of capital.

The body arrived at 3:15 p. m. and was taken to the Federation building where it laid in state until night, when it was removed to New York City.

Altho the capitalist government itself pretends to be taking no part, a military guard of honor, composed of a sergeant and ten soldiers, was ordered to accompany the body thru the streets of Washington yesterday.

The War Department Weeps.

"In recognition of his conspicuous war service and at the request of officers of the A. F. of L.," said a statement issued by the war department, "the war department has detailed a sergeant and ten men to guard the remains of the late President Samuel Gompers from the union station to the headquarters of the A. F. of L. and on the return to the station."

Artillery and Labor Fakers.

In New York City, the program now provides that when the body arrives over the "D. & O." at 7 a. m. today, it will be met by a composite battalion, representing the army, the navy and the national guard.

The bronze casket will be placed on an artillery caisson and with its military escort, and a delegation of labor officials will proceed to the Elks' club on West 43rd street. There it will lie in state until the funeral services begin at 9 a. m. Thursday.

Assorted Sky Pilots.

Masonic services at the grave in Sleepy Hollow cemetery, at Tarrytown, will be conducted by the Very Rev. Oscar F. R. Treder, chaplain of the grand lodge of the state of New York and dean of the Pro-Cathedral at Garden City. St. Cecile lodge No. 560, the actors' and newspaper men's lodge of this city, is in charge of the service and the Elks' ritual.

Play Hairy Ape in Moscow.

NEW YORK.—The Hairy Ape, Eugene O'Neill's play of the stokehole of a ship, has been playing in the Kamerny Theater of Moscow, according to the management of the Provincetown theater.

RED FLAG OF SOVIETS RAISED OVER RUSSIAN EMBASSY IN FRANCE

PARIS, Dec. 16.—The Red Flag of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics was raised over the Russian embassy.

Leonard Krassin, the Soviet Russian ambassador, made the principal speech. Every citizen of Soviet Russia residing in Paris was present, Krassin announced. The red flag was raised to the tune of the "Internationale" played by a large band. A crowd gathered to watch the ceremonies, but was dispersed by the police.

HUTCHESON'S PLOT TO DROP CARPENTERS

The reactionary henchmen of President Hutcheson and District President Harry Jensen in Carpenters' Union No. 181 are in such desperate straits that they appealed to the international headquarters in Indianapolis for somebody to help them conduct their meetings on the ground that the action of the membership of the local prevents them from conducting the business of the organization.

The troubles of these fakers began when they had several members of the union expelled for signing a resolution protesting against the signing of a scab agreement by Hutcheson and Jensen which allowed for the use of scab material by the members of the carpenters' union. It was a Landis award contract.

The expulsion of these militants aroused the anger of the members of the local, and when the officers denied the accused or their supporters the floor to defend themselves their anger could not be restrained.

Policemen Defied.

The attempt of the reactionaries to have the militants expelled from the meeting place was prevented by the rank and file despite the presence of a small army of policemen. The officers therefore wrote to Hutcheson requesting the "Czar" to send them assistance.

Hutcheson was afraid to face a local that is practically unanimous for the expelled members but wrote a letter advising that the victims of the reac-

BRITISH TORY GOVERNMENT IN LEAGUE SCRAP

Irish Free State Cause of Trouble

DUBLIN, Dec. 16.—Ireland still continues to be a thorn in the side of British imperialism despite the fact that the Irish Free State is a creature of the British government. But circumstances over which these flunkeys have little control force them to take actions that sometimes run counter to the plans of the tories now at the helm of the British ship of state.

The most recent action of the Irish Free State to acquire international importance was the registering of the Anglo-Irish treaty with the league of nations. This was done during the premiership of Ramsay MacDonald and no notice was taken of the incident by the government of the day.

But no sooner had the tories assumed office than all these petty details assumed importance and Austen Chamberlain began to straighten them out. The tories do not intend that the empire shall be shorn of any of its power during their incumbency.

Austen Chamberlain protested to the league of nations against the registration of the Anglo-Irish treaty with the league. The British foreign secretary claims that the relations between the British empire and any of its parts are no concern of the league. This places both the league and the empire in a rather embarrassing position.

But Ireland has no objection to seeing the empire in an embarrassing position, and makes matters worse by insisting that, if the British contention is upheld, that the dominions have no right to membership and voting privileges in the league councils. This would eliminate the six votes which Britain usually counts on at league meetings.

Canada Has Ambitions.

The other dominions are more likely to side with Ireland than with the empire on this question, particularly Canada which has a desire to follow the Free State government in sending an ambassador to Washington to represent Canada directly.

The Irish treaty was registered in conformity with article 18 of the league covenant which says that treaties shall not have international validity until they are registered with

SPLIT QUARTER BILLION OUT OF THEIR PLUNDER

Parasites Spend While Millions Are Idle

By LELAND OLDS.

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Christmas dividend and interest payments of between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 mailed Dec. 1 by 114 leading New York corporations will mean full Christmas stockings for the children of the idle rich.

But what about the children of the involuntarily idle poor whose meager savings have been exhausted by unemployment?

Dividend announcements for 1924 include a flock of extras which altho small in dollars and cents per share mean thousands of dollars additional income to the millionaire whose holdings are reckoned in thousands of shares.

Among the extra dividends recently announced are U. S. Gypsum, the building material trust, 5 per cent extra in cash and 35 per cent in stock; American Radiator, another profiteer at the expense of the American home, 50 per cent in stock; General Gas & Electric, one of the big public utility combines, $33.25 per share of preferred stock; American Gas and Electric of the same family, 50 per cent in stock; Crane Co., manufacturers of goldplated lavatories, 1 per cent in cash; Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal, $3 in cash; Island Creek Coal, 41 on stock of $1 par value.

The extra ½ of 1 per cent declared by U. S. Steel means an extra $10,236 Christmas money in the pocket of George F. Baker, dean of New York bankers, who owns 58,650 shares of steel corporation stock.

The pockets of the owning class are already bulging with the dividends and interest payments of preceding months. These are reported by the department of commerce for the first 10 months of 1923 and 1924 as follows:

First 10 months	1923	1924
January	$459,465,000	$420,025,000
February	175,905,000	185,565,000
March	283,645,000	219,041,000
April	374,286,000	284,350,000
May	253,426,000	316,565,000
June	295,056,000	305,740,000
July	266,025,000	296,880,000
August	187,550,000	198,370,000
September	259,636,000	313,940,000
October	287,215,000	297,760,000

Here with two months yet to go is a record of $2,823,134,000 paid in cash in 1924 to the owners of stock and bonds. For the same period of 1923 total disbursements were approximately $200,000,000 less, amounting to $3,042,202,000. This gain stands in sharp contrast with total wage payments running about 13 per cent behind a year ago.

The huge outpouring of wealth to the wealthy comes in a year in which well over 2,500,000 wage earners have been constantly unemployed while other millions could only work 3 or 3 days a week. Clearly any identity of interest which may once have existed between employers and workers has vanished. The idle rich don't suffer from depressions any more. But the chronically unemployed poor are forced to stand by and see industrialism dispossessing them even of their jobs.

MAGNUS JOHNSON BLAMES HOOTCH FOR HIS DEFEAT

Claims Blind Opponent Favors Bootleggers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Senator Magnus Johnson, farmer-labor, will file a contest within a few days against his republican opponent, Thomas D. Schall, in the recent Minnesota senatorial election, it was announced at his office here today.

The contest will be based upon charges that Schall's managers collected a $50,000 campaign fund from Minnesota "bootleggers" by promising criminal immunity. Schall, who is blind, will also be charged with circulating political falsehoods against Johnson in the campaign.

OHIO LABOR TO OPPOSE STATE COSSACK RULE

Labor Forces in United Front on This Issue

By GEORGE PAPCUN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 15.—Opposition to the proposed state constabulary bill that will be before the Ohio legislature at its session January 5, will be prevalent thruout the state on the part of trade unions and other working class organizations.

It is supported by the chamber of commerce and all other open shoppers.

There is no demand for passage of a state police measure on the part of the farmers. Farmers' organizations are not subscribing money to urge passage of a rural police measure. If the list of contributors to the state cossack movement were made public, it would disclose the names of open shop manufacturers and those of a few rich farmers. Mine operators and steel corporations are financing the passage of the bill as it would aid in the open shop drive and help them to police their industry in time of strike.

The victory of the "flaming circle" of Nine, an anti-Klan organization, has taught the corporations a lesson. The "flaming circle," composed in part of foreign-born workers and the youth of foreign-born parents, many who have seen service in the world war, by application of war strategy, completely routed the strong Klan forces. The open shoppers who are pressing the Americanization plan are afraid of the strength shown by these foreign-born workers in their victory over the Klan, and therefore very desirous of an extra police force in the form of armed and mounted state cossacks.

Organized labor, Workers Party, Y. W. L. and working class organizations should combine their forces in a united front and fight against passage of this bill.

HOT LOT OF SAVAGE PLUTES MOURN FOR "COMRADE GOMPERS" AS HIS HONORARY PALLBEARERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 16.—The Mexican workers who heard their leaders of the C. R. O. M. (the Mexican Federation of Labor) introduce the head of the American Federation of Labor as "Comrade Gompers" will be somewhat astonished at the flock of capitalists and capitalist tools gathered around the coffin of the defunct labor chieftain.

The pallbearers of "Comrade Gompers" who assist in an honorary way with his interment, are as follows:

Charles E. Hughes, secretary of state in the Coolidge cabinet; William Howard (injunction Bill) Taft, chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, which Gompers was supposed to be fighting bitterly for declaring the child labor laws unconstitutional.

Expert on Imperialism Attends.

Major General R. E. Bullard, whose efficiency in the handling of imperialist oppression on weaker nations is exemplified by the fact that he served in Cuba during the Spanish-American war, then helped suppress the Filippinos with rifles and the "water cure," becoming military governor of Lanao Moros, Mindanao in 1903-04, then back to Cuba to show the Cubans to run "schools and fle arts," then—as "Comrade Called" may have forgotten—commanded the mobilization on the Mexican border for the raids which violated Mexican territory in 1915-16. He also commanded the 2nd army of the A. E. F. in France.

Then there are Rear Admiral C. P. Plunkett, Governor Smith of New York, Lieutenant Governor Lunn, who is a renegade socialist; Mayor Hylan of New York City, U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland, Edward J. Henning, assistant secretary of labor, who will assist Henry Curran, commissioner of immigration, to carry out Gompers' anti-alien policies on foreign-born workers.

Wall Street Turns Out.

George W. Perkins, the financier, leads a list of his kind, including John H. Finley John R. Alpine, Bernard M. Baruch, Will H. Hays, Oscar Strauss, Samuel Untermeyer, George Gordon Battle, Grosvenor Clarkson, Marcus M. Marks, Ralph M. Easley, head of the Civic Federation, V. Everitt Macy, Judge Alton B. Parker, Otto M. Eidlitz and C. C. Norman.

Dawes Plan Sheds Tears.

Another battalion of bourgeois is led by Nicholas Murray Butler, the famous professorial protagonist of capitalism. It includes Martin Conboy, General J. G. Harboard, who openly announces his scorn for democratic government; Daniel Willard, head of the "B. & O." railroad, which is crushing the shopmen's unions with the help of Wm. H. Johnston of the Machinists; Elihu Root, the hard-boiled old reactionary of the U. S. senate; Bainbridge Colby; and Owen D. Young, who was the first Wall Street ruler of Germany and who comes to Gompers' funeral to show the regret felt by the backers of the Dawes plan.

Finally a group composed of an assortment of corporation lawyers and big industrial capitalists, among whom are George W. Wickersham, Henry W. Taft (Bill's brother), John Hays Hammond, Frank Vanderlip, who backed LaFollette in the past election and Cleveland H. Dodge, head of the copper trust, who is personally responsible for the illegal deportation of 1,300 miners from Bisbee, Arizona, into the New Mexican desert in July, 1917, because they were on strike.

Universal Mine in Indiana Begins Work On Part Time Basis

DANVILLE, Ill., Dec. 16.—After a complete shutdown of over two years the Universal mine at Clinton, Ind. has re-opened on a part-time basis to supply the United States Steel corporation with 300 tons of coal a day.

The Universal mine is one of the largest and most modernly equipped mines in this territory. The Steel corporation has cancelled contracts in other mines in order to place this order for Clinton coal, and Kentucky mines formerly supplying this coal to the steel corporation will be forced to shut down, it is believed.

Bankers Ask Big Sum.

In an effort to determine how much the bankers are to charge for turning the stock of the Chicago surface lines over to the city, the local transportation committee of the city council met yesterday with bankers and traction officials holding these stocks. An attempt was made by the city to induce the traction line representatives to agree on appraisers to determine the value of the surface lines. To date the bankers have held out for a sum which the city council has refused to agree upon.

Hooper Won't Give Up Job.

Ben Hooper, chairman of the United States railroad labor board, does not want to give up his job, according to a speech he made before the Michigan Alumni association. Hooper spoke against the Howell-Barkley bill, which proposes to abolish the labor board. The bill will be be debated in the present session of congress.

USE SCHOOLS FOR TRAINING CHILDREN TO BECOME WORKERS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 16.—Declaring that only 25 per cent of America's children ever reach college, W. F. Webster, superintendent of schools here, has recommended that high schools of the city teach more vocational training for those who enter industry as wage workers.

SPANISH ARMY'S AIR BOMB RAID BROT ON REVOLT

Natives Make Reprisal on Imperialists

(Special to the Daily Worker)

TANGIER, Morocco, Dec. 16.—Tetuan was isolated by land and water, and Tangier endangered today in further gains of the Riffs in the latest outbreak encouraged by the Spanish retreat.

France is known to fear an organized attempt by all the oppressed races of Africa, under the leadership of Abdul Krim, to throw off imperialist domination. England is believed watching possible encroachment on British holdings in the Riff triumph.

The Anjera rebel tribesmen today cut the Tetuan-Ceuta railroad, which isolates Tetuan, a walled town and a strong Spanish position 32 miles south of Tangier, from supplies by land. Fort Martin, which is Tetuan's path to the sea, is under fire and ships from Gibraltar ceased making trips to the Moroccan city Sunday.

The garrison of Alcasar Kebir, opposite Gibraltar, is in the hands of the Riffs, who hold many Spanish officers as prisoners and hostages. Two other Spanish posts between Tetuan and Ceuta have fallen.

The Anjera revolt, it was learned today, was provoked by wanton aerial bombardment by a Spanish airplane of the home of the Anjera chieftain, Zelial, who formerly was a friend of Spain and the massacre by air bombs of many defenseless women and children.

There are hints afoot that British and French interests have secretly aided the natives as against Spain, wishing to accomplish two things. First, they want to oust Spain from Africa and seize the territory themselves. Second, the field for capitalist exploitation in Spain itself is crippled by the military dictatorship and has developed from the semi-feudal stage as long as the monarchy has lasted.

In the first instance, the rivalry between imperialists makes them play with dangerous fire for their own holdings. But Britain, especially, is known never to have any scruples about wasting lives. If it can oust Spain now by arming the Riffian tribes, it little cares that many British workers in its army will be needed to crush these tribesmen later on to grab what they have gained from Spain away again for themselves.

The fact that Ibnez, the purchasable harlot of the bourgeois literary world, is writing a book against Alfonso of Spain and advocating for the overthrowal of the monarchy and Primo de Rivera's military dictatorship, shows that big interests are behind the move for a realignment of the ruling classes in Spain. The defeat in Morocco will aid this movement. Spain is being pressed by imperialist rivals and its oppressed colonials at the same time.

Albanians on the Move.

ROME, Dec. 16.—Dispatches from Tirana, Albania, today stated that guerilla bands, armed with bombs and machine guns, as well as artillery, were moving on northern Albanian towns. Governments were reported as giving way before the bandits, comprised of Montenegrin, Bulgarian and Albanian elements and the position of the federal troops was believed critical.

Can't Let King Tut Alone.

CAIRO, Dec. 16.—Howard Carter, American egyptologist and original investigator of King Tutakhaman's tomb, plans to resume his work on the tomb shortly, it was announced today.

New Jap Ambassador Coming.

TOKIO, Dec. 16.—Tsuneo Matsudaira who has officially accepted the post of ambassador to the United States, will sail for America early in January, it was stated today.

BRITISH COTTON KINGS ENSLAVE SUDANESE LABOR

Stack Killing Pretext for Brutal Conditions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TEXARKANA, Texas, Dec. 16.—The British imperialist government has used the killing of Sir Lee Stack to get cheap Egyptian cotton for British mills, produced by slave labor, Benjamin Marsh, managing director for the National Farmers' Council, stated at the convention of the Farm-Labor Union of Texas, in session here.

Steal Water from Nile.

"The ultimatum which Great Britain handed to the Egyptian government following the killing of Sir Lee Stack, governor general of Sudan, is part of the program of the British financial imperialists to get cotton for British mills, produced by slave labor exploited by British landlords and British financiers," March said. One hundred and forty-one delegates representing 70,000 members, listened to March's speech.

"A British corporation, in which the son of the famous Sir Asquith is interested, has secured an important concession in the Sudan to develop irrigation projects along the Nile. The British government lends this company several million pounds to develop this project and the Egyptian government has been obliged to let this corporation draw water from the Nile."

Suffer Under British Lash.

March then painted the picture of the suffering to the Egyptian natives caused by the British policy of enslaving the Sudanese on the pretext of punishing them for Stack's murder. He declared that the basis for the British policy of force and oppression is the desire of the British capitalists to make more profits by means of the use of cheap slave labor.

MONARCHISTS OF GERMANY WANT EBERT'S HEAD

Workers He Betrayed Will Not Mourn

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—Whether the nationalists are included in the next cabinet or not is one of the most widely discussed possibilities in German politics today. The centrists who hold the balance of power are afraid to include the nationalists in the proposed coalition cabinet and what is still more important, the American financiers who hold the strings to the German money bag do not trust them.

Came Near Victory.

But the nationalists came within speaking distance of victory in the recent elections and if they cannot have their own way, they insist on making it uncomfortable for others. They are opposed to the Dawes plan, because it puts capitalist Germany in a humiliating position and reduces her to the position of a colony of the other powers. They are not concerned with its effect on the workers' standard of living.

The nationalists are also gunning for the head of the socialist president of capitalist Germany, Ebert, having done the dirty work for the capitalists, has almost reached the limit of his usefulness to them. At least they believe they can get along without him now.

He is charged by the nationalists and monarchists with being responsible for the munitions workers' strike in January 1918 and is guilty of high treason. Ludendorff is also after Ebert's scalp, claiming that the German revolution which occurred a few days before the armistice lost Germany the war.

Proud of His Perfidy.

But Ebert is fighting hard against the efforts of the monarchists to prove that he was loyal to the empire. His counsel read a letter in court, during the trial of the president's libel suit against a monarchist, written by Von Hindenburg, in which the latter gives credit to Ebert for the "unselfishness with which Herr Ebert is working as a true German for the salvation of the nation, forgetting all personal opinions and plans." This letter did much to prove that Ebert was a faithful tool of the capitalist class.

Barbaric Treatment For Insane.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 16.—The insane of the state are not properly taken care of, Senator Robert A. Stuart of Fort Worth declared here. "At present the insane are huddled together and even kept in jails until it is too late to help them," said Stuart. No place has been provided by the state to observe and treat persons who have shown symptoms of insanity, and the treatment is often crude and barbaric, the senator added.

Wall Street Banker in Boost for the Fascisti, Mussolini and Dawes

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Benito Mussolini, the bloody dictator over Italy, adds another American capitalist to his list of supporters. The name of Otto H. Kahn, Wall Street financier, goes down with that of Elbert H. Gary, head of the steel trust; Julius Barnes, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and other champions of the "open shop."

All the news from Italy indicates that Mussolini's fascism is on its last legs. But this does not prevent the banker, Kahn, from travelling to Ottawa, Ontario, and giving an inspired talk at a luncheon of the Canadian Club, in which he said:

"Italy . . . . has made extraordinary progress under the clear-sighted and far-visioned guidance of Mussolini, and is steadily forging ahead."

* * * * *

Mussolini did make some progress when he first assumed power. His gunmen marched over Italy, leaving a trail of arson and murder in their wake. Workers' organizations were destroyed. The Communist movement was outlawed. The torch was ever busy, setting fire to workers' co-operatives, libraries, labor temples, social clubs and even their homes. Death or prison awaited all who stood in opposition.

But this advance has been checked. Mussolini is now on the defensive, something Kahn is evidently ignorant of. Fascism is in retreat before aroused Italian labor.

* * * * *

It was Elbert Gary who wished for Mussolini rule in the United States. He evidently visioned new struggles of the workers in the steel industry, when the bloody attacks on labor at Homestead and McKees Rocks, in Pennsylvania; Cripple Creek and Ludlow, in Colorado; Cabin Creek and Logan County, in West Virginia; Centralia and Everett, in Washington, and hundreds of other battlefields of the class struggle would have to be repeated successfully if American fascism is to retain its present rather favorable position.

* * * * *

When American capitalism must invoke the spirit of the fascist dictator of Italy, it is a confession that it has no "strong man," so-called, to direct its own capitalist state for the suppression of the whole working class. At least Kahn mentions no candidates for the job in this country.

* * * * *

It is because he is in favor of Mussolini rule in Italy; also in the United States; that Kahn also champions the Dawes plan, not only for Germany, but for all of Western Europe, especially for the Balkans. At Ottawa, in Canada, Kahn suggested to the League of Nations, "in unofficial cooperation with the United States, to set up another 'Dawes Commission,' which shall apply to that complex situation and that 'impasse,' (in the Balkans) the same fairness, broad-minded comprehension, tact and resourcefulness that the members of the Dawes commission brought to bear upon the no less involved and difficult problem of reparations."

* * * * *

Of course, Kahn utters the pious wish of a Wall Street banker in all this solicitude for the Dawes plan. He is looking to his "interest." The Dawes commission showed its "fairness" toward international, and especially American capitalism. But it dealt a vicious blow to the whole German working class. German labor is still struggling against its class enemy supported by foreign capitalist allies.

When German labor throws off its chains, as it will, Kahn will have more to say about fascist dictators and Dawes schemes. But it will be a confession of their futility in stopping the march of the masses on their way to power.

RUSSIAN NOTE LAYS DOWN THE LAW TO HUGHES

Show America Violated Russian Authority

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 16.—Indiscriminate and unauthorized roving of United States war vessels in Soviet Russian waters will henceforth not be tolerated, George Tchitcherin, Soviet Russia's foreign minister, declared in a note received by Secretary of State Hughes.

Tchitcherin protested against the placing of a bronze tablet on Russian soil by the Bear, a United States coast guard vessel, threatening punishment to anyone molesting the tablet.

"This is a lawless act," Tchitcherin wrote, according to information given out in Washington. "The official responsible obviously was unable to distinguish where his own territory ends and another sovereign country begins." Tchitcherin added that a repetition of such an unauthorized naval visit will be sternly repressed by Moscow.

The plate of which the Soviet government has taken possession was clamped to a rock on the Cokotsk Peninsula, Siberia. It stated, "United States Geodetic Survey-Magnetic station. Disturbance punishable by a fine of $250.00 or imprisonment."

This violation of international law and the rights of a sovereign nation was excused by coast guard officials in Washington on the ground that the tablet was placed in 1920, before the far eastern republic was definitely affiliated with Moscow.

tionary officials had the right to appeal their case to the general president within thirty days and that in the meantime they should remain members of the union without however the right to vote or participate in union proceedings.

Trying to Fool Members.

As the action against the expelled members was taken on the instructions of Hutcheson, it is quite obvious that this is only a smooth trick in order to railroad them out of the organization with something like an air of legality. The moderate tone adopted in the Hutcheson letter was for the purpose of pacifying the member ship.

Wise to Faker's Tricks.

The tricks of the arch faker Hutcheson, are well known to the members of Local 181 and they see beneath the velvet glove the iron fist of reaction. The sentiment in favor of the expelled members is increasing and the reactionaries will learn that they have bitten off more than they chew when they illegally railroaded loyal union men for standing up for the principles of working class solidarity in fighting scabbery and a united front with the bosses, the enemies of the workers.

British Government in Big League Scrap

the league. Ireland entered the league on motion of Britain.

American Relations.

The Irish question has been a decided nuisance to the British government in the past and there is little reason to believe that it will ever be anything else until that country secures political independence—at least nominally—from British rule. The effects of an Anglo-Irish imbroglio on England's relations with the United States are not at all favorable to Downing street and Washington would look with horror upon a revival of the conflict, which was expected to stay in perpetual repose when the Anglo-French treaty was signed in 1921.

FAKERS SQUIRM WHEN PAMPHLET SHOWS THEM UP

Would Keep Members from Reading It

By ANDREW YOUNG.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

O'FALLON, Ill., Dec. 16.—At a meeting of Local No. 705 of the United Mine Workers of America here, I introduced a pamphlet entitled, "On a Labor Faker's Trail."

A motion was made and seconded that we order 350 copies of this pamphlet for distribution to our membership, to let them know the real facts about the worst enemies of our organization.

Farrington's main supporter in denouncing this pamphlet, was Dave Wilson, who broke the strike for Farrington in 1919 in this district while he was a board member. On account of Wilson's drastic action in driving the rank and file back to work, the miners voted him out of office.

Ousted by Membership.

But Wilson's loyal friend, Frank Farrington—who at one time said that John L. Lewis had descended to the level of a louse—appointed Wilson back in office to serve the same members who had just voted him out of office. Wilson is now legal investigator at the same salary he drew as board member.

Another member of Local 705 who voted to keep the rank and file from reading their district president's dirty record, was Dan L. Thomas, president of this sub-district, No. 9. Thomas pleaded that Farrington should have a chance to defend himself, altho Farrington has his own paper—the Illinois Miner. The Illinois Miner is edited by Oscar Ameringer, the man who once wrote a pamphlet called "The Farmer that Farms the Farmer," and who is himself, at the present time, the farmer that farms the coal digger.

Of course these men all supported LaFollette and their endeavors are in accord with those of Gompers, Olander, Walker and Farrington. They are servants of the bourgeoisie and the enemies of the working class.

position, as head of the A. F. of L., compelled him to do things at times that would deceive the workers into believing he was a labor leader and not a labor traitor.

ONE year ago the author of the Tribune's Line o'Type column poured ridicule on Gompers in some of his hot words—the meaningless—to the garment workers who were hampered by the injunction issued against them by Judge Carpenter. Gompers is characterized as the white haired boy of the Wilson administration. He then got accustomed to power and influence and had not yet sobered up. When the masses began to clamor for some policy on Soviet Russia did Secretary of State Hughes write a letter to Gompers explaining why Charlie did not recognize Soviet Russia. The result of this catering to Gompers in the opinion of the Tribune writer, was that Sam got an inflated idea of his own importance so much so that he flouted the injunction.

IN view of the Tribune's fulsome eulogies of the dead labor faker, the following excerpt from an article published on its editorial page will prove of interest: "As a patriarch with extra-legal privileges he (Gompers) in the berries when he roars out damnations and reads his garments like the prophets of Scriptures; But the boys who call the strikes, make the settlements, work the habeas corpus and go most frequently to the bank—to put it mildly—have absolutely without him. There's hard coal to be dug or not to be dug in the east; and Gompers is out in Chicago telling some unionized and bewildered immigrants that a Carpenter is playing for the laughs."

POOR OLD SAM had a tough time with some of his capitalist friends. They did not realize that he had to show his teeth once in a while to the employers in order to retain the confidence of the workers. Naturally he could not explain this to everybody, but the wise ones and those who counted most understood. Gompers was an officer in the Civic Federation and so was, and is, Judge Gary. These two were supposed to be mortal enemies, yet they wined and dined together, but made faces at each other in public to help preserve the fiction that they were engaged in a real scrap. Just like lawyers shadow boxing in court for the sake of their fees. Gompers is dead. The capitalists will find it dificult to secure another president of the A. F. of L. as competent and loyal.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

Menacing Symptoms

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN

If you want to know what the real position of the minority is, read the articles of the followers of the minority and not of the leaders. The latter are sufficiently trained in party controversies to know what not to say. The leaders of the minority, whatever their Marxism and Bolshevism, have been long enough in our movement to understand that certain things are simply incompatible with a Communist conception of our tasks. But the followers don't know all these things, and when they attempt to express an opinion as to what they understand the position of the minority to be, they frankly and openly tell the whole truth. It is therefore, thru these open statements of the followers of the minority that we learn of the really menacing nature of the minority position.

Capitalism is in Existence, Therefore We Must have a Farmer-Labor Party

Read the article by Comrade W. J. White, entitled "The Defeatist Thesis of the Majority," published in the DAILY WORKER on Dec. 11. Read it carefully and try to understand the psychology of the comrade. He is so much overwhelmed with the magic slogan of the minority that he simply cannot imagine the class-struggle in America without a farmer-labor party. To him class-struggle and farmer-labor party have become one and the same thing. His reasoning runs, therefore along a short, straight line. If you are opposed to the farmer-labor slogan, you are opposed to the class-struggle. I maintain that when Communists get into such a state of mind, there must be something radically wrong with them.

Listen to the question that Comrade White asks of the majority:

"Has this election (presidential election) given the landless farmers back their land? Has the pressure of capitalism been removed from the shoulders of the proletariat in the mills and mines? Is the robbery of these workers any less today than it was before the votes were cast?"

This is the question. You would imagine by the nature of the question that Comrade White is trying to convert a worker in his shop to the idea of class-struggle. You would almost imagine that Comrade White is trying to prove the existence of capitalism and the necessity for an organized struggle against it. And, finally, you might also get the idea that Comrade White is putting up this question in order to prove the necessity of the Workers (Communist) Party as the only possible leader of the proletarian struggle against capitalism.

But, no! This is not Comrade White's intention. Comrade White has already outgrown the illusion that the Workers (Communist) Party is the leader of the proletarian struggle against capitalism. Comrade White knows better. He has another party—a farmer-labor party—to conduct these struggles. Comrade White shouts at the majority the above question in order to destroy the majority thesis which denies the usefulness of the farmer-labor slogan in the given situation.

Comrade White is not a defeatist. No. He is buoyant, hopeful, and optimistic for the farmer-labor party. But the C. E. C. is defeatist because it is buoyant, hopeful and optimistic for the Workers (Communist) Party. This is the substance of Comrade White's article.

Diluted Communism for the Masses

Comrade Anton Bimba is following the minority. He published an article in the Daily (December 10th) entitled "Where do You Stand?" And among other things, this is what he says:

"By raising the slogan 'for a farmer-labor party', which is much easier for the masses to digest at the present time, we, the Workers Party and under the name of the Workers Party immediately advance to them and acquaint them with the leadership of the Workers Party."

Comrade Bimba may not know it as yet, but a little thought will convince him to the truth of the following proposition: That the position of the minority is nothing else but a proposal to fool the masses into following our leadership by giving ourselves another name.

According to Comrade Bimba the masses will digest easier the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" than they will the slogan "for a Communist Party." The difference here is merely in name, isn't it? Because the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" is raised by whom? By the Workers Party. Who is going to advocate it and fight for it? Again, the Workers Party. Now, then, why does it not enter Comrade Bimba's mind that, under these conditions, the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" will immediately become indentified with the slogan "for a Communist Party," and that whatever objections the masses have to following the lead of the Workers Party these masses will equally have to following the lead of the farmer-labor party. Comrade Bimba knows that this is so. Only he believes that somehow and in some mysterious way the sound "farmer-labor" will be more pleasing to the ears of the masses than the sound "Workers Party."

It is very, very funny. We seem to be reaching a stage when our policies are to be determined by musical mysteries instead of by an analysis of social forces and political situations. The logic of the minority, expressed very simply by Comrade Bimba, is merely this: The combination of the words farmer-labor will be digested by the masses easier than the combination of another group of words. Therefore, a farmer-labor party.

And, mind you, Comrade Bimba is not totally blind to facts. He sees, for instance, the important fact "that a great many workers voted for Mr. LaFollette because they were told and they themselves believed that they were voting for independent political action." In other words, those workers who felt the need for a new party believe that the LaFollette movement is going to bring them that party. Comrade Bimba will have to agree that these workers are wrong only in one thing, namely, in their expectation that a LaFollette party will be beneficial to the workers. But how are you going to disabuse the minds of the workers from this illusion? Surely not by preaching the abstract idea of a class farmer-labor. Why? Because to advocate now a farmer-labor party as against a LaFollette party is the same as advocating the Communist Party, if the slogan "for a Communist Party" will have no mass appeal how will a Communist farmer-labor party have such an appeal?

Comrade Bimba would do well to read again the thesis of the C. E. C. He will find there that the way to drive a wedge between the workers and LaFollette is not by advocating another name for the Workers Party, but by mobilizing the masses for struggle for such economic and political demands as will expose LaFollette's hostility to the workers. Not by changing names but by engaging in elementary struggles will you raise the consciousness of the American workers and build your own party.

LaFollette is "Already" Discredited.

You, comrades, may not know it that "the LaFollette movement is already discredited in many ways," but Comrade Candela knows. He says so in his article, "Why I am for the Minority," published in the Daily on December 11th.

Now, this is a totally different proposition. If the class-struggle in the United States has gone so far as to discredit in many ways the LaFollette movement in the eyes of the workers, then we are actually nearing a revolutionary situation in America. Comrade Candela simply failed to draw the proper conclusions from his analysis of the political situation.

The Communist International adheres to the following theory that when the petty-bourgeois, reformist illusions become discredited, or are beginning to become discredited in the eyes of the workers, this is a sure sign of the beginning of a revolutionary situation. Comrade Candela should know that. And since he was able to detect the fact that "The LaFollette movement is already discredited in many ways," he should have proposed another slogan, one that would be more suitable in developing revolutionary situation, for instance, for a farmer-labor government, instead of for a farmer-labor party.

The followers of the minority have a difficult task to perform. They have got to re-educate themselves from farmer-laborism into Communism. The sooner they do it the better for Communism and for the Communist Party.

FIRST CALL FOR HELP

We have built. For nearly a year we have painstakingly fashioned a weapon every component part of which we tested and proved. Expenses—down to the bare bone. Service to the working class—absolute maximum. Attacks upon the enemy—the limit. For nearly a year we have labored unceasingly with a bucket of red paint in one hand, and a large-sized brush in the other.

IN ALL THIS TIME WE HAVE NOT SENT OUT A SINGLE CALL FOR HELP! But today we shout, HELP YOUR DAILY.

Your Policy must Be —Buy a Policy—

UPON ONE POLICY WE ARE ALL UNITED and that is to Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

ALMOST complete discussion upon future party policy is possible today because we have the DAILY WORKER. Every party member who reads the DAILY WORKER, yes, and every one that does not because he cannot read English, will understand this to be an advantage of prime importance to the theoretical development of our members.

But the DAILY WORKER serves the party in many other ways. It is an all the year around weapon against the foe, it is an educator, it is a propagandist—and also, it is a bond, a chain, which ties member to member, city to city, district to district. It is the DAILY WORKER that helps to centralize our party into the effective machine it should be.

We must keep the DAILY WORKER and make it safe for 1925. To do this we must give our dollars generously today. If we expect to win, then the DAILY WORKER must live and prosper. With the DAILY WORKER, forward to victory, or—nothing. It should be easy to choose.

INSURANCE POLICIES are in the hands of the branches. They are priced $10, $5 and $1. The Central Executive Committee has decided that every member shall buy. Every member should buy no less than a $5 POLICY.

And while the party seethe with discussion over our future policy and tasks, there is one Policy upon which there must be unanimous agreement. That is the POLICY to BUY A POLICY to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
William Z. Foster, Chairman,
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

ILLINOIS EXPERIENCE SUBSTANTIATES THE MAJORITY POSITION

By ARNE SWABECK.

AT the height of our farmer-labor maneuvers, we organized the Illinois labor party. It was made to order like most of such parties were. Altho, even at a time when there was a movement making toward the formation of such party, the Illinois labor party never succeeded in rallying great masses of workers despite the sincere efforts for a united front displayed by our comrades. Nevertheless, it became recorded in our annals as another "conquest."

To our party the dangers were great in this experiment; the advantages were nil. Farmer-labor parties without mass support do not offer a field for maneuvering to broaden and deepen the struggles of the workers and our participation therein tends to seriously obscure the Communist aim in the class struggle, even from the view of our own comrades.

The Illinois labor party had to be extremely carefully nursed for fear that it would remain still-born. The provisional committee launched to form the party invited all labor and fraternal organizations of the state to participate. Some 2,000 local organizations were invited. About 30 local unions responded, of which 25 were of the United Mine Workers, some women's circle branches and other fraternal groups. With few exceptions the delegates who attended the Peoria convention, at which the party was formed, and who had also fought in their locals to put the response across, were either Workers Party members or close sympathizers. The fact that this convention was arranged simultaneously with, and in the same city as the convention of the United Mine Workers, District 12, helped to bring the delegates there. And naturally, great care had to be used to retain these two conflicting elements, in order to maintain the farmer-labor appearance, which was destined to rally the masses.

Care became so much more necessary because immediately upon the issuance of the call for the formation of the party, it became branded by the reactionary trade union officials as another attempt to split the labor movement and to form another "branch of the Communist Party," and one Chicago carpenters' local union even withdrew its elected delegates. The situation was delicate. To really interest the delegates—exceptions as well as party members and sympathizers—and the unions which had responded to the necessity of the labor party it became necessary to attribute to it the qualities of fighting the battles of the workers and to make it appear the real leader in the class struggle. It was a natural opportunistic outcome of our general opportunist method of applying the united front tactics in this movement.

We were faced with a practical problem. We attempted to form a Illinois farmer-labor party and the outcome corresponded with Illinois conditions available. The program adopted, altho an improvement over the many which our party at the time was manufacturing wholesale, expressed not only the dangerous illusion of a parliamentary emancipation of the workers, but also the possibility of the farmer-labor party leading the struggle for emancipation.

One delegate at the convention made the statement in a committee that, in considering the program, one vital point was overlooked, namely, that of proposing an amendment to the United States constitution which would provide for the enactment of the laws demanded. Undoubtedly, this delegate, with many other workers, was led to believe, helped along by our policies, that emancipation by way of parliamentary activities thru a farmer-labor party was quite a simple matter.

Our immediate practical experience amounted to this. Our farmer-labor party united front was at its very best a parliamentary unity. The Illinois labor party was organized while the old farmer-labor party (Fitzpatrick group) was still in existence. There could be little difference between the two as long as the farmer-labor veneer had to be maintained. The rank and file workers could discern no difference, except that the Illinois labor party had been branded Communist and we appeared as the splitters of the labor movement who had to have our own little labor party the same as the Fitzpatrick group. The old farmer-labor party was discredited. The Illinois labor party never succeeded in rallying the masses of workers and farmers; it did not give our party connection with the wide masses. The only active section keeping the Illinois labor party alive for the period of its duration was the Workers Party; it paid the bills. The sympathetic elements took part because of the Workers Party and could just as easily have been rallied for the struggle directly under our own banner.

The Illinois labor party seemed to fit the description of the thing the minority proposes to rear, the "left block radical farmer-labor party," and yet the short experience was enough to demonstrate that such party could never give class political leadership or fight for the class interests of the workers, as also being proposed by the minority. Such leadership can be furnished only by a centralized, disciplined party, based upon individual membership, united ideologically for a common goal—a Communist Party. The Illinois labor party like all other such parties would have been shattered at the first pressure of a real struggle. It could not even withstand the pressure from the appearance of LaFollette on the stage. It disappeared. Today it is non-existent, while the Workers (Communist) Party lives and grows stronger.

A few days after our party had decided to enter the presidential election campaign under its own banner, the Cook county branch of the Illinois labor party held a conference. It registered the fact that LaFollette had announced his candidacy and that the national committee of the national farmer-labor party (organized at St. Paul, Minn.) had withdrawn its candidates. Our party members, who came there as delegates, had finally come into their own. No longer were they compelled to propose a farmer-labor party solution. They could now make a Communist criticism of the LaFollette movement and also propose a Communist solution—the Communist candidates and the Communist program.

An appeal for a farmer-labor party at this juncture would have been a dead slogan. It remained dead during the election campaign in spite of our efforts to revive it. Nothing has happened since which could revive it, except that our minority comrades are set upon it. To the working masses it is dead. "But," say the minority comrades, "the class struggle continues and will become ever more intense."—Surely, and that is just one more reason why the Workers (Communist) Party should consciously strive to gain the leadership of the proletariat in these struggles, directing them towards a real struggle for their class-interests.

OPPORTUNISTIC CONCEPTION OF POLITICAL ACTION

By JOHN WILLIAMSON.

WHERE are the minority members of the C. E. C. leading their followers with their confused theories? We find an illuminating example in the article of Comrade Karl Reeve, printed in the Dec. 4, issue of the DAILY WORKER. Let us quote a few of its gems:

"The C. E. C. majority statement would lead us to believe that we must have faith in the Workers Party only on the industrial field." And again:

"For the C. E. C. majority thesis . . . broaches no effort to win the leadership of these misguided workers and poor farmers thru the united front on the political field." And in conclusion:

"The majority emphasizes 'the united front from below.' We must have a united front to combat child labor exploitation, 'the Dawes' plan,' for nationalization of mines, etc., we must have a special C. E. C. sub-committee to restate the old ways and to ferret out new ways of applying the united front. But we must desert the united front on the political field."

The most illuminating thing about Reeve's article is his utter misconception of political action and what comprises political demands. We find him stating that attempts at forming the united front on such issues as "child labor, the Dawes' plan and the nationalization of mines" is limiting our united front tactics only to the industrial field. Anyone with the slightest conception of Marxism or the elementary concepts of Communism knows that the greatest international political issue facing the world proletariat today is the attempt of American capitalism to enslave the German working class thru the Dawes' plan.

Need we go further to show the utter bankruptcy and misunderstanding of the minority thesis when such partly obvious political issues as those the C. E. C. majority thesis puts forward as concrete issues upon which we can form the united front, are termed "deserting the united front on the political field"?

The C. E. C. majority thesis states very definitely that our united front efforts must be from below and it does not behoove Comrade Reeve to sneer at this statement as this is the basis of the united front as expounded and understood by the Comintern.

This is only another indication of the idea of the minority that the farmer-labor party slogan is the only form of the united front on the political field. This theory leads directly to a mere parliamentary conception of political action, a very opportunistic and dangerous tendency, that wants to limit our conception of political action to a farmer-labor party or such a slogan.

UP WITH COMMUNISM! DOWN WITH FARMER-LABORISM!

By J. B. WIRKKULA.

NEVER since I have been in the labor movement, which has since was old enough to actively participate in it, have I been confronted with such a contrast as the present controversy in our party, or Communism vs. farmer-laborism. It is so ridiculous. I cannot fathom it in any other way than that in our party there exists a certain element which is utterly non-Communist. This is being demonstrated in the discussion.

Now, when we once have the Workers (Communist) Party, even to think of us advocating some liberal or any other party but our revolutionary party, is a step aside from the correct route—let alone to actively participate in such foolish "maneuvers."

If as a rank-and-filer, look to any advocate of coalition government in party is a basis for a government) as an utterly dangerous political opportunist for our party. I maintain that there can exist only two kinds of governments and they are: a government based on proletarian dictatorship or a capitalist government based directly or indirectly on capitalist dictatorship. Mid-way governments are out of date. "Biz bik" is too strong for them. We can't go back to '76, thus no midway government can serve the workers.

Should we, therefore, kid ourselves and the working class with some other form of working class rule than the dictatorship of the proletariat? I say: No! We must build up the Workers (Communist) Party to a Communist mass party by carrying on united front campaigns "from below," i. e., to secure influence and members from among the actual wage workers and poor farmers and not maneuvers "from the top" by trying to capture some political party from the hands of professional politicians. Such adventures are too hard on the poor workers' purses and we have very little, if any, results from them. Our party's past experiences should prove this even to those who have so far been unable to think beyond farmer-laborism.

Up with Communism by building the Workers Party to a mass Communist Party!

Down with farmer-laborism (revisionism) by defeating the sloganites for a mass-class farmer labor party!

Facts For Communists

The Foster-Lore Alliance and the Communist International

Article II.

By JAY LOVESTONE.

IN our first article on the Foster-Lore alliance we tabulated the number of votes cast for and measures proposed in behalf of Lore by the Foster-Cannon group. In this article we tabulated the consistent voting of Lore for measures proposed in the central executive committee by the Foster-Cannon group and against proposals and policies of the Ruthenberg group.

The Foster-Cannon group is now throwing about such epithets as "social-democrat" and "right wing opportunists." The Comintern has branded Lore and his followers as a social-democrat group. It it interesting to note that Foster and Cannon are not calling social-democratic and opportunists that group in the party which has been labeled as such by the Communist International. On the contrary the voting records of the central executive committee show that those who are now so lavish in evading a discussion of the fundamental issues thru hiding behind a smoke screen of this sort, have been and still are, despite empty pre-convention talk, in an organic alliance with the social-democratic and opportunist section of our party.

LENINISM OR DeLEONISM?

By JOSEPH SIMINOFF.

CONSISTENCY you are not found in the majority theses. I quote from the majority theses "The further development of the class struggle will eventually again create a mass sentiment for the formation of a farmer-labor party." Then further on in their theses they speak of farmer-labor Communists. Here the Foster-Cannon group want to impress us that LaFollettism has swallowed up the farmer-labor party movement and therefore we must fold up our arms and wait until the farmers and workers free themselves from the LaFollette illusion. The first is not correct and the second is pure DeLeonism.

When we glance over the last elections we find that where the farmer-labor party ran candidates as such we find that they have polled a large vote. Minnesota is a very striking example. In this state we find that the farmer-labor party state ticket ran ahead of LaFollette. The majority that Coolidge beat LaFollette was much larger than the farmer-labor party candidates, Mangus Johnson and Olson. Another example is here in Buffalo. The other day I spoke with a worker who ran on the LaFollette ticket in Erie county and he is thoroughly disgusted with the LaFollette movement and maintains that no one leader can beat the capitalist machine but a class farmer-labor party. He as well as thousands of other workers believed that LaFollette could deliver the votes in the past elections and on the basis of that would proceed to the formation of a farmer-labor party. In my connections as an active trade unionist in my local union and the Central Labor Council of Buffalo know it to be fact.

Here in Buffalo we organized the Buffalo labor party which was indorsed by the Central Labor Council and every important local trade union. The Buffalo labor party was a mass movement. In the county elections of 1923, we ran candidates. The candidate for sheriff received 2,500 votes which was acknowledged by the board of elections and many more votes that is known was stolen. Why has the Buffalo labor party gone out of existence? It was largely due to the sabotaging methods of the majority. The same thing happened to the Buffalo labor party that occurred to the F. F. L. P. In spite of the fact that the C. I. has recognized at the last congress that the formation of the F. F. L. P. was a victory for the Communists, we find Comrade Foster and the majority to date criticize the F F. L. P. I quote from an article written by Comrade Foster in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 4. "This debacle which left the Workers Party in the various crisis, cost us the loss of many valuable sympathizing elements in the trade unions and elsewhere among the workers." Yet Comrade Foster and the majority maintain that there was a sentiment for a farmer-labor party and when eventually this sentiment is created again venture in this "debacle." Consistency where are you? Yet the majority affords themselves the rather expensive pleasure of calling the minority the farmer-labor Communists. It was only a short time ago that the C. I. said that the majority in the united front maneuvers have failed to maintain their Communist principles. It comes will ill grace from the majority.

Trade Union Activities.

Comrade Foster in his article of Dec. 4 points with pride to the united fronts on the industrial field. He cites Amalgamation as a glaring example. Yes Comrade Foster, amalgamation is an important slogan. But what has the majority to show in their work on this slogan? Oh yes, sixteen state federations of labor have passed a resolution for amalgamation, a few international conventions, central labor bodies and so many local unions. But how about some constructive amalgamation work? Oh no, that would be dual unionism. But we must stay within the A. F. of L. and organize for conventions. Last year when we had the outlaw shoe workers' strike in Brockton, Mass., which offered the party a glaring opportunity to amalgamate the Brockton Thread Cutters, Amalgamated Shoe Workers, and the Haverhill Protective Union in a united independent shoe workers' union. While organizer of the T. U. E. L. I have send report after report to the national office for policies in the situation, but they are still forthcoming. Here were 30,000 shoe workers revolting against the bureaucracy of the A. F. of L. But of course, this was a dual union.

On Unemployment.

When millions of workers in the textile, shoe, railroad, and mining industries were walking the streets, the majority did not only fail to formulate a policy to organize the unemployed, but have actually denied that such an unemployment existed. When Comrade Pepper wrote an article pointing out the unemployment situation in this country, Comrade Browder answered with an article denying it. The result was that the Profintern in its last congress maintained the position of the minority on the trade union policies as correct.

Loreism.

In conclusion I want to write a few words on the Two-and-a-Half International tendency in the party as represented by the Lore group. It did not come as a surprise to me, the Olgin article on Lore only on the eve of a national convention of the party. The C. I. at the last congress said that the Lore group is a non-Communist group and that the C. E. C. of the Workers Party should carry on a vigorous ideological campaign against this Second-and-a-Half International tendency in the party. Of course, the majority maintains that has nothing to with maintaining organizational alliances with the Lore group. For six months after the decision the majority still kept members of the Lore group in responsible party positions. It also required the majority to meet with Lore and his group in caucus to decide that Comrade Gitlow could not step into the T. U. E. L. office. This is the promise of unity with the left wing of the party as represented by the Ruthenberg-Pepper group.

Comrades! The issue of the minority is very clear. The minority is raising the slogan of a Leninist Party, a party of action.

"CHVOSTISM" IN OUR PARTY

By GEORGE ASHKENUDSE

"GOODBYE 'class' farmer-labor party," says Comrade Manley, the leading spirit of the majority in New York City. I would suggest that Comrade Manley read more carefully the thesis of the majority, which he represents, for in this document he will find the following quotation, "The further development of the class struggle may eventually again create a mass sentiment for the formation of a farmer-labor party." To be consistent with the policy of the majority, Manley should say, "Auf wiedersehn!"

This statement means that when in the opinion of the majority a sufficient sentiment for a farmer-labor policy spontaneously develops, then and only then will they favor the farmer-labor party policy.

This opportunist line of thought is characteristic of the majority. In their thesis they say, "At the time when the farmer-labor movement was developing a mass character, moving in the direction of an independent party, it was correct for our party itself to raise the slogan of 'a farmer-labor party' and participate actively in the movement for it. When as became apparent in July, 1924, and as it is apparent now, the idea of a farmer-labor party lacks mass support and appeal among the industrial workers and poor farmers, the basic reasons for our support of this movement are not in existence."

Commenting upon this attitude of "following the masses," Comrade Stalin says in his book on "Lenin and Leninism," "The theory of spontaneity is a theory of opportunism, the theory of bowing before the spontaneity of the workers' movement, the theory of actual denial of the leading role of the vanguard of the working class, the party of the working class . . . The theory of spontaneity is the ideology of trade unionism."

This idea of "following the masses" was combatted by Comrade Lenin, and called "Chvostism," a real menshevist position.

Mistakes of the Past.

So deep is the respect and worship of the majority for the "sentiment" of the masses, that it has led them to commit a number of grave errors in the past in the employment of the united front tactics. Comrade Bittelman in his speech at the German convention makes this denial in regard to the present policy of the party. "Not negotiations with farmer-labor leaders around the conference table as was the case in about one-half of our work for a farmer-labor party, but actual struggle in the unions and in the shops and among the unemployed directly against the capitalists and their servants, the reactionary labor bureaucrats." This is an admission that our united front tactics were no conducted until now in the unions, in the shops and among the unemployed. Therefore we must state openly that our C. E. C. and the T. U. E. L. did not understand the decisions of the Comintern and the Profintern on the tactics of the united front. But to sit at the table with farmer-labor leaders was not such a grave mistake. Comrade Losovsky in concluding his report at the Fifth Congress states, "I do not sit down at the same table with (Jouhaux) 'for the sake of his beautiful eyes' but because there are millions of workers who followed him and because there are tens of millions who are neither with us nor with him." Saturated with the ideology of "Chvostism," our C. E. C. failed to criticize the leaders, (like Fitzpatrick, Hillman, Mahoney, etc.), with whom they sat at the same table whom the masses followed. Thus, they failed to prepare the masses for the time when these leaders would betray the workers, so that instead of winning over these masses thru the united front tactics, we remained isolated after the June 17 convention.

For instance, the statement issued by Mahoney in regard to the St. Paul convention was printed in our official organ, the DAILY WORKER of April 17, without any challenge, or criticism, regardless of the fact that comrades from New York and other cities demanded immediate action. I repeat a few extracts from this statement. "There will no doubt, be Communists as there will be other schools of thought represented at the convention, but they will represent such a small fraction that even if they so desire, they would make no impression on the great mass of farmers and of workers who are interested in practical legislative measures and not in visionary doctrines . . . The June 17 convention has been sponsored by the farmer-labor movement of Minnesota, which is in charge of a committee of arrangements which is not controlled by the Communists . . . It will be impossible for any one group to control these proceedings and the leaders in Minnesota and the northwest have sufficient practical political experience to defeat any attempt at the capture of the convention of any element." This statement was also signed by the secretary of the committee for the St. Paul convention, Comrade Hathaway, a member of the Workers Party, and an alternate to the C. E. C. This shows that Mahoney knew better than our C. E. C. how to capitalize the united front, by utilizing our own official organ as well as the official representative of our party, for the purpose of discrediting us and winning over the masses.

The C. I. severely criticized the failure of the C. E. C. to challenge the Mahoney-Hathaway statements. The explanation given by our C. E. C. to the C. I. was, that Comrade Hathaway signed this statement as a routine matter. There is ample reason to believe that Comrade Hathaway's signature was not a mere matter of routine, but that he as a member of the majority group, was in agreement with the sentiment expressed in the Mahoney statement.

Here is what he wrote in December, 1923, in the Labor Herald, official organ of the T. U. E. L., of which Foster was then editor, "It is true that a few reactionaries have hurled charges of Communism. The Minnesota Daily Star ran a series of articles attempting to show Communist domination of our recent convention, but this has been laughed out of court by the trade unionists and farmers alike. Many letters of protest have been sent to the Star from all over the state. The movement is Minnesota has always been a constructive, aggressive movement." Does the sentiment expressed here differ in any fundamental respect from the Mahoney-Hathaway statement of April 17, 1924?

Another example of the same tendency is to be found in the statement of Comrade Swabeck, district organizer of Chicago, in his report to the C. E. C. on the June 10, 1923, convention of the Cook county labor party: "We had decided and did pursue the method of as much as possible following the lead of the national officers of the F. L. P. and mainly stressing the necessity of unity." It is true that Comrade Foster was forced to admit at our last party convention that the district committee of Chicago, led by him, "did not direct any criticism against the Fitzpatrick group," but his attitude towards leaders remains the same.

In other words, the quotations given above as well as the past activity of the majority and its leading spokesmen, show very clearly, (1) That the majority and its responsible spokesmen are willing to sacrifice and belittle the role of the Workers Party, in favor of maintaining the united front as an end in itself. (2) That because the masses follow certain leaders, the majority believes that we must not criticize these leaders for their shortcomings, in order to maintain unity. (3) That this tendency of "following the masses" and their opportunist leaders is nothing less than the policy of Chvostism.

The fight against this attitude of our majority, (Foster, Cannon, Browder, etc.) was conducted by Comrade Pepper and this fight against the opportunism of the majority prompted them to use every possible means to get rid of a comrade who helped substantially to build the Workers (Communist) Party.

The majority never learned to understand and correct its mistakes. At this time when the prime duty of our party here and thruout the world, is to Bolshevize and Leninize it from top to bottom, it would be appropriate to listen to what Lenin has to say on this question, "The attitude of a political party towards its errors is one of the most important and surest criterions of the seriousness of the party, and of how it fulfills in practice its obligations towards its class and towards the laboring masses. To admit a mistake openly, to disclose its reasons, to analyze the surroundings which created it, to study attentively the means of correcting this mistake—these are the signs of a serious party, this means a performance of its duties, this means educating and training the class and consequently the masses," (Infantile sickness of "leftism" in Communism).

A Marxian Analysis.

The majority does not analyze its past errors in accordance with the teachings of Lenin and does not disclose the reasons for our present isolation. The majority says, "As the farmer-labor movement developed, the LaFollette third party movement developed simultaneously and threatened to absorb it." And later, "It was a recognition of the fact that the farmer-labor movement was being absorbed by the LaFollette movement, and that the former no longer had the proportions of a mass movement, that dictated the actions of the Workers Party on July 5 in withdrawing its support from the farmer-labor candidates and nominating candidates of its own . . . The Workers Party, therefore, cannot advantageously promulgate the slogan of a 'farmer-labor party' at the present time." This is merely a statement of what happened without attempting to give the underlying reasons and causes for the desertion of the masses to LaFollette. On the other hand the minority gives a Marxian explanation and analysis. They say, "One of the most important factors which made this possible was the error of our party after the convention of July 3, 1923, in which the F. F. L. P. was organized, in not carrying on an energetic organization campaign and actually creating an organizational basis for the farmer-labor movement. Had we crystallized and organized the sentiments, before the LaFollette movement had developed in definite form, we would have undoubtedly been successful in preventing the LaFollette movement from establishing its leadership over the farmer-labor forces, which stood for a class party to such an extent, as to leave us isolated during the election campaign. Opposition to the organization of the F. F. L. P. based upon a misconception of the united front tactic on the part of the Foster-Cannon group in the C. E. C. of our party, was responsible for this failure. A policy of crystallizing and organizing the sentiment of the masses, is a real Bolshevik, Leninist policy in direct contrast to the majority policy of "Following the masses" or pure Chvostism.

As to the correctness and advisability of the formation of the F. F. L. P., Comrade Zinoviev in answering the majority representative in the American commission, where the latter submitted all his facts, said, "We must not regret that we formed the F. F. L. P. We are glad about this fact, that we have a farmer-labor party as the basis for our movement."

Build the Workers Party.

"The campaign for a farmer-labor party was a correct estimation of the situation in the United States." (Program of action of the C. E. C. before the presidential election campaign). It helped to build the Workers Party. It made our party stand as the leader in the struggle in the interests of the workers and poor farmers. Today we must carry out the promises given in the program of action, "that the campaign for the farmer-labor party must be continued and will be a major campaign of the party in the future." The economic and political conditions at present are more favorable now than they were a year ago for the crystallization of the sentiment for independent political action of workers and poor farmers. Reaction is growing thruout the world. Capitalism is on the decline and this is the time when the political consciousness of the masses is awakening. The fact that two resolutions for a labor party were presented at the recent A. F. L. convention by two important national unions proves that there exists a basis for the crystallization of the labor party slogan. The stand taken by the progressive miners gives additional evidence of my contention. Their program, which was sent by Comrade Foster to all party editors with instructions to give proper publicity, calls for independent political action. It is necessary now the fact that the reactionary clique has betrayed the movement for the organization of the labor party, the progressive miners are "convinced that the organization of a political party of the working class and the exploited farmers is more necessary now than ever before." We must continue the use of the farmer-labor party slogan, on the basis of immediate demands in the shops, unions and among the unemployed, carefully avoiding the Chvostist tendencies of the majority. This will help us to rally the workers around the Workers (Communist) Party and will build up the party of the Communist International in this country.

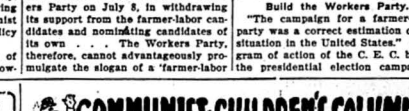
COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN



We Receive a Letter!

Dear Juniors:—I know all of you will be happy to hear that we, the readers of the junior column, have received a letter from Odessa, Russia. It was sent to us by the editor of Molodaya Gvardia, (the Young Guard) the daily newspaper of the Odessa Young Comrades. Take out your atlas or geography book and look up Odessa. Not that you have the location clearly fixed in your mind, let us proceed with the letter.

The letter tells us that our Russian comrades are eager to learn more about the Pioneers (Juniors) in the United States. It says that Russia wants to keep in close contact with every Communist children's movement in every part of the world. It asks the children to write to the editor of the Molodaya Guard telling how they live, work and fight for the workers' cause. The editor promises to publish all the letters that we send and furthermore, we will receive a letter from him telling us about the children's movements and activities in Russia. The editor further states that he would especially be delighted to receive cartoons by the children.

Of course, this letter, tho coming from the editor of a Communist paper, tells us that the Communist children of other countries want to get acquainted with us. And we want to get acquainted with them too, I am sure. So we will correspond with them, not tomorrow, not next week, but today, now, because it takes a long, long time for a letter to reach Russia and they are anxiously waiting to hear from us.

All right then, let's go!

Address your letters and drawings to the editor of the Children's Column, DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill. Be sure to say that the letter is for our Russian comrades, not on the envelope, but on the top line of your letter. The most interesting letters and the best cartoons will be sent to Russia and the names of the juniors who sent them, will be printed in our column.

Chicago Lettish Branch Endorses Minority Thesis

The Lettish branch held a special membership meeting, Friday night Dec. 12, to discuss the thesis as presented by the majority and minority of the C. E. C.

At this meeting representatives from both fractions were invited. Comrade William Z. Foster spoke for the majority of the C. E. C. and Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg championed the minority.

After both comrades had spoken the discussion was continued by the branch members, the main issues thoroly discussed, and the following motion unanimously adopted:

The Lettish branch endorses the minority thesis and instructs the branch executive committee to prepare an article in which they endorse the principles of the minority thesis and outline the branche's position in the party controversy.

At the same meeting a motion was carried to send one hundred dollars from the branch treasury to insure the DAILY WORKER'S existence and fighting spirit for 1925.

CHRISTMAS REMEMBRANCE FOR CLASS WAR PRISONERS URGED BY DAILY WORKER

There are 128 political prisoners in the United States whose names are registered with the DAILY WORKER. We know that there are hundreds of readers who will be anxious to join in a little Christmas remembrance to those men who are in prison for the cause of the proletariat. The DAILY WORKER wants to co-operate with its readers in sending such a remembrance to each prisoner.

If you have ever been in prison you will know that the great hunger of those inside is for contact with the world, for news, and for reading matter that will fit them to better carry on the struggle when they come out again. Every prisoner that is on our list will appreciate heartily receiving the DAILY WORKER and the WORKERS MONTHLY.

Most of them have been getting the DAILY WORKER by co-operation of our readers and the paper, but these subscriptions are now most of them expiring. They must be renewed for the coming year and subscriptions to the Workers' Monthly added.

One year's subscription for both publications amounts to $8.00. The DAILY WORKER agrees to contribute one-fourth of this amount on each subscription for the political prisoners if our readers will among themselves assume the three-fourths. That is, for each $6.00 donated to Christmas fund for political prisoners, the DAILY WORKER will send $8.00 worth of subscriptions.

Here is the list of political prisoners. You can help, either by picking out some particular name and sending in $6.00 for one year's subscription, or $3.00 for six months. Or you can send in the money, and we will assign it for you to a prisoner who has not yet been cared for, and notify you who receives your Christmas presents. Or you can send any smaller amount and it will be combined with other small contributions to complete the list. We must see that every prisoner receives the DAILY WORKER and the Workers' Monthly for the year 1925. Send in your contribution and mark upon the envelope "FOR THE POLITICAL PRISONERS' CHRISTMAS FUND."

Unemployment is hitting the marine industry as well as others.

AMTORG TRADING CO. SHIP 2083 TRACTORS TO RUSSIA THIS MONTH

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Tractor shipments to Russia totalling 2,083 tractors with plows and spare parts aggregating in value $1,500,000, will leave New York port Dec. 24 and 27 respectively. The purchase was effected thru the Amtorg Trading Corporation, agents for the Russian state export and import bureau. The first shipment of 600 tractors destined for Odessa in the Ukraine will leave Dec. 24, on the U. S. Shipping Board steamer "Corson," operated by the Export Steamship Co. The second shipment of 1,333 tractors will leave Dec. 27, on the steamer "Orient" of the Orient Steamship Co. The port of destination is Novorossiak. An additional shipment of 150 tractors destined for Novorossisk will leave New York early in January next.

This is the second large purchase of tractors for Russia in this country concluded thru the Amtorg Trading Corp. As the first shipment of 1,000 tractors which was made on August 27, the new purchase is a part of the agricultural reconstruction program which is being carried out by the Soviet authorities on a large scale. Information from Russia shows that the demand for tractors among the peasant population is constantly increasing.

ROGERS POKES FUN AT BOSSES FOR A LIVING

But Even Kings Had Their Court Jesters

By ESTHER LOWELL.
(Federated Press Review.)

Cal Coolidge never gets in bad, says the irrepressible Will Rogers, because "if a man will just stay hushed he is hard to find out." The cowboy humorist of stage, screen and press eases the Scandals of 1924, including the famous oil lease investigation of the senate, from the complete oblivion in which contemporary historians have shrouded them. His book, the illit erate Digest, is a pungent, piercing criticism of politics, government and life, with the sting softened by laughter. Most politicians are cal loused enough—or dull-witted enough —to enjoy Rogers' cracks even when he hits them roundly, because they accept their crooked business as regu lar and consider the cowboy only a jester anyway. Like court-jesters of old his wit is double-edged.

Now to Get Soup.

Will says "you got to admit that each party is worse than the other." He would have Henry Ford run the government along with his factory and instead of news every spring mail out those Things of his." In taking one of New York's critics to task on soup-eating he reminds him, "Pers that the question of the world today is not how to eat soup, but how to get soup to eat."

"One Oil Lawyer Per Barrel" speaks for itself as a title. Doheny's reported remark that he would "make 100 million out of the Elk Hills lease" Rogers claims "will go down in history as the highest priced gag ever pulled." Children in future years will ask their parents how much they got in the great year of 1924, Rogers says. Read him if you want some fun.

NEW BILL FOR POSTAL CLERKS BEFORE SENATE

Newspaper Antagonism Banked on to Kill It

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 16.—An attempt will again be made to kill the postoffice workers' salary increase bill in the senate tomorrow, when Senator Sterling, chairman of the post-office committee, at the wish of President Coolidge, combines the bill with Coolidge's intended postal rate raise.

The bill, according to Sterling, will be introduced as a joint measure in the senate Tuesday.

Bill Affects Newspapers Mainly.

Postmaster General New has recommended the raise in the rates of second, third and fourth class mail service, to total $68,000,000. This is another step of Coolidge in the attempt to prevent the postal bill from passing the senate over his veto of the bill.

The proposed raise in postal rates, announced by Coolidge as necessary to meet the pay increase of postal employes, affects mainly the mailing charges on newspapers. It is planned by the Coolidge administration to introduce the bills jointly, and thus swing the newspapers of the country both against the postal rate raise and also against the raise in postal employes wages. This backing of the kept press will swing the wavering senators into line, according to Coolidge, and defeat a raise in wages for the postal workers.

Cut Wages to Buy Guns.

It is noticeable that Coolidge's economy program keeps governmental wages at their present low level, and drastically reduces the appropriations for ex-soldiers' hospitals and pension funds, while it calls for exhorbitant expenditures on the army and navy.

Senator Edge of New Jersey, who was in charge of the measure, made a previous attempt to betray the postal employes when he proposed that unanimous consent be given to take up the passage of the bill on Feb ruary 2, a delay which would have been fatal to chances of acting on the bill. Edge's plan was frustrated when Couzens of Michigan objected to giving unanimous consent.

Coolidge and Butler have been working on Edge ever since election. They finally induced him to take the decisive step of seeking to delay action until Coolidge should swing enough patronage controlled votes in congress to insure its defeat.

The Miner's Fate

A powerful propaganda document against the ravages of capitalism is what the critical worker will find in the latest annual report of the director of the bureau of mines.

Of course, Director H. Foster Bain has not written the report as an indictment of American capitalism. In fact he has written it from the point of view of an eloquent defense of the private capitalist ownership and operation of the coal mines. Nevertheless there are certain findings which defy misrepresentation and concealment.

For the thirteen year period, 1911 to 1923, the bureau's records indicate that 23,822 miners lost their lives in the bituminous pits. In this period many times this number of mine workers lost their limbs or were otherwise injured.

Explosions of gas and coal dust were responsible for 3,185 deaths. It is instructive to note that the government bureau considers that a good portion of the latter deaths could have been avoided if the principle of rock-dusting the mines would have been followed. Of course, the bureau does not dare to point out the why and the wherefore of the employers' failure to adopt this practice. The bureau does not dare to state that the employers, operating the mines for private profit, would not expend any money for safety measures unless they were absolutely compelled to do so. The bureau does not say that insufficient steps have been taken to force the bosses to prevent accidents of this sort.

Mining is perhaps the most hazardous occupation. The dangers confronting the workers in other industries differ only in frequency and perhaps in seriousness. But the cause of these dangers is the same in all industries. The capitalist greed for fabulous dividends is the primary source of the evil. The workers, in self-defense, must organize themselves to remove this condition, to abolish the profit-owning system and substitute therefor the collective ownership and operation of the means of production and exchange—the Communist society.

When Murder Is Not Murder

The spokesmen abroad of the first Workers' and Peasants' Republic, Soviet Russia, the Soviet ambassadors, are men and women who take their lives in their hands the moment they leave the boundaries of Russia.

The recent attempt on the life of Krassin in Paris recalls the murder of Vorovsky in Switzerland—as cold-blooded a piece of capitalist vengeance as history records. Only the fear of mass outbursts among the workers stands between Soviet ambassadors and death in every country, nations which boast of their civilization and which denounce the government of Soviet Russia as a government of savages.

"We cannot shake hands with murderers," says the righteous Baldwin, but forgery and murder are commonplaces of British diplomacy everywhere. Had the attempt on Krassin's life succeeded there would have been great rejoicing in Downing street and something said about reaping the harvest, etc. Murder is not murder when a Soviet ambassador is the victim.

The workers and peasants of Russia have not allowed the murder of their spokesmen to go unnoticed. In Moscow, the street on which are all the foreign embassies, has been named Vorovsky. It is an endless reminder to the capitalist diplomats that the workers and peasants remember Vorovsky and those whose hands are stained with his blood. They are not allowed to forget that the Russian workers and peasants remember.

The murder of Soviet ambassadors does not retard the revolution but hastens it. That is probably why more of them have not met the fate of Vorovsky.

Capitalism sees that its assassins bring nearer its own death.

The "Friends" of the Farmers

One of the most powerful open shop agencies in the country, the United States chamber of commerce, is again making a pretense at being interested in the relief of depressed agriculture. The other day its president and ex-president were closeted for hours with Coolidge in order to help the latter "solve" the farm crisis.

First of all, we wonder what happened to all the talk about agricultural prosperity that we heard on the eve of the last election. Apparently the farmers shared very little in the price rise of wheat.

The suggestions of the United States chamber of commerce for farm relief are instructive and shed welcome light on the real character of its aims. The chamber is prepared to use lighter farm taxation. Everybody knows that this is only being used by the open shoppers as an excuse for securing a cut in their own tax bills. The financiers' plan tells the farmers to continue waiting for the "favorable" play of natural forces.

But when the question of the reduction of railway freight rates is dealt with, we find that the chamber is one of those deadly enemies that the farmers must destroy in order to avoid total degradation. Says the chamber of commerce: "We believe that every possible aid should be extended to farm co-operative organizations, EXCEPT that government financial assistance should not be used to displace the tried and proved facilities of established industry."

Here we have the pith of the whole question. Big business will see to it that not a cent will be voted by the government for farm relief. Big business must enforce a niggardly governmental policy towards workers and poor farmers in order to avoid the danger of increased tax levies and in order to ensure the existence of a huge fund with which to provide for increased military and naval machines and with which to guarantee the maximum efficiency for the gigantic strikebreaking apparatus.

We have no doubt that the exploited farmers will sooner rather than later join hands with the workers in the cities in self-defense and for a united assault against their common enemy—the railway bosses, the coal magnates, the oil barons and the money kings.

The Dawes Era

Owen D. Young, the temporary and first agent general of reparation payments, has just been tendered a testimonial dinner by the elite of the employing class of the United States.

In this gathering there were found the leading spokesmen of every battalion of American reaction and capitalist imperialism. Elbert H. Gary, of the life crushing steel trust, represented the extreme right wing and several hand-picked labor lieutenants of capital represented the left wing of the guardians of the capitalist institutions.

Mr. Young, who is a close business associate of J. P. Morgan, declared that the Dawes plan is leading to a new era. Mr. Young insisted that the United States adopt a strong farm policy for this new era and that foreign relations should be freed from the "horseplay of domestic politics."

Mr. Young is right. The Dawes plan adoption does mark a new era. It marks the open entry of the American imperialist clique into politico-economic world affairs as the ruling junta. For a few years American capitalists have been the dominating spirit behind the backdrop of international affairs. With the adoption of the Dawes plan American capitalists have become not only the formal receivers of Germany but in fact the virtual receivers of all European capitalism and hence almost of world capitalism.

Coincident with the adoption of the Dawes plan there has been developed artificially and otherwise a huge demand for "adequate" naval, aerial and military preparedness. Recent months have seen a rapid increase in the number of admirals and generals mounting the public rostrum in behalf of increased appropriations and against every force that might in the least attempt to interfere with the development of militarism in the United States.

The Dawes era is the period in which American imperialism is openly recognized as the ruling imperialism. It is the era in which Yankee capitalism is waging a relentless campaign to maintain and intensify its world supremacy. We are now being prepared for Dawes plans, for France, for China and for other countries. The Dawes era is an era of bloody wars.

Soviet Russia Goes Ahead

The black capitalist press is working at feverish pace painting lurid pictures of chaos and counter-revolution in Soviet Russia. We are being told that the Red Army is shooting down workers, that industry is going to pieces and that the Soviet government is on its last legs.

These are tales woven out of the whole cloth. The Chicago Tribune, for instance, now that its correspondents have been banned from Soviet Russia, as plain liars, is purchasing most of its Russian "information" from Scotland Yard agents. The facts are totally different. Soviet Russia is on the upward grade. All the imperialist schemes hatched by the Baldwin government and wholeheartedly accepted by the Herriot government will prove of no avail to the exploiters in their dastardly efforts to undermine the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The official report of the supreme council of national economy just made public by Dzerzhinsky, its president, puts to rout these fraudulent rumors. The annual report on the railway and steel industry is instructive. It shows a marked improvement for the country.

At the same time the Soviet government has entered into a favorable arrangement with Italy regarding the disposal of Russian petroleum. Soviet engineers are making rapid headway in the reconstruction work of the great Georgian military highway which runs from Vladikavkaz to Tiflis and connects Soviet Russia with the Caucasian states. The surplus of exports over imports for the fiscal year ending October 1, 1924, is more than 134 million gold rubles.

The task of Soviet reconstruction is no easy one. The Workers' and Peasants' Soviet Republic is as much as ever before surrounded by imperialist enemies. Many of these are not as aggressively hostile today as they were a few years ago simply because the Soviet power has taught them painful and costly lessons, has vanquished or decisively defeated them.

The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is going ahead. Millions of workers thruout the world are its friends and will stay the murderous hands of the imperialists.

Gompers—"Social Democrat"

By Robert Minor

IT'S a tale they used to tell in the days before prohibition. It was in California that I heard it—California when P. H. McCarthy was still a labor king. "Old Triet" was working for drink money under the whip of "P. H." who in turn was working for the chamber of commerce and hadn't yet been caught with the ten thousand dollar bribe.

They were trying to hang Tom Mooney; the chamber of commerce was, and Hiram Johnson and Archbishop Hanna and McCarthy, president of the Building Trades, together with Tom Finn, the "labor" sheriff, and Brouillet, president of the Labor Council, were greasing the rope for Tom so as to carry out their agreement with the traction gang that the stree car men should not be organized.

I had been sent to the state convention of the Building Trades by the workers' defense league to make an attempt to halt the hangmen's drive. We were in a desperate fix; Mooney was facing the gallows; Gompers and his California agents were holding labor down; a lady socialist leader of California was writing "poison pen" letters telling socialists to lay off the Mooney case—and among the socialists only J. E. Snyder, now a member of our party, and old Gene Debs, who was not yet a red-baiter, could be heard in Mooney's defense.

Gompers, the "Anarchist."

It was the good old time when whisky capacity (in the open bar, not yet the bootleg joint) was the only talent required of the second and third ranks of labor leaders. All business of the convention was transacted in the saloon of the headquarters hotel. All who wanted the floor of the convention had to beg for it, and drink for it, with "Old Triet." McCarthy's fixer. It was there, also, that all the resolutions were written, all the tricks were pulled and all the tales were told. It was there I heard the tale:

"Sam Gompers! Hell, god-dammit; Sam? Why Sam's all right. Give him time, and don't criticize him, and he'll get Mooney out. Why, hell, god-damit, you don't know Sam. I'll tell you a story: I've sat and had my drinks right by the side of Sam, and god-dammit, don't you tell anybody, but Sam, when he drinks, he tells the boys, god-dammit: 'This is the straight goods, boys—I'm an anarchist!' Hell, you don't know Sam; he's as radical as anybody, only he's got his own way of doing things. Hell, he says to me when he's drinking, he says right out that he's an anarchist. And he is; god-dammit, he's a real anarchist; he stands for individual freedom and all that."

For those whose acquaintance with Gompers is confined to modern times, this has a strangely incongruous sound. But when it is recalled that the American labor movement a half or three-quarters of a century ago, in which period Gompers began his climb to the saddle, was vastly different from now, and was strongly tinctured here and there with groups to whom the terms "socialist," "anarchist," and "revolution" were held dear, this story told by an old-timer, is easily credible.

"Old Triet," the "radical"—"a sort of an anarchist"—steered the convention thru for "P. H." not succeeding in keeping the subject off the floor, but easing it down so that no action was taken, and the convention broke up, drunk and happy; and Tom Mooney remained in the death cell.

The Old Game.

So the game was played in the old days. Sam was secretly, over the drinks, an "anarchist," "Triet" was "an anarchist at heart," "P. H." was "sympathetic," Paul Scharrenberg, president of the State Federation of Labor, tiptoed into the jail one night after the death sentence came, to whisper to Tom that he was only "waiting for the proper time to speak out," and Andy Furuseth made a speech in the Labor Council just in time, not to save Mooney, but to save his own reputation as a "radical." And only an uproar in faraway Russia snatched Mooney, the strike leader, from the noose, and left him a a lifer's cell, where he remains, and rots to death.

But Sam was "a good anarchist" over the drinks, and a good "democrat" at the Civic League.

Gompers, the Social-Democrat.

Many a time I have heard yellow socialists in America—and even some naive Communists — express their wonder at the fact that the Communist International, in summing up international situations, always classed Samuel Gompers as among the world's "social-democrats," whereas Sam always thundered against "socialism" and socialists. . . . And yet, there is nothing truer than that Samuel Gompers lived and died a "social-democrat." In a strictly scientific historical sense Sam Gompers was—not what the social-democrats call themselves—but what the social-democrats are.

It is easier to see this in prospect than it was when Sam was alive and speaking. The hands of the clock of Time in even a technical sense brought Sam around, and all the "good anarchists" around, and brought the "socialists" around, and left them all high and dry in exactly the spot which History has marked "social democrat."

A curious irony of fate, it was, that made Sam before he died, stand before the agent of American imperialism in Mexico and say:

"Comrade Calles."

It was no accident that placed Hillquit and Berger and the fallen Debs and R. B. Morton (the California "anarchist") and Yanofsky (the New York "anarchist"), with "Comrade Gompers" in the same political boat in 1924. The thunder of the great Russian revolution drove them in the same direction (the Debs and such "anarchists" as Morton hung back for a while), and its lightning, the Communist International, flashes upon them now huddled together in the same corral of capitalism.

The red baiters, the anti-Bolsheviks, the defenders of abstract "liberty," the "democrats," the "anti-socialists" and the "socialists" alike—one and all are the same; the left wing of the bourgeoisie, the last refuge against the revolution whose name is "Bolshevism." History has written their collective name: "The social-democrats." Their brother, Noske, cemented the name with blood. There is obsolutely no generic difference between the part played by the Gompers bureaucracy in America and that played by the "social-democratic" trade union bureaucracy in Europe. And the seeming gap between the American socialist party and the Gompers bureaucracy has now completely closed.

Upon Gompers' tombstone we might write: "Anarchist of the Beer-Hall"; or we might just as truly write: "Social-Democrat"; or "democrat"; or "anti-Bolshevik"—it is all the same.

Wanted—Another "Sam."

And now there is a search for one to succeed him.

What is the nature of this position that is to be filled? Is it a labor leader that is to be found? Was Gompers a labor leader?

Gompers was a labor leader only in the sense that a foreman of a sweat-shop is a labor leader. Gompers "led" labor for the benefit and profit of the employers of labor; he led or drove labor almost literally and frankly as a chief agent of the capitalist class within the sphere of handling labor. If he spoke for a concession to labor, he had in mind invariably not the maximum that could be done for labor, but the minimum of sops necessary for the safety of the capitalist class. If he maneuvered for advantages of position, it was always for advantages for his and his bureaucracy's position of foremanship over labor.

That is not to say that organized labor did not wring from capitalism some temporary gains in the pre-war period when capitalism could still throw out some sops to labor. But Gompers and organized labor were two different things, and Gompers' role was always that of holding labor down to the lowest position possible. And in the after-war period, when capitalism in its decline can no longer produce its ransome from labor's attacks but must openly crush labor or be itself destroyed, Gompers' role became openly the role of deliberate destruction of the labor movement.

Gompers, dead, is universally hailed not as a man who won this or that for the working class, but solely as the man who fought this or that aspiration of labor. Before the war we often saw attacks upon Gompers by the more reactionary stratum of capital as a fomenter of labor trouble. During the war, and more especially after the war, when Gompers' role became more clearly that of a destroyer of the labor movement, the attacks of the most reactionary capitalist organs gradually ceased and blended into a rising hymn of praise.

The Counter-Revolutionary Dynasty.

For what is Gompers remembered now? The naive capitalist press answers loud: "For Fighting the reds!" In the epoch of the revolutionary rise of the working class to ruling power, Gompers and the Gompers dynasty receive their recognition.

In the scramble among his heirs to succeed Gompers, what are the qualifications that are offered by the different candidates?

In the Chicago Tribune of last Sunday the qualifications of the candidates are summed up painfully well: "All of them have been ardent followers" of the policies of Gompers who "has practically saved the organized labor movement from falling into the hands of a group of irresponsible radicals led by such men as William Z. Foster and John Johnstone."

John L. Lewis is mentioned, and the qualifications offered for him are but two; That he may receive the favor of the strikebreaker Coolidge by appointment to the cabinet, and that "he is the man" who forced our comrade, the Communist William F. Dunne, out of the Portland convention.

Tom Richert is mentioned, and implicit in the recommendation is the one fact: That he destroyed the United Garment Workers as a real organization in 1914 by forcing out the masses of the membership who later became the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

James Duncan is mentioned, for the single reason that he is but a sordid ape of Gompers' treason.

And last, but not least, Matty Woll, the same.

The position of head of the American Federation of Labor in this after-war period, is by all pro-capitalist sources universally conceived as having the sole function of impeding the revolutionary rise of the working class.

The last chapter of Gompers' life is as the written by the hand of Anatole France in some piece of historical satyre. For the last act of Gompers was an international act in this now internationalized world and in the internationalized struggle of capitalism: The act of striving to fasten the imperialist hangman's noose upon Mexico. Morgan, the head of the oligarchy, was maneuvering to lock the shackles upon Mexico; and the circumstances required as a first move the lending of an enormous "loan" to pave the way for virtual American occupation of Mexico. Yet the menace of revolution impeded the way. A rebellious spirit of Mexican laborers was the obstacle. . . . None but a "labor leader" could pave the way. Gompers went to Mexico to fasten upon the Mexican working class the miasmic spell of "Gompersism." It is now even conceivable that the place for holding the American Federation of Labor convention this year was fixed a year ago in the offices of New York bankers.

"Comrade" Gompers, standing before "Comrade" Calles, closed a yellow career in the truly international role of a "social-democrat."

Oh, Comrade God, if you be, as they claim, a social-democrat—then take "Comrade" Gompers to your bosom; and the red flames of proletarian revolution lick at his shroud as he passes.

BARRINGTON'S ELECTION STEAL

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Right Honorable James Ramsay MacDonald was re-elected chairman of the parliamentary labor party. George Lansbury was nominated for the position by J. Maxton, of Glasgow, and the nomination was seconded by Wallhead. It appears that the opposition to MacDonald came from within the ranks of the independent labor party of which he is a member. Maxton severely criticized some aspects of the labor government's record, but only five votes were cast against the motion to re-elect MacDonald. Lansbury withdrew his name. Evidently the so-called left wing in the British labor party has no serious intention of contesting the leadership of the right wing.

THERE is a split in the liberal party, tho there is not very much left of it. A radical group led by Runciman called with Asquith and Lloyd George as to how far the liberals should support the tories. This group organized and one of its main functions will be to keep watch on Lloyd George who is flirting with Baldwin. A rather slim excuse for existence.

• • •

J. H. THOMAS, former minister of the colonies, speaking at a dinner given at the African Society in London, amused the guests with what the Daily Herald describes as a "humorous story." "I remember once seeing his majesty," declared Thomas, "when he asked me how things were going. You need not worry about the condition of your country," was my number of applications. I have got for governorships convinces me that there is no dearth of people to carry on." There is no dearth of fakers in the British labor party to serve the pirate empire.

The diplomatic correspondent of the London Daily Herald admits that Zinoviev has won all the honors in the diplomatic war over the Zinoviev forgery. The MacDonald government was largely to blame for the whole mess but it is not surprising that the labor paper should try to shelve the blame. To its credit, be it said, the Herald, from the beginning, turned a skeptical eye on the "red plot." But had the British labor party not compromised itself on the question it could have made the tories ridiculous. As it was the tories got the labor fakers into a deep hole.

THE campaign against Russia over the Georgian question conducted by Ramsay MacDonald has been given what may prove to be a death blow by the British labor delegation now visiting Russia. A. A. Purcell, vice-president of the General Council of the Trade Union Congress and president of the Amsterdam International; Bramley, secretary of the General Council of the Trade Union Congress, and Ben Tillet, of the Transport Workers' Union, who have visited Georgia and interviewed former members of the menshevik party, deny the charges made by MacDonald and other enemies of Soviet Russia as to conditions in Georgia.

PURCELL states: "I have been in the midst of the Georgian workers. I am convinced of their economic success and of the falseness of the information circulated in Europe." Bramley says: "Soviet Georgia is alive because it is supported by the people." Ben Tillet declares: "The Soviet and Trans-Caucasia are living together peaceably. The self-determination of a nation has been realized here in such a degree as Europe can only dream of." Things are getting worse for the anti-Soviet liars in the British labor movement.

MRS. WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST visited Italy and was "blessed" by the pope. She also interviewed Mussolini and discovered him to be a fine fellow. She did not notice the blood of the Italian workers and peasants on his hands. Mrs. Hearst is not a catholic and according to the humble catechism we used to learn at school is destined for eternal damnation unless God changes his mind. Evidently "His-Holiness" has an understanding with his deity. Perhaps the "Almighty" makes exceptions in the case of those who have lots of money. His alleged agents do.

Notice! Pittsburgh Trade Unionists!

THE Pittsburgh, Pa., branch of the Trade Union Educational League will hold its regular monthly meeting Sunday, Dec. 21, 2 p. m., at 807 James St., N. S. All progressive trade unionists are urged to be present. Besides the reports from all of the industrial groups a report of the machinists' convention will be made and the lessons that were derived from it. Come yourself and bring another trade unionist with you.—J. S. OTIS, Industrial Organizer, District No. 5.

HILLMAN ADMINISTRATION USES GANGSTERS AGAINST MILITANTS IN 'AMALGAMATED' ELECTION

At noon yesterday three members of Local No. 39, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, were beaten and slashed by gangsters under command of Sidney Rissman, member of the international executive board of the "Amalgamated," and general officer working under the direction of Sam Levin, chairman of the Chicago Joint Board, in an attempt to drive the militants from the polls in the elections.

This was one instance where the Chicago officials of the "Amalgamated" resorted to hired sluggers in an attempt to stop the left wing militants from winning the election now going on.

Union Members Protest.

Because the left wing militants were passing out sample ballots to the members advocating the election of Philip Aronberg, for general manager to displace Levin, and favoring Hyman Epstein and William Savanovsky for business agents at large, they were set upon, in some cases by the union officials personally and so badly beaten that some are under physician's care. Hundreds of the A. C. W. membership protested and demanded that such disgraceful conduct be stopped.

At 12 noon, Sam Simonian, member of Local 39, was distributing the red cards bearing the sample ballot candidates of the left wing, at Horan's Hall, 810 W. Madison street, when seven gangsters fell upon him.

One stuck a gun against him and after they had taken his sample ballots, they forced him into the alleyway and while some held him, the others beat him in the face, and inflicted large wounds on his head, probably with a blackjack. He appeared covered with blood a short time afterward, when the DAILY WORKER reporter talked to him. "Go get your gang" one of the sluggers—known as the "Scotch gang," called after Simonian as he was forced at revolver point to leave the neighborhood of the polling place.

Slug Girl Worker.

Helen Kaplan, also a member of Local 39, was beaten and bruised by the Amalgamated officials themselves, at the union hall at 409 S. Halsted street, when she attempted to distribute the red sample ballots shortly after the assault on Simonian.

She went upstairs in the union hall, distributing ballots among the unemployed. Sydney Rissman, member of the national fi. E. B. and right-hand man of Levin, ordered Helen Kaplan out, and refused to discuss the right

BIG VOTE IN THE U. M. W. OF A. FOR THE LEFT WING

Voyzey Leads Lewis in West Frankfort

The revolutionary left wing in the United Mine Workers of America is making an excellent showing in the union election.

In West Frankfort, Illinois, Local 959, in the face of bitter and organized opposition of the Ku Klux Klan combined with the Lewis gang, the left wing candidate for president, George Voyzey, overwhelmingly carried the local with 421 votes against only 164 for John L. Lewis.

For vice-president, Arley Staples, the left winger, even more decisively defeated the Lewis gangster, Phil Murray, by a vote of 411 to 156; while Joseph Nearing, the left wing candidate who hails from Nova Scotia, running against William Green for secretary-treasurer, won the local by a vote of 311 to 204.

From Local 2470 at Ankeny, Iowa, comes the result of the battle put up by the revolutionary miners. On the international ticket, the local went for Voyzey by 92 votes against 62 for Lewis; for Arley Staples by 89 votes against Phil Murray's 59 votes. Nearing lagged but one vote behind Green's 73 for secretary-treasurer.

The assault of the left wing is rocking the Lewis machine. The coal diggers, the fellows underground, want the program of the left wing. All left wingers should report the local vote to the Trade Union Educational League, 1113 Washington boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Laid Up for Repairs.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 17.—Ambassador Sheffield will leave tomorrow for Cuernavaca, a nearby health resort, where he will rest for ten days, he announced today. He intends later to sail for Havana or Miami.

POSTOFFICE CLERKS' RESOLUTION DEMANDS SENATE ACT ON BILL

A resolution calling on the workers to bring pressure to bear on the senate to pass the bill providing for a wage increase to postal employes was passed by the Chicago Union of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks. "The wage requirements of the bill," the resolution reads, "are based upon the ucbiased report of the United States bureau of labor."

"The provision for revenues to support the requirements of the bill can be covered adequately in a subsequent measure. It is cruelly unjust to penalize the postal workers any further," the resolution adds.

HUTCHESON CANS ORGANIZERS WHO LOST HIM VOTES

No Good If They Can't Steal Election

By ANDREW OVERGAARD,
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 17.—As a reward for failing to deliver the votes of the Detroit locals to his majesty, King Hutcheson, all the local organizers who were on the payroll of the general office will be laid off.

The organizers not only failed to deliver the votes to Hutchteson but failed to prevent Rosen, the progressive candidate, from carrying Detroit.

Rosen carried the election here with a majority of about 40 over Hutcheson, so naturally his organizers have failed to do their work, hence the reward.

The district council of carpenters here has been under the direct supervision of Hutcheson until the present time and the charge of the situation has been placed in the hands of Wm. Botterell, an old servant of the machine, and a relative of Hutcheson by the name of Alger, who was appointed organizer after having been in the union for two months.

It is to be remembered that one of the principal attacks against the progressives was that Rosen had not been long in the organization, and other similar cries which, however, were not applied to the machine men. The progressives are determined to keep up their good work here. It is assumed that the Jewish local, which cast 118 votes for Rosen against two for Hutcheson, will maintain their organizer. Detroit has proven that the carpenters will forge ahead for progress in spite of all paid lickspittles of Czar Hutcheson.

Teach Leninism On Lenin Memorial Day

WEDNESDAY, January 21, will be the first anniversary of the death of Nicolai Lenin, leader of the world revolution.

The Communist movement the world over will hold memorial meeting to commemorate the great services which Lenin rendered to the revolutionary working class movement. Last year the memorial meetings arranged by our party for Lenin brought great masses of workers to meetings. The Lenin memorial meetings were the greatest demonstrations of the support of Leninism and the Communist movement which we have had in this country.

The whole of our party and of the Young Workers League must organize to hold even greater and more meetings in memory of the work of Lenin in connection with the first anniversary of his death.

It is the decision of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party and the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League that joint Lenin memorial meetings be held during the few weeks' period from January 18 to February 1. All units of the party and the Young Workers League should immediately organize joint Lenin memorial meetings and proceed with their arrangements for these meetings during the two weeks' period stated. The meetings should be under the joint auspices of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League and speakers representing both organizations should address the meetings. The national organization of the Workers Party and of the Young Workers League will assign speakers for these meetings.

TEACH LENINISM.

We can do the greatest honor to the memory of Lenin by teaching Leninism at the meetings in his memory. Our aim at all the Lenin memorial meetings must be to acquaint the workers with the principles of Leninism which were the guide of the workers and peasants of Russia in their struggle for power. We must bring to the workers the consciousness that it is only thru the application of these principles to their struggles thru the United States that they can achieve their victory against their exploiters and oppressors.

While we teach the principles of Leninism at the Lenin memorial meetings, we must not overlook the building of the organization of the followers of Lenin, the Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers League thru these meetings. At all the Lenin memorial meetings there should be an appeal to those who accept the principles of Leninism to join in the organizations of the followers of Lenin. After such an appeal a systematic canvas of the audiences for applications for membership in the Workers Party and the Young Workers League must be made.

Comrades of the party and the Young Workers League! There must be a Lenin memorial meeting in every city and town in which there is a unit of our organizations. Spread the news among the workers that mass meetings in honor of Lenin are to be held. Present to them the ideas of Lenin at these meetings. Mobilize those who accept the principles of Leninism in the organizations that are fighting for these principles, the Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers League.

WE DO HONOR TO LENIN BY AIDING IN BRINGING THE TRIUMPH OF THE PRINCIPLES OF LENINISM.

TWIN CITIES SET HIGH MARKS IN DAILY WORKER DRIVE AND THEN MAKE PLANS TO SURPASS THEM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 17.—Besides cash "policy" sales a total of $900 has been pledged by the Minneapolis and St. Paul locals to "Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925."

This action follows the campaign endorsement by the joint city central committee meeting held last Friday which was turned over to Walt Carmon, circulation manager of the DAILY WORKER, for a short discussion of the DAILY WORKER problems.

His joint body endorsed the full plan laid before it including the establishment of a DAILY WORKER agency and a full-time paid agent. The organization of a committee composed of branch agents to assist the city agent was endorsed for immediate action as was a plan for a local drive for subscriptions to begin within the next two weeks.

At a membership meeting held in Minneapolis Sunday afternoon at the Finnish Hall, the meeting approved the plans of the City Central Committee and a committee headed by Comrade Carl Skoglund representing all branches was set in motion to make good the $600.00 local pledge as soon as possible. Cash "policy" sales at the meeting were made as were individual pledges of over $200 "Local Minneapolis," as district organizer, Comrade C. A. Hathaway explained, "makes a conservative pledge of only $900 as they mean to go over their mark.

"We need the DAILY WORKER increase in circulation as well, to enable us to gain organizationally the benefits we should be deriving. A campaign both for funds and subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER in our district will be the order of business from now on at every meeting and we are going to make good on the campaign."

A membership meeting in St. Paul on Sunday evening resulted in similar action organizationally and a local pledge of $250 besides individual and branch pledges. A committee headed by local secretary, O. L. Johnson, and including Comrades Wangeen, Levy, Allen, Skandera, and Hagen, was elected to go over the top on the pledge as soon as possible.

BELGIUM, TOO, IS IN HOCK TO J. P. MORGAN

$100,000,000 Loan to Government

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Dec. 17.—The whole of Europe is gradually surrendering to the pressure of the Morgan financial invasion.

The less spectacular by far than the invasion of Belgium by the armies of the Kaiser in August 1914, the Morgan invasion is far more likely to have a permanent and decisive effect upon the policies, internal and external of Belgium than did the grey-clad Teuton troops of occupation. This is seen in the conclusion of a $100,000,000 loan by Morgan to the Belgian government.

Representatives of J. P. Morgan's banking house have been in Brussels for some days, and yesterday announced that the negotiations with the ministry of finance and the Banque National had been successful and were soon to result in a loan of $100,000,000 being floated in the United States which will bear interest at the rate of 7 and one-half per cent.

THOUSANDS OF BOGUS BALLOTS PRINTED BY FAKER'S HENCHMEN; MASS PROTEST MEET PLANNED

ZIEGLER, Ill., Dec. 17.—Instead of the usual eight or nine hundred votes that Frank Farrington was used to polling here when he had his own crooked tellers on the job, he only received 144 votes against 488 for John Hindmarsh, candidate for president of District No. 12, United Mine Workers of America, on the progressive ticket.

Despite the reign of terror carried on by Farrington and his stoolpigeons in Local No. 992, the vote was as follows: John L. Lewis, 214; George Voyzey, 634; Philip Murray, 226; Arley Staples, 587; William Green, 303; Joseph Nearing, 514.

In Valier the vote was: Lewis 410, Voyzey 672, Murray 287, Staples 556, Green 661, Nearing 312, Farrington 372, Hindmarsh 354, Fishwick 440, for vice-president of District 12 against 405 for Hewlett. Nesbitt for secretary-treasurer 355, against 412 for Contouriox.

Bogus Ballots.

According to "official" returns the entire ticket of the progressives was beaten. But how this was done can be gleaned from the fact that Frank Johnson, secretary-treasurer of the Valier local captured over 500 bogus ballots at Buckner Saturday and has them securely locked up in a bank vault. It is also known that a certain Farrington henchman went to the same printer with a request to print 5,000 extra copies of the official ballot. The discovery of the bogus ballots at Buckner is positive proof that he had his order filled.

Expecting that such a stunt would be pulled off, Secretary Johnson put a secret mark on the sample ballot after he got them from the printer. The ballots captured at Buckner were unmarked.

Mass Meeting Called.

There is a big mass meeting called at West Frankfort for ten o'clock next Sunday morning. Every union man in the county is urged to attend the meeting. A special sub-district convention is demanded to deal with this crooked election deal and the man who got the 5,000 extra ballots printed will be named. In every local union in the county where the machine was in complete control its candidates took everything. But in Bush, Royalton, in the new mine at Ziegler, at Benton and in the local in West Frankfort, wherever the progressives had a friend or two on the board, they carried the locals or else ran neck and neck with the reactionaries.

Corbishley Beat Fox.

In the New North mine at Christopher, for instance, where the machine has always gotten away with the election, Lon Fox got 299 votes against 296 for Henry Corbishley his opponent for the office of sub-district president. In the Old North where Bill Patterson is local president, the progressives had one man on the board and the vote stood, Fox, 135; Corbishley 131. In two locals where the progressives had a teller on the board in West Frankfort, Corbishley beat Fox by almost 300 votes right in sight of Fox's house.

Print Fake Ballots.

Judging from the temper of the miners in this field there is going to be something doing in the near future. Those responsible for the distribution

NEW TRIAL FOR FOSTER LOOMS AS NEW ATTACK

Ruthenberg Decision Denies Assembly Right

Re-trial of William Z. Foster looms as a serious possibility, as a result of the Michigan supreme court decision upholding the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg.

Prosecuting Attorney Charles Gore, has already given out an interview forecasting the re-trial of Foster.

Decision Reflects Wave of Reaction.

The decision in the Ruthenberg appeal reflects the triumphant wave of reaction of American capitalist rule, following upon the re-election of President Coolidge. The pronouncement of the judges was unanimous. The opinion written by Judge Wiest goes far beyond the worst and most notorious anti-labor decisions of Washington, Oregon and Illinois. It strikes directly at the constitutionally guaranteed right of freedom of assembly, practically declaring that any gathering of Communists at all is sufficient ground for conviction of criminal syndicalism.

It is clear that the defense will not rest here. Labor will not remain satisfied with such a vicious "heresy hunting" dictum. It is expected that fresh sums of money will begin to pour in to the labor defense council office, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, Illinois, for the continuation of the fight.

May Take Case to Supreme Court.

The defense has 40 days in which to ask for a re-hearing in the Michigan court. Whether or not this appeal will be made use of, is not yet known. Frank O. Walsh, nationally-known lawyer, will be in Chicago this week to confer with Attorney Isaac E. Ferguson, regarding further policy in the Michigan cases. The labor defense council is determined to carry the case to the United States supreme court if necessary. It may be that this is the next step.

Mr. Ferguson, who argued the Ruthenberg appeal before the Michigan court, points out that the opinion of

GOMPERS BURIED IN STOCKS AND BONDS

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.

FOR days Gompers died daily upon the front pages of the crooked dailies. Yesterday his obituary and an estimate of his all too useful life appeared upon the financial page of the yellow press.

In a single column, protectingly flanked on either side by dizzy arrays of figures and fractions, pluses and minuses, in quotation of the stocks of the lords of coal and oil, auto and fertilizer, Gompers lay at rest. At last he was at home.

These immense tables of stock and bond quotations were his pallbearers, carrying him ever so carefully to the worms. They kissed him a last goodbye. They gave his dead paunch a final little mischevious pinch, in joy over the great way this big little man had in doing the workers to a crisp.

The final chant of this illustrious, solid gold funeral cortege was: "American business will ere long begin to realize that Sam Gompers was one of the big constructive factors in the era of American industrial expansion which has placed us where we are."

Remember, the 14-karat standard bearers of American imperialism are speaking. Gompers has been rated. And in the days to come, when sensible workers are seen expectorating, it will be because they again happened to think of Sam.

We're giving Gompers a rating, too. His and his like are rated daily in our daily. We must do more of it and all the time. The DAILY WORKER has made this item of interest possible. It is our greeting to Sam's demise. If we are to hit hard in 1925 then you will have to help insure the DAILY WORKER today. Rush for your insurance policy. Rush others in the same direction.

NEW YORK SAYS 'WE'LL GO OVER TOP WITH QUOTA'

Will Make Their $9,015 and Then Some

By CHARLES KRUMBEIN,
District Organizer, District No. 2.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The need and value of our Communist daily, as a means of propaganda and a centralizing factor for our party work, was "spiked home" to us in New York particularly because of its effectiveness during the recent election campaign.

During this campaign we distributed between eighty and ninety thousand copies of special election editions. Reports that came in and are still coming in show that in proportion to energy and money spent, the DAILY WORKER was our best means of propaganda.

As a means of mobilizing our forces, "for the struggle," the DAILY WORKER'S value is unlimited. This was shown on several occasions during the election campaign.

N. Y. Edition in Near Future.

The comrades in New York and New Jersey realizing the value and need of Communist dailies in the English language, for different parts of the country have their minds set on a New York edition of the DAILY WORKER. To get this they know that they must first make secure, for all time, our first English Communist daily. In doing this they will at the same time that they are "insuring the DAILY WORKER for 1925" build up the circulation to a point where a New York edition will have to be established here.

During the campaign to establish the DAILY WORKER, the comrades in District No. 2 did themselves proud. Since then they have "come across" splendidly as for instance, during the election campaign when we distributed the special editions referred to above, which by the way, was the biggest factor in getting the DAILY WORKER on the news stands in New York. We also added about 1200 new subscribers and raised over $2,000 for our DAILY WORKER. The Russian revolution celebration netted the DAILY WORKER over $1200 to date from New York City alone.

Money Coming In.

Now we are called on to do our bit to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. Rest assured as to our going over the top with our quota. Before our quota of $9,051.00 was made known to us, a meeting of the DAILY WORKER agents, at which Comrade Loeb was present, representing the DAILY WORKER, about 33 per cent of the members of local New York pledged almost half of the quota assigned to us. From reports received and money already coming in many of the branches show that the agents at the above mentioned meeting were far too conservative in their pledges. We feel so certain that we'll toe the mark that we could at this time go to a pawn broker with our assurance and get 99 per cent of our quota as a loan. Here's to the DAILY WORKER, may she grow, mature and have an offspring every year.

Fire Fighters Win in Edmonton.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Word has reached international headquarters of the Fire Fighters' Union that the referendum vote of the people of Edmonton, Alberta, on the question of giving their fire fighters one day's rest in seven, was adopted by a three-to-one majority. Returns from a similar election in Calgary have not been received. The Alberta legislature granted the day's rest to fire fighters, subject to approval in the cities affected. Both in Edmonton and Calgary the union is strong.

UP TO NOW WE'VE MADE ENDS MEET

Up to now we've made ends meet. The DAILY WORKER BUILDERS made ends meet—these thousands of subscription hustlers, who stood ready at all times to lend a hand in erecting our revolutionary beacon—the DAILY WORKER. It was their subscriptions that hit the wolf on the nose, every time he threatened us. It was this money that continued the DAILY WORKER a two-fisted fighter. We know the worth of the BUILDERS. They must be brought into closer touch with us. They must be organized. Their number must be increased.

BARE FARRINGTON'S ELECTION STEAL

of the bogus ballots will be called to account. The vote in about six local shows where a large part of the 2,000 marked ballots were used.

The bi-annual prediction of Frank Farrington, that he does not "give a goddamn if any of you vote for me or not; I'll be your next president anyhow," is more true than ever, at least in this section of the state. Every stool pigeon on the ballot seems to be elected.

Did Not Receive Votes.

But it is quite evident that they have not received the majority of the votes of the rank and file, but declared themselves elected by a clever switching of ballots where the stoolpigeons are in control of the offices.

Henry Corbishley, of Ziegler, has carried almost every local in the sub district against Lon Fox, where there were one or two honest men on the board of tellers who would not let the fakers steal the election.

What Progressives Can Do.

Local Union 992, where Farrington's tools were always able to steal the election for him is very different this time. Corbishley was elected on the board of tellers two years ago but was served with a subponeа to appear before the grand jury so he could be gotten out of town. Of course the fakers stole the election.

The story of Farrington's war on the progressives of Ziegler is another black chapter added to the notorious faker's history. When his Ku Klux Klan allies from West Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama, who colonized the local during the last year or two were beaten for election on June 15, last they broke up the meeting. Henry Corbishley was legally elected president and the progressives carried every office.

Failing to secure order, Corbishley adjourned the meeting and advised sub-district vice-president, D. B. Cobb who was present, of his action.

The latter agreed the meeting should be adjourned and everybody left the hall with the exception of thirty or forty members of the Ku Klux Klan who remained and appointed a committee to call on Corbishley and demand the meeting be reconvened. The latter in the presence of Cobb advised them that the proposed action would be illegal so they called a rump meeting and proceeded to elect themselves to office. They elected a new set of officials for the local union.

The case was placed before sub district president, Lon Fox, by both sides and he ruled that the second meeting was illegal. The kluxers refused to abide by this ruling and attempted to get away with the local's funds in the banks but Fox prevented this by ordering the banks to refuse to honor any of their checks.

Ignored Decisions.

Two of the kluxers were in office during the past term and refused to give up the books. They appealed to executive board member Babbington and he came down to investigate. He upheld the decision of Lon Fox which was against the kluxers. After the other period, Corbishley went to Springfield and met Lon Fox, and Harry Fishwick. The latter instructed Harry Dixon, travelling auditor, to get the books and turn them over to Corbishley and to the other duly elected officers.

The kluxers appealed to the executive board from Babbington's decision. The board sent a commission down to investigate with instructions to report back. Two of Farrington's unopposed rubber stamps, Harry Madden from Benton and Carl Wright of Harrisburg came over and heard the case. Corbishley presented the facts concerning the disputed meeting to the commission. John S. Smith, the self styled Koo-Koo president declared Corbishley announced that the meeting was adjourned and so did Billy Hogan, yet these two toadies now say that in their opinion Corbishley walked away from the meeting without adjourning it.

Decided for the Kluxers.

The board on the mere expression of opinion of these two lackeys ruled that the kluxers were legally elected and Henry Corbishley, president of the local received a letter from Harry Fishwick, instructing him to turn over all books and records to John S. Smith the knight of the Ku Klux Klan and his hooded associates. This is the same Fishwick who on several previous occasions decided in favor of Corbishley. The order came, peculiarly enough a few days before the elections.

Corbishley did not just know what this letter meant so he went to West Frankfort to see Lon Fox about it and explained to the latter that the books must be audited and bond filed before they could legally turn over their books in accordance with the provisions of the constitution. Fox advised Corbishley to wire Fishwick for additional information but to date he has received no reply altho the constitution of the Miners' Union requires that officers must reply to all official communications.

Gave Books to K. K. K.

On Corbishley's return to Ziegler, there was a wire waiting for him from Fishwick, stating that Corbishley had refused to comply with the decision of th board and that he had wired Harry Dixon to get the books and turn them over to the K. K. K. officials.

Dixon got to Ziegler at noon, Monday, Dec. 8. He demanded that Corbishley turn over to him his gavel and manual. This was done. He then took from Matt Cernovich, recording secretary, his books without an audit and turned them over to Alex Horgis the same gentleman who helped Mike Rosho, the Farrington stoolpigeon, who was president two years ago, to rob the local union of something like $11,000.

This same Harry Dixon who turned over the books to Horgis had previously stated that Horgis was responsible for the robbery. The manner in which these crooks operated was as follows. Horgis would steal and sell books full of blank checks and then another worthy by the name of O. Berry, one of Farrington's most trusted stoolpigeons, would fill them out for whatever he pleased. This went on until the treasury was cleaned out.

The Cause of the Hurry.

Why all this hurry on Farrington's part to change officers immediately prior to the elections? Simply because Farrington knows that if he counted only the votes actually cast for him he would not get enough out of this local to even give his cigar box. Corbishley had warned the officers of the local for the past month that they would be kicked out of office a few days before the elections. The progressives therefore elected a few tellers to see that the votes were honestly counted. Failing to get a chance to steal the vote, the fakers put in a whole week counting the ballots so they could not reach the district office inside the time limit provided by the constitution.

The miners in this sub-district are determined that the crookedness now rampant in the Illinois Miners' Union will be stopped in spite of the hired thugs of Farrington and his Ku Klux allies.

Carlson's Lecture In Capitol City Enthuses Comrades

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 17.—The first of a series of educational lectures to be given by Comrade Carlson in this city, was well attended at local party headquarters, 1337 7th St., N. W.

Carlson pointed out the difference between Communist and capitalist reasoning, the former being inductive and the latter deductive.

With a stirring appeal he carried his audience across the pages of history to ancient class struggles.

Spartacus seemed to become a living personality, leading slaves against armies of oppressors.

Carlson analyzed the class struggle with the attention to detail of a chemist testing elements in a tube.

Muscle Shoals Will Go to Private Owners Under Terms of Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.— Supporters of the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill won a sweeping victory in the senate late today.

Combining with administration forces, they defeated an amendment to the measure of Senator Smith, democrat of South Carolina, which would have prevented leasing of the huge nitrate and power project to private interests.

The vote, regarded as a conclusive test of strength on the Underwood bill, strongly indicated its final passage by the senate.

to distribute when she told him, "You are distributing your ballots in the shops, so we will do the same thing here." However, to keep the peace, she went downstairs, continuing distribution there.

Officials Begin Slugging.

Max Mickelson of the employment department came downstairs and ordered her, "Don't give out any sample ballots, here." When Comrade Kaplan stood up for her right to do so, Mickelson went upstairs and down came Sol Cramer, business agent of Local 39. Cramer grabbed the ballots, but as quite a crowd of members gathered around, and some of the men began to protest angrily at the violence, a girl, demanding that he give the ballots back or they would make him, he was compelled to return them

The Membership Intervenes.

Then came Oscar Ellick, another business agent of Local 39, who tried the same game as Cramer, wrestling with the girl as a huge crowd of members gathered, protesting at the outrage of attacking a woman. Ellick tried to win out by stamping upon the girl's feet. When she explained to the members what the officials were trying to do, they set up a cry by the hundreds, "Give them to us, never mind the officials."

But the officials had sent out a hurry call for the gang of sluggers which had just finished with Simonian. When they arrived they shoved the protesting members aside, beating up Sam Dragonsky of Local 39, who took her part by protesting against beating a woman. He, too, was seized and badly beaten by the sluggers who tried to get him into the alleyway, so as not to "disgrace" the A. C. W. headquarters.

The gang was too much for the members, who were probably astounded at this conduct of the officials. In spite of the outcries of the members who, the gangsters and the officials who spurred them on—Risman shouting, "Break them up, break them up, at any cost!"—seized the sample ballots and drove the members onto the street, where they stood about protesting in little groups at the behavior of the officials.

About 25 sluggers took part in the assaults, driving the members right and left, and the officials showed no restraint over them, urging them on regardless of the possibility of someone being killed by the guns and blackjacks and knives of the bullies. Oscar Ellick, when challenged by Helen Kaplan, said he didn't care if lives were lost.

Jack Dlisky, one of the members who protested at the mistreatment of Helen Kaplan, was badly beaten by the gang, as were three others, one Italian being forced into the alley and badly handled. Two members who, knowing only that they didn't like to see a woman beaten, protested, when they went out to vote, were followed onto the street and one severely beaten about five minutes after they left the hall.

When Sam Dragonsky protested at the assault on Helen Kaplan, knives were flashed by three gangsters, who drove him back, while Risman was shouting, "Go to it! Go to it!" One of the members who is close to the administration, told Dragonsky, "You better beat it, for if you don't you may be killed."

There are seven casualties so far in the election for Amalgamated officials, and the election is still on.

Discuss Value of Surface Lines.

The local bankers representing stock holders in the surface lines have agreed to submit appraisal of the value of the surface lines to a committee of three engineers. The bankers are to supply one engineer, the city another, and these two engineers a third. The bankers have agreed that they will recommend to the security holders the sale to the city of the surface lines at the value fixed by the appraisers. The city has no bound itself to accept a fixed price for the surface lines.

Big Communist Task to Lead the Jobless Thru Unemployment Councils

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, a comrade comes into the DAILY WORKER Editorial office and tells how 400 men have been laid off in a single lot at one of Chicago's largest railroad car shops. The lay-off is indefinite. The men do not know when work will be resumed.

This story has been and is being duplicated a thousand times over the nation. This condition is inherent in practically every industry. It offers tremendous possibilities for Communist activity.

* * * * *

In the great Chicago industries, as elsewhere, large numbers of those who lose their jobs are workers with families. They cannot take to the road hunting for jobs elsewhere. This is left to the young, foot loose worker, who does not realize the futility of this effort not knowing that growing unemployment prevails everywhere.

When large numbers of workers are fired in a group, they remain, in great part, as a group waiting for their jobs to open up for them. It is here that one finds the fertile ground for unemployment councils, urged by the Workers (Communist) Party as the basis for the united front of the jobless.

* * * * *

Where the workers are organized into trade unions, a point of contact is already developed. These labor unions, with unemployed members, must become a direct part of the unemployment united front. In fact, they must help organize it. But this does not prevent unemployment councils being organized in the shops, mills and factories, where there is unemployment, and where the workers have their trade unions. It should only make easier the welding together of the united front of the jobless.

* * * * *

Where the workers are unorganized the unemployment councils, organized on the job, form the only economic basis of unity. These councils then become the organizers of public mass meetings and demonstrations in the vicinity of the factories, the mills and mines that have been shut down, or put on a part time basis.

United in a central unemployment council, with the workers in trade unions, they form a front of organized and unorganized, to press for relief of the jobless, for the sending of deputations to local governmental offices, and other programs of action.

* * * * *

Not only the work of organizing the united front of the jobless, but also of giving spirit and direction to the movement, once organized, falls upon the shoulders of the Workers (Communist) Party. Thru the units of our party everywhere we must furnish militant Communist leadership to this developing struggle of labor.

* * * * *

Unorganized, helpless, discouraged jobless by the millions constitute a heavy weight upon the whole working class. They gradually become a huge strikebreaking army, and aid to the bosses in breaking down wage scales, in abolishing hard-won conditions on the job, in destroying the unions.

But the jobless when closely knit together in militant organizations, including those who still have work, fighting for a definite program, and enthused by mass effort, will become a powerful force in the class struggle, wresting valuable concessions from the master class.

* * * * *

Organization of unemployment councils and the carrying on of a valiant struggle for the jobless marks a milestone on the high road of the Communist struggle for all power. The present unemployment situation in this country should find every Communist at his post carrying on this Communist work.

CHICAGO YOUNG WORKERS AND JUNIORS WILL HAVE JOINT KARL LIEBKNECHT DAY CELEBRATION

The Young Workers League Orchestra and the Junior section of the Young Workers League are preparing a special feature for the Karl Liebknecht celebration which will be held this year, under the auspices of the Young Workers League, Local Chicago, in the North-West Hall.

The subject of Max Shachtman's talk at this celebration will be "Karl Liebknecht." He will give an outline of Liebknecht's life and his work in the working class youth movement and his tragic death.

Comrade Bittelman will cover Liebknecht's fight against the social-democracy, drawing comparisons of those days with the present struggle of the Communists everywhere with the social-traitors, the social-democrats of all the lands.

Herd will outline the aims and purposes of the league and our work among the masses of young workers.

All young workers of Chicago and adult workers as well, shall rally on the international Karl Liebknecht day in our fight against the capitalist class and its supporters—the social-democracy.

Lore Lectures Friday On Current Events at N. Y. Workers' School

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.— Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkszeitung Communist daily, and a member of the Central executive committee of the Workers Party, will lecture on current events every Friday at the Workers' School of New York, 208 East 12th street.

Militants of New York, who must have a keen understanding of current political and economic developments for their struggles in the labor movement, should attend these lectures. The aim of this course is not merely to present facts, but to teach militants how to analyze the economic and political forces at work thruout the world. This is a necessary training for active participation in the class struggle.

New York militants should remember, then, that this Friday, and every Friday, Ludwig Lore will lecture on current events at the Workers' School of New York.

PERLSTEIN, RED BAITER, BEATEN UP BY YELLOWS

Rivals Try to Convince Him with Lead Pipe

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Meyer Perlstein, vice-president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, is recovering from what he claims was an attack by thugs, who beat him over the head with lead pipes while he was walking on Second Ave., near 11th street.

The general office of the union is shrieking for vengeance, and has hired, "the best New York sleuths" to hunt down the perpetrators of the assault.

The official organ of the Garment Workers' Union, Justice, which charged that Foster had hired gunmen to stage a fake attack on himself in Chicago while he was speaking in a crowded hall, now calls for the blood of those who attacked Perlstein. Foster was shot at by two gunmen, narrowly missing him while he was speaking to several thousand garment workers in Ashland Auditorium, just after Perlstein had caused the expulsion of many of the most active "left wing" members of the union.

Perlstein had been commissioned by President Sigman to act as administrator of the combined cloak operators of Greater New York, Local 2. Perlstein was attempting to carry into effect the decision of the general executive board of the union, amalgamating Locals 1, 11 and 17. The "left wing" element was in accord with this amalgamation move.

It is noticeable that in commenting on the recent attack on Perlstein, Justice absolves the left wing members from all blame, but not the right wing union members rallying around the yellow socialist sheet, the Jewish Forward.

New Trial for Looms As Another Attack

the judges completely ignores the one question which dominated the defense argument: that is, that nothing was done in the state of Michigan. All that was proved by the prosecution was the bare act of assembly. There was no proof of violation of any criminal syndicalist" measures of any kind—no action or steps toward action in violation of the Michigan code. Nevertheless, all the cases cited by the judges in their opinion of "advocacy cases," are cases in which the accused called for some immediate overt act.

Bring in "Religion" Issue.

The "heresy hunting" nature of the decision is clearly seen by the fact that Judge Wiest quoted from an article by Comrade Bucharin to prove that Communists were against religion. Apparently the Michigan supreme court believes that Christian religion is part of our constitution. In the interview which he gave out, Prosecuting Attorney Gore called attention to the fact that he leaves office on January 1, and that his assistant, George H. Bookwalter, succeeds him.

"Future policies with reference to the Michigan cases will be decided by Mr. Bookwalter and the state attorney-general," Mr. Gore said. There are 23 Communists involved in the cases, including William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne and other prominent leaders. Several times since the disagreement of the jury in the Foster case, Gore has declared that Foster would be immediately re-tried providing the conviction of Ruthenberg is upheld.

Labor must rouse itself to the defense against this monstrous example of capitalist "injustice."

Owner of Apartment House Sues Tenants; Latter Not Worrying

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Suit for $250,000 damages has been filed by Maurice Baskin, owner of record of the biggest apartment house involved in the so-called tenants' war in Washington, against the officers and leading members of the Tenants' League.

Baskin charges that the Tenants' League people have charged him with being a "straw man" for unknown owners of the property, which is included in the local real estate combine that has raised apartment rents from 20 to 75 per cent since the rent control act was nullified by the supreme court. He charges further that the agitators "by force and arms" invaded the lobbies of two buildings owned by him, held meetings in defiance of his orders, and called upon his tenants to refuse to pay their rent.

The tenants reply that they are broke, and his suit does not disturb them.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

WHO IS BANKRUPT?

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

COMRADE RUTHENBERG is satisfied that the policy of the central executive committee is bankrupt. He says it with smiles, but that does not make his statement any more convincing than if he were to say it with frowns. Proof is what we want, real proof, and not doctrinaire, oracular proclamations filled with platitudes.

Fundamentals Versus Generalities.

To save the party from bankruptcy, Comrade Ruthenberg finds it necessary, in his article of Dec. 15, "to restate a few fundamentals." This is very nice. Fundamentals, I am sure, can't hurt us. The more often we restate them the better for our party. But, Comrade Ruthenberg, we want fundamentals, real fundamentals and not platitudes or empty generalities.

Karl Marx's teachings are not of the nature of salad dressing to be embellished or to make palatable certain kinds of otherwise rotten food, physical or mental. You cannot successfully employ Marxian phraseology to cover up an essentially non-Marxian method of analysis and reasoning.

You want fundamentals, don't you? If so, let us begin the business in earnest. What is all this fuss about if I am not mistaken, we are trying here to formulate a policy for the immediate tasks of our party. Are we not? Remember, for the immediate tasks of our party. We are trying to find—in the language of Lenin —that particular link in the chain of present day events, which we can seize upon and hold on to in order to pull the whole chain in the direction of our general strategy. This, Comrade Ruthenberg, is one of the fundamentals of both Marxism and Leninism. We want you to remember that what we are now trying to do is not to show the world that we are familiar with Marxian terminology (altho this, too, is very important), but to determine the immediate tactical objective of our party, upon which we can concentrate and for which we can carry on a successful struggle.

Assuming that we all agree on our general strategy, which is to make the Workers (Communist) Party a real factor in the American class struggle, our immediate tactical objective should be determined by two main considerations.

First, the specific nature of the class struggle of today, mind you, not the nature of the class struggle of a year ago or of a year later, but the peculiar characteristics of the present day class struggle. This, too, Comrade Ruthenberg, is Marxism. The class struggle is not a fixed, static proposition. And if you really believe what you say, that capitalism in America is on the decline, then you should know that one of the main characteristics of the period of declining capitalism is a constant change in the groupings and relations of social forces. This being the case, our immediate tactical objective must be determined, not by the class struggle in general, nor by a general discourse on independent political action, but by the peculiar, concrete characteristics of the social groupings and their mutual relations as they exist in this particular situation.

Second, the strength of our own party. This is the second consideration that must determine our immediate tactical objective. It is just as important as the first one. An example might be of service. Now in our midst will come a time when it would be very good for the revolutionary movement of America to overthrow the domination of the Gompers machine in the American Federation of Labor. Wouldn't it? But because of the comparative weakness of our party and of the left wing in the trade unions generally, the above aim has not yet become our immediate tactical objective, altho the winning over of the unions is part of our general strategy. The strength of our own party plus the peculiar characteristics of the relation of social forces at each given moment always determine the nature of our immediate objective and the nature of our tactics.

Ruthenberg's Fundamentals.

The above is solid, sound Marxism and Leninism. Does Comrade Ruthenberg follow this road? No, not in the least. It is too difficult and thorny. It requires real, hard work. The road that Comrade Ruthenberg actually travels is an easier one: it is the road of smiles and platitudes.

Just read this:

"As Marxists we recognize that the development of a movement among the working masses toward a political class struggle is a logical and inevitable outcome of class relations under the capitalist system."

You would think, from the reading of this quotation, that Comrade Ruthenberg is delivering an academic lecture to a group of college undergraduates instead of writing in the central organ of the party on the immediate tasks. Aside from the fact that the language of the quotation is clumsy, helpless and very far from Marxian, wherein does this "fundamental" truth helps us in finding our immediate objective?

Supposing it were correct to speak of "a political class struggle," which it is not, because every class struggle is political. Supposing further that Marx would tolerate (which he never would) such barbarisms as "the class struggle is a logical outcome of class relations under the capitalist system," and as tho the class struggle is a product only of the capitalist system, and as tho the class relations of the feudal system and of all the other previous systems based on class divisions did not produce class struggles of the working masses. And supposing, finally, that Marx ever dealt in such conceptions as "logical" outcomes of class relations. Suppose that the above quotation from Comrade Ruthenberg's article were one hundred per cent Marxian (in reality it is just helpless confusion), what of it? What would it mean to us as far as the present stage of the class struggle is concerned? Nothing. And this sort of oracular wisdom is being served us as Marxism!

We respectfully submit the thesis of the central executive committee to the earnest consideration of Comrade Ruthenberg. Therein he will find an analysis of conditions as they exist today. From this analysis he will learn that the peculiar, concrete characteristic of the present situation is the fact that the farmer-labor movement, which was never anything else ideologically but a LaFollette movement, has now merged also organizationally with the third party movement. Furthermore, Comrade Ruthenberg will learn from the thesis of the central executive committee that another peculiar, concrete characteristic of the present situation is the fact that the only mass movement now in existence towards a new political party is the movement toward a LaFollette, petty bourgeois, third party. These are facts, the only important facts relevant to our present discussion. What conclusions we must draw from these facts, is a different proposition. But it is upon these facts, and and not upon the startling discovery that there is capitalism in America, that we must base the policy for our immediate tasks

We Fool Them by Adding a Word.

Comrade Ruthenberg and the minority are not only real Marxians, but also skilful strategists. Here is a sample of "Communist" strategy which is supposed to win the American working class for the class struggle by the ingenious device of adding to an old slogan a new word.

We quote again from Comrade Ruthenberg. "The slogan which we raised to express the crystallization of the movement for independent political action was, 'For a Farmer-Labor Party,' and later, when the LaFollette movement took form, in order to sharply distinguish our aim from the petty bourgeois character of the latter, 'For a Class Farmer-Labor Party'."

It is as simple as it is great. Here we are confronted with a tactical problem of the first magnitude. We find great masses of workers, organized and unorganized, and poor farmers swept by the force of events into a petty bourgeois, LaFollette movement. The question is: What shall we do? How shall we meet this situation?

The central executive committee thinks that this is a very difficult problem. The only solution we could find for it was that we try immediately to save for the class struggle under the leadership of the Workers Party as large a section of the labor movement as is possible under the circumstances and that we set out patiently, tenaciously and continually to expose LaFollettism by mobilizing the masses for immediate struggle upon the basis of partial demands. This is a hard and long road, but the only one at present open to us.

But Comrade Ruthenberg looks at us all the while and smiles. He knows better. He has a secret in his possession. He knows of a way of solving this difficult problem which requires nothing more than merely saying a word. That word is: class. Say this word and all your difficulties will immediately disappear. Isn't it great?

Really. At first we had a slogan "for a farmer-labor party," and it worked more or less satisfactorily. Then the LaFollette movement made its appearance. It began moving definitely in the direction of a new, third party, which is looked upon by the "farmer-labor elements as the party that they desire. This raises a problem. How can we prove to these farmer-labor elements that a LaFollette party is not the party that they need? Very simple. We prove it!

Here Comrade Ruthenberg steps forward and declares: Very simply. Just add the word "class" to our old slogan, so that it will read "For a class farmer-labor party," and all the farmer-labor elements will immediately perceive the difference between our aim and that of the LaFollette movement.

Thus the problem of exposing LaFolletteism and of winning the masses for the class struggle and for the Communist Party is solved by Comrade Ruthenberg by adding a new word—class—to an old slogan. We will fool the masses into the class struggle by giving them a "new" word. Such is the Marxism and Communism of our minority.

THE COMRADES OF THE MINORITY REPLY TO THE COMRADES OF THE MINORITY

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

THE headline above this article is not the result of a typographical error. It is the result of a considered belief that the comrades who are at present the constituted minority of the party's central executive committee, are putting forth arguments which have at one time or another been laid low by none other than this same minority. Further, that these comrades, despite their attempts to change the basis of discussion to issues of secondary importance, are now confronted with the ghost of their more logical past which they will not so easily be able to wave away with a flip of the ever-ready pen or with the label of Fosterian industrialism, Canadian opportunism, or its combination—majority opportunist syndicalism.

Without further introduction, I produce the first two pieces of evidence, taken from the thesis on the present economic and political situation and on labor party policy, proposed by central executive committee (the then majority and present minority), as printed in the record of the third national convention of the party, the Second Year of the Workers Party of America. In section 4, sub-paragraph a, of the thesis, is found the following significant statement:

"The third party movement and the Ford movement. The workers and exploited farmers of the United States have for so many years supported the republican and democratic parties that any organization which breaks away from these old parties will have a tremendous appeal for them and they will not differentiate between such a general third party movement and the class farmer-labor movement. Unless there is a national rallying point for the existing farmer-labor groups which represent the class parties there is great danger that these isolated groups will be swept into the third party movement and thus the whole movement for a class labor party will be halted for years to come."

The danger that was feared by the comrades of the present minority has realized itself. What has happened is exactly what the comrades of the minority at one time predicted practically, and what the comrades of the present majority state! But that is not all. These comrades of the minority at one time went even further in their agreement with the present majority. In sub-paragraph c is to be found this statement:

"The presidential campaign of 1924, will be one of the most vital importance to the labor party movement. Unless there is a national crystallization of the labor party movement enabling it to nominate a presidential candidate and to conduct a nation-wide campaign, the movement will receive a severe setback and there will be no hope for organizing a class-labor party on a national scale for some years to come. The whole life of the movement depends upon a national organization and a national campaign and such a campaign is bound to awaken great enthusiasm and enable the class farmer-labor party idea to make great strides forward."

Exactly! The slogan of the "mass, class farmer-labor party" which had already lost its ability to move masses in the face of the growing strides of the LaFollette movement (and it must be remembered that the minority comrades then maintained that the two were will not differentiate between such a general third party movement and the class farmer-labor movement")—this slogan became one of those "magnificent, catching, intoxicating slogans which have no basis" as Lenin wrote, slogans that are of "the nature of the revolutionary phrase" (Lenin).

And, without in the least reflecting on the sober character of the comrades of the minority, I suggest that they have become slightly intoxicated with this beautiful slogan, and that like all good inebriates, they continue to hiccough the call for "a class farmer-labor party"—having dropped, (in the excitement, presumably), the "mass" aspect of this mirage.

Let these comrades reply to the statements they had themselves made less than a year ago, prophesying so clearly the general position now taken by the C. E. C. Let them show where there exists any group, outside of the Workers Party, that can be drawn into a movement for a class farmer-labor party.

And, comrades of the minority, do not bring in the Minnesota farmer-labor party, which Comrade Pepper called a people's movement, not a class movement; nor the Washington anti-Communist farmer-labor party with its LaFollette program; nor our North Dakota bubble of a farmer-labor party; nor any of other fakes with which you are embellishing your show.

And don't forget your own party program, which says that "a real labor party cannot be formed without the labor unions and organizations of exploited farmers, tenant farmers, and farm laborers."

Or perhaps you want to slip over on the party what Comrade Pepper once correctly termed "a political swindle and a miscarriage."

I AM WITH THE MAJORITY

By ANNA LITVAKOFF.

SINCE there are so many views in circulation regarding our policy, the policy of the majority, I read with profound interest this controversy as it is presented by both sides. My ordinary worker's brain is at a loss to decide just what attitude to take. If I agitate for a mass farmer-labor party, I am pronounced a Communist. If, on the other hand, I agitate for a great mass Communistic movement, for the Workers Party of America, which is a section of the Third International, then I am crowned with the titles of "syndicalist" and "opportunist"; titles I have so often heard in our office. In order to arrive at a logical conclusion, I am going to analyze these facts from both angles.

The majority, in their statement after elections, came out with facts as to the proportion of votes each party received, and it was surprising to note the comparatively small portion of votes the LaFollette party received. LaFollette, who was so popular during the election, LaFollette, the Messiah! It was astonishing to note prior to the elections, how rapidly he won over these multitudes of poor farmers who had lost everything, and large numbers of workers who tried to get into the farmer-labor party before the campaign. He won them over with the vision that he was their Messiah. And the general opinion prevailed that because Gompers with his bureaucrats endorsed LaFollette he would draw the greatest majority if not all the votes. But what did we discover at election? LaFollette did not receive the expected support. We have made even a greater discovery that American workers and poor farmers are not yet ripe, not only for a class farmer-labor party, but for even such a party as LaFollette, which represents the petty bourgeoisie, professionals and some of the bureaucrats from the unions, and even they deserted him in the end and returned to their old policy—"reward friends and punish enemies."

Summing up this situation and summing up the work, the energy and money the Workers Party spent for the farmer-labor party, there is only one solution. We must give all our energy, time and money to work up the Workers Party as the Communist Party of the United States under our own name.

In looking over the thesis of the minority, I saw to my amazement, only abstract statements, disjointed and lacking in concreteness that it would be risky to base a policy.

In Comrade Ruthenberg's article, "the Logic of the Majority," he concludes, "I am against folding hands." Is this to be interpreted that the Workers Party will be of no value to the labor movements of the United States if the farmer-labor party is abandoned? In answer to this I want to stress a few facts. What about the Paterson strike? It gave extensive publicity to the Workers Party without any mention of farmer-labor party. In the coal region, for instance, where the outlaw strike is raging; if we take the proper stand, the Workers Party gains prestige and receives publicity. This means that the Workers Party has enough work in the political and industrial fields. Working toward a certain goal with a direction is reaching it, and this is the Workers Party. But employing substitutes, such as the farmer-labor party, is nothing more than trying to reach the goal in the most dangerous and roundabout way; this is rather an uncertain road. It reminds me of an incident. A worker sitting next to me in a shop where I worked during the campaign, tried to convince me that we Communists were too extreme. "Why," said he, "should you vote directly for Foster? Why don't you work the issue gradually by voting first for a progressive, then for a radical, then for Foster!" The comrades of the minority are portraying the same psychology, namely: the workers are not yet ripe for the Workers Party. Use the gradual method of first the farmer-labor party, then the Workers Party.

Having been one of the soap box speakers during the campaign, I can emphatically state that a tremendous impression was created on the masses in propagating the Workers Party of America, which I did purely and solely. In my estimation, the campaign in our own name, gave the Workers Party not only publicity, but it planted the seed of Communism in many workers.

In conclusion, I want to say, that on reading Comrade Ruthenberg's article, "Who Are the Farmer-Labor Communists?" I want to corroborate that it is very sad that slandering and epithets are necessary to substitute for arguments on the basis of principles and facts. I agree that people in glass houses should not throw stones, as in the case of Comrade Bedacht's article, and others.

I hope the minority will not accuse me of being a syndicalist, as I have been granted a license from my district organizer, and I always comply with Communistic tactics and principles.

OPPORTUNISM AND THE ISSUES BEFORE THE PARTY

By JAY LOVESTONE.

IT is very easy to sense the aim of the first bucketful of filth poured upon our heads by Comrade Cannon as his codfribution toward clarifying the party's difficult problems.

Comrade Cannon has done more than his bit to engineer the virtual deportation of Comrade Pepper, a comrade who has been of greater service to the Communist International than any and to the Communist movement in the United States in particular than all of the demogogic, hypocritical defamers of him and of his associates—Ruthenberg, Bedacht, Gitlow, Engdahl and scores of the most active comrades doing the industrial and political work for the party thruout the country.

Now, Comrade Cannon is proceeding at a feverish pace with a game in which he is unsurpassed and unsurpassable. He is now proceeding to brand Ruthenberg as opportunistic, farmer-labor Communist. He is now proceeding to sling mud at all those disagreeing with him in maintaining the Communist position on the field of united front maneuvers.

Marx once said that history repeats itself: "Once as tragedy and again as farce." Comrade Cannon's calling anybody at all in our party an opportunist reminds one of this great truth. The writer well recalls the tragic end administered by the Comintern to those who branded as opportunists the comrades working for an open Communist Party. When the ex-chairman of our party calls any member an opportunist, it's a joke. Comrade Cannon calling any party member an opportunist is a farce.

Opportunism in Practice.

It is not my purpose to call Comrade Cannon an opportunist. I need make no efforts to convince the membership of this. Comrade Cannon can establish that about himself better than anybody else, for he has long ago convinced the membership of it in parestheses, I merely recite a few recent incidents involving party policy.

1. Thinking of the present insistence of Comrade Cannon and his group that the Workers (Communist) Party drop the slogan of the united front farmer-labor campaign because the masses are not demanding the immediate organization of a class farmer-labor party reminds one of the following Comintern declaration on the American question last May:

"The Foster-Cannon group (above all, Comrades Cannon-Hathaway) mistook the real meaning of the united front and made concessions to the psychology of the masses, who still follow the petty bourgeois leaders of the LaFollette type and the reactionary labor union bureaucracy."

This is diametrically in opposition to the method of quoting these petty bourgeois leaders in order to show how the pressure of mass dissatisfaction is driving them to attempt to mouth certain phrases in order to continue their role of misleaders of these masses. This is also as different as pitch black night from bright sunrise from my point of emphasizing the fact that because Mahoney and company are now fighting tooth and toe nail to drive and keep the Communists out of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Federation, we, the Communists, only have more reasons to fight not to stay in, get in, and win a dominating position in this organization. Communists know that the only reason why opportunist leaders battle to the bitter end against revolutionists being in organizations where workers and exploited farmers are found is simply the fear of these traitorous capitalist henchmen that the Communists will separate these masses from them and establish Communist leadership over the very workers and poor farmers in question.

2. And I can hear the voice of Comrade Radek at the sessions of the American Commission in the Presidium of the Executive Committee of the Comintern on May 20, 1924, when he talked of the comrades who "have not understand enough of the revolutionary propaganda of Comrade Pepper."

3. And I can recall the fatherly advice given to the political committee of the central executive committee in early 1923 by Comrade Cannon not to proceed with "haste" in the expulsion of Salutsky from the party because of his refusal to fight for the Communists being seated at the conference for progressive political action held in Cleveland at the close of 1922.

4. And I recall the weeks it took Comrade Cannon to carry out the central executive committee instructions of Jan. 7, 1924, to write a leaflet criticizing Magnus Johnson and Henrik Shipstead.

Hypnotizing the Masses.

5. And examining the opposition to Comrade Cannon and his group to the Communist utilization of the slogan for a farmer-labor united front because the masses are not forcing us to do so thru a mass demand for the immediate organization of a class farmer-labor party, reminds one of the following motion made by Comrade Cannon in behalf of Comrade Lore in the central executive committee sessions of March 18, 1924: "That in view of the explanation by Comrade Lore that the lecture was before an open forum as part of an effort to attract non-party members and the subject was psycho-therapy and hypnotism, the apprehensions of the executive council were unfounded." This was the motion made to defeat Comrade Pepper's effort to uproot the non-Communist mentality of class opposition prevading certain sections of our party. Evidently Comrade Cannon believes that hypnotism is a good Communist slogan because it attracts masses.

6. And one has no difficulty in recalling that it was Comrade Cannon who first prevented Comrade Pepper from writing an article in the Liberator indorsing the Old Guard Bolsheviks against Trotsky in the controversy in the Russian Communist Party. Nor does one forget that at the March C. E. C. meeting Comrade Cannon voted for the Foster substitute to prevent the Workers Party from then taking a stand on the fundamental question agitating the Russian Communist Party, as Foster then maintained, a question not foreign to the welfare of our party, but one vitally affecting every section of the Comintern.

Hiding Our Communist Face.

7. And on May 31, 19924, when the writer proposed that the comrades in California fight for the seating of the Workers Party delegates as Communist delegates to the state convention of the farmer-labor party, it was Comrade Cannon who headed the opposition to this policy of showing our Communist face openly and aggressively before the masses.

8. Nor should one overlook that it was Comrade Cannon who, for weeks, held up the adoption of Comrade Ruthenberg motion to reject the application of Gruss, an expelled Salutsky follower, to rejoin the Workers (Communist) Party.

The United Front on Top.

9. And now that Mr. Sidney Hillman is openly announcing that he will no longer tolerate the Labor United Educational League and the organization of a militant left wing in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, it is very interesting to recall how Comrade Cannon voted for the Browder proposal to congratulate the officials of the A. C. W., on the eve of the convention, for their non-expulsion policy towards the left elements. The writer well recalls how this policy was adopted by the C. E. C. on April 28, 1924, despite the opposition of those comrades whom the Foster-Cannon group, in order to hide its own character, now calls opportunists.

Opportunism and the Defeat of LaFolletts.

It is a meeting of the political committee of the C. E. C. The outlook for a sweeping LaFollette victory in the fall campaign was still bright. We are considering the policy of the left wing, of the Communists at the A. F. of L. convention to be held at El Paso. A proposal is made by Comrade Ruthenberg that a fight be made at the American Federation of Labor convention for the organization of a class farmer-labor party. The Foster majority defeats this proposal on the ground that the LaFollette movement is such a success that the working masses now consider it the farmer-labor party; and that hence the farmer-labor united front of this sort is no longer an issue.

It is a meeting of the political committee a day or so after election. Overwhowling LaFollette success that the Foster group talked so much about at the above meeting did not materialize. LaFolletteism received a severe drubbing and setback. The question arises in the committee is an election statement by the party. The LaFollette "success" argument against the farmer-labor united front slogan could no longer be used. In despair, the Foster majority turned to the very opposite argument and "reason" in order to show, to their own satisfaction, that the farmer-labor united front campaign was useless to the Workers Party. Now it was the failure argument that was used by the Foster-Cannon group. The failure of LaFolletteism to score as heavily as its followers believed it would now be given as the new "reason" for the farmer-labor party no longer being an issue among the masses and no longer being of use to the Communists.

In the first post-election prophetic outburst of the C. E. C. majority (proposed to the Polpom), we find the fol-

Message to Japanese Labor Unions

(By Rosta (News Agency))

PEKING (By Mail.)—In reply to a message from the Kanto organization of Japanese labor, in which the latter expressed to L. M. Karakhan, Soviet representative, their "hopes for immediate recognition of Soviet Russia" and requested him to convey greetings to the Russian workers, the Soviet ambassador sent the following telegram to the Kanto Rodosodomei, Tokyo:

"At the present time I have less hope for the restoration of relations with Japan than I had at the beginning of the negotiations. The main and unexpected difference of views existing is on the dimensions of the concession which Japanese industrialists wish to receive. We give 40 per cent of the oil resources and are willing, should we wish to lease to foreigners the remaining 60 per cent, to grant to the Japanese preferential rights on same.

"If negotiations break up, it will be either because of this question of the concession area, or if Japan will not have ceased the occupation of northern Saghalin before winter.

"I thank you for your greetings to the Russian toilers, which I will transmit to Moscow. (Signed) Karakhan."

We Must Win Five Thousand New Members!

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 16, 1924.

TO ALL BRANCHES AND MEMBERS OF THE PARTY!

COMRADES:—During the months of the election campaign, our party carried on a widespread and aggressive campaign for Communist principles. We distributed several million pieces of literature and held hundreds of meetings thru which the principles of our movement were brought before the workers of this country.

This campaign has prepared the ground for an organized effort to increase the membership of our party. There are thousands of workers who have become interested in our party and its principles thru our activities during the election campaign. Many of these workers will come into our party and fight with us for our principles if an organized effort is made to win them as members of our organization.

We must strengthen our party. We must increase the number of workers who are pledged to carry on organized, systematic, disciplined work for Communism as members of our party. It has been one of the weaknesses of our party work that we have not followed up our campaigns with organized efforts to secure new members. As a result, we have not reaped the benefits from these campaigns thru strengthening our party organizationally, which we should have been able to do.

We can, thru an organized effort, add 5,000 members to our party by March 1. We must, during the next two months, systematically go to work to win these 5,000 members. Such an increase in the membership of our party means a strengthening of the party for every phase of its work. We will have more workers in our political and industrial campaigns. We will have more readers to support our press. We will be able to strengthen the financial support of our movement. We must secure these 5,000 new members.

The Central Executive Committee of the party has approved of the following plan for this drive for 5,000 members:

"1. The national organization is securing the subscription lists of all party papers and will classify these by districts and furnish them to the district organizers. The district organizers should be instructed to transmit these lists to the party branches with instructions that each branch organize an membership committee which will carry on a systematic campaign to reach non-party subscribers of our papers and bring them into the party. In those places where there are no party units and we have subscribers for the party papers, the district organizers establish communication with these subscribers, endeavor to arrange a public meeting in this city and try to organize a party branch. In the unorganized territory the national organization will follow the same plan of action in regard to the subscribers for the party papers.

"2. The members of our party in the trade unions and other workers' organizations should be instructed by the membership committee to make a list of prospective members who shall be visited and invited to join our organization.

"3. The membership committee in each branch shall use all other available means to reach the most conscious workers and to add to the membership of the organization.

"4. PUBLICITY. (a) As a means of giving material for the membership campaign, a short pamphlet of sixteen pages shall be prepared by the Executive Secretary to contain a simple statement of Communist principles. (b) All members of the Central Executive Committee shall be instructed to write at least one article immediately, to be turned over to the Executive Secretary, on the membership drive, for use as publicity in the party press during the campaign. (c) A manifesto shall be prepared in the name of the Central Executive Committee initiating the campaign when the material is ready to go to the district organizations. (d) The Trade Union Educational League shall issue a manifesto calling upon the militant workers to join the Workers Party.

"5. As a means of extending the party organization in the territory where we now have no party units, Comrade Snyder shall be stationed at Kansas City to carry on work in western Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, and Nebraska, to establish party branches, using the readers of the party press in this territory as the nucleus to work with. He shall give particular attention to the Iowa and Kansas mining regions in conducting this work and shall endeavor to develop further the beginnings already made in the state of Iowa to build up a party organization, with which we had some success during the period of the party campaign."

The first step to carry out this plan is for each branch which has not already organized a membership committee to elect such a committee to carry on the campaign.

Lenin Memorial Meetings Drive.

The first stage of this drive for 5,000 new members is to be registered at all Lenin Memorial meetings thruout the country. A special section in the hall should be assigned to all the new members who have been brought into the party during this drive up to that time. The roll call of branches in each city holding a Lenin Memorial meeting is to be called as part of the program of the meeting and a representative of the branch shall be appointed to announce the number of new members who have been brought into the branch up to the time of the Lenin Memorial meetings.

This roll call of the branches with the number of new members accepted is to be signed by the chairman of the meetings and sent to the national office for publication in the DAILY WORKER.

On March 1, every branch of the party will be sent a blank to report the total number of new members accepted by the branch during the period of the campaign and the roll call of branches with the number of new members accepted will be published in the DAILY WORKER and the party press generally.

Comrades of the party! This organized campaign must be considered one of the major tasks of the party. It is our duty not only to carry on agitation and propaganda work but we must organize our forces so that we can make a greater and greater fight against the capitalist enemy. The addition of 5,000 new members to our party during this campaign will greatly strengthen us for the struggle.

Let every party member and every party branch throw itself into this campaign and we will realize our goal.

Fraternally yours,

William Z. Foster, Chairman,

C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

OPPORTUNISM AND THE ISSUES BEFORE THE PARTY.

lowing walls of gloom, this spirit of abject hopelessness and utter despair:

"The fact that the LaFollette movement, supported by the workers altho objectively a movement of the middle classes, the well-to-do farmers, and certain sections of the labor aristocracy, failed to get the expected mass support in the elections, will undoubtedly create a spirit of pessimism as regards the possibility of creating a new mass party within the frame of 'democratic' capitalist government. Among some sections of militant workers it will strengthen the syndicalist tendencies of conscious opposition to working class participation in politics."

Further on this Foster-Cannon election statement says:

"The demonstrated weakness of the LaFollette movement, compared to the pre-election estimates of all sides, not only seriously retards the development of the third party movement, but also completely eliminates the immediate possibility of the growth of a mass farmer-labor party of industrial workers and poor farmers, distinct from the Workers Party. Consequently a successful general agitation campaign by the Workers Party under the slogan of 'For a Mass Farmer-Labor Party' is now impossible." (Our emphasis.)

A Non-Marxian Analysis.

It is true, the Communists should never strew their difficult paths with illusory roses. The Communists should never fool themselves, and thus the masses, as to the actual conditions and countless hardships of the class war. But this does not mean that the Communists should turn to the opposite extreme displayed in the above quotations. Communists perpetrate a major crime against their cause and inflict serious damage on the interests of the working class when they turn to propagating panic, pessimism and paralysis among the masses. The above quoted point of view would have the workers of the world believe that, with the setback of LaFollettesim, Doomsday was at hand for the revolutionary proletarian movement in the United States. In effect the above declarations are plainly a call to the workers and poor farmers to go into mourning indefinitely and put on sack cloth.

To the Marxist, momentary losses are always of lessor importance than the question of winning a strategical base of operations for the coming battles thru these very losses. Marx made that very plain in one of his letters to Kugelman on the defeat of the Paris Commune.

The defeat of the LaFollette revolt of the petty bourgeoisie and their followers against big capitalism was, by itself, an event not to be acclaimed and rejoiced at. But this very defeat of the petty bourgeois leadership, due to its wavering and weak policy, due to its lack of courage and organization, with its consequent result of being a force for the disillusionment of the working masses following such leadership, only affords the Communists, as Marx would say, "a new strategical position." This experience may be a rude, but nevertheless effective source of learning for hundreds of thousands of the working and poor farming masses who voted for LaFollette because they wrongly thought that by so doing they could hasten or even guarantee the establishment of a farmer-labor party. The election results, the necessitating extra vigilance and emphasizing the need for increased political and economic organization of the masses, affords no basis of bankruptcy of the widespread movement for independent working class political action, which has an independent source and a potentially independent existence from the LaFollette movement.

Increasing Our Field of Activity.

The fact that several million workers and poor farmers, for the first time, broke away from the parties of biggest capital, only increases the field and enhances the fertility of the soil where we can sow such Communist political propaganda as the call for the independent working class political action against the exploiters. Whatever else the election results may show, they indicate that today there are several million workers and exploited farmers more susceptible to our farmer-labor united front propaganda than there were when we first launched our agitational campaign for a farmer-labor party.

To refuse to take cognizance of this fact is to be politically purblind beyond the pale of faintest hope. To refuse to utilize this improved base of our farmer-labor united front campaign betrays a feeling of dismal despondency that no Communist can be afflicted with, a dangerous lack of faith in the power and possibilities of the Communist Party. Such a refusal translates itself in practice into burying alive a splendid opportunity for bringing the Communist program before huge masses of workers.

The F. L. P. Slogan and Our Election Campaign.

In the August, 1924, issue of the Liberator Comrade Foster, speaking for the C. E. C., declared: "It (the Workers Party) must carry on a relentless struggle for the formation of a great mass farmer-labor party." Thruout the election campaign, when many hundreds of thousands of workers and exploited farmers saw in the LaFollette movement the realization of their vague and confused conception of a class farmer-labor party, the Communists proclaimed the slogan and emphasized the need for the organization of a genuine farmer-labor party—of, for and by the working and poor farming masses. No one will deny that these tactics were correct and beneficial to our party.

What are the conditions today? Great masses have had their belief in LaFolletteism, as the harbinger of independent working class political action, shattered because of the election not bringing the looked-for results. If it was in place for us to throw out the farmer-labor united front slogan in the darkest days of July and August when our party was so splendidly isolated from the masses and when the masses were dizzy with optimistic illusions as to the LaFollette movement being their farmer-labor party, then how much more is it in place for us to throw out this slogan of "for a farmer-labor party" today when so many masses, for the mentioned reasons, are being disillusioned with LaFolletteism and its real role? Is it not true that the party has an improved opportunity to precipitate and crystallize this disillusionment when the ranks of LaFollette are showing multiplying signs of indecision, wavering, confusion and internal dissension?

(In a subsequent article I will discuss the growth of united front farmer-labor sentiment.)

ATTORNEY SAYS VETERAN BUREAU WAS INTOLERABLE

Discuss U. S. Business "in Corners!"

Because he objected to the "indiscretions" of Charles Forbes, then head of the United States Veterans' Bureau, John B. Milliken, attorney, was transferred to another bureau, Milliken testified in the trial of Forbes in federal court here. Milliken declared he was glad to go, that conditions were intolerable in the veterans' bureau. Charles F. Cramer, general counsel for the bureau, had become chief adviser to Forbes, and Milliken had no confidence in Cramer, he testified.

"I objected to Cramer's habit of taking people off in corners by their coat lapels to discuss government business and the distribution of government funds," Milliken stated.

Milliken accompanied Forbes and the Mortimers on the western trip where some of the corrupt practices of Forbes in letting illegal contracts in return for bribes is alleged to have taken place. "I told Charles B. Hurley, a western contractor, that Forbes was not a proper person to head the veterans' bureau," Milliken said.

Milliken wrote Forbes' speeches for him to deliver to the convention of disabled war veterans and elsewhere, he declared.

COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN

Why We Organize Junior Groups.

By WILLIAM LURYE,
Marshfield Junior Group.

We, the children of the workers, see how our mothers and fathers work day and night so that they can make a living for their family. Most of the workers do not understand that the bosses are robbing them of their life. They think they are getting their share. The capitalist makes $10 worth of material and the boss pays the worker $3. The capitalist then makes $7 profit. Yet the worker thinks he is getting his share when the capitalist doesn't work a single bit and takes $7 for himself just because he happens to own the machinery. Even the machinery a worker made—and the boss bought it with money he took from other workers. We, the children of workers, must know better when we get big. That is why we must have Junior groups—to teach all the children the TRUTH—COMMUNISM! We do NOT want to grow up to work day and night just to keep ourselves alive. We are out to make a workers' and farmers' government! Organize more Junior groups! The more we organize the quicker we shall reach our aim!

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 17.—The House of the Masses was filled to capacity the other night to see the Detroit Junior groups in action. These children have only been organized for a few months under the leadership of the Young Workers League here, but in spite of this short time of organization they were able to show the old comrades a thing or two.

The children put up three plays in which all the actors were children. Especially the last play "School Days" was interesting as it was based upon the revolt of the children in the schools against the domination of Garylism.

Other plays were "King Hunger" and "Children's Auction." This successful affair concluded with the singing of the Internationale and the Red Flag by the children.

It is to be hoped that the old folks will feel as satisfied when this revolt starts in the schools as they did when seeing it on the stage.

FASCIST TIGERS OF CANTON WERE IN BRITISH PAY

White Guard Ate Worker's Heart for Luck

(Special to the Daily Worker)

CANTON, China, (By Mail).—An order has been issued by the Sun Yat Sen government for the arrest of Chen Lim-pak, commandant of the Fascist "tigers" and compradors of Hongkong and Shanghai banking corporation, who was directing operations from Shameen, also the six "tiger" commanders for their active participation and complicity in rebellion against government.

But a few days before, the Fascist "tigers" were masters of Canton, terrorizing population and shooting people, brutally mutilating them. In one case the "tigers" cut out the heart of a labor volunteer and ate it for luck. It appears that thruout the drive against the "tigers" a revolutionary committee was directing military and political activities. The drive was sudden, quick, energetic and concerted.

Your correspondent picked up different proclamations all tending to alienate people from the "tigers," putting blame upon the latter and telling the people the object of the struggle against "tigers" and compradors, agents of imperialism. Dead and wounded run into hundreds.

The British consul who in the first conflict, end of August, promised to put all available naval forces in defence of Saikuan and the "tigers" now did not keep his promise, thus causing bitter comment among "tigers" against the compradors who run away to concessions and those foreign powers which promised help and did not help.

Negro Lynched in Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 17. — Samuel Smithers, 25 year old Negro was lynched shortly after midnight today by a band of ten men who took him from a hospital cot and removed him to a spot near where he had shot Ike Eastwood, a grocer who operated a store near Nashville. He was hung and several shots fired into his body. The Negro had been shot by Eastwood in a battle after the grocer had first been wounded.

SEND CHRISTMAS GIFTS TO POLITICAL PRISONERS, URGES WORKERS PRISON COMFORT CLUB

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 17.—An appeal has been sent out by the Workers' National Prison Comfort Club, 2923 Chestnut St., this city, for all workers to send Christmas gifts and remembrances to the working class prisoners who will spend this Christmas behind the bars.

Holidays Are Here Again.

"Political and class war prisoners are still eagerly awaiting release," declares the club's press notice. "Since last Christmas, some prisoners have been released. Others have been thrown into prison anew; the majority can count the Christmases they have spent behind the bars. The holidays are again here."

The organization then gives a complete list of the class war prisoners who will spend this Christmas behind the bars.

Those wishing to send working class prisoners gifts are advised as follows by the workers' national prison comfort club. "Prison rules vary in every prison. It is therefore impossible to give a specification of acceptable articles. Money for gifts, in money order form, and books and periodicals directly from the publishers, are recommended."

The complete list was published in yesterday's DAILY WORKER.

CHICAGO-ALTON RAILROAD MEN GET WAGE RAISE

The engineers and firemen of the Chicago and Alton railroad have won their demands of a five per cent increase in wages. The C. & A. railroad officials previously insisted that the working rules be changed, eliminating some overtime pay, as the wage increase went into effect. Under the contemplated agreement the wage increase is to be retroactive from July 1.

The Chicago and Alton engineers and firemen recently took a strike vote, which spurred the railroad officials to agree to the demands of the men in conference.

The conductors and trainmen employed by the Chicago and Alton railroad are negotiating for a similar agreement.

Serbian White Terror Seeks to Outlaw Communist Party

BELGRADE, Dec. 17.—The Serbian government has increased the reign of white terror, by instituting another campaign to smash the Communist Party and the working class organizations. The government has announced "the dissolution of the Communist Party." Police have raided the Communist Party offices and seized the Communist newspaper, "The Worker in Chains."

The influence and prestige of the Communist Party is growing every day, and the oppressive measures of the government cannot stem the rising Communist tide in Serbia.

FORGOT VOTES FOR COMMUNISTS IN PITTSBURGH

Blankenstein Reports Large Number Stolen

In reply to the circular letter requesting evidence proving that votes cast for Wm. Z. Foster for president were not counted, I. Blankenstein, district organizer at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, writes as follows:

Votes Stolen Everywhere.

"I have had reports from many comrades from different election districts, which leave no doubt that a large number of votes were stolen.

"It is, of course, impossible to estimate the percentage of votes which were not counted, but I will mention several instances. In the 20th election district of the 25th ward in Pittsburgh, not a single vote was recorded for our presidential candidate. In this district, Comrades Hanas and Randa, our candidates for the legislature, and Mrs. Randa, cast a stright vote. Comrade Hanas tells me that he heard from the LaFollette watcher that there were ten votes for our presidential ticket. Not one was counted. We were given credit for from four to seven on other candidates.

"In the Labor Lyceum election district, the LaFollette watcher told one of our comrades that there were ten votes for our presidential candidate and only two were reported. This was the case in a good many other districts that we heard from. I think it is fair to assume that the vote actually cast was at least twice as large as the vote shown by the official count.—Signed I. Blankenstein."

Dawes Plan Depends On German Workers, Says Morgan Flunkey

NEW YORK, Dec. 17. — Owen D. Young, first administrator of the plan of the experts' committee (of American financial and industrial interests) which is known as the Dawes plan, said remarkably little—nothing not known about the plan before—in his speech at the banquet which 1,000 big business men and bankers, led by J. C. Bedford, chairman of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, gave him at the Waldorf-Astoria. He said that the Dawes committee did not attempt to fix the blame for the war and claims that "they did not approach the problem of reparations in the spirit of imposing a penalty on Germany." Germany was asked to pay. Her ability to produce rested upon "the spirit and discipline of her labor," stated Young. He praised the bankers and all the allied and American officials who had anything to do with the plan as a matter of course. He put it up to the American big business men who insure the success of the plan in operation.

It is a rectangle and in this rectangle 1 1-16 inches by 2 3-16 inches are the following words—Help Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925!

It is the battle cry of the DAILY WORKER. Tho its battle cry in surrounded by a space of 1 1-16x2 3-16 inches its breadth is the total area of the U. S. A. Its ally is the whole world.

Already the lusty voices of the workers are heard, sonorously. There is power to this simultaneous uprising of the workers to rally to the DAILY WORKER'S call. BETTER LET BOSS RUN INDUSTRIES, SAYS SOCIALIST

Maurer Poor Rebel But Good Comedian

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 17.—The large capitalist newspapers in this city, today, gave considerable space to announcements concerning a mass meeting to be held by the socialist party in Arcada Hall. It was said that Eugene V. Debs was coming all the way from Terre Haute, Ind., to inspire the audience to continue the fight for the emancipation of the wage slaves—via the route of the Howell Barkley bill and other reform measures. Debs's photograph was published and Victor Berger, of Wisconsin, and Morris Hillquit, of New York, were also listed as speakers. The result of this publicity was a filled hall, perhaps 500 persons coming out for a "farewell" view of Gene.

The Unknown Chairman.

The chairman of the meeting was unknown to Washingtonians. He told the audience that he had been in Washington but three weeks and that he had come here for the purpose of rehabilitating the socialist party. He proclaimed himself a socialist—and then patriotically told us that the United States in the greatest nation in the world. Altho apparently still in his teens the boy insisted upon frequently repeating that he had been active in the socialist movement for twelve years. His next announcement was to the effect that Berger and Hillquit were compelled to attend a meeting of the conference for progressive political action and Debs would not arrive in Washington until Saturday. Following this disappointment the crowd gradually began to leave the hall.

The chief speaker of the evening turned out to be James H. Maurer, of the State Federation of Labor in Pennsylvania. For an hour and a half Maurer entertained the audience with a copious selection of funny stories and from the standpoint of excellent vaudeville the speech was well received. During this entertainment Maurer seriously stated that the natives of Pennsylvania are good citizens—because they are law abiding. Why exploited miners should abide by law manufactured by capitalists in the most corrupt state in the union Maurer did not say.

Morris Did Not Appear.

Finally Maurer stated that he had not come to Washington prepared to make a speech—that his repertoire of anecdotes was about exhausted and that he wished Morris Hillquit would hurry up and make his appearance. Apparently someone had tipped off Maurer to the fact that several Communists were in the hall. So he now proceeded to give the Communists some grandfatherly advice. He began by saying that he knows the Communists better than they know themselves; that he has always been very close to the Communists. At one time he even met a Communist in Philadelphia who believed that there would be a general strike in this country. Maurer ridiculed the Communist because of the failure to bring about a general strike in an effort to release Tom Mooney from his California prison. Maurer believes that there is not only no revolutionary spirit in this country but that there is not even any dissatisfaction amongst Americans.

Maurer quoted a prominent Pittsburgh manufacturer who had stated that the Communists are the worst enemies of labor. And then Maurer proceeded to agree with the labor exploiter! Maurer emphatically stated that the Communists are away ahead of the rest of the agitation; that the Communists are too far ahead. That they can't lead a parade if they are half a mile in advance of the rest of the marchers. The Communists must stay back with the common people; seek a lower level. Maurer said that he wanted to get everything for the working people so long as he and his party, did not sacrifice their principles.

Breaking It Gently.

What socialist principle appeared in the LaFollette platform he failed to state. Maurer is of the opinion that the workers do not know how to run industry and that until the workers do acquire this knowledge they had better let the "other fellows" (apparently he thot that the term "capitalists" would be too raw for the audience) operate the industrial machine. Maurer said that he wanted to await for the process of evolution to teach the workers how to swing a pick or to drive a locomotive engine, because he feared that the workers would fail here as they did in Italy and that a condition of fascism would result. Again Maurer failed to give any enlightment as to how our capitalists operate industry—while they are gambling away, in Monte Carlo, the products of the workers' grind. Altogether the speech was good Communist propaganda. If Maurer will deliver his talk thruout the country the result will be the addition of many members to the Workers Party. Maurer was very fair and sympathetic to Communist aims—he disagreed with Communist tactics, which disagreement is due to his lack of understanding of any real fighting spirit and which misunderstanding is not felt by his audience. Maurer contradicted himself continually. He spoke of how proud he once was of succeeding in getting out a vote of 160 for the socialist party—and then heaped ridicule upon the Communists because they had polled only 167 votes, in the same town, during the recent election.

The Bill Collector.

The next speaker was George Goebel, of New Jersey, who had been drafted, in desperation, from a sick bed, to speak in place of the advertised heavyweights. Goebel told of his long years of missionary work in the temperance movement; in church work. He "Lord blessed" the audience every minute or so. He appealed for five dollar bills to pay the expenses of the meeting, but failed to get one. He then shifted to dollar bills and received several, the collection amount ing to $79. "Another deficit" remarked Laurence Todd to Berger's secretary, Mark Lewis. At one time, when the ushers were amout to take a collection, Goebel admonished them to cease. "I am running this show," he called. And it was SOME show.

NEW YORK.— Two sailors belonging to the Marine Transport Workers came in reporting jobs scarce along the New York waterfront. Two more come in the next day with a similar report. Unemployment is hitting the marine industry as well as others.

FIGHT TO SAVE SACCO-VANZETTI IN NEW DRIVE

Enlarged Defense Body Elects New Officers

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 17.—New life has come into the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair since Judge Webster Thayer denied the appeal for a new trial. Volunteers from the non-Italian portions of the Boston labor movement have joined the old comrades of the two defendants in forming an enlarged Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee to direct the agitation and raise the funds for the costly appeal to the Massachusetts supreme court.

A five hundred dollar check from the Boston Joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is indicative of the response the labor movement is making to Judge Thayer's opinion that the two workers should be electrocuted in spite of the sensational affidavits of prosecution witnesses who confessed that they perjured themselves in their court room identifications and the micro-photographs taken by gun experts showing that the revolver owned by Sacco could not possibly have fired the mortal bullet that slew the shoe company guard at South Braintree.

Unions Contribute Funds.

Other contributions inspired by the committee's appeal and encouraged by the ringing resolution adopted at the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor have been received in the last few mornings' mail from Local No. 89, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in New York; Cigarmakers' Local No. 179, at Bangor, Maine; United Mine Workers' locals at Johnston City, Ill., and Shirkville, Ind.; the joint board of furriers at St. Paul, Minn.; two Cloak Workers' Local No. 1, in New York; Bakers' Local, No. 164; Amalgamated Food Workers, New York; Hosiery Workers' Local, in Philadelphia; many branches of the Workmen's Circle and Workers' Sick and Death Benefit Society; the socialist party of the Bronx, New York, Brewery Workers' locals in Philadelphia and Davenport, Iowa, and numerous contributions from individual workers.

John Barry, elected chairman of the enlarged committee is a Boston steel worker. Michael Flaherty, vice-chairman, is a painter and member of the Boston Central Labor Union. Other new committee members are representative workers from various Boston unions. Treasurer of the committee is Aldino Felicani, a linotype operator, working at the trade. Who has given all his leisure time to the cause of his two comrades for the last four years, and Emilio Coda, a miner, is secretary.

The committee's office is at 256 Hanover St., Boston, with mail received at Box 93, Hanover Station, Boston.

PUNS IN "PUNIKKI"

AND A LOT OF SERIOUS THOUGHT.

The Finnish comrades not only fight the existing capitalist system in serious fight but also stand by and laugh at its inconsistencies. "Punikki," a humorous monthly issued by the Finnish comrades in Superior, Wis., and to which Comrade Suvanto (whose fine cartoons you have seen in the DAILY WORKER) displays his keen wit and satire, in the December issue, does not forget the serious job on the hands of our party.

"Punikki" and the Finnish comrades are in the campaign to "insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925" and to "Build On It" and in the accompanying cartoon which we reprint the artist well pictures the role the DAILY WORKER plays—that of waking up the American worker to class consciousness.

We welcome the assistance of "Punikki" and we hope it continues its serious job of laughing at the capitalist system.

War Preparations—For What?

The capitalists of the Atlantic coast want more battleships and greater range for their guns so that British workers can be slaughtered more efficiently.

The capitalists of the Pacific coast want more battleships and greater gun range so that Japanese workers can be slaughtered more efficiently.

Together, they join in demanding more military and naval equipment of every kind so that workers everywhere can be slaughtered with more efficiency.

Why do these enemies of the American working class and their instruments in Washington—the labor-hating Coolidge-Dawes administration that takes office March 4—worry so much about war?

Because their policy of grabbing everything in sight drives straight towards war and they know it. They are frightened to death at the prospect that the workers of the United States may not care to fight for their investments abroad so they talk about "defense of our institutions." Every war is a war of defense, according to the capitalists who do no fighting.

In a way they are right. Imperialist wars are a defense of capitalism and all wars except the revolutionary struggle of the working class and oppressed colonial peoples are imperialist wars.

The intensive propaganda of the militarists shows that these murderous conspirators are actually preparing for war. Let the workers of the United States not be indifferent to the campaign of the ruling class for "defense." The Workers (Communist) Party of America urges the workers to think long and well on this matter—to ask themselves if they are willing to be butchered for the honor, glory and profit of the Morgan-Rockefeller combine that rules this nation.

Oppose the imperialist war of the rulers with the revolutionary struggle of the working class for the abolition of capitalism and capitalist government.

Against the dictatorship of the billionaires the dictatorship of the working class.

Reaction in the Balkans

The Bulgarian foreign minister, M. Kallov, is out with a plan for a united front of the little Balkan nations against what he calls "Bolshevist activities." His comment on this new union seems to have been inspired by a proposal for an alliance coming from Jugo-Slavia.

The Communist Parties in the Balkan states urge a Balkan federation as a means of overcoming the endless strife and rivalry between the little countries in this cockpit of warring imperialist interests and it seems to have remained for their activity to force the rulers into some sort of a coalition. The proposed co-operation will unquestionably take the shape of uniform suppressive measures against the Communists, the abrogation of all legal rights—in other words, a united front of reaction that appears in many places in the world today as the working class comes more and more to understand that capitalism holds nothing for it but continued and increasing misery.

Behind this new scheme of the rulers of the feeble Balkan states are France, England and the United States, preparing a new thrust at Soviet Russia.

The Balkan rulers will do well to watch their respective steps. Threats are one thing and a costly war another, and it is extremely doubtful if aggression against Soviet Russia with the Balkans as a base would succeed in doing anything but establishing a few more Soviet republics and a Balkan federation of workers' and peasants' governments that would drive imperialism from this sector for all time to come.

"Evolutionary Processes"

One of the arguments used by the Wilsonian spokesmen in the ranks of labor for the league of nations was that it had set up an international tribunal which would secure uniformity in labor legislation thruout the world. This body has held a number of sessions and its attitude towards reform of rules governing seamen is typical.

In 1920 many organizations of seamen asked for certain changes in their working rules. At the recent conference held in Geneva the "labor" wing of the league decided "in principle" to include consideration of this request in the order of business for—1926. At this rate, if any changes are recommended by the conference they will affect the grandchildren of the present generation of sailors.

Samuel Gompers, the chief champion of this gang of imperialist lackeys, is already dead. So is the league, but the "labor" wing continues to draw its fat salaries for such vicious futilities as those cited above.

The incident is interesting as illustrating what the liberal and reformist tools of capitalism mean when they announce their belief in "evolutionary processes."

Christmas Charity

Charity is a great and profitable industry in the United States and in this pre-holiday period it shines in all its sickly splendor.

"The Good Fellows Clubs," the Kiwanis, the Rotary, the Elks and the humbler organizations of the babbittry, fill column after column of newspaper space with descriptions of their activities in behalf of the "kiddies," the lumpen-proletariat is discovered to have hitherto unseen virtues, the salvation army makes hay while the Christmas sun shines, the newsboys become the pets of society dames—while the canny shopkeepers hoist the prices of everything that goes to make a holiday in America.

The cub reporters on the capitalist press vie with one another in unearthing the most heartrending cases of poverty, puffy politicians have their pictures taken handing out turkey and cranberries, the gospel sharks pull out the tremolo stops and tell of the poor we have always with us, the child labor exploiters are suffused with a pleasant glow as they write a check for charity and the down-and-outers on the skid road collect the price of several square meals while the salvationists look on with a jealous eye.

Yes, this is a great season and so accustomed are the American masses to being fed with bunk that even tho the curtain is pulled aside for a few days, revealing the festering sore of poverty at the root of the social organism, little attention is paid to its cause except by Communists.

The nauseating hypocrisy of life in the United States under capitalism, the steady stream of propaganda from a thousand different organizations by means of which capitalism maintains its control of the mass mentality, is more apparent than ever during the pre-holiday period.

There is a veritable orgy of sentimentality, a wallowing in good deeds, a clammy christian charity that envelops everything in its slimy fog. "Peace on earth, good will to men," as long as they ask and accept charity but make no demands.

British Imperialism and Ireland

The Free State government of Ireland has just discovered what every revolutionist knew a long time ago—that its betrayal of the Irish nationalist struggle would create the illusion of freedom sufficiently to allow the movement to be demoralized and crushed and that when this was accomplished British imperialism would make known to the world that Ireland was a dependency as she has been for 750 years—a dependency so necessary to the safety of British imperialism that even representation in the league of nations would be denied her.

The Cosgrave gang has posed as a regular government—it assumed airs entirely out of keeping with its role of puppet, but now it has found that it is regarded by the imperialists, to whom it sold the Irish masses, as on the same level with the Egyptian officialdom—colonial satraps of the empire.

The best thing that can come out of this event—a logical consequence of the Cosgrave government's abandonment of the fight for national independence—is the awakening of the Irish masses to the gigantic fraud that has been foisted upon them after they had baptized the soil of Ireland with their blood.

A revival of the struggle for separation from the British empire is probable as a result of the notification of Great Britain to the league of nations that the separate affiliation of Ireland will not be tolerated.

Ireland needs another Connolly with his revolutionary conception of the importance of the nationalist struggle for intensifying the class war.

Defending Sacco and Vanzetti

A member of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, also a member of the Painters' Union and delegate to the Boston Central Labor Council, is vice-chairman of the enlarged Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee just formed in Boston, a united front organization that will renew the struggle there for freedom for these two victims of capitalist persecution.

Reports from the defense are encouraging in that contributions from many organizations are coming in. This is important, but not so important as informing the rank and file of the workers everywhere in the United States of the facts in connection with this case. Money is necessary to carry on the legal activities of the defense, but what will free Sacco and Vanzetti is mass protest ringing in the ears of the judges, prosecutors and their capitalist backers.

This is the task to which the Workers (Communist) Party of America invites every class conscious worker in America. The liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti by the organized power of the workers will be a great victory for the whole working class and mighty blow to capitalist reaction.

The council of the league of nations is meeting in Italy. This thing was expected by liberal optimists to bring about peace. But after every session of the league, the capitalist nations vote more war credits.

It is reported that General Pershing may be employed by a movie producing firm at a good salary. His chief contribution to the world war was posing for the movies. He can now enjoy his favorite pastime to his heart's content.

The Irish do not seem to be appalled over the prospect of creating more trouble for the British empire. Britain's protest against the registration of the Anglo-Irish treaty with the league of nations raises a question that may upset the league.

Brandegee Took Poison When Boss Threatened

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—On the eve of the special election in Connecticut to fill the vacancy in the United States senate due to the suicide of the late Sen. Brandegee, it was disclosed in Washington that Brandegee had been under pressure to resign, and that—according to Connecticut testimony—Roraback, the republican state boss, had spent a day with him just prior to his death.

This story, printed in Connecticut but not circulated nationally, was to the effect that Roraback refused Gov. Templeton a renomination because Templeton declined to sign certain bills at his demand; that Roraback then decided to make Bingham governor, which he later accomplished; that he also decided to take both Brandegee and McLean out of the senate, and that he was himself to take Brandegee's place temporarily, following a forced resignation of the latter. When Brandegee refused to quit, his notes were called by the banks. He tried in vain to get them renewed, and after his interview with the boss decided to end his life.

Bingham, not content with being chosen governor in November, is running for the senate in the election on Nov. 16.

MAYNARD, MASS., TO SEE FIRST BIG RUSSIAN PICTURE

On Dec. 19, at the Riverside Theater, the comedy-drama called "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" is coming to Maynard, Mass. This romance of the Red Army days in Russia will be shown at three performances: 2:30 6:10 and 8:10 p. m.

"The Beauty" is a rich land-owners daughter, while the "Bolshevik" commands a Red Army brigade quartered in a remote village between rounds of the then current civil war. Their meeting, instead of setting the signal for a fine private war, proves the start of a peculiar romance in which midnight excursions compete with political textbooks as weapons of courtship. The romance is all but on the rocks, with broken hearts scattered around, when a bright scheme on the part of the soldier fixes things up for the traditional ending.

This special all-Russian program will undoubtedly interest particularly those elements that enjoy out of the ordinary pictures.

Probe Bank Failure.

WARSAW, Ind., Dec. 17.—The defunct Farmers State bank of Milford which failed for $200,000 was in the hands of a receiver today, Tom J. Nye, former Kosciusko county auditor. Fifteen indictments returned by the grand jury which investigated the bank shortage were believed to implicate one or more persons besides James Shepard, cashier, already sentenced to the state prison or two to fourteen years on his plea of guilty to charges of embezzlement.

Build the DAILY WORKER!

RAILROAD MEN AND WOMEN SNARED BY COMPANY CLUBS AND "BEAUTIFUL BROWN EYES"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MASON CITY, Iowa, Dec. 18.—The railroad corporations in this section are working a very smooth game. They are carefully organizing a disguised "company union" and using some of the workers to get it started.

Last week a so-called "veterans' organization" was formed, under the guise of a mere social organization, but which is meant to divide the railroad men on the Northwestern into hostile groups of "veterans" and "non-veterans," or whatever the latter may be called. It is a smooth game and seems to be working so far.

To Divide the Workers.

F. L. Corey, a passenger conductor is acting as the bell wether to lead on the others. He had, no the capitalist press says, "given time and efforts in the past few months" in starting the organization. The newspapers frankly state that "the smoothness with which the entire program was carried out proved how carefully his plans were laid." Mr. Corey was, of course, elected president of the layout. It only admits those who have worked for 25 years for the Northwestern railway.

Another Fine Scheme.

The next nice scheme is the organization from Chicago to the Pacific coast of the wives of railroad men employed by the Milwaukee lines.

Here at Mason City we have had the great honor of gathering the wives of the Milwaukee railroad men, about 50 of them anyhow, at the Y. W. C. A. to listen to the wife of the Milwaukee's president, Mrs. H. E. Byram, lecture them upon the organization and its purposes—its supposed purposes.

Oh, Those Beautiful Brown Eyes!

Mrs. Byram, whom the capitalist reporters describe in some physical detail as having "pretty little grey curls peeping out from under a chic black satin turban," and with "beautiful soft brown eyes which sparkle with the interest of her cause," managed to put something over in her lecture concerning the necessity for class collaboration—though she didn't call it that.

The Milwaukee wants all its slaves' wives to join clubs which are strictly under the control of the company. Mrs. Carpenter Kendall, editor of the Milwaukee Employes' magazine is treasurer of the national club organization. Twelve clubs are already started, and they brot along the boosters from the Chicago and Milwaukee clubs to rope in the Mason City railroad men and women. They modestly hope to organize 40 clubs between Chicago and the coast with from 50,000 to 100,000 membership, to mobilize them against any strike or any other militant action by the men in the unions.

Of course, they could not get by with any straight out opposition to the unions, so they pretend to be "non-partisan" "non-political," etc. The bait held out is the "benefit" which will consist of some skimpy and unreliable relief, offered on a charity platter for the sick or injured and the social side of the affair, which is music and bourgeois culture, and all the flubdub of the petty-bourgeois trying to ape the rich.

"Labor Questions" Taboo.

But the kernel of the thing came out right in the opening talk of Mrs Byram, when she shook her "pretty grey curls" and batted her "beautiful brown eyes" and told the wives of the railroad men that they must "keep matters of politics and labor questions out of their meetings and must only stand behind their men in the work for the railroad." She put it over and the club was formed. The Milwaukee employes will find out what its is for when the next strike comes around.

RUSSIAN DELEGATION HEAD ASSUMES DUTIES IN ITALY'S CAPITAL

ROME, Dec. 17.—M. Jubscheff, new head of the Russian commercial delegation to Italy, has arrived here to take up his duties.

Morgenthau Gives Money to Combat Communist Ideas

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The Greek loan, in which the banker Henry Morgenthau, is interested, is to be made an instrument to stamp out Communist ideas among the refugees, and make financial profits for those interested in the loan, it is revealed here.

The "Greek Refugees Settlement Commission," working with the league of nations, is indorsed by the Bank of England, as well as by American bankers. It is planned to place the 1,500,000 Greek refugees on land, for which they will be obliged to pay rents, and repay money advanced to them. These lands are to be held as a club over the heads of the refugees to quiet the stirring unrest which has also affected the workers of Greece.

"The absorption of these refugees can be actually solved upon a sound financial basis," Morgenthau said here. "This will not alone help to make Greece economically independent, but will contribute toward the stabilizing of the Balkans."

The Greek imperialist and petty bourgeois parties are pushing the loan among Greek-American workers. Much of the money is being used, to further the propaganda of these parties and to fight the Communist and working-class organizations.

New French Ambassador Coming.

TRAITORS TO CHINA FIND FIRING SQUAD

British-Yankee Tools in Wooden Box

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKIN, China, Dec. 17.—The Chinese politicians who played the game of British-American imperialism in the regime of Tsao Kun and Wu Pei Fu, are paying with their heads for their selling out to these foreign imperialists.

The state treasurer under Tsao Kun, Li Yen-ching, was shot yesterday noon against the wall of the temple of agriculture by the soldiers of General Feng Yu-Hsiang, by order of the garrison commander. He made great fortunes out of the graft given him by American and British capitalists, some of which can be traced directly to the Standard Oil company, officially represented by the U. S. Minister, Jacob Gould Schurman.

Many other grafters are reported executed, including the chief of police of Pekin, under the Tsao Kun rule. Tsao Kun himself is rumored to be dead, but there is no way of confirmation as no statements are issued. Tsao also was imprisoned for graft, being guarded by Feng's soldiers and later, by the police in the presidential palace. Tuan Chi-jui, official head of the government, is claimed not to have known of the executions.

The Tuan Chi-jui government, in alliance with General Feng, have little resistance to face in the Kiangsu province when the governor, Chi Hsieh-yan, quit without a fight after a mandate from Pekin had been issued declaring his office should be filled by General Lu Yung-Hsiang.

Gas Claims Victims.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Dec. 17.—A woman is dead today and four other persons are ill from the effects of gas which escaped from a main here yesterday. The dead woman is Mrs. Helen C. Gunn, 77. Those ill are: Dr. C. Glenn Gunn, Mrs. Martha Gunn, his wife, Romerg Gunn, 13, a son, and Mrs. J. I. DeFrance, a nurse.

Fascist Under Charges.

ROME.—Fascist deputy, Giunta, vice-speaker of the chamber of deputies, resigned in a letter to the speaker today as the result of the request that the chamber authorize charges against him as responsible for the flogging of Deputy Forni at Milan.

Mono, Organization for the Shelter of Homeless Children

By SADIE AMTER.

Mono, an organization for homeless children, is one of the most remarkable of Russia's remarkable institutions under the Soviets.

Comrade Kalinina, wife of the president of the Soviet Republic, is in charge of this work, and surrounded by faithful workers, she carries on the great task of organizing the children's homes.

Kalinina is a small, dark, sympathetic woman, who in her quiet, capable way gets work done. The comrades love Kalinina, just as they love Krupskaja (Lenina). Not because they are the wives of men in high places, but for the great significance of their work and for their warm personalities.

In the offices of the Mono, you will see every day and all day long, children from ten to fifteen years of age, standing or sitting in groups and waiting for their turn to tell their story and be sent to the homes.

In order to understand the situation of these homeless ones, we must go back a little in Russian history. In the great imperialist war, Russia lost many millions of men, making half-orphans of millions of millions of children. In 1917 more workers fell fighting not for the czar but for the Communist cause. Then came the blockade and the famine, and thousands upon thousands of these half-orphans survived only to find themselves quite alone in the world.

Organizing homes for these destitute children and providing food, clothing and educational material was a prodigious task for a country torn and poverty-stricken and at the very beginning of reconstruction.

English, American and French gold; English, American and French troops and ammunition were in Soviet Russia or surrounding her and waiting for their chance to strike a death blow to the young socialist republic. Soviet Russia had to organize and maintain a great Red Army. And Soviet Russia had to start the industries which had all but stopped. Here was a Herculean task of reconstruction, and the Russian Communists worked unceasingly seven days a week as the whole world now knows.

In those first four years following the revolution, everybody in Soviet Russia was more or less hungry, more or less ragged. But the spirit of the Communists was impregnable, and it spread to the masses of the workers and peasants. Houses were rebuilt, broken cars were repaired; the factories started; the transportation system which had utterly broken down now got into motion, and Soviet Russia began to breathe again. And amid all this struggle in the birth of the republic, millions of children had to be cared for.

There is only one method used in teaching the children of Soviet Russia today, whether it is a lesson in conduct, arithmetic or cleanliness. That is kindness and understanding. This method is carried out with the utmost patience and love.

The attitude of the teachers and caretakers toward the orphans of Soviet Russia is different from that of any other country of the world—and naturally so. The Soviet government is a workers' government. It has no other care and interests outside those of the workers and peasants. And the care of the children of Soviet Russia's fallen workers and peasants, whether orphans of the war, revolution or counter-revolution, is considered one of the most important duties of the country.

The Mono homes are the most joyful places imaginable. The study hours, the games and singing, the workshops, the meals and the dormitories are filled with happy childish spirits, not frozen with discipline, but suggestive of the feelings and creativeness of the child.

They model and dance and draw and sing. They give little plays and concerts on all occasions. They know what the red flag means, and they love the name of Lenin. They know what the workers of Soviet Russia are trying to do, and many of them are Leninites, or Pioneers, as they used to be called.

They are in need of a great deal of material for educational purposes: colors, plaster, tools of all kinds. Nevertheless they are being educated and are finding means of self-expression, and they are happy. The teacher sits surrounded by a group of children, and each one is invited to tell a story. Or another group is having a drawing lesson. They talk and laugh without restraint. They have their Soviets and the children decide many things for themselves and make their own plans. The teachers are there only to mother and guide the little souls. In all of my visits, I never have seen an angry glance nor heard a scolding voice.

Of this new system of education much will be written. It is not original with Soviet Russia, but for the first time in any country's history, it has been made universal thruout the land. Soviet Russia is the first country to accept it and make it her own. Soviet Russia wants to turn out human beings and not goose steppers.

50,000 children in Moscow are being cared for by the Mono, and Comrade Kalinina is the spirit that guides the work. She is aided by able comrades and committees, not all of them Communists. In fact, there is today a great deal of important and splendid work carried on by non-party workers whose devotion and enthusiasm is quite equal to that of the Communists. But that is another story.

Comrade Kalinina heads the Moscow organization, but the same work is being carried on in every city and province of Soviet Russia. Kalinina and all the others working with Mono have only one desire, and that is to extend and perfect this great work of sheltering, clothing and educating Soviet Russia's orphans. They are giving their lives to this cause, and when I talked with Kalinina, I could see that she has a passionate wish that the rest of the world might understand these three things: First, that the future belongs to the children. Second, that with the growth and development of Soviet Russia, there will be more and better food, material and clothing for Soviet Russia's children. Third, that with world-wide trade and recognition, Soviet Russia's economic status will be so improved that industries will be running 100 per cent, which means an abundance for the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia and for the schools and homes of all of Soviet Russia's children.

POPE VOWS FEAR OF COMMUNISM

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THAT the present Ziwar Pasha government of Egypt is a tool of the British government was demonstrated when the premier refused to convoke the national parliament on receipt of petitions for such action from the Egyptian parliament. After the death of Sir Lee Stack—there is a widely growing belief that the assassination was connived at by the tory government—the British government summarily kicked the Zaglul Pasha cabinet out and put their handy man Ziwar in. But the Egyptians cannot always be held down by bayonets. British tyranny will some day see its Waterloo in that country.

THE Riffians are driving the Spanish troops out of Morocco and France is anxiously watching for the opportunity to grab every inch of territory that Spain's troops get their boots off. This may seem strange to liberals who believed that when Herriot, the radical socialist became premier of France, that country would call a halt on her imperialist ventures. But such is not the case. Liberal, conservative or socialist all government heads under capitalism will do what their capitalists want them to do. They may differ on minor points but on fundamental matters they will be as one.

FRANCE is not the only country interested in Morocco. Britain is also keeping her eyes peeled for an opportunity to grab off more territory. So is Italy. They are ready to jump at each other's throats in a quarrel over the loot. It does not seem to occur to any of them that the Riffians have any rights to their own country. While the robber powers prepare to claw each other they instinctively unite against Russia, the only country in the world that fraternizes with the exploited peoples of the colonies in a fight for their freedom. But Russia is a Soviet government led by Communists.

SAMUEL GOMPERS is on his way to his last resting place between Messrs. Carnegie and Rockefeller in Pittsburgh, two gentlemen for whom he had the greatest respect in life. Among the organizations to regret the passing of Gompers is the association against the prohibition amendment. In a statement issued by this organization they declared that Gompers' death is a distinct personal loss to its officers. Perhaps they were doing a little bootlegging on the side! Gompers as a rule detested demonstrations of workers for any purpose except to uphold capitalism, but there was one law he was willing to march against any old time and that was the prohibition amendment.

FOURTEEN persons convicted of cheating customers by short-weighting them were fined in a Chicago court a few days ago. The fact will not arouse much sympathy for those fined and yet this robbery is only a drop in the ocean compared to the defrauding of millions of wage slaves every day by the capitalists of this country. The difference is that the capitalists own this country and regulate in the manner in which this robbery shall be conducted. Those who step outside the chalk line are out of luck if they get caught.

CHILD LABOR GROWTH IS TREMENDOUS THIS YEAR, FIGURES SHOW

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—There were 4,000 more children working in New York City during 1923, than the year previous, and 7,000 more children in northern New York cities than the previous year, the New York department of labor announces. These figures do not include illegal child labor, where no work certificate is furnished by the child laborer.

NEW WAR LOOMS IN BALKAN ROW OVER ALBANIA

Italy Sends Warships to Seize Ports

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The flames of another war are lighting the tinder-box of the Balkans as Albania yesterday afternoon ordered a general mobilization to repel an alleged Serbian invasion.

Italy, interested in using the revolt in Albania as an excuse to seize that country and make the Adriatic an Italian lake, is sending warships to the ports of Durazzo and Valona belonging to Albania.

If the Jugo-Slav troops cross the Albanian frontier, Italy warns that she will "not permit it," and will interfere. American and British oil corporations are nosing around Albania, and their governments are playing secret maneuvers to aid them. That a new world war may start in which millions may be slaughtered is a matter of no concern to the imperialist powers.

Belgrade reports that the rebel forces of Ahmed Zogu are making swift gains and may seize Tirana, the capital, within three days. Serbian correspondents are with the rebe troops. They report that the rebels have captured Bitzam and pursued the government troops toward Kruya, which was defended by 600 soldiers. After two hours' fighting Kruya was captured, leaving only 15 miles between the rebel lines and the capital. Other victories are reported.

FRENCH PREMIER ILL; MAY HAVE TO QUIT OFFICE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 18.—There are grave fears that the illness of Premier Herriot, which has confined him to his room for several days, may prove serious enough to warrant his resignation.

His mantle is expected to fall on Paul Painleve, former premier, who would secure the support of the left bloc, which includes the radical socialists, republican socialists and socialists, but it is doubtful whether he could bear up against the attacks of the nationalists as well as Herriot.

Pleads Not Guilty.

The Poincare gang are levelling attacks on the Herriot government and accusing it of lack of patriotism. To these charges the reply is made that the present government has taken diplomatic and military steps to ensure the safety of the capitalist system in France. Much the same kind of an argument that was used in England by Ramsay MacDonald. But it did not save his political head.

FRANCE STARTS RUMOR OF PAYING ENGLAND TO EXCITE THE U. S.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 18.—The foreign office said today that it was without any information that France was backing the statement of minister of finance, Clementel, that France was about to pay its war debts.

It is reported in Paris last night that France was planning to pay its debt to England before discharging its obligation to the United States.

WORKERS PARTY SUPPORTS THE LEFT WING IN ITS MILITANT STRUGGLE IN THE 'AMALGAMATED'

"The Workers Party of Chicago accepts the challenge of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' machine and stands 100 per cent behind the left wingers who have been slugged by orders of Sydney Hissman in the election, and will stand solidly behind the left wing candidates who are contesting machine control of the union," says Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party.

"The Workers Party supports the left wing because only the left wing will make a serious fight to advance the vital interests of the workers."

The slugging Wednesday came when members of the union were distributing sample ballots, bearing the names of the left wing candidates, Philip Aronberg, running for general manager, and Hyman Epstein and William Savanovsky, running for business agents at large. Seven members of the A. C. W. were known to have been slugged by the "Scotch gang" who attacked under the direct orders of Hissman. Sam Simonian, member of Local 39, is one member who is now under care of a phyician.

"The left wing movement never is defeated," said Arne Swabeck, "the Amalgamated machine will soon find that a few sluggers cannot take the union away from the membership and keep it very long. The city central committee of the Workers Party on Wednesday night voted solidly to back up the members of the Amalgamated in their efforts to break the control of the machine which uses violence against the membership that demands a policy of class struggle instead of class collaboration."

At 5 o'clock yesterday, the left wingers were out in force distributing ballots at the polls. Today a larger force will appear. This is the answer to Wednesday's attacks.

Britten, of Chicago, Raises Cry of Yellow Peril in Congress

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—Another step in the attempt of the Coolidge administration, backed by Wall Street, to plunge the United States into another war was taken when Representative Fred A. Britten, Chicago, called for an organized fight on the "yellow peril."

Britten declared his intention of bringing before the house of representatives a resolution calling a conference "of all white peoples of the Pacific for a common defense against the encroachment of the yellow peril."

Britten is attempting to scare the people of the United States into a competetive armament race with Japan, whose countrymen have already been excluded from this country by congress.

GERMAN PARTIES HORSE TRADE IN CABINET DEAL

Socialists on the Outside Sucking Thumbs

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Confronted with the difficulty of obtaining a new cabinet, President Ebert requested Chancellor Marx today to resume negotiations with the various political parties with a view to bringing about a coalition.

Demand Nationalists Have Seat.

The recent elections have only made matters worse from a political point of view as no group has a majority. Stresemann and his people's party have brought on the crisis by demanding that the nationalists have a seat in the government. The so-called democratic parties decline. On the other hand, there is strenuous objection to including the socialists who stand on the side lines with teeth watering, waiting to be called to the government cushions.

Refuse to Evacuate.

Another matter that is causing considerable irritation is the refusal of the British tory government to evacuate the Cologne bridgehead on January 10. The council of ambassadors meeting in Paris, decided that Germany has not fully satisfied the disarmament and demobilization obligations of the treaty of Versailles in regard to disbanding secret military formations.

This action of the British is expected to play into the hands of the extreme nationalists.

World Wheat Crop Declines.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — A decrease of about 440,000,000 bushels in the estimated world wheat crop, as compared with last year, is indicated by reports received by the department of agriculture today. The estimates for this year is 2,330,000,000 bushels compared with 2,740,000,000 produced in 1923, and 3,400,000,000 bushels in 1922.

HEAVY VOTING FOR MILITANTS IN PITTSBURGH

Nine Locals Bury the Fakers' Ticket

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 18—According to the figures received by the progressive committee from nine locals, on the voting for international president and other officers, the progressives won an overwhelming victory. Of course the administration slate will be declared elected but the following returns prove illuminating.

President John L. Lewis, 192; Geo. Voyzey, 848; Vice-President Murray, 224; Arley Staples, 767; William Green, 211; Joseph Nearing, 776.

Fagan Badly Defeated.

For district officers the returns from eleven locals are: Pat Fagan, 334; William Guller, 1,171; Vice-President Patton, 314; his progressive opponent Brajdich, 766; Mercantinni, reactionary candidate for secretary-treasurer, 360; Hargest, progressive, 785; O'Leary for international board member, 306; Harmison, 990.

The heavy vote cast for the progressive slate is even better than the radicals hoped for. Even tho the official slate will again elect itself thru blue sky and reactionary locals, the heavy progressive vote proves that the propaganda of the militants is now telling against the reactionary incompetents who are now at the head of the union and who are ruining it as a fighting instrument of the workers.

Fakers Overwhelmed in Alberta.

NORDEGG, Alberta, Dec. 18.—The victory of the progressives in this section was overwhelming. John L. Lewis received only 5 votes against 354 for George Voyzey. Philip Murray got 30, while his opponent, Arley Staples, polled 325. William Green raised 19 to 334 for Joseph Nearing.

POWKATAN POINT, Ohio, Dec. 18. —Returns from Local No. 5497 give John L. Lewis 16 votes against 269 for George Voyzey; Philip Murray 19 against 267 for Arley Staples; William Green, 26 against 249 for Joseph Nearing. For sub-district president G. G. Hoge, of Bellaire, Ohio, progressive candidate, got 249 votes against 30 for his two opponents combined.

A. F. OF L. HEADS HOLD MEETING IN NEW YORK CITY

Signs of Disagreement Are Seen

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor this afternoon announced a meeting for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

At this time a successor to the late Samuel Gompers as president will be named.

Samuel Gompers' death has found the leaders of the great international unions very far from agreement as to who is the logical successor to his power. Indeed, the question at once arises as to how much of the power which he exerted can be transferred.

When first the word came over the wires from Mexico that Gompers was dying, men began to analyze the situation and concluded that his death will weaken the movement for a time, no matter whom the executive council may select to fill out his term. A struggle for the presidency will immediately begin, and this will affect jurisdictional negotiations and organizing activities from now until the convention meets next year in Atlantic City.

Matthew Woll, seventh vice-president and head of the photoengravers, has been the most active assistant to Gompers in the council during the past four years. Woll, like Gompers, represents a small union which has no serious jurisdictional disputes. It is quite possible that the council will select him as president for this year, and will give him that much head start in the race for election next November.

Some Eyes on Green.

The only other member of the council who might be chosen for the interim presidency is Green of the United Mine Workers. If John L. Lewis, president of the miners, should enter the race, Green would have to step aside. Tobin of the teamsters, treasurer of the federation, has too many internal disputes on his hands to be a big factor in the contest. Hutcheson of the carpenters could not get the support of the other building trades, since his union is outside the building trades department. Berry of the printing pressmen, is at outs with a large section of the movement because of his betrayal of his implied pledge to support the action of the executive council in the recent political campaign. John Donlin who recently resigned the headship of the building trades department and a good friend of Herbert Hoover is mentioned.

Favor Old Policies.

Thus far there appears no reason to believe that the new regime in the federation will be more favorable to independent political action than Gompers has been. Localized opportunism, with a general anti-radical attitude before the public, is the creed of the men who will carry on the work which Samuel Gompers so long planned and controlled.

Textile Workers Get Wage Cut As Christmas Gift

LOWELL, Mass., Dec. 18.—Announcement that wage cuts will become effective in the Massachusetts and Appleton mills here Dec. 29 was made today. Other textile plants in the city also have indicated that they will readjust wages on that date. In the case of the Massachusetts the reduction was given as 10 per cent.

LEAFLETS CALL ON WORKERS TO CRUSH FASCISM

Mussolini's Power Is Waning Every Day

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Dec. 18.—Leaflets have been broadcasted thruout all Italy informing the workers to be ready to revolt and crush the fascisti.

The leaflets, asking the people to be ready for any emergency, were signed by "the committee of action."

Mussolini Warships Near Albania.

Mussolini has sent an Italian warship toward Albania. His plan, it is announced, is to capture the harbors of Durazzo and Valona, which would then give Mussolini dominating control of the Adriatic Sea.

In his allocution reviewing the year's religious events, Pope Pius attacked the Communists, and warned against "radical influences," thus showing his aid of the Mussolin reign of terror. The pope also attacked Soviet Russia.

Thirty opposition members of the chamber of deputies led by former Premier Orlando, refused to enter the chamber of deputies until the resignation of Deputy Giunta has been accepted. Giunta was implicated in fascist plots when his letters were printed in opposition newspapers.

Fascist Deputy Resigns.

Giunta has been charged with instituting at Milan an attack on Deputy Forni, who left the fascist party. The chamber declined to accept Giunta's resignation, and the refusal of the opposition to take further part followed. Deputy Boeri, who was elected on the majority slate, has resigned from the parliament, after a stormy debate with Premier Mussolini. "I am ashamed that I belong to the Italian chamber," Boeri shouted.

"After the interpretation given by the premier to the limit of liberty of political action allowed to deputies elected in the malority list, I present my resignation as deputy," Boeri wrote the chamber.

Aids Russian Czarists.

Pope Pius, who has been quietly supplying the Russian (emigre) colony in Rome, supporters of the former bloody czar, with funds, intimated in his allocution, his intention of continuing this support to the enemies of the Russian workers. "The conclusion must not be drawn from the beneficent work begun on behalf of the Russian people that we wish to encourage a form of government of which we are far from approving," Pope Pius said.

The pope made it quite plain that he is anxious to support only those Russians in the counter-revolutionary class who are vainly trying to disrupt the Soviet nation.

Aid to U. S. Reaction.

The pope urged all catholics to line up on the side of the exploiters of labor and to fight Communism. "We think it our duty," he said, "To admonish and earnestly exhort all members of our faith and in special sense members of governments that, so far as they are lovers of peace and the public good and are promoters of the sanctity of the family and the dignity of man, they should strive with united effort to dispel from themselves and their fellow citizens the grave dangers and certain detriments of Communism."

Pope Pius thus revealed himself as a follower of Sam Gompers' clique which still controls the American Federation of Labor. He spoke against workers' control of industry, the only step which will liberate the workers, and threw out a Gompersian barrage advising "be mindful of your serious duty to improve the condition of laborers and the humbler classes generally."

GOMPERS BURIED BETWEEN ANDY CARNEGIE AND WILL ROCKEFELLER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 18.—Under a leaden sky and with intermittent rain, the body of Samuel Gompers, late president of the American Federation of Labor, was buried in Sleepy Hollow cemetery here this afternoon between Carnegie and Rockefeller. Interment was in an elaborate sarcophagus.

Services at the cemetery were under the auspices of the Saint Cecile lodge of the masons.

SOVIET AMBASSADOR TO CHINA OUTLINES HOW THE AMERICAN AND SOVIET POLICIES DIFFER

(By Rosta News Agency)

PEKING (By Mail.)—Comrade L. M. Karakhan has sent the following letter to the Anti-Imperialistic Society of China:

"Whereas I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of September 22, I must apologize for the delay in my reply; being so very busy, I have unfortunately not been able to answer before.

"While I agree with your definition of the czarist government overthrown by the Russian workers and peasants, I must say, however, that to call the policy of the czarist government a policy of plotting and perfidious deception is to be too lenient towards the base system of robbing and violence practiced by the czarist government over the Chinese people.

"Rooting uprooted the czarist regime within our own country, we have done our best to do away with its expression in foreign policy, too. Our external policy we conduct on new lines, which have been well known to the Chinese people ever since the declaration of the Soviet government of 1919.

"Your question has arisen because of certain rumors regarding the embassy premises having been received by us in consequence of some agreement entered into, and you are quite right in your apprehensions lest those who fear the popularity in China of the Soviet Union should make use of such rumors to the detriment of Soviet-Chinese friendship. Therefore, I shall most willingly meet your request, considering that it is important in the interest of friendship between our countries.

"The following is my reply to your queries:

"1. Indeed, from the outset, those powers in whose custody the former Russian legation practically was, did not wish to transfer it to the legal owner until the latter would preliminarily agree to the regime established by the powers in the legation quarter. This demand re preliminary conditions was brot forth to me by the Austrian Minister, Dr. Schurman, in the interview I had with him on July 24, which was arranged by the minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of China, Dr. Wellington Koo.

"However, the Soviet government refused categorically to enter upon any agreement regarding the transfer of the legation building. My government considered that this building belongs to the Soviet Union and that the fact of the keys thereof being incidentally in the hands of other powers did not in any way entitle these latter to put forth any demands. The motives of the Soviet government for upholding this view were that the legation premises situated in the diplomatic quarter had been acquired by all the powers—Russia being among them—on the basis of the protocol of 1901, and that consequently the union has the same right on such premises as any other power. However, unless we wish to do so ourselves, no one can force us to avail ourselves of rights acquired by force from the Chinese people by the czarist government.

"As you know, after lengthy negotiations and an exchange of notes, we received the legation building unconditionally and without binding ourselves in any way in this respect.

"2. As for my position toward the diplomatic body, I must say that formally my relations with the latter will not differ from those which exist between Soviet representatives and diplomatic bodies in other capitals of the world.

"What seems to interest you is the question as to how can there in the limits of one and the same diplomatic body be reconciled the political line of the Soviet government and that of some powers directly opposed to the former. Well, I should say that the diplomatic body as such, that is as one whole organism, ought not to engage in politics, nor does it do so in any country.

"Indeed, each power his its policy, which it carries on independently, and even in China, where this body was in the nature of a more compact or-

LONGEST BREAD LINE ON BOWERY IN 20 YEARS SEEN TODAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Due to increased unemployment, the bread lines here are longer than for several years. Lodging houses are over-run with unemployed workers. "I've been along the Bowery for 20 years," said Thomas J. Noonan, in charge of the largest bread line and "flop house" along the Bowery, "and I never rubbed shoulders with so many hungry men." As Noonan was speaking, over 500 hungry workers were lined up waiting for their one-third of a loaf of bread. "I honestly don't know what some of them are going to do this winter," Noonan said, "there are so many of them."

"I am sure there will be a lot of suicides this winter," Noonan added.

ganism than in other places, even tho, notwithstanding the formal unity of the powers, one could point out the extremely hostile work which has been mutually engaged in against one another, say, by diplomats of Japan and the United States. Thus, while being a member of the diplomatic body, the Soviet representative will pursue the same anti-imperialistic policy and policy of friendship towards China which he followed when he stood outside of this body.

"3. As regards the question of the guard of the Soviet embassy with Red Army contingents, there is hardly anyone who believes that we shall bring our soldiers for this purpose. I can easily understand why the czarist government maintained troops here for it pursued an imperialistic policy. But we, whose policy is one of sincere friendship and brotherhood, who are here as guests and friends of the Chinese people, we have no need of bayonets to protect us against it. I feel certain that the best guard and defense of the safety of the Soviet embassy will be the Soviet red flag. I believe it will be a stronger protection than the high stone walls and armies with cannons and machine guns.

"I send you my best wishes of success in your work. I firmly believe the day is near when the great Chinese people will really be the true and independent master of its own country. Sincerely yours, (Signed) L. Karakhan.

PHILADELPHIA FORUM HEARS AMTER ON RUSSIA

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 18.—Israel Amter, who had just returned after a two-year stay in Soviet Russia, was given an enthusiastic ovation when he was introduced to speak on "Soviet Russia and the World Revolution." Considering the crowd that turned out to hear him and the many questions asked it is evident that more and more of the working class is realizing that Soviet Russia is the one country on earth, that they could really claim as their own.

Especially interesting were the concluding remarks of Comrade Amter, in which he described three pictures to the audience. He pictured the three main pillars of the protetarian power—the Red Army, the Communist Party and the Young Communist League, together with the Young Leninist Guards.

OLD FIRETRAPS IN N. Y. ENDANGERS THE LIVES OF MASSES OF WORKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The loss in the fire at 13 E. 98th St., which this week burned six people to death, was caused by the aged and unsafe construction of the five story firetrap, Fire Chief Kenlon declared.

These ancient tenements which house 250,000 New York workers and their families, were built before the fire laws of 1895. They are so crisp and brittle with age and so saturated with countless coats of paint and varnish that a lighted match could start a fire in any of them that would result in tragic losses of life. Still they remain standing and people are housed in them.

BANKERS SOB AS GOMPERS IS PUT AWAY

Labor Fakers Weep Over Sam's Bier

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 18.—Rabbi Wise glanced over the audience of hushed spectators, comprised of labor fakers, bankers from Wall Street, the heads of great industrial corporations which bitterly oppose labor unions, "Injunction Bill" Taft, head of the supreme court, and Secretary of State C. E. Hughes, diplomats and politicians of all degrees of crookedness.

Then Rabbi Wise spoke. "Samuel Gompers was," he said, "a true frontiersman, a pioneer, a patriot of patriots. America was to him a dream and a religion. He left labor rich, not in money but in principle."

Unrestrained tears coursed the cheeks of the Wall Street bankers and sobs of labor fakers here and there punctuated his oration. Major generals and rear admirals were seen furtively sniffling, while Secretary Hughes appeared visibly agitated, and Chief Justice Taft showed signs of emotion.

The funeral ceremonies took place in the Elks' Club, which was buried in floral tributes both costly and beautiful, reckoned by florists to be the most expensive floral contribution ever made to anyone in New York.

The board of education of New York City, which had discharged Ben Glassberg from the Commerce high school for saying that the Soviet government was "not so black as it was painted," which had expelled two or three other "radicals" from the Dewitt Clinton high school, and which has constantly fought the Teachers' Federation—affiliated with the A. F. of L.—ordered the teachers to speak to the pupils during the morning session and praise Samuel Gompers, laying especial stress on what are alleged to be his last words, "God bless our American institutions."

SENATE DEBATE ON CHILD LABOR BILL SCHEDULED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, is scheduled to make a speech in the senate against the federal child labor amendment, in time for the opponents of the amendment to use the speech as the keynote in the campaign against it in the state legislature.

Reed is one of the blackest reactionaries in the senate, having opposed the child labor and maternity bills on the ground that "they invade the liberties of the people." Senator Hiram Johnson will speak for the amendment.

Law school deans have made public a statement indorsing the amendment, which does not abolish child labor, but "gives congress power to regulate it." The deans indorsing the amendment, which must be ratified by 36 states, include law school deans of Harvard, Yale, Stanford, the University of California, the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Michigan.

Arkansas has ratified the child labor amendment, while three state legislatures in Georgia, Louisiana, and North Carolina, have rejected it. The electorate of Massachusetts also rejected the amendment. However, no time limit is set to the securing of ratification from the necessary 36 states.

COOLIDGE FOR WARSHIPS THAT EQUAL BRITISH

Big War Preparation Scheme Comes Out

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—President Coolidge intends to push construction of aircraft, and to continue construction of warships in competition with the British navy.

Wants Nation to Build Ships.

In an effort to set up a smoke screen to hide his war preparations Coolidge let it be made public that he "does not want to try to match the British navy ship for ship in all classes." He pointed out however, that "he would have the United States build auxiliary ships to balance our capital ships, without regard to the ships other nations are building.

It was pointed out at the White House that only eight of our eighteen battleships are badly outranged, while five of the U. S. ships outrange the British. The fact that the preparation for war will be pushed at full speed by the Coolidge administration is disclosed in the statement that even tho some of our ships are outranged by the British, "eventually we shall have new ships equal to the British in power."

Orders Building of Aircraft.

Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, assistant head of the army air service, has received a favorable response from Coolidge to his statement that aircraft are destined to minimize the importance of battleships in the next war. An inquiry by a naval board with a view to pushing building of aircraft as a step toward further militarization of the country, has been ordered by the president.

PRO-KAISERITES FREE IN FRANCE UNDER AMNESTY

But Herriot Still Holds Sadoul in Prison

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Despite the fact that the general amnesty bill has just been passed by the senate and the chamber of deputies, absolving former premier Caillaux and Louis Malvy, former minister of the interior, who were convicted of dealing with the Germans during the war, Communists are still held in jail.

Workers are recalling the persecution of Jacques Sadoul, who came back to France from Soviet Russia under the impression that he would be granted general amnesty which was supposed to have been accorded by the Herriot government.

Instead, Sadoul was arrested at the instance of the Herriot government and is still held prisoner.

Malvy was absolved by vote of the chamber of deputies, after he had proved that it was not he personally, but the entire French cabinet, that paid 40,000 francs to the newspaper Bonnet Rouge during the war. This newspaper was favorable to the Germans. "It was on me instead of the whole cabinet that the responsibility was allowed to fall," Malvy told the chamber, implicating Poincare, Millerand, Delcasse and the entire British cabinet.

WAGES GO DOWN, JOBS ARE FEWER, STATISTICS SAY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—Unemployment in the nation again increased slightly in November, a report released by the department of labor shows. There was also a falling off in per capita earnings during November. Earnings decreased 1.3 per cent and employment fell off a fraction of one per cent, in spite of the fact that November employment is generally kept up by the pre-Christmas trade rush.

The figures were based on reports from 8,557 manufacturing establishments in 52 industries, covering 2,553,132 employes, it was announced.

The losses in employment were especially marked in the sugar refining industry, amounting to 10.7 per cent, while the losses in confectionery were 10.2 per cent; ice cream 8.7 per cent, women's clothing 7.8 per cent and men's clothing 4.7 per cent.

The tobacco, leather, rubber, boot and shoe industries shared a slight increase in employment.

Radio Speech by Agent of Wall St. to Chinese Little Help to Morgan

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Chinese are subjected to the same propaganda that Wall Street let loose on American workers during the recent election campaign. An effort, starting with a speech by Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, United States minister to China, is to be made to radio them into submission to U. S. imperialist rule.

Wall Street no doubt feels that the radio did its part in helping to keep Strikebreaker Coolidge in the White House. If American workers and farmers will succumb to this treatment, and vote as the Almighty American Dollar desires, then Morgan no doubt argues that he can use the radio to help enslave the Chinese to his world financial empire. The developments should be interesting.

It is declared that Dr. Schurman's address was the first ever broadcasted in the Far East. This would indicate that the radio, under the claimed beneficent rule of foreign gold, has not made much progress in the Orient. So it may be concluded that Dr. Schurman's speech did not reach very large masses. The poison did not spread very far. It found few victims.

Dr. Schurman was on the defensive. He had to reply to the attacks of Sun Yat Sen, president of the South China republic, leader of the revolution that is sweeping to power in all sections of China. Since the Chihli war lord, Gen. Wu Pei-fu, has gone down to defeat, the American minister must now needs explain that U. S. imperialism did not support him. To be sure, with his complete defeat, American imperialism would like to forget him.

While Morgan's agent in China repudiates its Chinese war lord, enemy of the Chinese masses, and casts about for other agents, the capitalist news agencies get busy and send the information, about Dr. Schurman's speech, by cable to the world.

But thru the slower mail service of the Rosta News Agency we get some real information about Wu Pei-fu from a manifesto issued by Sun Yat Sen.

The Chinese revolution, that scored its first victory with the overthrow of the Manchu autocracy in 1911, has now been developing for 13 years. It has been a bitter uphill struggle of the masses against Chinese militarism backed by foreign militarism.

One "war lord" after another has been tumbled to earth. Yuan Shih-Kai gained considerable power in the second year of the republic, but his downfall could not be averted when the masses became aware of his treason. It was seven years later that Wu Pei-fu won some successes. His cherished dream of military rule, bulwarked by foreign imperialism, also came to naught. In vain he used military force to shoot down workers and students in order to crush the national revolutionary movement.

In his Far East address, that will get little response from the Chinese, Dr. Schurman pleads that:

"The rights of the American government and people demand respect for the treaties which must not be violated as long as they remain unmodified and neither China nor any country can be a member of the family of nations unless its treaties are respected and enforced."

This is the cheapest kind of hypocricy. This philosophy, that Dr. Schurman developed as a professor at LaFollette's University of Wisconsin, would keep all subject nations enslaved to the House of Morgan forever. Here is the answer, however, of the Chinese revolution:

It can easily be seen that the Chinese are getting busy planning to scrap a bunch of treaties and agreements made by the war lords with foreign imperialists against the interest of the republic.

The Chinese revolutionary movement is now planning the summoning of a National Assembly for the unification and reconstruction of the country. The armies of the revolution will send their delegates to this assembly, because "our military forces must join the people." With the delegates of the revolutionary armies will come the delegates of the trade unions and the peasants' associations.

The outlook is gloomy for Morgan in China. Schurman's speeches will avail little. The radio is powerful, but it is not all-powerful. The Chinese masses, drifting closer and closer to the workers and peasants of emancipated Russia, will find their guiding light in the Soviet Star, leading the way to Communism. Let the workers of the United States prepare for the pending "War in the Pacific." Let them prepare to take their stand against the House of Morgan; and on the side of their comrades of the Orient!

There is only one "family of nations" that should concern the workers of all nations. It is the Union of Soviet Republics.

NEW STRIKEBREAKING SCHEMES LOOM UP ON THE HORIZON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover is trying out a new plan to break up strikes of railroad employes and prevent them from securing higher standards of living. He has called a conference here in January of representatives of the railroad executives and union officials. It is not yet known whether the union heads will be roped in by the plan. Senator Cummins, a Coolidge backer, and chairman of the senate interstate commerce commision, is also pushing Hoover's scheme.

FRENCH GOVT. WAR INTRIGUE NOW DISCLOSED

'Red Scare' Smoke Fails to Screen Poincare

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 18.—The Herriot government is trying to raise a smoke screen of "red scares" over the scandal of their disgraceful intrigues just divulged in the fight over the bill for amnesty passed by the chamber of deputies Tuesday by a vote of 347 against 196.

The capitalist press tells mysterous fairy tales of "Communist conspiracies" for an armed uprising, saying that the military commander of Paris has ordered many precautions—"bolts having been removed from the soldiers' guns and placed under heavy guard, furloughs being suspended, officers sleeping in the garisons, guards doubled," etc.

Smoke Screen to Cover Scandal.

This scare is an effort to attract attention from the scandal that broke loose over the bill to grant amnesty to M. Caillaux and M. Malvy, who were convicted during the war of obstructing the war against Germany. The debate in the chamber of deputies brot out attacks by some very patriotic deputies, one of whom cited his war service against any remittal of sentences given Caillaux and Malvy because they were connected with Almereyda, once editor of an anti-war paper called "The Red Cap."

In reply, M. Malvy disclosed the astonishing fact that the French government, in which he was then a minister, had subsidized this defeatist newspaper during the war, by orders of none other than President Poincare. M. Malvy said:

A Government Frame-Up.

"I never knew that M. Almereyda was in full agreement with President Poincare that the cabinet, in which I was minister of the interior, gave secret funds to M. Almereyda. I promised M. Viviani to keep that secret—today I am relieved of the secrecy. The thing was decided at a council of ministers, in accord with M. Poincare, that it was necessary for national defense to subsidize the newspaper, as it carried authority with certain elements of the population of Paris and suburbs where war munitions factories were located.

"First 20,000 francs ($1,000) and then 10,000 francs, were handed over to the Red Cap by M. Millerand, then minister of war, and then 10,000 rance by M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs. The funds were handed to M. Viviani, who turned the money over to M. Almereyda. Many things were secret during the war. They are now leaking out. You can see what M. Clemenceau and his followers did to me."

EBERT'S MANEUVERS FOR NEW CABINET GET BIG SETBACK

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 18. — President Ebert faces a deadlock in his efforts to have a new cabinet formed, it was indicated today. After charging foreign minister, Stresemann, with the mission of forming of a new cabinet, Stresemann announced that he would not be able to do so.

Stresemann suggested that Scheidt, leader of the German people's party be asked to form a cabinet.

SOVIET COIN GOOD AS THAT OF UNCLE SAM

Budget Shows Loans Not Imperative

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW (By Mail.)—Reporting on the budget for the working year, Comrade Sokolnikoff, People's Commissar of Finance, referring in the course of his speech, to an utterance of Kokovtzoff, one time czarist minister of finance, alleging that the Soviet government has squandered Russia's gold reserve, Sokolnikoff refutes this charge, stressing that from the beginning of the year 1922 the gold reserve of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics not only did not diminish, but has increased.

The people's commissar of finance further stated that the latest monetary reform has been a complete success. The speaker pointed out that in spite of the discontinuance of the issuance of paper notes as from July 1, the monetary circulation thruout the union was 602 million roubles on August 1 and is expected to reach from 700 to 750 million by the first of January, 1925, and about one billion roubles by the first of October next year. As for the rate of exchange, the chervonet has been on a par with the gold dollar ever since the first of July, which is an excellent evidence of the purchasing power of Soviet currency.

Turning to the Anglo-Soviet treaty, Sokolnikov denied the falacious statements alleging that the Union of Socialist Soviet Russia needed the British loan to save the Soviet currency, balance the budget and restore the Soviet national economy. True, declares the People's Commisar of Finance—such a loan would be most useful to the Union inasmuch as it would help make a big stride forward in Soviet economy: "This loan, however, is not an indispensable basis of our existence."

As a matter of fact, further states the speaker—even without an official loan English bankers do not refuse credits to the Union of Soviet Republics, and actually today the question of granting commercial credits to the Soviet State Bank by British financiers with the support of powerful American financial interests is in quite a favorable stage.

The Soviet People's Commisar of Finance concluded his address to the C. E. C. and amidst loud applause and unanimous approval, by stating emphatically that the present working year was the last difficult one which the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics had to go thru.

STRUGGLE OF MILITANT MINERS VIVIDLY PICTURED IN LETTER SENT TO PRISON COMFORT CLUB

Very few states have proven such terrible battlefields for class conflicts as West Virginia. The miners of that state have felt in the past and are feeling today the pressure of the iron heel with such force that they have risen with arms to preserve their very right to existence.

That conditions remain unchanged is proven by a letter from G. C. Hickey, released only the other day from prison after serving three years in jail for participating in the famous "March of the Miners" in 1921, when they rose in arms to fight the oppressive coal barons.

This letter, to Cora Meyers of the National Prison Comfort Club, reads as follows:

Miami, W. Va.

Dear Friend: I have been at home for some time and I am writing to thank you for your kindness.

We on Cabin Creek have been on strike for the last three years; that is some of us have, and now they have made a new call and are getting good results.

Our boys are always getting into trouble. The same day I got home I was served with an injunction forbidding me to talk with the men that were working! So you can see that I am classed as a dangerous radical.

Don Chafin, the man who had me confined, is getting his just deserts. Logan county is in good shape for organizing if our officials were any good.

I told our local union about you and instructed me to officially thank you in their behalf. It is sure a pitiful sight to see our tent colony children—they are so ragged. They are furnished no clothes by the organization, only their grub, which is very scarce. Their Christmas will not be very bright this year.

I will write more next time if you care to know about conditions in this section.

Thank you again. I am,

Yours very truly,

G. C. HICKEY.

Here is a picture of a section of the American working class to pull at the heartstrings of any class-conscious worker. Here is the class struggle visible in it's sharpest form—a condition of misery for workers under our present capitalist system.

In addition to this letter received by Cora Myers of the Prison Comfort Club, was another under the official seal of the Local Union 1661 of the U. M. W. of A., thanking her for the assistance given to G. C. Hickey while in jail for fighting against such conditions of abject slavery of the West Virginia miners, as he pictures in his letter.

These are facts of today—this is what the American working class must face even more generally than it has in the past.

ETHICAL BRITISH IMPERIALISTS GET "SHOCKED" AGAIN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The big newspapers of the British imperialists are not all lacking in resources. This is shown by the way in which Briton equanimity is "shocked" (according to the press) by the execution of the traitorous and grafting treasurer of the Tsao Kun government of China, Li Yen-ching, who—with Tsao himself, was the center of British-American control over the Chinese people.

The British press calls this execution "murder" and gets quite horrified about it, forgetful of Mesopotamia, India, Egypt and so on. Added to this moral indignation is the claim that General Feng, Sun Yat Sen and the Soviet ambassador at Peking, M. Karakhan, are in a "Bolshevik alliance" which is receiving "financial backing" from Soviet Russia.

Government Officers Who Did Not Line Up With Coolidge to Go

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—President Coolidge is about to discharge governmental officials in three large independent offices of the government because they did not line up with his policies during the election campaign. The U. S. tariff commission, the United States shipping board, which ignored Coolidge's instructions to give the emergency fleet corporation a free hand in settling operating the American merchant marine, and the federal trade commission, which embarrassed Coolidge by making public Secretary Mellon's large aluminum holdings, are due for a shakeup.

JUGO-SLAVIA WARS ON ALBANIANS AS ZOGU REVOLT GROWS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The success of the uprising in Albania was indicated today when it was reported in London that Fan Noli, president of the Albanian ministry, was fleeing. Fan Noli had been in power only a few months.

The revolt in Albania is a nationalist peasant movement.

The efforts of Jugo-Slavia to subject Albania to its domination has caused intense hostility toward Jugo-Slavia and vice versa.

Dispatches from Tirana, the capital of Albania, state that Jugo-Slav troops were beginning a bombardment of the Albanian troops on the Serbian frontier. These government troops, when engaged against the rebels led by Ahmed Zogu, are reported as going over to Ahmed's forces.

THE OTHER DAY IN CHICAGO.

TWO party members met face to face the other day, in a building in Chicago where workers sympathetic to the Workers Party are employed.

They eyed each other for a few brief seconds. This was enough to show that each, in the presence of the other, felt about as comfortable as a fish in a keg of nails.

A few words by both and it was discovered that each one considered the building and everything in it his exclusive territory. To each, the other was poaching.

An argument resulted. Neither of the two compromised. Both brushed around the building with the speed of a subway express, and made about as much noise. Each had a big red book in hand.

This occurence may be a scarce as corsets in a gypsy camp, but—there are many headquarters, buildings, offices in other cities where sympathizers of the party work. All you need do is to go there and ask and they will gladly buy a POLICY so as to

500 WINNIPEG WORKERS STORM MAYOR FOR JOBS

Demand "Work or Full Maintenance"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WINNIPEG, Canada, Dec. 18.—Led by members of the Communist Party of Canada, a parade of over 500 destitute and unemployed workers marched along the main streets of this city, interviewed the mayor, besieged the city hall and parliament buildings, and forced an interview with the premier.

The fake "labor" mayor, Farmer, ejected the unemployed workers into the freezing cold. Premier Bracken, at the parliament building was forced to admit his government's inability to cope with the unemployment crisis. He promised nothing.

Rally Around Communist Slogan.

The unemployed marchers walked along Portage Ave. and Main St. during the noon hour, and entered the city hall, demanding to interview the mayor in order to secure food and shelter. They rallied around the slogan popularized by the Communists, "Work or full maintenance."

At the call of the Communist Party of Canada the men had assembled in the "Woodyard," determined not to accept the abominable "work test" provided by the city council. They struck against it to a man, and then began the march in the freezing weather to the city hall, to demand "work or full maintenance."

In spite of the efforts of police to throw the workers into the streets, they refused to budge. Then came the "labor" mayor, Farmer. The mayor immediately ordered the police to put the men out, in spite of the fact that even his bourgeois predecessors had allowed unemployed to take shelter in the city hall. After being ejected, the unemployed with even greater numbers, stormed the Labor Temple for shelter. A delegation waiting upon the unemployment committee of the city council was given blank refusal to their demands for immediate relief.

Nothing was promised by either the mayor or the council. The single men were promised no future relief. The married men were referred to the infamous social welfare commission which has the habit of sending the wives of the unemployed out to work at lower wages than are paid male workers.

Police Keep Them Out.

The procession then beseiged the parliament buildings. The swarms of police allowed only a small delegation inside forcing the half clad unemployed to wait in the bitter cold. The premier kept the men waiting an hour, and then gave only a half promise of some assistance to the married men thru the city council.

Asked whether work of any kind was available, Premier Bracken admitted that no bush or farm work is to be had, in spite of previous claims that there are agricultural jobs open. Bracken stated that the condition of the unemployed city workers is duplicated in a worse degree upon Manitoba farms.

The "Worker," official organ of the Communist Party of Canada, contains the following statement: "Take notice prospective immigrants. The result of several hours of wandering and buffeting resulted in nothing. The single unemployed men are to get nothing. Agitation is being conducted, and the problem will be forced to the attention of the authorities until something is done."

"The unemployed are holding out solidly against the work-test and are sticking to the Communist slogan 'Work or Full Maintenance.' The Trades Council is assisting in the organization of an unemployed council and the work of organization among the jobless promises to be more fruitful this year than in the past. Mean while conditions are becoming worse and Winnipeg is faced with a situation that will be without parallel in the past."

Chicago Population Three Million.

The population of Chicago proper is now more than three million, while Chicago, including the suburbs, is close to four million in population, according to figures just released by a national census bureau. This is an increase of 12.5 per cent over 1920, when the last federal census was taken.

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ISSUES STATEMENT REGARDING THE CONVENTION OF OUR PARTY

In view of the fact that the party discussion is now going on and the membership of the party is naturally interested in the question of the holding of a convention, the central executive committee makes the following statement in regard to the question of a party convention:

1. Under the statutes of the Communist International, permission must be secured from the executive committee of the Communist International before a convention of any of the sections can be held.

2. The central executive committee, in October, unanimously transmitted a request for permission for a convention to be held some time during the month of January.

3. The secretariat of the executive committee of the Communist International answered the request suggesting that the advice of the Communist International on policy be sought in advance of the convention of the party and that for this reason the convention be postponed until after delegates of the party, representative of both viewpoints, could present the matter.

4. The majority of the central executive committee thereupon renewed the request for permission to hold a convention, sending the following statement to the Communist International:

"November 13th meeting C. E. C. acting upon Comintern suggestion to postpone convention unanimously reaffirmed previous request for convention in January. Meeting November 13th minority changes opinion and now favors postponement of convention. C. E. C. again reaffirms request for January convention on following grounds: 1. Differences in C. E. C. are already property membership which is anxious to discuss and express opinion. 2. It will be disastrous for self-confidence and initiative of membership to prevent their expression of opinion in convention. 3. Before Comintern passes final judgment on our differences it must know opinion of whole membership and not C. E. C. alone. 4. Postponement of convention decision on major policy after enlarged executive means six months paralysis and crisis in party. 5. Insistence of minority compels C. E. C. immediately publish thesis and open party discussion. 6. C. E. C. urgently requests for health and development of party and for liquidation of remnants of factionalism that permission for convention be granted without delay to be held middle January. C. E. C. shall decide November 22. Our delegates enlarged executive will leave right after convention."

The minority of the C. E. C. transmitted the following to the Communist International as its view on the at and further:

"In view of the fact that the cablegram from the Communist International indicates that it is the desire of the Communist International to help shape and guide the future policy of our party before a convention decision as the best method of avoiding serious mistakes, we accept the proposal of the Communist International that representatives of both tendencies shall be sent to the Communist International before the meeting of the enlarged executive committee to present the two viewpoints and secure a decision by the Communist International further:

"That the question be referred to the full meeting of the central executive committee for action along the line of the above.

"In presenting this proposal, we at the same time state it is our opinion and desire that the thesis of the central executive committee, both majority and minority, should be submitted to the membership immediately after the coming full meeting of the central executive committee and discussion on the thesis should be opened at once in order that the party membership might have sufficient time for full and free discussion of the issues and principles which divide the two groups in the central executive committee. We believe that such full and free discussion can be carried on during the period while the matter is being submitted to the Communist International and that whatever decision is rendered by the Communist International will be the final guide for the party membership which will be registered in the decision of the convention of the party.

"We believe that such a method of arriving at a decision on party policy will prevent the development of sharp factional struggles within the party and keep the discussion within the lines of a discussion of policy and not a bitter factional struggle. The achievement of this end is desirable so far as the party as a whole is concerned, for a severe factional struggle within the organization cannot but result detrimentally to the progress of the party as a whole."

5. The central executive committee is still communicating with the Communist International, and will comply with the decision of the Communist International as soon as such final decision is rendered.

Chicago Finnish Branch in Support Of Majority Stand

The Workers Party Finnish Branch of Chicago, in membership meeting assembled to discuss the thesis of the party central executive committee and minority, adopted the following resolution:

"1. We regret that the central executive of the party is divided into two main groups on the farmer-labor party question. Instead of unanimously taking a stand that our main task is to build our own party, in which all our energy should be concentrated to make it a party able to take the lead in the labor movement of this country, we now use our energy and funds in factional fights which are not always beneficial to the welfare of our party.

"2. Discussing the thesis of the majority and minority and making a analysis of the history of our farmer-labor party united front, the membership accepts the thesis of the majority in general. The policy as expressed in the majority thesis, in our opinion, serves the Communist movement best in this country and is based on actual conditions as they appear on a close analysis at the present time.

"3. The branch condemns the tactic used by the minority in this controversy in packing meetings with their supporters and trying to force premature decisions, before the question was opened for discussion in the party, and when failing in its attempts provoking disruption in meetings of which a membership meeting in Chicago is a good example. Such tactics are not for the best interest of the party and should not be used in the future.

Signed: J. Pajuoja, chairman; O. E. Tolvonen, secretary."

The Central Bureau Of the Lithuanians Is with the Minority

The central bureau of the Lithuanian Section of the Workers Party at its meeting held December 15, 1924, after thoroly considering the present controversy going on in the party relative to our attitude towards the farmer-labor movement and after discussing the theses as presented by the majority and minority of the C. E. C., adopted the following resolution:

"In view of the fact that during the last two years the Workers Party while participating in the struggle for organizing a farmer-labor party, raised its prestige among the workers and farmers of this country and gained many new members and sympathizers; and

"In view of the fact that the economic conditions are growing worse and worse, while millions of exploited workers and farmers are still following the leadership of capitalist parties, the slogan 'For a Farmer-Labor Party' is still alive and offers a great opportunity for strengthening the Workers Party in its agitation for a class farmer-labor party, the Central Bureau of the L. S. W. P., declares that it is of the opinion that

"The majority's determination to cast aside the slogan for a farmer-labor party is harmful and obstructing to the building of the Workers Party. And therefore the C. B. unanimously agrees and endorses the thesis of the minority of the C. E. C. as a practical and adaptable step towards its united front on the political field."

ANGLO-FRENCH PACT TO SHARE NORTH AFRICA

"You Take Egypt and I Take Morocco"

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 18.—Both France and England look with some concern upon the precarious position of the Spanish army of Dictator Primo de Rivera in Morocco. These three powers are signatory to the pact of Algeciras, slicing up northern Africa among themselves regardless of the interests and self-rule of the natives.

If Spain is decisively beaten back toward the coast, leaving the natives under Abdel Krim in control of the territory lying next to the French, France sees a chance to assert claim over it under the guise of "protecting" her frontier.

The French government yesterday issued a statement saying so in diplomatic language. It said, "The Spanish protectorate over Morocco is the result of an Anglo-French agreement conferring this privilige on the Madrid government, and Spain is not entitled to relinquish the territory to any third power or to evacuate the zone entirely or in part or otherwise escape the obligation of maintaining order without officially advising the two powers concerned."

It is known that in the recent Anglo-French secret agreement, France promised to let Britain have a free hand in the oppression of Egypt and the Sudan if England would give her an equally free hand in Morocco.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

COMRADE BEDACHT CALLS FOR 'ACTION'

By EARL R. BROWDER.

WITH their usual judgment, the minority picked out Comrade Bedacht to throw the "bomb" which was to annihilate the majority—"Programs for Action—Words for Deeds," which "exposes" the majority of the central executive committee as a bunch of phrasemongers while the minority of Lovestone, Bedacht, Engdahl, Ruthenberg and Gitlow, valiantly try to pull the party along with them in action—real action. Unfortunately for Comrade Bedacht, and his political advisers, the party happens to know something of the comrades on both sides of the controversy. And when the party hears, from Bedacht, that Foster is no good because he is a mass of paper resolutions without any action, a great big horse laugh will go up in honor of Comrade Bedacht's good German joke.

There is no question that Comrade Bedacht is burning for action. He wants action on anything at any price. Just so it is action. But doesn't action usually have a purpose? And mustn't action be specific? Just action, for action's sake, is hardly a Communist slogan. What kind of action is Comrade Bedacht complaining he has been given? So far as can be gathered from his article, the specific lack of "action" on the part of the majority consists of the following:

1. The unions are not amalgamated. He wants "action."

2. The Pan-American program was presented by the majority only a few days before the congress was to open. He wanted "quicker action."

3. There is unemployment in America, to fight against which the C. E. C. adopted a comprehensive program with instructions to all party units to put it into effect as fast as conditions permit. Comrade Bedacht wants "more action."

Now, let's examine these points. No. 1 is surely a sore point for us. The unions are not amalgamated, that's true, and we're all angry as the devil about it. We're going to have to figure out some new ways to fight for this necessary measure of solidarity. But—has the minority or any member of it, done anything or even suggested anything to bring this about? Not one! The only one of the minority group on the C. E. C. who ever talks any kind of part in solving industrial questions is Comrade Gitlow, and since he lost the editorship of the Freiheit he has been sulking in his tent, refusing to give us the benefit of his wisdom. So if we want action on amalgamation (as, of course, we do) I'm afraid we'll have to go some where else beside the minority to get it.

No. 2, the Pan-American question. It is true, as Comrade Bedacht says, that much preliminary work is needed for such a problem, and the program should have been worked out long in advance. We knew that, and so we had sent our "imperialism expert," Comrade Lovestone, on a long, long trip to Mexico, at a cost of party money, to lay the necessary preliminary lines and bring back recommendations. Comrade Lovestone had a nice trip, no doubt of that. HE BROUGHT BACK NOT ONE SINGLE ITEM OF INFORMATION; HE RENDERED NOT ONE LINE OF WRITTEN REPORT; HE MADE NOT ONE SINGLE RECOMMENDATION, for the work in hand. So finally, at the last moment, our poor "syndicalist" majority had to use their rough proletarian common sense and rule-of-thumb methods in hammering out a program and a bunch of manifestos. They may have been a bit late, and perhaps, Comrade Lovestone could have made them much more "intellectual." The facts are that he didn't, nor did any of the minority, and what was done was solely the work of the majority the C. E. C. And—really—it wasn't so bad, was it?

No. 3. Unemployment: Suddenly, at the last convention, when the minority first became self-conscious as a minority, they also discovered that their special charge was to look out for the interests of the unemployed. That is a laudible ambition, for surely a Communist Party must do everything in its power to organize the unemployed, and to make unemployment a burning political issue. But how to do it, that is the question.

Unluckily for the minority, their record as the discoverers of the unemployment problem is not clear; their claims to a copyright are voided by the documents of record. It was a member of the present majority (then minority) who drew up the first document of our party last year pointing out the approaching unemployment and warning of the necessity for action. Comrade Bedacht should know this, for he was consulted about the document before its adoption, and made no amendments of suggestion. And a year before this, the same comrade of the present majority had drawn up a program of methods to combat unemployment. So we knew about the problem—and knew it before the present minority—and drew up documents to deal with it which they did not propose to amend.

Documents! exclaimed Comrade Bedacht in disgust. What about action?

Well, both minority and majority proposed resolutions. Both were documents. And action comes from the party—not from the C. E. C.—even Comrade Bedacht himself, noted champion of action, has but rarely been seen upon the barricades. He is much more at home with a comfortable volume of Greek mythology or memoirs of the French revolution (not that I hold this against Comrade Bedacht; I only envy him his ability to apply his studies so well when there is so much work to be done).

But what was in the documents?

The Lovestone-Bedacht combination of actionists said: Throw aside all other work upon the industrial field, including the slogan of amalgamation which is obsolete, and proceed at once to make the immediate organization of unemployed councils the central point of the entire party life.

The C. E. C. majority said: Gently, comrades, gently pray! Don't be in such a hurry to scrap our whole program, tiresome as it may be to you. We will proceed to tackle the unemployment problem in a rational manner and without unnecessary hysteria. We will study all the facts of unemployment, propagandize about it in the press, lay out the slogans upon which a campaign must be organized, and CALL UPON THE ENTIRE PARTY TO BEGIN ORGANIZATION WORK AS QUICKLY AS CONDITIONS PROMISE ANY RESULTS.

That was almost a year ago. In the meantime, we have educated our party to an appreciation of the unemployment problem, have circulated 70,000 pamphlets on unemployment (in which Comrade Bedacht himself could find only "two incidental errors" which turned out to be, after all, not errors), and finally, ONE YEAR AFTER the minority demanded unconditional abandonment of everything else for "action" in organizing unemployed councils, we are at last approaching, still rather slowly, the period when organization of the unemployed may really begin to be a practical immediate problem. And as that action develops we feel assured that, because of our careful preparation and education of the party, such action will not be the sterile futility which the famous unemployment movement was that Comrade Amter led in 1921.

Actions, not words, says Comrade Bedacht on behalf of the minority. We agree, Comrade Bedacht, and we ask you and your associates to come down from your rosy clouds of fantasy, wherein you are dreaming about manipulating the millions of the American masses with dignified waves of your collective hands, and begin to take a constructive part in the American class struggle. It is not so easy as making opposition motions in the C. E. C., which is the sum total of your "actions" for the past year, but it will bring us a few steps nearer to our goal of the proletarian revolution. Which is more than your farmer-labor dreams will do.

THE C. E. C. MAJORITY POLICY—A COMMUNIST POLICY

By C. KOTEFF.

WHENEVER the apologists of a certain party policy become hysterical in their discussions, we can state with certainty that the hysteria is the result of lack of facts to corroborate their policy and consequently that policy is a hopeless one. That precisely is the characteristic trait of the minority of our party and especially of Comrades Bedacht, Lovestone and Amter in the present discussions. Now let's not give vent to hysteria; let's not shift the center of gravity of the discussions from a common sense Communistic discussion to a rather senseless emotional and malignant wrangling.

Discussion of our Party's Immediate Tasks.

First of all, let's not forget that this is a discussion of our party's immediate tasks and not of our final aims. We have before us a concrete, a specific problem, i. e.: the farmer-labor party problem which must be solved upon the basis of existing economic and political conditions. We must solve that problem in the immediate future for the next year or so and not for the next 15 or 20 years. That is to say, we prepare ourselves and meet the situation as it develops, in a Leninist way and not in a scholastical and metaphysical way.

The C. E. C. majority of our party, the Workers (Communist) Party, have placed the question of the farmer-labor party policy squarely before us and in an unequivocal manner. They say: We are not opposed to the farmer-labor party on principle. However, judging from objective conditions, as Marxists and Leninists do, we find that today the great majority of the working class masses that were halfway willing to support a farmer-labor party have simply aligned themselves with the LaFollette movement. Ideologically, the farmer-labor movement of 1922-23 was a LaFollette movement. Those masses that showed a sentiment for a farmer-labor party in reality couldn't differentiate between real farmer-labor party and the LaFollette movement and as a result, accepted the LaFollette movement as the farmer-labor party. Consequently it would simply be an impossibility for us to even attract the attention of any significant group of those masses with a slogan "For a farmer-labor party," let alone to set them in motion for one. Therefore, our immediate task in that field should be to expose the LaFollette movement and disillusion the working class masses therein thru the most effective means now available—thru participation of the Workers (Communist) Party in the everyday struggles of the workers, thru united fronts on the numerous burning issues of the class struggle and in such a way we will most advantageously build a mass Communist Party.

General Abstractions For Facts.

Against this unrefutable Communist analysis of the situation by the C. E. C. majority the comrades of the minority cannot put up a single valid argument. They have as yet to prove that the working class masses who displayed a sentiment for a farmer-labor party were not absorbed in the LaFollette movement. In fact, the minority have practically admitted the contention of the C. E. C. on this point. Nevertheless they are trying to evade this cardinal question by shifting the center of gravity of the discussion and insisting that "the development of capitalism brings about the intensification of the class struggle; that this intensified struggle involves the open use of the state power against the workers and forces the workers into the political struggle" and therefore, we have the basis "For a class farmer-labor party," thus supplying general formulae and abstractions instead of facts that the issue demands.

Comrade Ruthenberg asks again his famous question which he corrected somewhat: "Is the mass movement toward class political action, which has developed in the United States thru the intensification of the class struggle since the end of the war, dead?" Constantly bearing in mind that the Workers (Communist) Party represents a definite movement for a class political action, altho not as yet a mass movement, I will say to the minority on this question that the mass movement toward class political action in the sense of a "Class farmer-labor party" is not dead for the simple reason that it never was born; for what we termed a mass sentiment for independent political action existed and still exists in a rudimentary form and in reality was dominantly permeated with a LaFollette ideology. In other words, when LaFollette came out as an independent presidential candidate he simply took what was his own. The working class masses couldn't see clearly the necessity for a "Class farmer-labor party" and since LaFollette was a mass political leader in their eyes, they were fully satisfied that the LaFollette movement is the movement they wanted. They were, are still today and will be for some time to come, obsessed with the LaFollette illusion. So it will be nothing short of a folly on our part to try now or in the immediate future to maneuver those masses with a slogan "For a farmer-labor party."

But Comrade Ruthenberg says: "The C. P. P. A., the LaFollette movement is offering an organizational crystallization to workers' and farmers' organizations in the folds of the petty bourgeois third party. Shall we abandon the field and permit this crystallization to take place?" No, we shall not abandon that field, we will fight the LaFollette movement from below on burning issues of the everyday class struggle, but let's not entertain such inconsistent illusions that we can prevent the organization of a movement if the economic political and social basis for it exists. I think this extraordinary tendency toward constant political maneuvering, regardless of objective conditions and revolutionary practice, is a dangerous one and should be stopped.

An Army That Understands How to Fight.

Recently a comrade of the minority stated that we should make the Workers (Communist) Party a mass Communist Party and that the membership of the party should be an "army that understands how to fight," concisely so. That's another reason why we should adopt the policy of the C. E. C. majority. A mass Communist Party in name only with an army that does not know how to fight is not worth having. The present party discussion proves that we already have an army, which does not know yet how to fight. Hence the great importance of the slogan, "Bolshevize the party." Even if the contention of the minority in regard to the existence of reality of a "Class farmer-labor party" is correct, which it is not, even then after the intense political campaigns that we have just gone thru we should halt for a moment, take an inventory of our past activities, Bolshevize our membership, organize the thousands of sympathizers that we have won thru our campaigns and then proceed again with our maneuvers on the political and economic fields.

The Communist International Will Endorse the Policy of the C. E. C.

Of all the comrades that recently were in Russia, and there are quite a few, only Comrade Amter, as far as I know, disagrees with the policy of the C. E. C. And what is most striking in his article of Dec. 15, in the DAILY WORKER is his hysterical attitude against everything that the C. E. C. has done and is raising an unfounded alarm with "charges." There is nothing wrong with Comrade Amter except that he either didn't understand the leaders of the Comintern, or else he is too hasty in his criticism of the C. E. C. and has not had a fair chance to study the conditions over here.

The policy of the C. E. C. majority , a Communist policy and the Communist International most certainly will endorse it.

FIGHT OFF THIS PARALYSIS!

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THERE is a disease gripping our party. Comrade Max Bedacht rightly analyzes it, in his indictment of the majority position, as follows: "Programs" for Action; Words for Deeds. That is a fatal disease for any Communist Party. It is a disease that must be eradicated from our party if we are to develop as a fighting, forward-moving section of the Communist International. It is a disease that the majority of our central executive committee carefully fosters, not only thru its thesis and thru its part of the present discussion, but thru its day-to-day handling of party affairs. It is a disease that the present minority of the central executive committee strenuously opposes; that it proposes to eradicate thru the program laid down for the party membership to adopt thru our party's national convention.

We Must Keep Initiative.

"Programs" instead of action leaves the initiative to some other agency. In the case of the Communist struggle for power, where we surrender the initiative, it is taken up by the enemy class.

The majority upholds its negative position, that there is no farmer-labor sentiment in the United States, on the two suppositions that: (1) LaFollette has swallowed the farmer-labor movement; and that (2) the so-called "progressive" movement will organize the third party, which will be a farmer-labor party. In fact, we are told that the LaFollette movement is the farmer-labor movement; that all exploited workers and poor farmers without the confines of our party have all gone irretrievably bourgeois. So why bother about them?

How easy! How self-satisfying!

With a single forensic gesture, it is declared that this disturbing sector of our united front is engulfed. The majority tells us it has disappeared. We are urged by the majority not only to quit fighting for independent political action, in the revolutionary struggle to win the workers and poor farmers for the dictatorship of the proletariat, but we are supposed to hypnotize ourselves into believing that LaFollette has lifted this burden of our struggle off our shoulders by monopolizing the field.

Comrade Foster is himself guilty of this most mechanical and most unMarxian action, in his whole history of our young American Communist movement, when he proclaims in the December issue of the "Workers' Monthly" that:

"When the LaFollette movement swallowed up the farmer-labor party movement a few months preceding the election, it left us with two dead things on our hands. One of these was a dead organization, the national farmer-labor party, and the other was a dead slogan, 'For a mass farmer-labor party'."

No Easy Road to Power.

It is easy for Comrade Foster to act the role of undertaker and cremator of our united front farmer-labor action, thru magazine articles, speeches, manifestoes and contributions to this discussion. But just because it is so easy, so mechanical in execution, that does not mean that it is the solution of a difficult party problem. Quite the contrary.

It is here that a paragraph from Comrade Foster's "Sickness," Lenin's revealing pamphlet, rings clear as a bell when it says:

"'Our theory is not a dogma, but a manual of action,' said Marx and Engels, and the greatest mistake, the greatest crime of patented Marxists . . . is that they have not understood this, that they were unable to apply it. . . . 'Political activity is not the thorofare of the Nevsky Prospekt' (a clean, wide, level, straight main street of Leningrad)."

Words for Deeds.

But Comrade Foster's group claims to have discovered the straight, wide, level highway. There is plenty of comfortable going upon it. There is no crowding. The workers and poor farmers may join us if they wish. But we'll not wander off this comfortable road in the hunt for them. LaFollette has taken our whole farmer-labor united front sector, says the majority. The war is declared at an end. The masses of the workers and poor farmers have surrendered to the enemy. Let the enemy class have them, says Foster. If they break their own prison bars and come back to us, some day, well and good. But we will not help them break with the petit bourgeois influences that lured them away from us. We'll fight for them no longer, says Foster. We'll just go ahead mimeographing and publishing programs instead of carrying out actions; we'll confound the enemy with our words, instead of conquering and annihilating the enemy thru Communist deeds.

LaFollette Movement Disintegrates.

Even a political novice should be able to see the weaknesses and disintegrating influences within the so-called LaFollette "progressive" movement, that Comrade Foster endows with such heroic qualities that it is able to feed on whole strata of our working class population.

The LaFollette movement, that won the temporary support of four millions of voters on last Nov. 4, began a process of disintegration even before the elections took place, and this has been rapidly proceeding ever since. It has now developed the qualities of the proverbial rope of sand.

It is rather unfortunate that the dwindling LaFollette cohorts, now reduced to a few socialist political orphans and the numerous petit bourgeois of the "Committee of 48" have decided to put their promised national gathering off until Feb. 21, next year. Otherwise we would have a living demonstration, even before our own national convention, of the fallacy of Comrade Foster's claims for the LaFollette "progressive" movement.

No LaFollette Third Party.

LaFollette will not organize a third party, no matter how much the "socialists" and the forty-eighters desire he should do so; no matter how much our own majority may insist that he will. Even if LaFollette had plans to organize a third party, as Comrade Foster believes, we should fight all the harder, thru the farmer-labor united front, and by every other means at our disposal, thru our industrial and political work. But the certain breakup of the LaFollette movement makes our task easier.

The Contents of the Mulligan.

What was the organized LaFollette movement? It included in it all the personality of the Wisconsin senator. He was the dominant political power in his own state. The railroad brotherhoods, with their rich treasuries, preferred McAdoo on the democratic ticket, and he was rejected by the Madison Square Garden convention. So they turned to LaFollette. Al Smith, governor of New York, the idol of Tammany Hall, also of the Gompers' regime in the American Federation of Labor, suffered rejection at the same time. The result was that the executive council of the A. F. of L., by a bare majority vote, endorsed LaFollette, which was also a summons to the Gompers' henchmen in all the land to back up the Wisconsin senator. Thus he won the support of the Tammany Hall laborites in New York city and state. The agrarian unrest helped gain support for LaFollette. The stone-faced reaction of both the old parties, in refusing to lend an ear to even the palest progressive ideas also drove some of the shocked bourgeoisie into the LaFollette camp.

The Break-up Begins.

It is interesting to analyze what has happened to these discordant elements. The first break came in the week before election day, when the Gompers' machine, in New York city and state, over the protests of the LaFollettelites and the "socialists" broke away and threw their support to Davis, the democrat.

This incident clearly foretold what would happen at the Cleveland convention of the A. F. of L., where any semblance of a third party mask was thrown aside, and the old non-partisan political policy endorsed. LaFollette was not invited to the A. F. of L. convention. Instead, he was special guest of the gathering was James A. Drain, head of the American (Fascist) Legion. Gompers' g'ost, in the form of some other "labor lieutenant" of capitalism, will knock at the doors of the Wall Street old party convention in 1928. Gompers' ghost will greet the "labor party," as Comrade Foster had prophesied, nor will those who come after him; neither will LaFollette, as Comrade Foster now foretells.

The Backbone Drops Out.

The latest staggering blow to the LaFollette movement has just been dealt by the railroad brotherhoods at the meeting of the national committee of the conference for progressive political action, just held in Washington. There, after the hired man, a foreign democratic congressman, Ed Keating, editor of "Labor," their official organ, they urged the indefinite postponement of the national gathering planned for January. It was clear that they wished to drop all pretense to the organization of a third party. They are planning to return to William G. McAdoo, in support of his aspirations for the democratic nomination in 1928. Thus the backbone, physical and financial, is withdrawn from the LaFollette political structure.

Neither LaFollette nor Wheeler attended the Washington, C. P. P. A. meeting. Neither did LaFollette's campaign manager, Representative John M. Nelson, nor Senators Ladd, Frazier and Brookhart, supposed to have been disciplined by the Coolidge machine in the republican party. They show no signs of revolt from Wall Street's pet party.

The Decrepit Remains.

There remain only the "socialists," who are at the end of their fake "labor party" campaign started at their Detroit convention, in 1921, and the petit bourgeois camp followers who snuggle about Oswald Garrison Villard's "Nation," organ of a second-hand brand of "democratic-pacifism." These little offshoots will be interred with what is left of the corpse of the LaFollette movement at the proper time.

Fight to Win Betrayed Masses.

But the Communist struggle for a farmer-labor united front does not go into the grave with the LaFollette "progressive" movement, as Comrade Foster would have us believe. In spite of Comrade Foster, the farmer-labor united front and the farmer-labor slogan, refuse to die.

It is recognized by all, at the present time, that it was foolish for the Communist movement to boycott the elections in 1920. In that year Debs, while in prison for violating the war's espionage act, received nearly a million votes. Parley Christianson, as the farmer-labor presidential candidate, received over a quarter million more. Debs has turned his back on those who believed in him. The whole of the farmer-labor officialdom during the last five years, from Fitzpatrick to Mahoney, have been exposed as the enemies of independent political action. The question now is, as some comrades put it, are we, too, going to desert the farmer-labor united front and make it unanimous?

The minority believes that it is a criminal policy for our Workers (Communist) Party to surrender the leadership, that we can win over these betrayed and resentful masses thru an aggressive Communist struggle, to the next charlatan that seeks to raise his traitor standards in their midst, be it a LaFollette, a Johnston or a Hillquit.

It is the worst form of inertia for the present majority to dismiss the whole problem with a listless wave of the hand, and an equally listless question challenging the minority with—"Where is your farmer-labor sentiment?"

The Position of the "C. I."

Let us quote the answer to the majority from the unanimous declaration of the central executive committee of our party, issued after consultation with the executive committee of the Communist International in the spring of the year, where it says:

"The first task of the Workers Party is to become a mass Communist Party of workers. It can fulfill this task only by most actively participating in the establishment of a labor party which will embrace all elements of the working class willing to conduct a policy independent of the capitalist class and by establishing a bond with the farmers who are at present in a state of strong fermentation. These two independent tasks—the task of building around the Communist Party of a broad class party and of establishing a bond between the labor party and the poorest elements of the farmers—have developed in the United States, thanks to the peculiarities of historical evolution, as one problem, namely, the building of a common party of workers and exploited farmers."

The above paragraph has been quoted before in this discussion. I repeat it, and hope others will do the same. Comrade Foster says he wrote it, in Moscow, while in consultation with the executive of the Communist International. So much the worse for him in the present discussion. The Communist International approved of that position. It was unanimously endorsed by the central executive committee of our American party.

Stand by the Minority.

The minority of the C. E. C. remains loyal to this position. The majority has deserted it; seeking to blind the membership now with extravagant declarations to the effect that "the LaFollette movement has swallowed up the farmer-labor party movement"; that this united front issue is dead; that the slogan is dead, and similar nonsense.

The party membership must stand by the present minority of the Central Executive Committee, in upholding the declarations of our last national party convention, and of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, and eradicating from our party this insidious disease so seductously fostered by the present majority, leading to sterility and isolation. Fight off this paralysis!

A STRANGE SILENCE—WHERE IS COMRADE LORE?

By BERT MILLER.

THROUOUT all the discussion of the party policy, it seems very strange that we hear not one word from Lore. Here is a comrade who claims to understand most clearly the developments in the American labor movement, who claims to be an authority on current events, who claims to have been the only one with the correct attitude on LaFollette (which the C. I. emphatically denies), and who is at the same time a member of the central executive committee. This same comrade, who very readily attacks the Communist International and upholds Levi and Trotsky, seems to be very slow about making up his mind about a major matter of American party policy. Lore has neither signed one of the theses presented, nor has he proposed one of his own. Shall we hold up the course of the revolution in this country until Comrade Lore makes up his mind? Or has Lore again lost the courage to oppose the F. L. policy as he stated at a New York membership meeting? Or does he desire to avoid staining the pure white wings of the majority?

We see an additional reason for Comrade Lore's not presenting a thesis of his own is that, today, as last May he fears facing the Communist International.

No Meeting or Other Affair Complete Unless—

NO meeting of the Workers Party, business or propaganda, no dance, social, study class, bazaar or forum is complete unless POLICIES find a place in the program of the evening.

All committees of the party arranging affairs for the party must remember this, and party members attending party affairs must see to it that INSURANCE POLICIES take a front seat at all of them.

Only by constantly insisting upon POLICY SALES will we secure the $50,000 with which to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

RAISE IN POSTAL RATES SABOTAGE OF POSTIES' RAISE

Coolidge Has Plan to Keep Wages Down

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—Charging that "the president now stands absolutely certain of defeat if a vote were taken today on his veto of the increase in wages to postal employes," Senator James A. Reed of Missouri declared the president is trying to kill consideration of the bill. Reed said the attempt of Senator Sterling, chairman of the committee on post offices, to introduce a joint bill including raise in postal rates on newspapers, is an ancient political trick to sabotage the postal employes' pay increase.

Reed charged that the administration is trying to antagonize newspaper publishers by taxing them to pay for the pay increase, thus trying to bring about the ultimate defeat of the pay increase for postal employes. The joint bill, now being drafted by Sterling, includes the salary increase, but also raises the postal rates on newspapers, magazines and periodicals 100 per cent.

"It is a common trick," Reed said, "To defeat a bill by levying a tax in the same measure so that every person who pays the tax bill will oppose the bill. Every publisher, altho he may be in favor of salary increases for postal employes, will have to oppose being made the goat and will contribute to the defeat of this hyphenated bill."

Frederick W. Hume, executive secretary of the national publishers association, has issued a statement declaring Postmaster General New's bill "utterly hopeless." "Anyone who has studied the case thoroly," Hume said, "Must realize that congress will be flooded with protests from all over the country against the passage of such a bill. The results will be that neither measure—the postal rate bill nor the postal pay bill—can be passed. The bill plunges both proposals into a state of chaos."

SUB-ZERO WEATHER MOVING FROM NORTH-WEST EXPECTED HERE

The cold wave which brot the lowest temperature in years to the west and northwest had only slightly touched us here when it descended upon us chilling what had been a drizzling rain into a sheeting of ice on streets, rails and telegraph wires impeding all traffic and causing scores of accidents.

With the 10 degree temperature registered yesterday morning, according to the weather bureau officials, the full intensity of the cold wave had not reached us yet. The frigid weather, moving from the Canadian northwest where sub-zero temperatures have prevailed for two days, was slightly delayed but would probably reach here today.

BRITAIN BREAKS ITS PACT WITH THE FREE STATE

Canada Interested in the Controversy

DUBLIN, Dec. 18.—Anti-British sentiment here has taken a new lease of life since Britain's action protesting against the registration of the Anglo-Irish treaty with the league of nations.

Republicanism, which had lost much of its vigor owing to the lack of political judgment of its leaders and their efforts to prove more loyal to capitalism than the Free Staters, is liable to gain in strength as this latest act of the British government has proven beyond the possibility of doubt that no treaty made by Britain with Ireland is worth the ink with which it is written so long as the empire exists.

Too Near J. Bull's Heart.

The British government will not tolerate dominion status for Ireland. The latter country is too near the heart of England and the bitterness engendered by a struggle lasting over 700 years, cannot be softened below the danger point by a fake concession like the Free State.

The Irish Free State government contends that it was admitted to the league on the same terms as every other country. At first the British empire favored multiple representation of its dominion in the league but when its dominions voted against Japan and against Britain on the immigration question, Downing Street took this as a warning note.

May Cripple League.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 18.—Official action by the Canadian government on the controversy between England and Ireland over the Irish treaty is expected when that body meets in January. There is a growing opinion here that the dispute may smash the league of nations beyond repair. Some people believe that is just what the tory government wants to do, the league having become more or less of a nuisance since the tories have started out on a new drive for world conquest.

REACTIONARIES IN PITTSBURGH ROB THE BALLOT

Progressive Take Steps to Count the Vote

By PAT H. TOOHEY.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CANONSBURG, Pa., Dec. 15.—From the returns being gathered by the progressive miners of the results of the election held Dec. 9, it is evident that if an honest account were assured, the radical ticket would win hands down.

From Avella, formerly a machine stronghold, it is reported that at one local 203 votes were cast for the progressives and three for the old guard. The international slate carried practically every local in the Charliers valley, as did the district slate. To date there has not been a local reported that has given the gang more votes than the progressives.

The progressive miners will take a vote of their own of every local in the district, irrespective of the findings of the "tellers" who are under the thumb of the machine-controlled administration. Every militant is urged to secure the vote of his local and send it to the writer at 505 James St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Wholesale Vote Stealing.

While the miners repudiated the official slate at the polls, and there being high resentment among the rank and file over the Judas treatment accorded to the imprisoned Cliftonville miners the progressive candidates are doubly certain that the election will be stolen, if possible, and are securing affidavits when informed of any irregularities. First instance to be reported was the Coverdale local union where the machine is said to have stolen 40 votes. In the Chartier valley the progressives hold a lead of five to one with six locals reporting.

Determined to keep the progressive movement in being, prominent progressives have called a left wing conference to assemble at Pittsburgh International Lyceum, next Sunday to map out plans for future activities.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 18. —"I used to work in a rug factory for $17 a week and I kept my mother and my three little sisters. We haven't got a father," Helen Vineski, 17 year old unmarried mother arrested for abandoning her 2-month old baby explained in court.

"I work in a paper box factory in Greenpoint where I get $25 a week," William Froewisa, 20, father of the infant told the judge. "My mother is sick in Greenpoint hospital." His father has been ill and unemployed for four years.

Acquit Strikers of Unlawful Assemblage In Paterson Strike

(Special to The Daily Worker)

Paterson, N. J., Dec. 18.—Two silk strikers, Charles Sayek and Stanley Alutonis, were acquitted here of charges of unlawful assemblage. The charges were placed against ten men including Roger N. Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union, and John C. Butterworth, candidate for congress in the last election, following a police raid on a peaceful assemblage of strikers in front of the city hall. The police broke up this meeting, clubbed and trampled American flags being carried by two women strikers, and arrested the ten men.

The trials of Baldwin and Butterworth, Kerrill Konzer, Brocco Natale David Nitkin, George Cabbrizza, Feris Dreeka and Basil Efsa were postponed for a week.

Cabbrizza and Sayek were brot before Judge Delaney to answer to the unlawful assemblage charge, from the county jail, where they had been serving time after being arrested for picketing.

COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN

To the American Pioneers!

(A letter from the Russian Pioneers Leninci.)

Dear American Comrades: We are sending you our warm Pioneer greetings from the Red Capitol and the heart of the Comintern, where the red flag is waving in the breezes, where we won the right to wave it after a bitter struggle of the workers under the leadership of the Communist Party and Ilyitch.

You still have to work long before you will conquer, as we did, your American capitalist sharks.

We, the Pioneers, want to help you in this struggle. Our young generation will raise the banner of Leninism and come to your aid. For this reason we want to be in closer connection with the American young Leninists.

With warm Leninist greeting, the Pioneers of the 24th Company, of the Factory Red Torch. Address: Moscow, Sofijskaya pobe-rejnaya, 12, Factory Red Torch for the Young Leninists.

We Are Juniors!

Juniors! Do you know what that name means? It means the next generation of Communists, and good Communists we expect them to be. It symbolizes the Communist children, struggling for their share in the world. If they don't realize it, they are taught their position in this world and the part they have in it. They are taught of the part that should be theirs, of the class struggle, of the difference between Soviet Russia and other countries, etc.

Many parents claim that if their children should go in for such work as the Juniors are doing they would lose interest in school work, would fail in their studies, etc., but you will notice that most of the Juniors are the brightest students in school. Another argument is "Let the child see the bright side of life. It is too young to think of such matters." But comrades, if the child is not taught while young, it will become an instrument of the capitalists, and it will be hard to change the ideas once put into their minds.

Besides children of the Junior groups are joyful and energetic under the stimulas of pioneering in the right direction.

Children of eight to fourteen are eligible for joining the Junior groups. Comrades, send your children to the Junior group in the district they live. For the address of meeting or the name of the Junior group nearest your home, send to the secretary of the C. C. C., Thelma Kahn, 1109 S. Robey St., Chicago, Ill.

The Michigan Cases

The strong possibility that Comrade William Z. Foster may be re-tried on a charge of violating the criminal syndicalist law of the state of Michigan, as a result of the decision of the supreme court of that state to uphold the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg, confronts the class-conscious workers of the United States with a very serious responsibility.

The decision in the Ruthenberg case reveals a gross disregard of the constitutional provisions on free speech and free assemblage. The decision of the judicial lackeys of the capitalist class makes it quite clear that capitalist laws will be lived up to by our rulers only so long as they serve the exploiters' purpose. When their own laws interfere with their oppression of the workers they ditch them with scant ceremony.

When a Berrien county jury failed to convict Comrade Foster on his first trial a great howl of rage went up from the capitalists' press thruout the country. From then on they laid the basis for a campaign of red hysteria that helped to make Ruthenberg's conviction easier and the railroading of the other indicted Communists arrested in the Bridgeman raid a foregone conclusion.

The Berrien county prosecutor stated that if the conviction of Comrade Ruthenberg was upheld Foster would be tried immediately. This constitutes a challenge to the American working class that must be taken up. The capitalists would like to get the bars of a strong cell between Comrade Foster and the working masses. They have never forgiven him for the great steel strike.

In order to carry on this fight money is needed. The Labor Defense Council is charged with the task of directing the legal battle to save our comrades from prison. It is the duty of every reader of The DAILY WORKER to support the Labor Defense Council in this fight.

Speculation as to who shall take Herriot's place as prime minister of France in case the leg affliction which he is supposed to be suffering from becomes chronic, is rife in Paris political circles. It is an interesting coincidence that the malady attacked him about the time he began his "red" raids. Bolshevik microbes perhaps!

More About Farm "Prosperity"

The department of agriculture has just announced the value of the farm crops for this year's harvest. There is an increase of more than $700,000,000 in the total over the previous year.

An analysis of the report discloses the fact that the rise in the total prices was due primarily to two factors. First, the increase in the price of wheat occasioned by a temporary shortage in the world market. Secondly, the continued cheapening of money.

Of course, we may expect the capitalist prosperity drummers to hail these figures as the latest evidence of prosperity amongst the farming masses. The facts beneath the surface refute all these false contentions. First of all, the corn crop is a very poor one. Then, the price of corn is so high that it only serves as a source of increase in the cost of raising hogs. This reduces considerably whatever gains the farmers of the latter group intend to make.

In fact, the livestock situation has taken a turn for the worse in recent months. The farmers engaged in dairying are likewise losing out rapidly. The agricultural masses as a whole are not at all prosperous. It is only a section of these masses, the wheat raising group, that has benefited in the slightest from the price rise.

And in reference to this group it is interesting to note that the department of agriculture has failed to disprove the claim made by many spokesmen of farm organizations that most of the wheat, the price of which had risen in recent months, was out of the hands of the farmers before.

We know these prosperity waves that are so assiduously advertised by the employing class. The farm crisis involving the fate of all the agricultural masses has not been relieved. If one picks up the newspapers published in the rural regions he will find that social degradation and bankruptcy are still as grim a spector as ever haunting the homes and lives of the poor farmers. The department of agriculture is simply engaged in spreading political propaganda for the employing class. It is not difficult to see thru the veneer of falsehood covering the official figures.

British wage workers are demanding wage increases amounting to almost half a million dollars. Over 2,500,000 workers engaged in the mining, metal and shipping industries want more pay. All of Baldwin's troubles will not come from the colonies.

Stealing Elections

A labor faker who is not capable of declaring himself elected when the progressive opposition is not on the job deserves his defeat. This is the unwritten code among the reactionary leadership of the American labor movement.

In a pamphlet published by district 8 of the Workers Party, it was proved that Frank Farrington was never elected by a vote of the membership of the Illinois Miners' Union, but counted himself "in" thru the use of a well oiled machine and a strong army of paid henchmen.

"I don't give a goddamn whether any of you vote for me or not; I'll be your next president anyhow," is Farrington's challenge to the miners of district 12. He has kept his word so far.

In the recent elections a progressive secretary of a local union in southern Illinois captured 500 bogus ballots, part of an order of 5,000 printed by Farrington henchmen in order to supply any deficiency in the vote necessary to put Farrington back in the district office at Springfield. The progressives in southern Illinois are now taking steps to expose the crooked election steal of Farrington's machine. A mass meeting is called for and at this gathering a special sub-district convention will be demanded to place the crooks responsible for this crookedness on trial. This is the way to go about restoring the Illinois Miners' Union to the membership.

The election returns show that wherever a fair count is made, the reactionary machines, national and district, are buried under an avalanche of votes. This should be a signal for the progressives to rally their forces for the struggle against the reactionaries. They have the fakers on the run and now is the time to keep them on the run. The fight is not over when the ballots are counted. It should be only the beginning of a more effective fight.

Francis M'Cullagh, ex-British stoolpigeon in Russia and now on an American tour, hazards the prediction that Bolshevism has a ten-year lease of life in the Soviet Republic. Bolsheviks can play many a dirty trick on the capitalists during that time.

The Unstable Balkans

Quick on the heels of the news that Jugo-Slavia and Roumania were taking steps to set up a union of the Balkan states against "Bolshevist activities" come dispatches telling of war between Albania and Jugo-Slavia—a war that is bound to cause extreme nervousness in the capitals of the Europe-an powers. There is a sort of peasant-nationalist movement on foot in Albania and the mountaineers have overthrown the Fan Noli government.

Jugo-Slavia's ruling class considers any disturbance of the existing conditions as a menace to their right to plunder in that neck of the woods and dispatches tell of bombardment along the Albanian frontier by Jugo-Slavian artillery.

It is impossible to tell accurately at this time and from this distance the various forces and social alignments involved in the new outbreak, but the significant thing is the evidence of a kind of volcanic instability in the Balkans that makes any complete union of the rulers of these little nations against the revolutionary movement impossible.

All attempts, in the Balkans and elsewhere, to wipe out nationalistic and imperialistic rivalries and concentrate on an offensive against Soviet Russia and the Communist International, have ended in failure so far as actual organization is concerned.

The mighty oaths taken to uphold capitalism against the rising force of the world revolution run always against the snag of contradictions and conflicts that keep the enemies of the working class fighting among themselves.

We venture to say that no working agreement even against "Bolshevist activities" will be reached by the Balkan states for some time to come. War between these would-be allies is far more probable.

Why have the democrats and so-called progressives lost all interest in the graft cases in which Forbes and Fall are the star actors? Answer: the elections are over.

The Waltham Watch Strike

The strike of 3,000 workers of the Waltham watch factory in the company town of that name in Massachusetts is now, since the victory of the Paterson silk workers, the outstanding example of the powers of resistance of the American workers.

This strike has lasted 20 weeks with scarcely any defections from the ranks of the strikers in spite of the seductive practices of foremen and superintendents.

The Waltham workers have progressed from a company union to a fighting organization of their own since the strike. They have learned the power of organization and the necessity of solidarity. They have found out that welfare plans do not bring home the bacon for workers.

The Waltham plant, controlled by Kidder, Peabody and company—bankers—is crippled while the response to the appeals for financial aid sent out by the strike committee is said to have been generous and the spirit of the strikers is excellent.

It is in such struggles as these that the workers learn to depend upon their own power, learn that workers have no friends but themselves and that the press and the organs of the government are part of the capitalist system which makes such struggles inevitable.

COOLIDGE AGAIN BLOCKS POSTAL EMPLOYES BILL

Held Until Legislative Business Is in Order

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—Vote on the bill to increase the pay of postal employes, which is now before the senate, was again blocked by Coolidge and his senatorial backers. Coolidge, who vetoed the bill at the last session of congress, is directly exerting all efforts possible to prevent the pay raise for the postal employes from being passed over his veto.

Coolidge conferred with Senators Borah, Sterling and Curtis at the White House, and later called in Senators Spencer, Gooding, Cummins, Stanfield, McCormick and McKinley to line them up to fight against the pay increase.

Coolidge now holds the edge in the situation, the bill being held up until routine legislative business is again in order. This will be delayed by the Coolidge satellites as long as possible.

Meanwhile the Underwood bill, providing for the sale of Muscle Shoals to private capitalists, a deal which Washington papers have described as "a worse steal than Teapot Dome," has been blocked by Coolidge opponents. There are over twenty amendments by democratic senators which must be voted on before Underwood's bill can be disposed of. The Smith amendment, providing for the operation of Muscle Shoals by the war department, was lost by a vote of 49 to 32, but the opposition to the Underwood bill is growing.

Views of Our Readers

The Floods in South Florida.

To the DAILY WORKER: You may have read all Florida's newspapers and yet not know about this year's flood of the everglades, that is of the whole of south Florida.

Here, in Miami, even some of the down streets were closed by the water in the beginning of the flood, yet the papers only talked about exceptional rains and that was all.

Flood Did Damage.

All everglades and part of the country around, the celery growing land around Tamford and Manatee county have been flooded. The water did not reach as high as the year before last, but it came later in the season so it will last just as long. Also it did more damage, because most of the land was already planted.

All the fruit trees died. There were a lot of them planted, the people believing the talk of the real estate men about being safe from floods and the construction of new canals. Most of the chickens died, too. Lots of them had to be sold at very low prices. People are living in the houses surrounded by water. Some have to go one or more miles, knee deep in the water, to get to the road.

The water is just off the highest part of the land now. Most places are a foot or more in water yet.

Prices Go Up.

The prices of the vegetables in the local markets are exorbitant. By the time the farmer will have them, if ever, they will be so low as not to pay the cost.

The weather is cold and we expect frost any time.

The grape fruits are selling already at a lower price than they sold last year and that was a bad year. It was also bad for all other crops, being too dry, with too many frosts in the winter and too hot in the summer.

The prices of the land are going higher and higher. The advertisements bring down the farmers of the north and the ruined farmers of Georgia come to look for a new fortune and bring the remains of their old one to the real estate men.

Would Give Several Lives to Revolution

To The DAILY WORKER:—I am sending you a clipping concerning Gompers in Mexico. The old stiff is ramming around at bull fights squandering the workers' hard earned money. I am 65 years of age and would not withold any respect due old age but I can feel no sympathy for such a calloused brute and the sooner he can remove his putrid carcass from the sight of men the better for all.

Blessings on you all, Comrades. I only wish I had several lives to give to the cause we represent.

Your Comrade,
Henry Dondery, Morgantown, W. Va.

MORGAN THINKS FOR COOLIDGE

While "Cal" Remains Silent.
(By Boris Efimov in the Moscow Izvestia.)

GOMEZ TO TALK ON PAN-AMERICAN LABOR AT FORUM

Plans to Reveal Crimes of U. S. Imperialism

Gompers is dead. But the Pan-American Federation of Labor goes on. It is an agent of Wall Street imperialism in Latin-America. Opposed to it is the new organization, Pan-American Ant-Imperialist League, and the Communist movement in both North and South America.

The question of imperialism is the gravest problem in the whole world. The relationship of the weaker nations to the stronger and the part played by the revolutionary movement against the great groups of international capital, is a question of overwhelming importance in world affairs and in our own lives.

Thoroly Acquanted With Latin-America.

Only one who has made an exhaustive study of the subject, and who, as well, has been in practical life acquainted with the methods of exploitation of oppressed peoples by the so-called "superior races," can set forth in buring detail the crimes and conspiracies of American imperialism. That is why Manuel Gomez has been engaged for this lecture.

At the Workers Party Open Forum on next Sunday evening, Manuel Gomez, an authority who has studied in close detail and who has felt in his own life the lash of the American capitalists over the lives of the Latin-American peoples, will speak upon "The Monroe Doctrine and American Imperialism." It will be a vivid study of the foreign policy of Wall Street and how it affects the lives of the workers right here in the United States, as well as the oppressed of other lands.

Few Know What Imperialism Is.

What is imperialism? Not one in a thousand understands the full meaning of the term. Do you imagine that the Monroe Doctrine is an old musty document which lost its meaning a hundred years ago? Few people understand its living and terrible threat to the peace of the world, or how it may pull American workers into war at any moment. These are things you will be informed upon, if you go to the Open Forum, at the Lodge Room, Ashland Auditorium, Van Buren and Ashland, next Sunday evening.

Manuel Gomez is an engaging speaker, and is fully acquainted with the subject of imperialism, not only in its mechanical aspect, but in life. He will tell how the capitalists of the United States conspire to set the Latin countries at war with each other. And what role the revolutionary workers play. Be sure to come to the Ashland Auditorium on Sunday night. Questions and discussions follow the speech.

New Oil Fields Found in Russia.

MOSCOW (By Mail.)—The explorations and surveys made by M. Kalitsky, Russian geologist, in the coastal district of the Caspian Sea near Mokhachala gave ample proofs that this region appears to be a very promising oil-bearing field. This was not expected because there were no outward indications or symptoms of the oil. Preparations are made to start deep boring in the near future.

FASCISTI JAIL ENEMY EDITORS FOR THREE YEARS

1500 Discharged Workers Plan Demonstration

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Dec. 18.—A caucus of the fascisti deputies has decided to put into action at once the law against the press, sending all opposition editors to jail for three years and suspending all opposition papers for three months.

Situation Tense.

Fifteen hundred workers, longshoremen have been discharged at Naples, making the situation there very tense. The discharged workers are planning to stage huge demonstrations.

Carlo Giovanetti, fascist from Milan, who killed a motorman, Attilio Oldani, in the street car strike at Milan, has been sentenced to forty years' imprisonment. The motorman was defenceless when the fascist shot him down in cold blood. Thirty workers were sentenced to life imprisonment last month for killing four fascisti who shot at them from ambush, inflicting losses on the workers. Recently 40 workers were sentenced to a total of over 1,000 years in jail in Empoli, for taking part in a general strikes movement.

Deputy Grancelli, editor of a weekly fascist paper, has written an open letter to Mussolini, urging that steps be taken to kill all opposition leaders within twenty-four hours.

Deputy Guinta, vice speaker of the chamber of deputies, has been forced to resign, following exposure of his activity in fascist plots of violence.

Board of Review Shown As Aid to Big Tax Dodgers

In reply to a communication sent to the board of review by the board of education, requesting them to set a date for a hearing on their complaint against the Union Stockyards and and Transit company for tax dodging, Attorney Henry W. Ashton, tax attorney for the school board, was summoned to appear before the board of review.

The charges made by the board of education was that the Union Stockyards should pay $13,000,000 in taxes per year whereas they are now paying only $3,164,910, thus robbing schools and other organizations out of almost $10,000,000 every year in taxes.

At their last meeting, the board of education voted to investigate these tax dodging cases in conjunction with the Teachers' Federation, Ashton and Margaret Haley, of the Teachers' Union went before the board of review in an effort to get them to set a date for a hearing.

The board of review members, R. Litsinger and Charles V. Barret, refused absolutely to set a date for the hearing. They waived the whole matter with the vague statement that they would notify Ashton when they are ready.

Miss Haley's charges that "Tax fixing is fast becoming the best paying business in Cook County" and "Every effort to obtain proper tax assessments is met with failure, refusal and delay" left Litsinger and Barrett unmoved. No date was set for the hearing of the school board's complaint against wealthy tax robbers and the tax board.

Division St. Speakers will talk on the situation in the United States and the program of the Workers Party. Admission free. Send your friends who speak Russian to this meeting.

THE forei... ...blished in the Ame... ...italist press on the Trotsky ...el with the central committee of the Communist Party of Russia might just as well have been written in New York or Chicago. It is quite likely indeed that many of them are. Those acquainted with the methods of capitalist editors know that they are not beyond concocting an imaginary yarn about "Soviet" atrocities and slipping a Moscow or Riga date line over it. Trotsky, for the second time since 1917, finds considerable favor in the eyes of some capitalist writers. Daniel O'Connell, the great Irish orator and so-called "emancipator," once said that whenever he earned the compliments of the British government, he went home and examined his conscience. If Comrade Trotsky, while in the Crimea, has an opportunity to read flattering comments on his fight against the central committee of his own party, he could do worse than recall O'Connell's famous remark.

POPE Pius has condemned the Russian Soviet regime and buried his poisoned stiletto in the heart of Communism. But the old peddler of religious opium can froth at the mouth; he can hurl his bulls and edicts until his throat gets dry, the revolutionary thrown continues to work and his thunderbolts miss their mark. There was a time when the pope could call on governments to carry out his wishes." But those days are no more. He tries to maintain the illusion that the Vatican of today is the Vatican of the dark ages and of the days when to invent a machine for the lightening of human toil or conceive a new idea was tantamount to applying for a bed on the rack or a drink of molten lead, from the pope's predecessors.

TODAY the pope is hanging on by the "skin of his teeth." Instead of being a leader he is merely a political menial of the great capitalist powers. In Italy he is the ally of the murderer, Mussolini, but one of these days, the Italian workers are going to give him the same medicine they have concocted for Russia. The pope is now engaged in the Italian empire. It is significant that this anti-Red diatribe of the pope's was given out shortly after he was visited by Austen Chamberlain, tory foreign minister. Chamberlain was on a Red crusade and induced Herriot to open war on the French Communists. He did and is now in bed with a sick foot.

CHAMBERLAIN'S visit to the pope was not altogether connected with the international crusade against Communism. The press reports state that the nomination of Mgr. O'Donnell as archbishop of Armagh, Ireland, followed the reception of Chamberlain by the pope. This means that the British protestant government has endorsed the appointment of O'Donnell to succeed the British lackey, Cardinal Logue. Britain is known as one of the "protestant powers" but that power has the right of veto over papal appointments to the ecclesiastical offices in Ireland. Irish catholics who profess a great hatred for England do not seem to realize that the British government and the pope are working hand in hand to keep Ireland under the British yoke. They should read "Labor, Nationality and Religion" by Ireland's greatest revolutionist, James Connolly, and learn the truth.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANSFIELD, O., Dec. 19.—The election returns in the carpenters' union in this town at least, shows a tremendous opposition to the reactionary machine of Hutcheson.

In the Mansfield Local 735, in every case where an opposition candidate ran against the present officials, the vote for the opposition was almost unanimous.

ALASKAN SNOW STORM COMES DOWN OUT OF THE NORTH WITH CHILL

The long heralded "Alaskan snow storm" arrived in Illinois yesterday, creeping over the midwest in its southward and eastward course. Telephone and telegraph wires were broken down, and traffic in many places was paralyzed.

Near zero temperature prevailed, making the suffering of the large number of unemployed workers in Chicago acute. Many homes of the workers were freezing cold yesterday, those who have been unable to find work being without fuel.

Hundreds of shade trees and telephone poles were snapped by weight of the ice and snow. Commercial wire companies had hundreds of linemen working thruout the state in an effort to re-establish communication in the storm area, but the broken poles made resumption of normal conditions impossible.

"The tyrannous machine which has shown its fangs in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' election is evidence of the fear the administration is in lest the left wing candidates and the left wing policies be the victors," said Phil Aronberg yesterday, in regard to the fight the left wingers under his guidance put up the last three days to oust the class collaboration

THE UNEMPLOYED

This is added proof that the left wing in the unions, the basis of Communist activity and the army of the Trade Union Educational League, is the long but certain struggle to revolutionize the unions, is an indestructible mass of workers over which leadership in the daily struggle is both necessary and possible.

In Local 735 the vote rans as follows: For general president, Hutcheson, none; Brown, one; Rosen, the left winger, 67. For first general vice-president, Cosgrove, one; Walsh, 66. There was no opposition to the incumbent 2nd vice-president, the general secretary or general treasurer, nor for general executive board member in the 5th and 7th districts. But the vote against the administration in the others ran as follows:

First district; Guerin, none, Mulcahy, 67; second district, Williams, none, Kelly, 62, Allen, 5; third district, Pott, one, Carlson, one, Johns, 65; fourth district, Oglietree, 1, Dixon, 67; sixth district, Cole, 3, Spann, 64.

INSURANCE CO. SPOILS ATTACK AGAINST LABOR

Shows Bomb Planted to Collect Good Money

"Labor troubles" were quickly given by the papers as the reason for a dynamite bomb explosion in the children's dress factory of the Shraiberg Manufacturing Co., Chicago.

The proprietor recalled that he cut wages, dismissed some white girls and taken on colored workers. The story looked good to the capitalist press.

But it was spoiled by the hardboiled insurance companies who had irving Shraiberg, one of the partners, arrested. The companies thought "labor bombers" a good gag for the public but they had facts that made them hesitate to pay Shraiberg cold cash on his generous bombing and fire insurance policies.

The stock in the dress making shop was worth $3,000, according to deputy state fire marshal McNally. The insurance policies carried a face value of $34,000. The result of a little problem in arithmetical ratio was the arrest of the heavily insured employer on a charge of causing the explosion in order to collect insurance. His good friend Samuel Ablin was greeted by the police with a charge of malicious mischief, being held as the planted of the bombs.

Levin leadership in Chicago.

Aronberg, who ran on the left wing ticket against Levin, stated that the voting would end yesterday and the ballots would be counted later.

"The administration officials launched a campaign of trerorism to drive the membership away from the polls," he said, "particularly were they anxious to prevent the left wing from presenting its policies and its candidates for consideration by the membership. The only result is to reduce the number of those voting."

Treated Members Like Cattle.

"In order to shut off any chance of equal opportunity by the left wing, they called in their sluggers and beat up the members who worked for the left wing candidates," said some of the militant members who were distributing sample ballots. "They tried to drive the members around like cattle with guns and blackjacks, as hundreds of the members know and as proved by the wounds of those now under doctor's care."

Clearly, the revolutionary wing is a power when it so frightens the administration that it resorts to such desperate measures which are certain to lose in the long run.

Shops Demanded Protection.

That the membership is intesely resentful of this rule of their union by gangsters and autocrats who shove the maround and have no reply to make to the policies advocated by the left wing but violence, is shown by many developments of the election. Some shops refused to go to the union halls for voting, unless they were guaranteed protection from the administration's sluggers and allowed free choice of candidates.

The chief results o fthe official terrorism are the probable reduction of the aggregate vote over the vote two years ago, and the thoro arousing of the membership against the violent and autocratic administration.

Pick Green, Democrat and Red Baiter, to Take Place of Sam Gompers

EVIDENCE GATHERED BY DAILY WORKER SHOWS NEW HEAD OF THE A. F. OF L. IS ENEMY OF WORKERS

A traitor to the working class—a man who as secretary of the United Mine Workers of America did all in his power to prevent the strengthening of the miners' union and organization of the non-union fields, has been elected president of the American Federation of Labor.

The proof that Green tried to keep secret the deplorable conditions of the unorganized miners of Eastern Kentucky has just reached the DAILY WORKER. The few locals which have been organized in this coal field have repeatedly asked Green for aid to organize the non-union miners. They have pointed out that the wages are only $3.50 per day and that the miners themselves are demanding organization.

Green Tried to Gag Complaints.

In reply, Green wrote these locals, asking them not to make public these deplorable conditions. On June 21, 1924, Green wrote L. E. Whitehead, of Local Union No. 4106, Blackey, Kentucky, who had asked for aid in organizing the non-union miners, who had asked for a charter, "I thank you for the information you submit regarding mining prices and working conditions, which you explain prevail in eastern Kentucky. This information is decidedly interesting. I do not think it would be advisable at this time to submit the data which you give to the public thru the United Mine Workers' Journal. It would be all right to do so at some later time, but not now."—Signed, William Green.

Green was asked by Whitehead for aid in organization and wrote back that nothing could be done now.

Whitehead then sent Green a resolution requesting that something be done to organize the miners of eastern Kentucky, who had again and again spontaneously held meetings and requested the aid of the miners' union. Green replied, "I have noted the copy of the resolution you sent me. Undoubtedly, there is a strong sentiment in favor of organization of the miners of the Hazard coal field. This same sentiment prevails in some other sections of eastern Kentucky. However, this may be the international executive board has been rather cautious in any action which might be taken looking toward the organization of this important coal field. Any move to organize in these fields must proceed with caution and calm deliberation."

He Peddles His Bull.

"Whenever a campaign is begun in eastern Kentucky every detail will be mapped out carefully. We want to be sure that when a movement is started, it will not end in failure. You sent the resolution as prepared by your local union to me for consideration. I feel that the situation in eastern Kentucky ought to be brought to the international convention thru a resolution, but it is my opinion that the section of the resolution you submit wherein President Lewis is either directly or indirectly criticised should be amended so that this objectionable feature of the resolution would be eliminated. I therefore, suggest that you amend the resolution so as to eliminate that part."

Seeing that nothing but discouragement and excuses for delay came from the executive board members, the coal miners of eastern Kentucky took the matter up with Samuel Pascoe, appointed by the executive board as president of district 30, and a friend of William Green. Pascoe was appointed five years ago, when a few locals had been organized by the miners' union.

With no apparent reason for doing so, and with the approval of the international officers, Pascoe immediately stopped the work of organizing. He has done nothing to organize the non-union miners since his appointment. He has not even made efforts to hold together the local unions organized when he was appointed provisional president. Consequently, twenty of the local unions organized in the Hazard coal field have been broken up by the coal operators, without protest on

RUTHENBERG IS TO APPEAR FOR COURTS' DECREE

Called for Sentence on Christmas Eve

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Dec. 19.—Judge Charles E. White has issued an order directing C. E. Ruthenberg, whose conviction of criminal syndicalism was affirmed by the supreme court of the state, to appear in court on Wednesday, Dec. 24, for sentence.

Meanwhile Attorneys Frank P. Walsh and I. E. Ferguson, for the defense have submitted a motion to the supreme court of Michigan asking that the mandate to Judge White to sentence Ruthenberg be withdrawn for the purpose of permitting the defense to submit a motion for a rehearing in the supreme court on issues which the defense believes were not met by the opinion of the supreme court. This motion will be decided on Tuesday, the day before Judge White has ordered Ruthenberg to appear for sentence.

Should the supreme court decide against the motion of the defense Judge White will be empowered to sentence Ruthenberg and order his immediate imprisonment.

Should he follow this course the defense would be obliged to go to the supreme court of the United States with a bill of exceptions and ask for bail from that court, which would however involve some weeks during which Judge White's sentence to imprisonment would hold.

The case will eventually be appealed to the supreme court, the question at issue being whether Ruthenberg will be compelled to begin serving his sentence before action by the supreme court can be secured.

ITALIAN CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES IN CLOSED SESSION

Fascisti Won't Allow Giunta to Resign

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Dec. 19.—Following the exposure in the opposition press of the crimes of Fascisti leaders, Fascism is steadily losing ground in Italy. The socialists and monarchists, are banding together to prevent the capitalist state from going into the hands of the Communists, and are advocating a military dictatorship to replace the weakening Fascisti.

The chamber of deputies is now in closed session, with many of the opposition deputies refusing to participate, and is voting on the law prohibiting opposition to Fascism from being expressed in the newspapers. The law provides that all opposition editors be imprisoned for three years and all opposition newspapers be surpressed for a period of at least three months.

Deputy Duces has challenged under secretary of state Suard to a duel following a heated argument in the chamber of deputies.

Mussolini's position has been shaken by the act of the Fascist deputies in refusing to permit vice speaker of the chamber, Giunta, to resign. This places the full responsibility of for Giunta's crimes upon the Fascisti. Giunta has been found to have instituted an attack on the life of one of the opposition deputies. Following this act of Mussolini's followers, former premier Salandra, who has been one of the leaders of the Fascisti, joined the opposition in voting against the Fascisti.

GREEN'S JOB MEANS LEWIS IN CABINET

Coolidge-Lewis-Green Combine Ahead

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, was chosen president of the American Federation of Labor by the executive council of that body meeting here today.

The miners and carpenters were the leading supporters of Green in the council decision.

Green is 51 years old and resides at Coshocton, Ohio, and has been a "regular" democratic politician for years, having served two terms as state senator. He has been a faithful class collaborationist, drafting a so-called "compensation law" for Ohio which was highly approved of by the employers as an imitation of the real thing in compensation.

An Experienced Labor Faker.

Green has been one of the most vicious enemies of the left wing in the unions and of the Communists, leading the attack on William F. Dunne to expel him from the Portland convention last year. He has faithfully followed Gompers in unrelenting hostility toward Soviet Russia, and naturally will continue this attitude.

Like all labor fakers, Green is a member of many fraternal orders where they can rub with the petty bourgeoisie on liquid terms. He belongs to the Elks, the Odd Fellows and the high-sounding "American Academy of Political and Social Science." He is also a Baptist church member and an old line Bourbon democrat. He pretended to support LaFollette in the recent election, but he was more of a spy against LaFollette and really favored Davis.

"Highly Significant" Says Foster.

"The choosing by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor of William Green, to succeed Gompers as president of the A. F. of L., is highly significant of the future direction of the American labor movement," says Wm. Z. Foster, chairman of the Workers Party and secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, in a statement to the DAILY WORKER.

"The council could have elected John L. Lewis if it had wished to do so. That it elected a miner indicates clearly that the machine of the United Mine Workers' Union has control. This being the case, Lewis would naturally and traditionally have been first choice. He could, indeed, have claimed the honor for himself or prevented Green from getting it," said Comrade Foster.

Means Lewis Will Follow Davis.

"That Lewis allows Green to become the president of the American Federation of Labor, means that he has a definitely better job picked out or promised for himself. It means, in short, that John L. Lewis is going to be appointed secretary of labor in the Coolidge cabinet after March 4.

"With Lewis in the government cabinet at the beck and call of Coolidge the strikebreaker, and Green as head of the A. F. of L., the Lewis machine will have the American labor movement—outside of the revolutionary left wing—in its pockets and at the mercy of Coolidge and Coolidge reaction."

COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL CALLS ON AUSTRALIAN LABOR COUNCIL FOR GREATER EFFORTS FOR VICTORY

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, New South Wales.—Following on the decision of the Australian labor party not to allow Communists to affiliate, an intimation of this fact was sent to the Communist International at Moscow, and the following reply was received by the Labor Council of New South Wales:

"Communist International notes decision of Australian labor party and open antagonism to Communists. Bourgeoisie and their agents are quaking everywhere. Victory is imminent. Let seventh year spur you on to greater effort.—Zinoviev, Chairman, Communist International."

With Zinoviev's message came also a message from Tomsky, president of the Russian Trade Union Congress, as follows:

"Convey greetings to miners and transport workers in struggle against capitalist offensive. Russian workers appreciate efforts of labor council to organise workers in their fight against reaction.—Tomsky, President, Russian Trade Union Congress."

MOSCOW SCENE OF CONGRESSES, SHOW PROGRESS

Union Membership Has 100,000 Increase

By ANISE.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

MOSCOW.—Several trade union congresses have been going on during the past month and a half in Moscow.

Most significant was the All-Russian Congress of Trade unions, with the British fraternal delegates present.

The sixth Moscow state congress of trade unions showed an increase of almost 100,000 members during the past year, from 819,668 to 900,095. Of these 735,323 are working under collective agreements. Wages from October, 1923, to June, 1924, increased 15 per cent. In some unions they are now higher than pre-war. This means real wages, not merely money wages. The unions keep their tables in figures based on living costs.

Special attention has been paid to educational activities. In the summer large numbers of physical culture, sport and radio circles were organized. The Moscow unions also established their own publishing house during the past year.

The Moscow state congress of educational workers was attended by 600 delegates, mostly rural teachers. Their resolutions showed the move of the village workers during the past year towards Communism. Especially marked were the unfriendly relations between the district organizations and "religious" teachers. The congress passed a resolution that teachers with religious beliefs should not teach.

Land and forest workers of the state of Moscow also held their annual congress with 800 delegates. This union has 23,000 workers in Moscow district. Since one-third of them are illiterate they are maintaining 128 courses for beginners and 165 schools for the half-literate. They received fraternal greetings from the United Federation of Land and Forest Workers of France, and elected its secretary an honorary member.

POSTAL CLERKS' BILL FOR PAY INCREASE IS BLOCKED BY COOLIDGE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—A vote on the bill increasing the pay of postal employes, vetoed by Coolidge at the last session of congress, was again blocked by Coolidge adherents in the senate. Coolidge is determined to deprive the postal employes of their wage increase if possible to do it by delaying and filibustering.

have turned down their thumbs on the organization of a third party. This leaves the C. P. P. A. without any visible means of support except the socialists and J. A. H. Hopkins who is always in favor of something or other. It is even doubtful if Oswald Garison Villard can sum up sufficient courage to "endorse" the sham. The dazzling adventure of the socialists in quest of a new skin is ending with a strong probability that they will find themselves naked.

THE remarkably heavy vote cast for the progressives in both the carpenters' and the miners' union indicates two facts. First that there is a decided revival of militancy in the trade union movement following the reaction that broke loose after the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. Secondly that the policy of fighting within the unions, along the lines of the Trade Union Educational League tactics, under the leadership of William Z. Foster has proven correct. The present upsurge of militancy in the unions is no longer the sentiments kind that scared the reactionaries stiff two years ago. It is now more conscious, as a result of T. U. E. L. and Communist propaganda, and more dangerous to the reactionaries and their paymasters, the capitalists.

TEXTILE STRIKE AT MIDDLEBORO OUT TO WIN

Young Workers League in the Fight

By BARNEY MASS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Dec. 19—The 200 strikers of the Nemasket Worsted company have entered the fifteenth week in their fight.

At a mass meeting Thursday, Comrades Jim Ried, national committeeman of the Amalgamated Textile council, and Barney Mass, of the Young Workers League, spoke to the solid body of strikers. Many of the young workers have indicated a willingness to join the Young Workers League and a meeting is arranged for Sunday at which a league nucleus will be formed.

Began With the Weavers.

Old workers and young, men and women, boys and girls, went on strike Sept. 11. The grievance was against the increase of work in the weave room, as a result of trying to inaugurate the two kinds of fillings on two loom work.

The weavers struck immediately Comrade Reid requested of the men to organize a mass meeting and to spread the strike to the whole mill force. He addressed the meeting and the strike became 100 per cent effective.

A Magnificent Spirit.

This is the first strike that has occurred in Middleboro. In spite of no relief until the eighth week the solidarity of the strikers was superb. After the mass meeting there was mass picketing, and Y. W. L. members from Providence walked the picket line along with the strikers.

There is certain to be a strong Young Workers League nucleus organized on Sunday. The league members in Providence, with the leadership of Comrade Reid of the Workers Party have contributed largely to the fine conduct and solidarity of the strike so far.

Mecca Is Surrounded.

HATHAWAY CASE ROUSES LABOR IN MINNEAPOLIS

Unionists Watch Fight with Great Interest

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 19. — What may develop into a trade union case rivaling the famous Bradlaugh parliamentary election test in England almost 50 years ago is in its second stage before the Minneapolis Trades & Labor assembly.

After several years of more or less effective disciplining by the American Federation of Labor executive council, the Minneapolis central body, faced by threat of automatic revocation of its charter, got down to business and started to separate itself from the militant labor elements belonging to the Workers Party.

"Assembling With."

First, it voted under executive council pressure to exclude from assembly office all delegates belonging to the Workers Party or certain other radical organizations or "associating" with such.

Then it voted to conform in all respects, directly and indirectly, with A. F. of L. policies, especially promising not to countenance revolutionary attitudes.

In the third place, it voted on recommendation of a committee headed by R. D. Cramer, editor Labor Review, the assembly organ, to unseat from the assembly itself a trade union delegate who was a Workers Party member. C. A. Hathaway, representing Machinists' lodge 91, and known thruout the railroad labor world for his efforts to promote railroad union amalgamation and a power in the Minnesota farmer-labor federation, was the victim.

Re-Elected Hathaway.

It was the machinists' next move. They made it by unanimously re-electing Hathaway as their delegate to the central body.

Charles Bradlaugh was elected to the British house of commons six times before he was allowed to take his seat because he refused to take the customary oath, being a professed atheist who preferred to make affirmation. If the Minneapolis assembly again turns Hathaway down, a similar struggle may begin in the American trade union movement.

The St. Louis County Independent, indorsed as the official paper of the unions of Hibbing, (Minn.) and the farmers of the district, comments: "Hibbing unionists are watching the outcome of this fight between the officialdom of the A. F. of L. and the militant trade unionists in Minneapolis with much interest and many are of the opinion that the labor movement of the state will suffer if the militants are driven from the organizations."

Mrs. Carter Cagle, widow of the Klansman who was shot when he tried to ambush an anti-Klansman, and Mrs. Green Dunning, Mrs. Charles Newbold and Mrs. Charles Wollard, whose husbands were killed by deputy sheriffs after the Klansmen had killed two deputies, were the other women receiving money from the Klan.

Call Stenographer to Aid Forbes Attack Mortimer's Testimony

Attorneys defending Charles Forbes, charged with corruption, bribery and conspiracy against the government while head of the U. S. veteran's bureau put Edna Breese then Forbes' stenographer, on the stand to supply Forbes with an alibi.

ALBANIA WARNS NEW WORLD WAR VERY IMMINENT

Workers' Revolution Is Only Hope

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The Albanian minister to London sounds the alarm of a new world war in a statement today accusing Serbia of instigating the rebellion in Albania.

"Unless some great power intervenes another Balkan war is imminent," he declared, "followed probably by a new European war. The trouble arises from the deliberate militaristic policy of aggression on the part of Serbia against Albania to annex Albania."

The Jugo-Slav legation quite naturally denies the charge of Serbian aggression. The only apparent deterrent to a new and horrible war appears to be the fear among the great powers of revolution from their own working classes.

From Belgrade reports are that the Albanian rebels have followed their success at Kruya with occupation of all the territory surrounding that city. Government troops were reported driven back or deserting to the rebels. Martial law was declared in five border prefectures and general mobilization is going on.

Tea Pot Dome Steal Dwarfed by Coolidge Muscle Shoals Bill

WASHINGTON.—In a terrific attack on the Coolidge-Underwood bill for the leasing of Muscle Shoals to private power interests, Sen. Norris chairman of the senate committee on agriculture, declared that Teapot Dome scandal but a pinhead in comparison to the scandal involved in this deal. In later years, he predicted, the giving away of Muscle Shoals by this congress would be referred to as "the rape of the treasury." It would be the surrender of untold hundreds of millions of dollars in immediate value and would enable the power trust to oppress the southern states for half a century to come.

Norris called upon President Coolidge to withdraw his support from so outrageous a betrayal of public trust, so soon after the exposé. He begged the senate to vote for rejection of the power trust scheme with its hand cuffs for the public.

Fake Union Agent Fleeces Girls.

TACOMA, Wash.—A number of Tacoma girls are out $7.50 each thru trusting to a smooth swindler who promised them work as checkers in the railroad sheds at $3.50 a day. The $7.50 was for a supposed initiation fee to a mythical union. The cheat had told the girls they couldn't get work from the railroad unless they belonged to his union. The girls showed up for work but found none.

BRITISH JUDGE IN STARTLING DECISION AGAINST THE HINDUS

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON.— The Daily Herald recorded as a "startling decision" the verdict of a British judge at Tanhore, India, that Englishmen may pull the ears of Indians and kick them in the usual place without being subject to legal punishment for the assault. Whether Indians may do the same to Englishmen was not taken up in the judge's decision.

The victim was a clerk at a railway station newsstand who was sitting in front of the counter when the British district medical officer came along, pulled the clerk's ear and kicked him. In court the defendant admitted the acts. The judge dismissed the case finding that the acts complained of were of a "beneficial nature as it was necessary to rouse the clerk from a lethargic state into one of activity. Pulling at the ear is to be considered as handling the ear in a friendly way and kicking is merely a gesture with the leg, intended to make the clerk stand up and is never given to dishonor the man."

Winter's Cold is Here to Make Life More Bitter for Hungry and Jobless

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the cold comes to make life more bitter for the poor and the jobless. Winter's lash stings the miserable with the agony of its blows. Misery takes on new horrible forms to tantalize its victims.

• • • •

"I am sure that there will be a lot of suicides this winter," declares Thomas J. Noonan, in charge of the longest bread line on "The Bowery" in New York City.

Noonan claims that there are more hungry, jobless men on "The Bowery" this year, than he has seen in 20 years.

This black pool of abject poverty is to be found hardly a stone's throw from the golden treasure vaults of Wall Street. The offices of J. Pierpont Morgan are but a few minutes walk away. This condition prevails in the richest city in the world. And the alternative that some of these workers choose is suicide. That is the way only of those who have had the last ounce of resistance pounded out of them.

• • • •

Turn to another news item. It tells how a large flock of starving wild rabbits made a raid at night on Sterling, Illinois. They had been made desperate by hunger. This mildest of creatures, in his hunger, was ready to fight. In great numbers, these rabbits, usually timid, swarmed thru the storm swept business districts of Sterling, eating the bark off hundreds of Christmas trees placed along the sidewalks as holiday decorations, or getting food wherever they could find it.

In due course of time, according to the best methods of capitalist civilization, the police arrived on the scene, and according to press reports, "drove the invaders away after killing many."

• • • •

At least the rabbit, with his own primitive weapons of tooth and claw, put up a fight. He did his best to survive. It wouldn't hurt the great army of jobless workers, daily growing in numbers, to imbibe some of that spirit of militancy.

But it isn't enough merely to go out and seize what one needs in the immediate struggle to cover naked limbs against the cold, or to fill an empty stomach. The multi-millionaires are passing out their annual doles to the Salvation Army, the Volunteers of America and other charity organizations, to assuage misery where it appears in its most virulent forms. They carry out the age-old custom of crumb throwing, favored by those at the top as a handy palliative. But this does not lift, by the smallest fraction, the real level of misery.

• • • •

That can only be done thru the organized and triumphant war of all oppressed against the social system of "The Haves"—the capitalist system. It is this struggle that presses on to victory under Communist leadership, inspiring the great masses with organized aggressiveness.

When the millions of hungry and miserable discover the real cause of their agony, then the capitalist state will totter and fall, and the Workers' Republic will be raised in its place on the shoulders of the many, to usher in the Communist social order. That is worth fighting for. And dying for!

FAKE OFFICIAL IN CHINA ISSUES DECREE AGAINST COMMUNISTS

PEKING, China, Dec. 19.—The new minister of the interior, appointed under the administration of Tuan Chijui, has instructed the police to arrest any one found circulating literature favoring the Soviet form of government. Since Tuan Chijui assumed the presidency of China, no members of the provisional cabinet have been appointed who sympathize with the Russian Soviet government, it is reported.

The Communists, however, have increased their activity, much of the Soviet sentiment centering around the University of Peking.

Negro is Lynched, Officials Start One More "Investigation"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHARLESTON, Mo., Dec. 19.—Another "investigation" was under way here today into the torturing and lynching of Roosevelt Grigsby, a Negro who was arrested charged with attacking a girl. No proof had been produced as to Grigsby's guilt other than the confused and hysterical utterances of the 15 year old girl.

Two hundred men hanged Grigsby shot him, cut the body down, dragged it thru the Negro section of town behind an auto, and eventually burned the body. Grigsby was in custody of Sheriff B. B. Jackson, when the mob seized and murdered him.

There have been many "investigations" of the numerous lynchings in this state, but no white man is punished for the murder of a Negro.

Facts Show Green Fights Against the Workers' Interests

the part of Pascoe or William Green.

Pascoe visited the local union at Blacker, Kentucky, which had written to William Green protesting against the lack of organization, and criticising Green and John L. Lewis, and without permission of the local union, confiscated their funds, and told the members that their local was dissolved. This action, occuring after the local's letter to Green, showed only too plainly that Green and the international board members were in a conspiracy to break up the unions rather than tolerate criticism of their rule.

Pascoe, in reply to a letter from Alonzo Walters, protesting against the dissolving of this local, and demanding a drive to organize the unorganized miners, replied to Walters on Dec. 16, of this month. "Ashland, Ky. —Your most astounding letter of Dec. 1, reached this office in due time, and in reply to your ignorant and ridiculous questions, will say that the national executive board map out the policy of our organization, and I am carrying that out to the letter. We are not giving any information to such ignorant inquiries. I am returning your stamps and I hope that in the future you will try and avoid demonstrating your total ignorance by not writing or asking such silly questions. Yours truly, (signed) Samuel Pascoe."

MACDONALD GAVE AID TO REVOLT AGAINST SOVIET

British Socialist Exposed by Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—But for the support of Ramsay MacDonald, then Britain's labor premier and of other outsiders the tiny Georgian revolt against Soviet rule in the Caucasus would not have started, in the opinion of Louis Fischer, the Russian correspondent of The Nation, who was in Georgia at the time.

Received Foreign Gold.

Writing in the Dec. 17 issue Fischer says, "The insurrection was inspired and organized by the mensheviks who live in Paris Georgian menshevism has no kinship with socialism. The mensheviks who precipitated this revolt received foreign financial aid. The were promised that if they succeeded in holding power for three or four day British and French vessels would land troops in Black Sea ports and march to their support. And not without reason did they believe so. Had not MacDonald seen Tsereteli, a member of the menshevik cabinet? And did not MacDonald and Herriot support the Georgian mensheviks at the recent meeting of the league of nations?"

Exposes Fake News.

Fischer then explains the newspaper faking indulged in by the Chicago Tribune foreign "news" service and many American and European papers with the stories first of rebel triumphs that never occurred and then of atrocities by the Bolsheviks which likewise never occurred.

"Thus the entire affair was liquidated in three days Berlin and Paris dailies (and the American papers taking the Tribune service) continued for more than a month to describe disturbances in places which I know were perfectly peaceful because I was visiting in them at the time when these supposed disturbances were being reported," Fischer writes. Terrible massacres of old men, women and children, piteously cabled by the Chicago Tribune correspondent, never took place.

A similar expose of capitalist foreign reporting on the Georgian rising was made by the Federated Press correspondent a month ago. She had peacefully gone on an undisturbed vacation hiking trip thru Georgia at the time the revolt was supposed to have been at its height.

Notice! Carpenters and Miners!

It is essential that we have information as soon as possible regarding the vote cast for the left wing candidates in the recent elections in the carpenters' and miners' unions. The reactionaries at the head of these organizations may be depended upon to rob us of our vote wholesale and thus to minimize our showing. Therefore, it is the duty of every left-winger in these unions to let us know at once how his local voted. You should take this matter seriously and act upon it without delay. Please let us hear from you.

SHOWING A UNITED FRONT

Determination to put over the campaign to make the DAILY WORKER safe is nowhere more apparent than in the correspondence received from comrades and branches. Branch after branch is reporting that it not only intends to subscribe its quota, but to beat it. Additional books of policies are being ordered from many of them

Take the DAILY WORKER shop nuclei branch as an instance. There are 17 members in this branch. A total of $515 has been pledged by the 34 workers in the shop, of which $382 in cash has already been remitted. This means an average of $15 from each of the 34 workers. Or, if we credit the branch members with the amount secured, as we should, it means that each of the 17 branch members averaged $30, including their own contribution and money secured from others. If we could "step out" at this same average thru-out the party, then the DAILY WORKER would be on solid ground.

Send me at once another book of policies. Here is $20 cash. Twenty-five more has been pledged. We'll raise our quota in a short time.—C. Berger, Buffalo.

• • •

Comrades are showing a very good spirit in this insurance campaign. Send two more books at once to the South Slavic branch of Kansas City.—Thos. Krasnick.

• • •

Our December 9 English branch meeting subscribed $24. More pledges were made. Will send more money soon.—Katheryn Vernor, Philadelphia.

Here is $16 from our little local. We organized a Y. W. L. at the same meeting with 14 members.—W. J. Huss, No. Dak.

Russian Branch 3 herewith insures the daily with this remittance of $50.—Fred Rosko.

Efforts will be made to "clean up" the book of policies. Our local is small, only 20 members, but we know we need the DAILY WORKER.—H. Dantes, Minnesota.

We have not sold any policies yet, but we will and in the meantime we are advancing you $50 out of our branch treasury.—German Branch, Detroit.

• • •

I am following the instructions in the policy book and hope to sell many more policies than the $9 worth enclosed.—Hilja Tarka, Superior.

• • •

The city committee has bought its policy. The district committee will follow suit. In my mind this campaign is one of the most constructive and forwardlooking measures yet taken by the party.—James Dolsen, San Francisco.

• • •

You surely must be short of paper when you have to use telegram blanks for your letters! Anyway, here is $14.—J. Stevenson, San Pedro.

We held an entertainment for the DAILY WORKER and realized $68.48. Then we sold a full book of policies for $50. We are sending you all this money. Send us more books of policies.—P. P. Bonell, Bulgarian Br., Detroit.

Had six present at our recent meeting when your communications were read. We voted everything we had on us as well as the small balance the treasury. So here is $50.—W. F. Jackson, Indianapolis.

LOS ANGELES NOTES

Dec. 24, Christmas Eve, a concert and package party will be given at Brooklyn Hall. All the profits will go to the left wing committee of the Workmen's Circle. The left wing committee is representing four branches with a membership of six hundred.

The Jewish branch of the Workers Party have just closed a campaign for the Friebait, raising $2,000, and now the branch is raising funds for the DAILY WORKER. Comrade Lunin's presence in Los Angeles has stirred up the work, and was successful in disappointing all the pessemists as well as the optomists for some of us have ever dreamed of raising $2,000.

All party members must be present at the general membership meeting, Dec. 28 at the party headquarters.—Sam Globerman, city representative of DAILY WORKER.

INDIANS RAIDED BY LABOR RULE; 72 ARE ARRESTED

MacDonald Used White Terror; Then Got Boot

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Dec 19.—Seventy-two leading Indian nationalists, members of the Swaraj (Freedom) Party, were arrested in Bengal with the approval of the MacDonald government, just before the British elections, it has been disclosed. The "labor" government had full knowledge that this outrage was to be perpetrated, as well as a simultaneous raid on several hundred houses. The labor government approved this act of terrorism, enacted thru a special ordinance by the viceroy on Oct. 26.

Pretext "Anarchy."

The pretext was to justify the growth of "anarchical crimes," altho the men arrested were all members of a political party, which has repeatedly declared itself against violence, and whose program does not call for a separation from the empire.

The Swaraj Party reiterated at its last convention in Calcutta on August 15, that the party advocates self-determination. "We do not want any particular system of government," said C. R. Das, president of the Swaraj Party at this convention. "We want to establish our own system of government."

The Swaraj Party contains many confused ideas in its program such as the gaining of freedom thru aid to native industrial enterprises. The party does not recognize the necessity of the arming of the workers of India for the forcible overthrow of the capitalists in control of their industries.

However, MacDonald gave in to the demands of tory imperialism for a "strong hand in India," just before elections, in order to show them that "labor was fit to govern." The labor government is implicated by the dispatch of the London correspondent of the semi-official Calcutta paper the "Englishman" cabled the day after the arrests. "Whitehall is not surprised at the Bengal arrests but is only surprised that they were not made much earlier. The British government was fully aware that the government of India contemplated taking action, and that the cabinet had promised fullest support to maintain constitutionalism," says the report.

Men Arrested Were Not Guilty.

M. N. Roy, a leading member of the Communist Party of India, declares, "There is absolutely no evidence to prove any guilt on the part of the men arrested. According to its own admission the labor government withdrew the charge against Campbell because the attorney general thought that there was not enough evidence to secure a conviction. But in India one need not bother about evidence. If the ordinary law does not suffice, a special ordinance can always be issued."

The labor government has gone; but the men who constituted the labor cabinet still dominate the British labor party. Therefore, this story of MacDonald's parting kick to India is very instructive to the British proletariat. It reveals what a monstrous lie is the doctrine of self-determination, as indeed is any other doctrine of the Second International.

WORKERS' WORLD SPORT CONGRESS SENDS GREETINGS TO ALL WORKERS PERSECUTED BY REACTIONARIES

The Third Congress of the "Sportintern," the International of working class sportsmen of the world, has issued the following letter to all workers of the world who are languishing in bourgeois prisons and to all champions of the working class who are being persecuted by the reactionaries. The Sportintern Congress recently met in Moscow.

Dear Comrades:—The representatives of working class sportsmen of the various countries, who have come together on the occasion of the Third Congress of the Red Sportintern, send hearty greetings to those who are persecuted by the reactionaries for the stand they are making for the liberation of the working class. We who live in the very heart of the free Russian proletarian state and who have before our eyes the achievements of the glorious October revolution, wish to assure you of our solidarity with you. We are convinced that capitalist domination and white terror can only be put an end to by general energetic revolutionary action on the part of the international proletariat in which working class sportsmen must take part.

We do not hold with the "non-party nature" of sport as propagated by the bourgeoisie and its lackeys, for we know full well that by this treacherous slogan workers interested in sports are to be diverted from the class struggle and drawn to the side of their bourgeois oppressors in the latter's struggle against the working class. As we are part of the working class, our aims and work must be connected with the working class. By contributing to the physical well-being of the members of the working class, we are consolidating the strength of the proletarian class army.

Comrades! Be assured that working class sportsmen belonging to the Red Sportintern will always be on your side in the fight against capitalist domination and for proletarian revolution. Your fight is our fight. We will do our utmost to induce proletarian sportsmen in all countries to support your struggle against reaction and fascism. We will do everything which lies in our power to rally working class sportsmen scattered thru-out the world to the united front of the fight for proletarian revolution.

Fellow fighters! Champions of the proletarian revolution lingering in prisons and exile!

You do not stand alone. The enormous army of the international proletariat is with you. In the foremost ranks of this army revolutionary sportsmen will fight for your liberation and for the final emancipation of the entire proletariat. The cause for which you are now suffering will be victorious in the end.

Long live the world class struggle of the proletariat against capitalism!

Long live the proletarian revolution and its heroic vanguard! Long live the Red Sportintern!

Third Congress Sportintern.

Another Member of Daugherty's Gang is Jerked from Payroll

WASHINGTON, Dec 19.—Another of the "Ohio gang" that conjured around Harry Daugherty when he was attorney general has been dismissed from the federal service under a cloud. Warden Sartain of Atlanta penitentiary has been removed by Atty. Gen. Stone, within a few days after Stone's dismissal of purchasing agent Allen at that prison. Sartain figured in the Wheeler-Brookhart investigation last spring as the warden whom Daugherty selected from his own home town, Washington Court House, O., to replace Warden Dyche when Dyche was reported as being too hard on the bootleg millionaires under his charge.

Coalition Attempts Fail.

BERLIN, Dec. 19.—All attempts to form a coalition government here have so far failed. President Ebert conferred with Chancellor Marx, following the failure of Foreign Minister Stresemann, of the people's party, to construct a cabinet.

The U. S. and Japan

There is a noticeable change in the Japanese policy of the United States government. The quite open preparations of the navy department for war with the Mikado government and the bellicose declarations of admirals were given a sharp rebuke by President Coolidge, and the enthusiastic reception given by Secretary of State Hughes to the appointment of Tsuneo Matsudaira as Japanese ambassador to the United States is another warning to the fire eaters to adopt a less provocative tone towards the eastern empire.

Why this change of policy? Of course, superficial observers will say that Coolidge and Hughes represent the elements in American capitalism that favor a more conciliatory attitude towards Japan. But that is not the way the machine works. Coolidge and Hughes are the leading spokesmen and executives of big business and when they speak they speak for Wall Street.

There are two possible explanations for the present attempt of the Washington government to conciliate Japan. One is the success of the Soviet government diplomacy in China and the need for bringing Japan into the international ring led by the United States and having for its object the more thoro exploitation of China by the capitalist powers. To make this possible China must be kept weak and the influence of Soviet Russia there must be killed. Japan has been drawn into a position of benevolent neutrality toward the Soviet policy in China, as a result of its strained relations with the United States. But capitalist Japan knows that the policy of Communist Russia will, in the end, prove fatal to its imperialist ambitions and Tokio, no doubt, would rather trust to the tender mercies of the American capitalist devil than to the deep sea of Communism. For Japanese capitalism it is only a choice between two evils. It will choose the lesser if given a chance. That is what Coolidge and Hughes are trying to do.

Another possible explanation is the United States quarrel with Britain over the division of the loot from Germany thru the operation of the Dawes plan. After all, England and the United States are the two leading world capitalist powers and are destined to fight for unquestioned world supremacy. Behind the flow of honeyed phrases, the desperate and deadly diplomatic war goes on. Sometimes the United States plays with France; again with Japan. The United States may fight Japan first, or it may fight England first. Of the two England is the more powerful enemy and the most serious competitor for world supremacy. Soviet Russia is a direct challenge to capitalist rule. The capitalist powers are in an unhappy position. They have no more confidence in each other than a gang of burglars. But they have a well founded fear of Soviet Russia and much tho they distrust each other their dread of Communism drives them together for self-protection.

Perhaps either one of the above explanations is the secret of the soft pedalling on the war preparations against Japan. Perhaps both are correct. And again, it is quite possible the change is more apparent than real. Assassins are sometimes known to kiss their victims before they stab them in the back.

Filipinos and "The League"

The Filipinos, thru their labor department in the islands, have asked for information as to the steps that must be taken to secure membership in the league of nations. This effort is part of the campaign that is being waged by the Filipino nationalists to secure complete national freedom.

We have been in the front ranks of the movement for genuine Filipino freedom from the clutches of American imperialism. We propose to continue to be so until the last financial pirate or diplomatic or any agent of Yankee capitalism is driven from the Archipelago. We will do everything in our power to unite the workers and poor farmers of the United States and the Philippines for a victorious struggle against their common enemies—the exploiters of American and Filipino stripe.

Consequently we are fully justified in rendering some advice and criticism to the Filipino nationalists. Frankly, we believe that the Filipino independence movement has been proceeding to a very large extent in the wrong way. We believe that this step now taken to apply to the league of nations for membership is largely a continuation of the ineffective tactics pursued by the Filipino representatives in the United States.

The Filipino nationalists have spent considerable energy in attempting to convince the Washington government that Filipino freedom is in its own interest. That is basically wrong. Washington is the enslaver and not liberator of oppressed nationalities. Washington is the citadel of world imperialism today. Likewise, the league of nations is not what its name implies, but is solely a league of loot and capitalist piracy. It is an imperialist clique that is the foe of the freedom of nationalities, of oppressed peoples. In the Egyptian crisis we have seen the heavy hand of this imperialist gang.

The sooner the Filipinos get together with the working and poor farming masses of the United States and line up under the leadership of the Communist International, the sooner will they get genuine freedom from Yankee imperialism.

The Pope and Communism

The pope, also known as His Holiness, delivered a broadside against Soviet Russia in particular and the Communist movement in general. According to press dispatches the papal fulmination followed the return of the pontifical relief mission from Russia, but the truth is that His Holiness, as he sometimes styles himself, acted on the orders of the protestant foreign minister of the British tory government, Austen Chamberlain.

The pope is but the servant of international capitalism. He no longer makes and unmakes kings and princes. He takes their orders like a good and humble servant. In the international war of capitalism against Soviet Russia, the pope is a valuable cog. He still exerts influence over the minds of millions of human beings, therefore the capitalist powers keep him on their payroll.

The so-called pontifical relief mission to Russia, was an espionage and propaganda expedition, just like the American relief organization under Secretary Hoover. But these stoolpigeons were confronted with a well organized and highly disciplined Communist Party that could not be fooled with fake charity stunts or purchased with capitalist gold. The pope's stoolpigeons held out while there was any hope left, and the vatican's squirt of poison propaganda is proof that the organ grinder of superstition sees no chance for his bunk to find root on Soviet soil. So he withdraws his prospectors and makes an open attack on the Workers' Republic.

The pope has been barking against Communism for many years, but yet the movement marches on, winning victory after victory. The pope, ally of Mussolini, and representative of the dead past sees the red tide of Communism rising. With centuries of the most astute kind of diplomacy behind him, he plays the game with a master hand in a desperate effort to keep his head above the rising tide. He will fail. The victory of Communism, which is inevitable, will seal the doom of the pope's business as well as of capitalism.

In Good Company Forever

When Gompers was alive and working overtime to enhance the dividends of the exploiters, we never failed to point out the character of the company he was in.

We do not want to slight the memory of the dead. But we have at hand a statement of the Chicago Tribune regarding the burial and final disposition of the body of Samuel Gompers which is very instructive to the workers.

Samuel Gompers is buried in Sleepy Hollow cemetery alongside of John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie. There is historic justice in this burial. When Gompers was alive and working for the exploiters, he was constantly in the company of the open shoppers. He was a member of the National Civic Federation, one of the blackest labor-hating groups in the land. Even in hell or in heaven, as one might want to place Gompers, the former president of the American Federation of Labor continues to be in the company of those who were once the worst enemies of the working class.

And the Rabbi Wise, who did most of the loud praying at the democratic national convention, bade a rather enlightening farewell to the era, while foremost lieutenant of capital in the ranks of the labor movement. The Rabbi eulogized Gompers in precisely the same fashion that he has time and again done in the case of "dead statesmen, financiers and soldiers."

This is a very fitting eulogy indeed. Gompers was only another pillar in the imperialist edifice. Gompers did more than his bit in closest collusion with the statesmen, financiers and militarists of the employing class to perpetuate wage slavery and to extend the influence of capitalist domination abroad. The rabbi was performing a good job when he blessed the Gompers body in the way he did. This blessing and farewell by Wise were the finishing touches to a career of service rendered by Gompers to the bosses of the United States.

Christmas Gifts

Textile workers in Lowell, Massachusetts, have received the comforting information that their wages will be "readjusted" on December 29. Of course, they will be readjusted downwards. The employes of one large mill have been informed that their meager standard of living will be further reduced 10 per cent.

What has happened to the great wave of prosperity promised the wage slaves by the Coolidge campaign orators prior to the last elections? The Communists pointed out that so long as capitalism exists and commodities are produced for profit and not for the use of the producers, there cannot be any prosperity for the workers. When there is a market for goods, unemployment is reduced and wages may go up provided the workers use their collective power to force a raise. But when the markets are glutted, and the capitalists do not see their way clear to produce commodities at a profit, the workers are locked out and unless they have managed to save something out of their scanty wages for emergencies, they and their dependents face starvation.

STRIKE AGAINST BIG MAY STORE IN CLEVELAND, O.

Experiences of Workers Shows Need of "Daily"

By J. A. HAMILTON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Dec. 19.—Seven members of the Waitresses' Union, engaged in picketing the big May company department store against which the union has been conducting a strike for nearly three weeks, were arrested last night but were dismissed at once by the police court judge, and now it seems no one will admit responsibility for the arrests.

Violated Union Rules.

The strike was called because the company refused to discharge several members of the union who would not comply with the union rules to wear their union buttons while at work and were consequently expelled. The Cooks and Bakers have a joint agreement with the Waitresses, and went out with them, and it is reported that the May company is losing a large amount of trade because of their efforts to break the union.

The added advantages to the union in this strike because of the common action among the food trades is an object lesson for amalgamation. The union employes of this store such as carpenters and electricians are compelled by their agreements to remain at work, while if all the classes of workers in the department store were included in one general retail store workers' union, even tho it would be necessary to maintain various craft organizations as well (but without power to deal with the company) the company could be met on more even terms than at present.

"Bargain Basement" is Hell-Hole.

Of course most of the employes of this store are unorganized, even tho conditions are very bad. The May "bargain basement" is a by-word in Cleveland; it is especially in summer a veritable hell-hole and the big sales are marked by the collapse of clerks who are overcome by the heat and the foul air.

Time for Organization Work.

Of course the May company employes ought to have completely organized long ago but since they have not, such events as the present waitresses' strike would serve as excellent occasions to attempt organization, it is really had in the United States the fighting, aggressive labor movement we ought to have.

The Cleveland Citizen, edited by the renegate "socialist," Max Hayes, and circulating in large numbers among union men in Cleveland is carrying a big May company advertisement in spite of this strike. Hayes has excused the presence of undesirable ads in the Citizen by saying he could not refuse them, but a labor paper conducted as it ought to be will not be much troubled with having to refuse such "ads" as May company.

The workers of Cleveland must awake to the vital necessity of a press which is "labor" not merely because it reports the news of union meetings but which has a fighting policy against the capitalist class and the capitalist system.

The moral is of course, SUPPORT THE DAILY WORKER.

"SALESMEN AND SUCKERS" ACTED BY NEGRO CAST

Southside Branch Drama Club Puts on First Play

The South Side Players have been organized by some of the members of the south side branch of the Workers Party. They aim to bring the message of Communism to the people thru the medium of drama. Particularly they wish to present it in such a way as to show the relation of Communism to the colored workers. One difficulty they have to meet is that there are no Communist plays which are intended to be acted by colored players and where he himself is not represented the colored worker habitually supposes it is "for white only."

Andrew Shelley is the Author.

The initial prdouction had therefore to be specially written for the occasion. Comrade Andrew Shelley wrote the book under the constant criticism of the colored comrades who are now acting it. The play is called "Salesmen and Suckers" and it presents an analysis of the capitalist system, shows how it is destructive of art, tone craftsmanship, character and of life itself, and emphasizing its inevitable tendency to create wars.

The initial performance will be on Dec. 23 at Mount Carmel church, 3721 Federal street, near 35th St. "L" station.

Comrade Griffen in Leading Role.

In Comrade Elizabeth Griffen we have an actress of very great promise, who has already a reputation as a singer. She is a member of the Workers Party and she takes the leading role in "Salesmen and Suckers."

Please come and help make it a financial success.

GOMPERS' PARTING WORDS

By C. R. HEDLUND.

"GOD bless our American institutions, may they grow better day by day," were the dying words of Samuel Gompers. Where can American capitalism point to a more faithful servant? He exercised concern over the welfare of the institutions even unto his dying hour. However, in order to appreciate and understand Gompers' viewpoint, and to ascertain more clearly where his interests and sympathies were located, it might be well to just glance over some of these "American institutions" upon which Gompers called for the blessings of god.

In the first place, these institutions which Gompers loved so well, had as early as in 1916, permitted 70 per cent of America's wealth to become expropriated by 2 per cent of our population, and since 1916, wealth concentration has operated upon an ever increasing scale. As a matter of fact, wealth concentration is riding this country to destruction. When it became necessary for us to participate in the European blood bath, in order to save Morgan's loan to the allies what did these institutions do? Did not the capitalist press, the church, and our institutions of learning, join in furnishing the propaganda to sell the war to the people. The country was swarming with government stool pigeons, maintained at public expense to spy upon the workers, and to promptly arrest any one who possessed courage enough to protest against the rotten mess. Workers and farmers by the millions, were conscripted and hauled to European trenches to fight for capitalist interest against their will, while these same capitalists were permitted to stay at home and fatten their fortunes at the expense and misery of the working class, a class which had no interest in the outcome of that war, and which were never consulted as to whether or not they wished to enter that war. Our present institutions also hold that the same class that was conscripted to fight the war, must also pay for the cost of conducting it, because these sacred institutions of ours hold that it would not be fair to conscript the dollars of the wealthy to finance their own war.

Our American institutions are continuing to spend hundreds of millions annually to increase the strength of the army and navy. What are these armies and navies used for, if not as errand boys to protect the interest of the rich at home and abroad. Who ever heard of an American soldier being stationed at the door of a workingman's home to protect it against sluggers and gunmen of corporations?

Everyone knows also, how our institutions tolerate wholesale corruption in public office without any serious attempt being made to punish the culprits. Of this fact we have had lots of concrete evidence since and during the world war. It is only the workers in the ranks who meet the mailed fist of our so-called institutions when they point out the workings and character of our beloved capitalist institutions, the institutions which the now dead Gompers served as a bound slave, to the detriment of the American working class.

Gompers called for the blessings of our institutions. Can anyone imagine that in doing so, he had in mind the underpaid and unemployed wage slaves in the helpless craft unions in the A. F. of L.? Hardly. The poor workers whom he kept divided and unorganized were only useful to this capitalist flunkey in realizing his selfish aims during his lifetime. The only use he had for the workers was to keep them in submission and ignorance, and furnish him with a salary of $25,000 a year, to enable him to live in luxury at the various pleasure resorts of America and Europe. For the last few summer seasons he ruled the A. F of L. from a wheel chair at Atlantic City, pushed around by a colored servant. In this one respect Gompers was at least consistent, in that he always associated himself closely with the class he served, namely, the class who own and control America and its institutions. He even made provisions during his lifetime to be with these after his death, by securing a burial plot in the most fashionable graveyard in America, in order that he might remain in close proximity to Carnegie, Rockefeller and the rest of the exploiters of labor.

Among all the different breeds of self-seekers which infest the American labor movement, Gompers was the one outstanding champion office holder of them all. The way he hung on to that job for over forty years was a wonder. He was a marvel in stifling every movement which may have effected his tenure in office. He carried with him an insane hatred for anything progressive from a worker's viewpoint. He fought amalgamation of the present useless craft unions. He bitterly opposed working class political action, as well as recognition of the workers' and farmers' government of Russia. As a betrayer and misleader of labor, it will be hard to find his "equal. Gompers' parting words, were indeed, a fitting preliminary to his exit.

JUNIORS, ATTENTION!
Saturday, 2:00 P. M. Sharp!

All comrades who wish to take part in the chorus for the Lenin Memorial must be there. Juniors who were present at the last rehearsal bring their songs along! Come on time!

Group leaders don't forget to send your juniors!

How We Live Under a Capitalistic Government and How We Will Live Under a Farmers' and Workers' Government.

By a Junior, Age 14.

In a capitalistic government, of course, the capitalists rule. They do nothing and get everything, while the workers do everything and get nothing. By this I mean that altho the worker makes clothing, food, etc., in a word everything we need, he does not run the government, does not own the factories, and does not get his right wages.

Many shops are not union shops. The boss then can fire any worker at any time he pleases, give him low wages and hard work for 9 hours or more a day and also employ child labor.

In the capitalistic schools the children are told lies about Communism, altho the teachers are workers just as well as any other worker.

In the workers' and farmers' government the one who will work will run the government, own the factories and the one who will shirk will get nothing. "We have been naught, we shall be all!" Child labor will not exist! Workers will all have the same opportunities. There will be strong unions and no bosses. Shop committees will settle all problems. The workers will get vacations as often as they decide upon for the good of all.

In school the children will be told the truth about everything.

All workers, fight for a workers' and farmers' government! Fight for Communism!

Junior Hike Proves Great Success.

If smiling faces, sparking eyes and gay laughter mean anything, then the hike of the Chicago Juniors, which took place Suday, Dec. 14, was a success in every sense of the word.

The hike started as soon as we boarded the street car. What with our songs and cheers the passengers "got an earful." How eagerly and heartily the Juniors sang the "International"! How full of enthusiasm and pep they were! One could see what sturdy revolutionists they were in everything they did—from picking wood for a camp fire to playing their various games. A friendly and comradly spirit was present thruout the entire hike.

Due credit should be given to Comrade Philip Boyer, sports director of the city, who arranged this hike for the splendid way everything was planned and executed.

Those comrades who weren't there missed a great deal of fun. I'm sure none of the Juniors will miss another hike after they hear the reports of the "hikers."

What do you say, comrades, to having more outings of this kind? I hear the answer—"Always Ready!"

How One Should Not Write the History of October

(Comrade Trotzky's Book: "1917".)
(Review continued from last week.)

II.

The Lessons of the Revolution of the Year 1917, and the Struggle Within the Party.

Shall silence be maintained regarding October and its prologue, the February revolution? Certainly not. That would show either a lack of conscientiousness or stupidity. But, quite in vain, Comrade Trotsky, with his hints and allusions as well as with open appeals, wishes to create the impression that the history of October is being dealt with in a "step-motherly" fashion, because in this respect some sort of mental reservations (a false, "half-conscious estimate") play a role. Such statements as: "Still more inadmissable . . . would it be to maintain silence, out of considerations of a personal character, which are of quite secondary importance, regarding extremely important problems of the October upheaval, which have international significance" (Page XII), are scarcely in place.

This statement is certainly correct. But in the first place, Comrade Trotsky conceals the fact that no less has been written over October than over any other period. Lenin's writings contain a brilliant estimate of this period, from which the party will be able for a long time to draw all the essential teachings of October.

Secondly, Comrade Trotsky fails to mention that the persons in question have repeatedly admitted their errors as is well known to the whole party.

Comrade Zinoviev, in his "History of the Russian Communist Party" and in earlier publications, has spoken with all clearness regarding them, and has declared the same before the party and before the Communist International; Comrade Lenin also spoke concerning this, but at no time did he connect this error with the later, after October, activity of these comrades who took the wrong course in October.*

Comrade Trotsky now seeks to make use of these errors in order to revise the whole party policy and to "correctly expound" the whole history of the party. Therein lies the kernel of the statements of Comrade Trotsky. The whole analysis of the events from April to October is so stated as if the differences of opinion, which "tore the party to pieces," had become more and more acute until they finally broke out into a conflict which almost led to collapse, and that the revolution was only saved, thanks to the efforts of Comrade Lenin who had the courage to oppose the central committee and who was supported by Comrade Trotsky, who, so to speak, "anticipated" the fundamental idea of Lenin.

This analysis hardly contains anything which is in accordance with the facts.

In the first place, Comrade Trotsky totally ignores the party. It does not exist, its mood is not to be perceived, it has vanished. There stands only Comrade Trotsky, Lenin is visible in the distance, and we see a slow-witted, nameless central committee. The Petrograd organization, which was the real collective organizer of the workers' insurrection, is altogether absent. Comrade Trotsky's whole treatment of history revolves exclusively round "the highest pinnacles" of the party structure. With regard to the whole party structure we look in vain in the artistically painted picture-puzzle of Comrade Trotsky: "Where is the party?" Is it permissable for Marxists to write history in such a manner? That is a caricature of Marxism. To write the history of October and to overlook the party means to stand with both feet on an individualistic standpoint, upon the standpoint of heroes and masses. Such a standpoint is not suitable for the education of the party membership. But also from the point of view of an analysis of the leading figures, the chronicle of Comrade Trotsky cannot be approved, for it distorts the facts. Let us see how Comrade Trotsky describes the course of events:

"The decisions of the April conference gave the party a correct attitude. The differences of opinion of the leaders of the party were not liquidated thereby. On the contrary.

"In the course of events they assumed a more concrete form, and they reached their acutest point at the most decisive moment of the revolution in the October days." (Page XXXI.)

After the July days:

"The mobilizing of the right elements of the party increased. Their criticism became more determined." (Page XXXII.)

And finally before October:

"An extraordinary party congress proved to be unnecessary. The pressure of Lenin secured the necessary turn to the left of the forces, both in the central committee and in the parliametary fraction." (Page XXXVI.)

All this is extremely—"incorrect." For already at the time of the sixth party conference there had taken place a complete ideological consolidation of the party. The central committee elected at the sixth party congress stood unconditionally on the platform of the revolt. Lenin exercised an enormous influence upon the central committee, for Lenin himself was a leading member of the C. C. as is known to everybody. But to represent the matter as if the majority of the C. C. were, so to speak, almost against the revolt, means not to know either the party or the central committee, and means to sin against the truth. Was not the revolt decided upon on the 10th of October, with an overwhelming majority of the central committee? The tremendous energy, the truly enormous revolutionary passion, the ingenious analysis of events and the powerful magnetic power of Comrade Lenin gave a firm stamp to the opinion of the overwhelming majority of the C. C. Comrade Trotsky, however, wants at all costs to separate Lenin from the C. C., to oppose them to each other and to tear asunder the indivisible band, which in reality was not loosened for a moment. History must not be distorted in this manner. Were it not so, if that which Comrade Trotsky writes were correct, then it would be quite unintelligible, 1. why the party was not split by the conflict; 2. how it was able to triumph; 3. how the conflict (the resignation of some leading members of the C. C.) could be liquidated within a few days by the return of these comrades to their posts. This "miracle," (a miracle from the standpoint of the assumptions of Comrade Trotsky) as is known, was accomplished, and without much difficulty. It is true that one can hint here that after the victory there are many who are prepared to join the victors, as one does "sit in judgment" against victors.

But it must not be forgotten that the victory in Petrograd and in Moscow was merely the beginning of the struggle, the beginning of enormous difficulties, which was perfectly clear to every party member. These considerations do not help in any way to explain what is to be explained.

All this, however, becomes perfectly understandable if we do not consider the events from such an egocentric point of view as does Comrade Trotsky. In this case we get the following picture: From April to October, there gradually disappear the remnants of vacillation in the party; in October they have been reduced to a minimum; the party is proceeding with firm ranks into the fight. Above there remain some comrades who are not in agreement with the general line of the party. But precisely because the party (that is no little thing, Comrade Trotsky) was united, precisely because the overwhelming majority of the C. C. went with Lenin, these comrades were also carried along by the general stream of the party and class, and immediately returned to their posts. They have been far more thoroly "proved" than merely thru the October days.

III.

War, Revolution and the Standpoint of Comrade Trotsky.

The "Chronicle" of Comrade Trotsky, as well as his annotations to the same, not only incorrectly describe the relations within the party, but also the preparation of the "Bolshevizing" of Comrade Trotsky himself. (We are solely interested here in his political attitude.) We learn from the annotations of Comrade Trotsky's book, for example, that in the articles written by L. D. Trotsky in America there was almost completely anticipated (!) the later political tactics of the revolutionary social-democrats. The fundamental conclusions of these articles agree in almost every detail (!) with the political perspectives, which Comrade Lenin developed in his famous "Letters from Abroad" (Page 370.)

We learn here that in the "course of time the differences of opinion between the standpoint of "Nashe Slovo"* and Lenin became continually less. (Page 377.) On the other hand, we learn a whole number of details regarding the errors of the "Pravda," of a number of Bolsheviki, etc.

But after perusing the book we are little informed in what these differences of opinion, which grew continually less, consisted. And we are decidedly misled if we take it as correct that Comrade Trotsky had already anticipated the Leninist policy, as stated by that terrible busy-body Comrade Lenzner, who was entrusted with the perusal of the book and with adding the notes. (Lenin did not know that he, according to Comrade Trotsky, had committed a plagiarism.) The question of the attitude during the war, however, gives the key to a number of other questions and leads us to the laboratory where the slogans were drawn up, which soon were to play such an extraordinary important, one might rightly say, world-historical role.

We will attempt to call to mind several things in this respect.

1. "Peace" or "civil war." This is the first difference of opinion, one which involves a considerable measure of principle, for precisely here is to be seen, who and how has anticipated the events, as well as the tactics, of the revolutionary social democracy. The slogan of the civil war which was issued by Lenin and the Bolshevik C. C. right at the beginning of the war was a specific Bolshevik slogan, a slogan, which drew a line of demarcation between true revolutionaries and, not only all shades of chauvinists, but also of the internationalists of a petty-bourgeois, pacifists, "humanitarian" color who sought to approach the centrist elements. Only by bluntly raising the question of civil war was there created the possibility to select the cadre

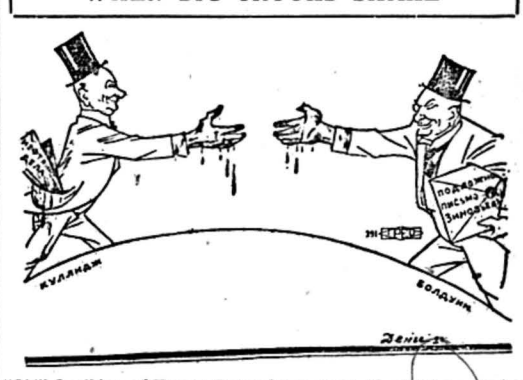
WHEN BIG CROOKS SHAKE



"Cal" Coolidge, of Teapot Dome fame, meets the British premier, Baldwin, hero of the fake Zinoviev letter.
(By Deni in the Moscow Pravda.)

*It is necessary in this connection to refer to certain facts. In spite of differences of opinion, Kamenev, on the proposal of Lenin, was elected at the April conference to the central committee of the party, and in the moment of the insurrection, on behalf of the central committee, took the chair at the Second Soviet Congress. Already in November, 1917 Zinoviev, whose disagreements with the central committee only lasted a few days, on behalf of the central committee of the party delivered a report to the All-Russian Central Executive Committee advocating the dissolution of the constituent assembly. At the seventh party conference (beginning of March, 1918), Zinoviev, on behalf of the central committee, spoke for the Lenin policy against Trotsky and the "lefts." From this it is to be seen that the whole party regarded the October errors of these comrades as nothing else than a temporary difference of opinion. On the contrary they entrusted them with tasks of the greatest importance, in spite of the fact that they did not for a moment approve of the errors of these comrades.

Lore and the Comintern

By Moissaye J. Olgin

Third Article.

Comrade Lore and the October Events in Germany.—Comrade Lore and MacDonald.—Comrade Lore and the Communist International.

As early as May 15, 1921, the "Volkszeitung" expressed its opinion on the advisability of aggressive revolutionary action in times of a receding revolutionary wave in the following form:

"What happened in Italy after Livorno is known to us. The new Communist Party immediately began an aggressive offensive policy . . . and it accomplished by it that the fascist organization, previously insignificant, met the offensive with still sharper attacks and so drove the Communists from an offensive to a defensive position. . . Not the red, but the white terror now reigns in Italy."

These remarks may serve as a key note to Comrade Lore's attitude towards revolutionary action. Comrade Lore was averse to revolutionary battles of the working class, proceeding from a general assumption that Europe was not ripe for revolution. Comrade Lore considered appeals to revolutionary battles untimely and therefore, disastrous to the working class.

His attitude towards the October events in Germany is a point in case. It is now conceded even by the right wing of the German Communists that the situation in Germany in October, 1923, offered unusual revolutionary possibilities, that the bourgeoisie was in a state of confusion, that its power was weakened, and that the working class was only waiting for leadership to storm the mainstays of capitalism in Germany. It was lack of activity on the part of the central committee of the Communist Party of Germany, and it was an opportunist notion concerning the united front with the Saxony social-democrats in the government of Saxony that turned the October events into a defeat of the working class. This policy of inactivity was subsequently repudiated by the German rank and file Communists who at the Frankfort convention (March, 1924) elected a left wing central committee, and also by the fifth congress of the Communist International. It is significant, however, that Comrade Lore, without directly communicating with the German Communists, maintained in New York the idea that the Communist Party of Germany should not lead the German workers into decisive battles, should, on the contrary, restrain the workers from spontaneous outbursts and revolts.

In an editorial entitled "Hunger, not Communism," in the "Volkszeitung" of Oct. 25, 1923, he expresses the idea that revolts in Germany are a result of hunger and not of a revolutionary plan conceived by the Communist Party, because, in his opinion, there are no objective possibilities of a revolution in Germany. The revolt in Hamburg, Bremen and other German cities he considered to be hunger riots which should be kept within limits. "The Communist movement works" he writes, "in Germany as elsewhere, for the social revolution. But it does not conduct a policy of adventurism. It chooses the most favorable time for its aim of social overthrow in order to be able to deal capitalist society the decisive blow. This is particularly true about the German Communist Party at present. It is hunger that drives the masses to despair. It is the intolerable misery which drives the masses into the streets, which compels them to plunder shops and warehouses full of foodstuffs and commodities of every kind. And when the natural impulse, the wish to live and not to starve, finally moves them to actions which, while certainly not bringing a liberation from under the capitalist yoke, still bring a momentary relief from the hunger, then it is only a self-understood duty of the Communists to put themselves in the ranks of the rebels, to aid them with advice and action, and to take the best care that the greatest possible advantage be gained with the least number of sacrifices. . . . The German Communists do not cause hunger revolts but they do not leave the hungry ones who are driven to despair in the hour of their greatest misery. At the same time, however, the Communists do not wish a revolution in Germany —because at present everything speaks against the possibility of a success of a proletarian revolutionary upheavel. They therfore concentrated their struggle against the fascisti and monarchists, against the "constitutional" dictatorship and for securing the republic and supporting it thru a workingmen's government in the union and thru workingmen's governments in the individual states . . . The Communist Party of Germany is placed before immensely difficult tasks. It must keep the revolutionary fire alive, it must not, however, allow the flames to shoot too high. It must take account of the despair of the pauperized German working masses, it must, however, only educate for struggle those who are ready for struggle, knowing that the struggle will be fought out only when victory is possible." (Blackface mine. —M. J. O.)

Comrade Lore certainly was not in favor of a revolution in Germany when the time was ripe for such revolution. The fifth congress of the Communist International branded such attitude as opportunism.

Even after the October defeat, when its disastrous consequences were manifest to every observer, Comrade Lore defended the German Communists on the ground that they did not want a revolution. Commenting on the suppression of the German Communist Party, Lore writes in an editorial November 24, 1923:

"Even the German government authorities know that it was the German Communist Party which hitherto held the masses back; that it was the Communists who warned the despairing and pauperized masses against actions of despair, against useless sacrifices. They know that if it were not for the strong Communist movement in Germany, a guerrilla warfare would have long broken out in Germany. "

Comrade Lore praises the German Communists for preventing guerrilla warfare against capitalism in Germany. Comrade Lore sees in this a particular merit of the German comrades.

Viewing the revolutionary movement in Germany from such angle, it was natural for Comrade Lore to maintain that the Russian comrades were also against decisive revolutionary action on the part of the German workers in October, 1923. In an editorial entitled "Russia and Germany," published in the "Volkszeitung" Oct. 26, 1923, Comrade Lore writes:

"What those bourgeois and socialist-reformist elements fail to understand, or claim to misunderstand, is that it is the Russian conception that the proletarian revolution in Germany should not be overestimated either from without or by the Communist Party. The proletarian masses must be spiritually prepared for it. They must know their aim before the real struggle begins. They must not again, as was the case in former years, step on the battlefield aimlessly and unequipped."

Comrade Lore attributes to the Russian comrades his own aversion to a decisive revolutionary upheaval. On the other hand, he is most favorably inclined towards the left social-democrats, particularly towards the coalition government in Saxony. Commenting on the declaration in the Saxon parliament by the social-democratic prime minister Zeigner, a very mild and non-revolutionary declaration, Comrade Lore writes in the Volkszeitung" of Nov. 14, 1923:

"Dr. Zeigner's declaration in the People's Parliament of Saxony which served to introduce the socialist-communist era, deserves a place of honor in the rank of revolutionary manifestations."

Comrade Lore seemed to believe in the constructive possibilities of a combined socialist-Communist government. This belief in parliamentary possibilities was even more pronounced in his attitude towards the labor government of Great Britain. Generally speaking, Comrade Lore maintained a benevolent neutrality towards MacDonald, considering his government an "interesting experiment," praising it for what Comrade Lore considered good actions, mildly criticising it for its hesitation, and spreading the illusion that the government of the Second International had a genuine wish to serve the interests of the working class but that it was thwarted by the opposition of the liberals who held the balance of power between the conservatives and laborites. In an editorial of January 24, Comrade Lore writes:

"We do not believe it necessary to emphasize at this point that every labor party and labor paper meet the new British government with great sympathy, even, when, as is the case with Communist parties and papers, they are from the very beginning of the conviction that we have to deal here with nothing but an experiment which in addition is being undertaken with entirely insufficient and unfitted means."

Having thus outlined his attitude of "great sympathy" towards the MacDonald government, Comrade Lore proceeds to find favorable indications in the first steps of the new government. Commenting on the release of Ghandi, who was freed by the new government after signing a declaration of renouncing the struggle, Comrade Lore writes:

"Here also the British prime minister conducts a policy which would like to sneak between two extremes without offending either. In this, however, the prime minister, who surely means well, will not succeed. It is not only a question of freeing a couple of political prisoners or to warn against excesses. The British labor party government will have to decide to declare itself either for or against the British imperialist policy . . We know very well that the labor party government can not help but follow in the imperialist paths trodden by Lloyd George, Asquith, Baldwin, etc., otherwise the liberals will immediately tighten the noose whose end they hold in their hands. This being the case, the labor party men in the government should at least keep their mohtus shut on such questions, as long as they insist on exercising a power which is based on the good or bad will of the capitalist politicians."

This rather pessimistic remark seemed to indicate that Comrade Lore had its doubts as to the possibilities of a radical course of the so-called labor government. However, subsequent articles showed that Comrade Lore was rather inclined to praise the activities of the new government. Commenting on MacDonald's discussion of foreign problems with invited press correspondents, Comrade Lore, an editorial of Feb. 16, 1924, put what he calls "the open diplomacy" methods of MacDonald on the same level as the methods of the Soviet Republic. The article says in part:

"Soviet Russia had to conquer the confidence of the labor world and thus put the possible capitalist peace breakers in the wrong before the rest of the world. It is therefore that Tchicherin published all notes sent by him to the powers and all diplomatic papers, and it is therefore that it was impossible for the political clowns in high public and state positions to spread suspicion against the foreign policy of the Soviet Republic. Just the same is at present being aspired to by MacDonald. We do not put too great hopes on the success of MacDonald's foreign policy, altho MacDonald does not lack perspective and clarity of aims. He cannot achieve anything complete because the liberals only wait for an occasion to drive into the back of the labor party government the knife they have been holding in readiness for a long while. Nevertheless, it will be impossible for the British government's policy under this administration to be anything else but the first attempt at reconciliation of the nations, at the greatest possible avoidance of war, at the sharpest fight against national hatreds."

But Comrade Lore saw a bright view not only in the field of the foreign policy. He believed the so-called labor government was opening a new era also in domestic policies. Commenting on the impending strikes in England, Comrade Lore says in an editorial of Feb. 20, 1924:

"Under the 'liberal' coalition of Lloyd George and under the recent conservative government, the strikes of the British workers for the most part ended in bitter defeats. This is easily explained by the fact that the representatives of the interests of large capitalists in the government caused all means at the disposal of the capitalist state without exception to be arrayed against the strikers. . . . This, however, is impossible under a labor government. MacDonald will not and cannot mobilize either the police or the soldiers or even the courts in favor of the employers. Just as little will his departments be able to utilize the unemployment doles as a weapon against the strikers and for the recruiting of scabs. It is therefore that the most favorable opportunity conceivable is now offered to the British workers for the conduct of their struggles against capitalism."

If this is not spreading parliamentary illusions, what is?

Comrade Lore's conception of the history and the role of the Communist International was most clearly revealed in his article published March 5, on the occasion of the 5th anniversary of the Communist International. After reviewing the history of the Communist International, Comrade Lore proceeds to say:

"For the first time in the history of the labor movement we see a revolutionary organization at work, an organization knowing only one aim and constantly accentuating this aim before the entire world—the overthrow of the capitalist order of society, the construction of Communist society by means of the proletarian dictatorship; an organization which—and this differentiates it from similar organizations of previous times—uses all means capable of bringing it closer to its aim, not even stopping to ask whether it has not repudiated or even condemned the same means a day before. The Third International changes its tactics, nay, even its methods, every day, and if need be, even oftener. Heedlessly it strides over its own guiding principles, squashes theses accepted yesterday and adapts itself in every country to new situation which may offer itself. The Communist International is, therefore, opportunistic in its methods to the extremest point, but since it keeps in its mind the one and only revolutionary aim, the reformist method works for the revolution and thus loses its opportunistic character."

If this characterization sounds more like a disguised mockery than like an appreciation of the work of the Communist International, the following paragraph is an open condemnation of all past history of the Communist International. The paragraph reads:

"The Third International has in the five years of its existence gone thru many an infantile sickness. It has swung itself up from the strictest rejection of parliamentarism to its utilization—always revealing the impotence of parliamentarism. It repudiated the creation of dual labor unions, altho at the beginning it preached the splitting of labor unions. It freed itself from the utopian conception that a small minority in each country, conscious of its purpose, could 'make' a revolution, and it taught that a majority of the proletariat must at least have a sympa-

The Discussion on Party Tasks

BOLSHEVIZATION OF THE GERMAN SECTION OF THE WORKERS PARTY

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN
(A report to the C. E. C. of the W. P. on the Convention of the German Section)

THE GERMAN SECTION of the party was the first of our language sections to hold a national convention since the Fifth Congress of the Comintern. It was, therefore, at this convention that the central executive committee of our party had its first opportunity to present its new thesis on the immediate tasks of the party and its program for the Bolshevisation of the Workers Party. This convention was in many respects a test for the German section of our party, of its readiness and willingness to admit past mistakes as pointed out by the Comintern and by the central executive committee of our party, and to bring itself more closely in accord with the fundamental principles of Leninism. As will be seen from this report, the German section, thru its national convention, manifested a sincere desire and determination to break loose from old prejudices and to come into closer contact with the party as a whole and with the Communist International.

Report of Bureau Lacks Aggressiveness.

It must be stated from the very beginning that most of our leading German comrades are working under a kind of psychological depression which makes them see things in a much darker light than they really are, and which paralyzes to a certain degree their initiative and aggressiveness. This spirit of depression was particularly noticeable in the report to the convention on the activities of the German bureau submitted by Comrade Lore as the secretary of the section. There was nothing wrong with the main facts of his report. His analysis of the situation among the German speaking workers of the United States was substanially correct. No one in the convention, not even the opposition minority, challenged the facts and the analysis of the report. The thing that was wrong with the report was its general spirit of hopelessness and pessimism. There was no sign of any attempt at all to devise political and organizational means for shaking up the German-speaking workers of this country and setting them in motion for the class struggle.

It was natural to expect that if there was any real minority opposition present in the convention it will direct its special criticism against this negative, passive, and fatalistic feature of the report of the bereau. This, however, was not done by the minority. It fell to the task of the representative of the C. E. C. to direct the attention of the convention to these objectionable features of the report, and to point out the error of such fatalistic attitude towards objective conditions. It is my opinion that if there is any single lesson that must be driven home to the leading comrades in the German section it is this; that it is the duty of Communists not only to study conditions but also to change them. More faith in the creative abilities of a Communist Party to hasten developments and to change situations is one of the things the German section of our party really needs.

Generally speaking the report of the bureau shows slow but continual progress of Communist activities among German-speaking workers. The membership is still very small, only about 600. The internal political life of the section is not as intensive as is desirable and necessary. But in spite of these drawbacks our German section took an active part during the period covered by the report in every important political activity of the party, such as the United front campaigns for the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense, protection of the foreign born, the farmer-labor party, our election campaign, etc.

To the great credit of our German section must be placed the fact that Communist influence in the fraternal organizations of the German-speaking workers has made great progress. Within the last few months our German section and the Volkszeitung have carried on a successful campaign for leadership in the Krankenkassen, which resulted in considerable victories for our comrades and sympathizers. The situation in the Krankenkassen, thanks to these victories, is now such as will enable our German section to still further develop its influence and to win the masses of these organizations for the class struggle and for our party.

Criticisms were made at the convention by the minority opposition against the methods used by our German section in winning influence over fraternal organizations. The charge was made that the methods used were more of the nature of "tricks" than of open Communist propaganda. The opposition, however, failed to submit a single constructive idea as to the other means and methods that should have been employed in this campaign. The spokesmen for the bureau quite properly pointed out that the victories secured in the Krankenkassen are based mainly on the confidence won by our party members in these organizations, that this confidence was secured on the basis of capable leadership in these organizations, and that the "tricks" referred to by one of the delegates of the opposition were nothing more than the organization of the Communist forces for the winning over of the rank and file towards our leadership and point of view.

The general impression that was left by the report and by the debate on the report was that the German section really needs more fresh blood, healthy Communist optimism, and more aggressiveness in its daily work. A strong and militant left wing in the section could have done the job, but such a left wing must yet be born. It is not now in existence. The opposition at the convention, led by Comrade Bedacht, which in reality is principally an opposition to the C. E. C., is obviously incappable of carrying out this constructive task.

Convention Pledges Support to C. I. and C. E. C.

The report of the central executive committee on past activities was accepted by the entire convention with the exception of four delegates from the opposition. The convention adopted a resolution pledging itself to carry out loyally the decisions of the C. I. and the party, and to make of the German section a real Bolshevist section of our party. (The report of the C. E. C. representative was published in full in the Volkszeitung and the DAILY WORKER.

There was quite an extensive debate on the future policies of the party in which three points of view were presented. One was the point of view of the C. E. C. as expressed in its thesis on the immediate tasks of the party. The second point of view was represented by Comrade Bedacht in accord with the thesis of the minority. The third point of view was presented by Comrade Lore. Comrade Lore takes the position that a farmer-labor party will prove an inevitable phase in the development of the American labor movement. He believes the same as the minority that without a farmer-labor party it will be impossible to develop the independent political activities of the working masses of America. He differs with the minority, however, that he does not believe the present situation to be ripe for an intensive campaign under the slogan for a class farmer-labor party, and therefore favors retaining the slogan in the program of the party for future use.

There is no need here to discuss in detail this question. The convention in adopting the report of the C. E. C. referred these three points of view to the German-speaking branches for thorough discussion. What deserves special attention in this report is the discussion of that section of the report of the C. E. C. which dealt with the necessity of combatting the remnants of the ideology of the 2½ International in our party. In that section Comrade Lore was referred to and criticized, and an appeal made to the German section to discard this ideology and to accept more completely the position of the Communist International.

The party will undoubtedly be gratified to learn that the criticism of the C. I. and of the C. E. C. of the W. P., directed against the ideology of the 2½ International as expressed in numerous articles in the Volkszeitung —that the efforts spent in this criticism were not in vain. Comrade Lore himself, as well as many of the comrades inclined to his point of view, are already admitting their mistakes. At the convention, discussing the report of the C. E. C. Comrade Lore specifically stated that his views of Levy, Serrati, and the nature of the labor government in England were wrong, and that the Communist International was right. The W. P. may very well be proud of the fact that it succeeded in bringing Comrade Lore more closely to the party as a whole and to the C. I.

However, it must be pointed out, that the remnants of the ideology of the 2½ International, altho considerably weakened, still prevails to a lesser degree than before in certain sections of our party, and it will be the duty of the C. E. C. to continue its ideological campaign against these tendencies until they are completely liquidated. It must also be said that Comrade Lore failed to satisfy the party as to his views on one very important point, namely, his attitude towards the minority opposition in the Russian Party. Comrade Lore simply didn't mention this point, which is a very regretable omission. It would seem to indicate that Comrade Lore is not sure of his position on this problem, and that he hasn't yet made up his mind as to where the correct position is. It must be understood, however, that our party is entitled to know where its leading members stand in this matter. So far as the party as a whole and its central executive committee are concerned, we are definitely in agreement with the Russian Communist Party and are determined to uphold the hand of the old Bolshevist guard in leading the working class of Russia and the Communist International to final victory.

In speaking on party discipline, which was part of the C. E. C.'s report on Bolshevising the party, Comrade Lore and other comrades claimed to be fully in agreement with the C. E. C. But these comrades expressed a faulty view of discipline. For instance. Comrade Lore maintained that there may arise situations where Communist duty would demand not submission to party discipline but the violation of this discipline. He referred to Karl Liebknecht who, because of submitting to party discipline, unwillingly committed the crime of voting for military credits in the German Reichstag on Aug. 4.

This reference to Karl Liebknecht submitting to the discipline of social-patriots and betrayers as well as the general argument of Comrade Lore on this point, indicates that Comrade Lore has still a way to travel to a correct understanding of Communist discipline. The reporter of the C. E. C. pointed out to Comrade Lore at the convention that when a member of a Communist Party begins to feel that submission to party discipline is equivalent to betrayal of the working class (as was the case with Liebknecht in the Social Democratic Party) then it is time for this comrade not only to break the discipline of the party but to quit altogether.

Comrade Lore also raised his voice in favor of more democracy in our party. He failed to explain exactly what he meant. The representative of the C. E. C. pointed out to the convention that the Workers Party is build on the principle of democratic centralization which is the basic organization form of the Communist International. Also, that within the last ten months our party had plenty of opportunity to express itself on the major activities of our party. And that, our party now, if it is suffering at all, is not from lack of discussion but rather from an excess of it.

The convention accepted the resolution submitted by the representative of the C. E. C. which pledges the German section to the carrying out of the party policies all along the line. Specifically this resolution pledges the German section to Bolshevise the organization, to take all necessary measures to establish the complete party control over the German organ of the party, and to prepare the ground for the reorganization of the party on the shop nuclei basis. The resolution which was published in the party press definitely binds the German section of the party to break lose from every remnant of the ideology of the 2½ International and to follow loyally the leadership of the Communist International.

Improvement in Organization

Upon the recommendations of the organization committee elected by the convention, the convention adopted a set of organization measures which will undoubtedly make the German bureau and the German speaking branches a more effective instrument for Communist propaganda. There were no material differences of opinion on the score of organization. The convention decided that the new bureau be organized on the basis of departmentalization with responsible head in charge of each department. It was also decided to devote more attention to organization work in those localities (such as Massachussetts) where there are large numbers of German-speaking workers that have recently arrived in the United States.

The convention elected a national bureau of nine members, consisting of Lore, Schuller, Wolf, Zander, Berg, Winter, Wendrich, Sanger and Leman. Altho represented at the convention by only four delegates out of a total of 19 the minority opposition was given three seats on the bureau, chiefly because of the efforts of the representative of the C. E. C.

Conclusion.

The result of this convention of our German section has been to bring the German-speaking membership of our party more closely to the party as a whole ideologically and organizationally. The prestige of the Communist International and of the central executive committee is now considerably higher than it has ever been in our German section. It can be safely stated that a continuation of the intelligent effort now made in our ideological struggle against what still remains of the ideology of the 2½ international will completely eliminate this tendency from our ranks and make the German section of our party a real Bolshevist orgnization.

The Discussion on Party Tasks

THE WORKERS PARTY IS BECOMING REALISTIC

By MIKE ROSS.

STRIPPED of all hair splitting technicalities, misinterpretations and irrelevant matter the discussion within our party simmers down to the following main difference.

1. The majority of the C. E. C. wants to throw the whole farmer-labor party policy overboard because it is a dead issue for the present and near future as it was swallowed by the LaFollette movement, but specify that if it should get into life again our policy will be changed accordingly.

2. The minority claims that since the majority admit that it was a live issue formerly, the setback given it by the LaFollette movement can only be of a temporary nature and the policy is now as important as ever.

Most of the leaders on both sides will admit that a united political front does not only consist in a farmer-labor party, both sides did admit that if a mass movement for a class farmer-labor party does exist, that it would be our duty to fight with it on a united political front.

They also know that it is not absolutely necessary for our country to go thru a labor party period. It would therefore, be folly for us to organize it. We would only be kidding ourselves. It is only when it assumes the proportions of a mass movement that we can enter it in order to win the masses for Communism.

The difference therefore is not on a real principle, but rather on the advisability of the application of that principle at the present time.

To answer this would require a study of the thoughts, opinions and psychology of the masses within the unions.

Unfortunately we have no real data to answer this. The only way we could arrive at reliable results is by getting the opinions of all comrades that are active in the trade unions.

If this were done, I feel sure that the overwhelming majority would answer that there is no mass movement for a class farmer-labor party. That part of it which does exist was created and is largely controlled by our comrades and could be induced to support the Workers Party. That a very big percentage of what we understood to be a mass sentiment for a class farmer-labor party was simply a movement for LaFollette and the percentage that does stand for a class farmer-labor party and is beyond our control is so small that it is ridiculous to make an issue out of it.

It is argued that since the majority admit in their thesis that a mass movement for a class farmer-labor party did exist, how is it that it suddenly disappeared? History shows that mass movements based on economic class interests do not vanish as if by magic neither could they be swallowed by LaFollette.

If such a thing does happen it could only be of short duration.

If this really was the case, then it must be admitted that the minority of the C. E. C. has the best of the argument and are correct in their views.

The fact is that there never was a mass movement for a class farmer-labor party as distinct from a LaFollette party. The figures and facts brought to light during the discussion definitely prove this, and if this isn't sufficient, surely the results of this mass movement ought to convince anybody.

This fictitous "class" movement became fully developed in the mind of our once great theroticlan John Pepper. It assumed gigantic proportions.

Every little incident was magnified and exaggerated until it became indisputable. This false or mistaken information was spread among the membership.

The party finally accepted the farmer-labor policy and when this movement went into the place where it belonged, namely in the LaFollette movement, it was only natural for our leaders to take the next step and advocate entering into the third party movement in order to win the masses away from LaFollette. Luckily the Communist International put an end to this opportunism.

It is peculiar that both factions of the present C. E. C. agreed to the above tactics and their difference now is that the minority still sticks to these illusions while the majority is beginning to walk on solid ground.

The majority, however, is hampered because it still clings to its former illusions thru apologies of former actions and by, doing so they are working directly into the hands of Ruthenberg and Lovestone.

It will be asked why does not the majority admit that it was a mistake from the very beginning?

Well, not everybody could be a Lenin and admit before the whole world their mistakes.

Despite these short comings it is the duty of every Communist to get down to reality and support the majority of the C. E. C,

THE MINORITY THESIS LEADS TO OPPORTUNISM

By HANS JOHNSON.

THE minority in their thesis and in all the articles supporting the minority thesis have exposed themselves as the real right wing of our party. Not only as a slight deviation to the right, but real right wing opportunism. In principle they are more the real farmer-laborites, farmer-labor parliamentarians, than Communists. They maintain that the majority of the central executive committee have discared the united front on the political field. by ditching the slogan, "For a Farmer-Labor Party," under the present condition By this they only prove that they do not understand the fundamental principles of the united front, and less do they understand the effective application of our united front slogans in their various forms. To the minority—so it seems—the united front politically cannot be carried on unless we use the slogan, "For a 'Class' Farmer-Labor Party." They do not take into consideration, that at the present time that slogan is less effective to bring about the political consciousness of the MASSES than any of our other slogans that can be based on the immediate needs of the workers in their everyday struggles against the capitalist class.

To the minority the creation of a farmer-labor party, a "class mass" farmer-labor party, or what they choose to call it, has become an end in itself. A party based on parliamentarist reformism. They go on to say that, if there is no such a party it is the duty of the Communists to help in bringing about the birth of such a party, and Comrade Ruthenberg in several of his articles has the nerve to state that such a party will fight the CLASS STRUGGLE of the workers and poor farmers of this country. Who ever heard of such nonsense, from a Communist, an executive secretary of a section of the Communist International? What role is the Workers (Communist) Party to play, if a farmer-labor party is going to fight the class struggle of the workers and poor farmers of this country? There can be no other CLASS PARTY in America outside of the Workers (Communist) Party. That ought to be clear to every Communist.

And it is not the duty of the Communists to create such parties where none exist. The slogan for a farmer-labor party can only be used for propaganda purposes, and only where there is a wide move towards such a party on the part of the MASSES, etc.—the industrial workers and poor farmers—and not where only a few so-called labor leaders are crying for it. If there were a wide movement in existence towards a farmer-labor party on the part of the masses of industrial workers and poor farmers, then it would be the duty of the Communists to assist in driving that movement to the left, before and after it crystallizes itself into an organizational form. But, when there is no movement on the part of the masses towards such a party, distinct from the LaFollette movement on the one hand and the Workers (Communist) Party on the other, then, indeed, it is time to discard that stale slogan, for a "Farmer-Labor Party," and come to realities. To push that slogan at the present time in an attemp mechanically to create another party outside of the Workers Party is pure nonsense. To quote Comrade Dunne, the attempt "is the inevitable outcome of an opportunist policy springing from a wrong tendency in the united front tactic." How true this is, cannot be overemphasized.

What's the matter with you, minority comrades? Have you lost faith in the Workers (Communist) Party? You maintain that by using the slogan For a Farmer-Labor Party," it will be possible for the Workers Party to drive a wedge into the LaFollette third party movement, and break away from it the most militant and leftist industrial workers and poor farmers. If that is possible under the slogan. "For a Farmer-Labor Party," then what prevents it under the slogan, "The Workers (Communist) Party vs. the LaFollette Third (Bourgeois) Party"? Why give the farmer-labor sugar coating to those militant leftist industrial workers and poor farmers you speak about, if you have not entirely lost faith in the ability of the Workers (Communist) Party to take the direct lead of such left workers and poor farmers by bringing them directly into the Workers Party instead of some half-way party with a reformist program at its best?

The movement towards a farmer-labor party distinct from the LaFollette third party movement which the minority comrades maintain is still here, exists only in the metaphysical minds of Comrades Lovestone and Ruthenberg. Their innermost desire to create a "mass farmer-labor party" is directly responsible for their erroneous policy, which tends to lead our party into channels of opportunism. The movement they speak of is dead and every wideawake rank and filer is aware of that fact.

The rank and file of our party will accept the policy of the central executive committee as outlined in the majority thesis.

A SOCIAL-DEMOCRATIC AFFAIR

By MAX BEDACHT.

A deep mystery was solved for me the other day. For a long time I was wondering why the central executive committee majority insisted on combatting not what the minority says or does, but what the majority would like them to say or do. But now I know. Comrade Bittelman enlightened me. And I thank him for it. In his recent article Comrade Bittelman said that the minority (altho lacking in Communist principles and understanding) do not lack in ability to hide their shortcomings. Altho, as Bittelman says, the minority are opportunists, yet they are careful and successful in hiding that fact when they write or speak.

I have a vision. I see before me the capitalist prosecutor of Karl Liebknecht in the German supreme court at Leipzig. He has before the court as evidence a book written by Karl. The prosecutor reads from this book: "The period of army mobilization is the least opportune time for a proletarian rebellion." He asks Leibknecht: "Is it not a fact that you wanted to write the most opportune time?" Leibknecht answers in the negative. But the prosecutor insists that this is a typographical error and maintains that Leibknecht must be sent to the penitentiary. Since he was a capitalist prosecutor and pleaded before a capitalist court he got his way. Leibknecht was sent to the penitentiary for eighteen months not for what he wrote, but for what the prosecutor wanted him to have written.

I would advise Bittelman to apply for a job as prosecutor. He shows admirable qualities for such a position.

We, the minority of the C. E. C., are in a more fortunate position than the majority. Our criticism can be based on facts. When we charge the C. E. C. majority with opportunism we can accompany the accusation with conclusive proof.

The Communist International has instructed the C. E. C. of our party to carry on an ideological struggle against the tendencies expressed and led by Lore. How has the C. E. C. of our party carried out this instruction? In later articles I will have to say more about this. Today I will merely give a little incident to show the nature of the ideological campaign carried on by the C. E. C. majority against Lore and Loreism.

The place is the convention of the German language federation of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The time is November 30, 1924.

Bittelman speaking: "It is one of the greatest events in the history of our party, and, I can safely say of the Comintern, when a comrade like Lore admits his mistakes."

Bittelman is personified "logic." When he says that Lore is a good Communist now, he immediately follows it up with logical action. He moves in the C. E. C., first

That the opposition in the German federation led by Bedacht is unfit to carry out the desires of the Comintern and our party, and, second,

That the federation bureau, elected at the convention and overwhelmingly controlled by Lore be approved—thus declaring that while Bedacht cannot be trusted with carrying out Comintern decisions Lore can.

What are the facts behind this farce over which we cannot even laugh because of the serious consequences it will and must have for our party?

Lore "admitted" that he made a mistake in his stand in the Levy matter. He said that while Levy was correct in his judgment of the situation, his method of criticism was criminal.

What does that mean to any one but to the representative of the majority, Comrade Bittelman? It means that Levy was right when he said that the March action in 1921 in Germany was a putsch, engineered by some Mullah from Chiwa (meaning a representative of the Comintern), and carried out by the Communist Party of Germany as a conspiracy, and not as a revolutionary mass action of the German proletariat. That is what Lore wrote at the time of the March action and the Levy incident. That is what Lore thinks today and even openly admits. Yet, the C. E. C. (majority) representative proudly declares that the admission of Lore that he had made a mistake in the matter is one of the greatest moments in the life of the Commubist International.

Lore declared further at this convention that he had made a mistake in judging the English labor government. He, according to his own words, overestimated the class consciousness of the English socialists. Bittelman is enraptured by this declaration and in ecstasy he cries out: "Oh, what a wonderful moment in my life and that of my party!" Will any Communist please inform the Leninist-Marxian (pardon the generosity) Bittelman and his C. E. C. majority friends what Lore's declaration really meant? Will anyone show to Lore and Bittelman that the difference between the socialist and the Communist is not merely a degree of class consciousness; that the Communist is working class conscious, while the socialist is bourgeois class conscious. Lore's declaration in the matter was not an excuse but an admission of guilt, an admission that he is not a Communist. But Bittelman says: "Never mind, Lore is worthy to carry out the Comintern policies."

Social Democrat Calls Bedacht "Moscow Agent."

But aside from these "excuses" of Lore, there was the atmosphere of the whole convention. Before the eyes and ears of the convention a spectator, a member of the party, one Dr. Aronson, demanded to know from Bedacht what he gets "paid from Moscow." While I consider it an honor to be accused of being an agent of Moscow in that convention, an honor that might not be appreciated by Lore, still, the treacherous tendencies of the man making the accusation is obvious. The convention did not rise as one man to protest but calmly continued in its rut. When asked by Bedacht whether he was sent by Abe Cahan to ask this question, Dr. Aronson, a very close friend of Lore, answered with more truth than poetry, that he was a social-democrat for fifty years.

The only excuse that the representative of the C. E. C. majority at this convention, Bittelman, can now bring forward for the convention permitting to go unchallenged, the behavior of Dr. Aronson is, that Bedacht did not appeal to the convention for redress. I ask any comrade with common sense and with Communist spirit why I should bring to the attention of the convention a crime to which the whole convention was witness.

Every criticism of the Communist International was greeted with applause in this convention. Lore, when justifying his attacks on Zinoviev, by declaring that the president of the Comintern cannot claim the infallibility of a pope, was acclaimed with enthusiasm.

Lore's Communism.

Lore's interpretation of Leninism and Bolshevism as less discipline and more democracy carried the convention with him. Almost every manifestation of the convention was a justification for the judgment that it was not a Communist but a social-democratic convention.

But the representative of the C. E. C. majority, in full agreement with the policy of that body toward Lore during the whole past year, stands serenely before the convention and before the whole party and declares:

"Lore had recanted. He is now worthy of our confidence. He surely can be trusted with the task of carrying out the policies of the C. I., a task that Bedacht cannot be entrusted with."

Lore has reformed!

Yes—he shows his reformed soul in all its beauty, in an editorial published in the New York Volkszeitung of December 12. Speaking about the attacks of the Herriot government against the French Communist Party he says that the French Communists prove that "their ostensible intentions of overthrowing the government would not serve the interests of 'Moscow' which is supposed to be directing them. If the Soviet government, as is constantly being contended by the capitalist press, is placing great hopes in obtaining a loan from the Herriot government, it would naturally do nothing to nip these hopes in the bud, especially as the French Communist movement is not yet strong enough to make an insurrectionary movement at the present time appear hopeful."

There you have it. From the Berlin international of Rocker to the Washington international of Hughes-Coolidge, the Soviet government has always been accused that the C. I. is nothing but its agent; and that the C. I.'s actions are directed by the commissariat of foreign affairs of the U. S. S. R.

Here is a member of the central executive committee of the American section of the Communist International openly adopting and applying this same argument to disprove any insurrectionary intentions of the Communist Party of France.

Of course, the majority of our C. E. C. will find that perfectly in order—because Lore has reformed!

But the halo of the reformed sinner and new saint, Lore, reflects sufficient light to bring out into relief the "loyalty" of the C. E. C. majority to the C. I. and permit the membership of the Workers (Communist) Party to pass final and decisive judgment on it at the next convention.

A Communist Catechism

Some Questions and Answers

By MAX BEDACHT and JAY LOVESTONE.

(We hereby begin the first of a series of questions and answers bearing on the problems confronting the party in the present controversy. We ask every Communist to study these questions and answers carefully.)

1. Question—What is the purpose of Communist United Front Tactics?

Answer—The objective of Communist united front tactics is to separate the working and poor farming masses from the reactionary leadership and to win leadership over these masses for the Communist Party.

2. Question—What is a good Communist Slogan?

Answer—The Foster-Cannon group maintains that the only criterion for the correctness of a slogan is its meeting an existing well developed general mass demand. The Bittelman logicians yell that at present nobody demands a farmer-labor party, and, therefore, the slogan of a farmer-labor party is no good now.

This reasoning is bad Communism. The best criterion for a slogan is not whether it meets a mass demand but whether it meets a mass need. In order to fit the requirements of our desire to wing working class leadership, our slogans must not follow mass demands, movements, but must precede them, crystallize them and give articulate expression to them.

3. Question—Why ask for a farmer-labor party when the masses aren't demanding one?

Answer—This is still worse Communism for a party which seeks to be the leader of the working class. The fact that the masses—the whole working class or a considerable portion thereof—are not clearly demanding a farmer-labor party does not mean that the Communists should discard this slogan. Why does the majority thesis contain the slogan, "For a labor congress?" Are the masses demanding it? Have you ever heard a single worker in your shop, mill or mine talk about a labor congress or even mention it? The masses know far less about a labor congress than they know about a farmer-labor party—a form of political organization that has an historical place and tradition in the American labor movement. The demand for a labor congress amongst the masses is insignificant when compared with the demand for a labor party.

4. Question—Why organize a party to compete with the Workers Party?

Answer—Only a few months ago the Foster-Cannon group was so anxious to form a labor party that they were begging the Mahoneys and Fitzpatricks to become the leaders of such a party and were announcing from the housetops that the Communists did not have any intention and did not want to become the leaders of a labor party. At that time the Foster-Cannon group did not argue that a farmer-labor party would be a competing party. Nor did the Communist International ever think that a labor party organized on the basis of the organizations of the workers with the Communists holding a strategic place in it could be a competing party with a Communist Party organized on the basis of the individual clear, class conscious revolutionists. Otherwise the Communist International would never have instructed us that: "The first task of the Workers Party is to become a mass Communist party of workers. It can fulfill this task only by most actively participating in the establishment of a labor party which will embrace all elements of the working class by establishing a bond with the farmers who are at present in a state of strong fermentation."

If a labor party of this sort can be said to be a competing party today it could as well have been said by the Communist International and would have been said by the Communist International a few months ago when this decision was made. Only a mechanical, un-Marxian and non-Communist can come to the conclusion, because the campaign for a farmer-labor party is like every other campaign—only a method to establish leadership. The Workers Party will not establish a farmer-labor party as the leader of the American masses, but it tries to establish its own leadership over these masses by means of such campaigns as that of "for a class farmer-labor party."

To show how absurd this trump card argument of the Foster-Cannon group is, it needs only to be applied to other campaigns and other slogans. Applying the logic of the Foster-Cannon group to the campaign for the relief of unemployment, the argument could be made that such a campaign is no good because it may bring relief and thus spoil our chances for further developing proletarian unrest against capitalism. Surely Foster and Cannon are not yet ready to say this openly. Perhaps this thought is really in their heads and has been the basis of their resistance to all campaigns on unemployment proposed by the minority members of the central executive committee.

5. Question—The Central Executive Committee majority spokesmen are always shrieking: 'Where is the sentiment for a class farmer-labor party? Name any labor organization where there is sentiment for such a farmer-labor united front?"

Answer—Now for some outstanding facts showing the strong undercurrent of sentiment for the building of an independent political party of the workers and exploited farmer—a class farmer-labor party—in the ranks of the masses.

1. At the conference of fifty delegates representing approximately 10,000 progressive miners in the Pittsburgh bituminous district No. 5, of the United Mine Workers of America, held on Sept. 21, the plank "for a farmer-labor party" was unanimously adopted. On Oct. 5, the same plank was reaffirmed at another conference. The industrial organizer of our party, Comrade Foster, in Pittsburgh on Nov. 30, did not dare to blink totally this strong demand of the miners when he revised this plank of the program to read "independent political action by the working class thru a militant political organization of its own." Did Foster mean Workers Party or farmer-labor party? Or perhaps he meant the LaFollette party? Why did he not say what he meant?

2. In the conference for progressive political action of Massachusetts, the minority demand for a farmer-labor party as against a fraudulent liberal third capitalist party was strong and clear cut. Had our central executive committee given the party members in Massachusetts proper guidance instead of an overdose of phrases in a tapeworm manifesto, the party, thru this labor party slogan, could have struck an effective blow against LaFollettism and could have established our leadership amongst an increased mass of workers in the Bay State.

3. In California our party membership in the trade unions is faced with a similar situation where we will be compelled to throw away a splendid opportunity to lock horns with the labor fakers simply because the central executive committee majority has issued a bull against our comrades using the farmer-labor slogan even where there is a mass demand for it.

4. In Minnesota the demand for organization of a farmer-labor party is so strong that even the labor fakers and fake progressives like Mahoney are forced to pretend to talk for such a party and at the same time to insist that the Communists must be driven out of such a party. Here, the sabotaging activities of Mr. Sinclair, LaFollette's agent, have especially enraged many workers into insistence that a party of their own be organized nationally.

5. At the last American Federation of Labor convention, despite the fact that we failed to elect a single Communist or even a handful of militant delegates, the demand for a farmer-labor party was voiced in resolutions proposed by the Molders' Union, the International Potters' Union and the Stone Cutters' Association.

6. A perusal of the labor press convinces one that the demand for a labor party is increasing in strength and insistence. Typical of this demand is the declaration to be found in recent issues of the Upholsterers' Journal.

WHAT'S THE USE OF A LEADER WITHOUT AN ARMY?

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

NOW that the line is closely drawn on the C. E. C. of the party and the battle is to determine whether the majority or minority thesis shall be the guide of our immediate future activity, we, the rank and file (pardon the use of trade union phraseology) will do well to study the facts that present themselves so boldly.

The majority thesis, either summed up or boiled down, says "Build the Workers Party." The minority statement treated similarly means "Build the Workers Party," but reminds us of the necessity of "Reaching the masses," in order that we may accomplish that very thing. That is my understanding of what the minority means when they urge the slogan of "For a mass farmer-labor party."

No one can deny, that in order to build anything, either the Workers Party or any other essential thing, the material with which to build must first be assembled and molded to make for stability, otherwise the structure will crumble and fall. Hence, I am with the minority.

Are we to conclude that the majority of the C. E. C. are in favor of isolating the Workers Party or of forming a "Holy Trinity" with the S. L. P. and the proletarian party. Perhaps they are desirous of turning it into a discussion club such as the two last named parties are, satisfying themselves with quoting Marx once in a while, maybe holding a debate with someone occasionally. One thing is certain and that is, if they are Communists, they cannot be quitters. They must recognize that we are not yet, by any means, enjoying Communism, that Communism is an end and that the Workers Party, the Communist movement in the United States, is a means to that end.

Comrade Manley says he has had his fill of farmer-labor parties, but I am located in a part of the territory that he will be called upon to visit in his new duties as eastern industrial organizer, where he will find a growing sentiment for such a party and where, he knows better than anyone else, with the possible exception of Jack and Ida McCarthy, that he can't get by with anything until he first wins the confidence of the workers and convinces them that the Communist movement, as represented by the Workers Party, is not what John L. Lewis and the rest of the capitalist class tells them it is.

Comrade Foster sarcastically remarked to me in Philadelphia the other day, that he heard that I was for a labor party "Dead or alive." Well, I am far from being sensitive, but I will say that I am not strong for anything that is dead and that is the reason that I never belonged to the S. P., the S. L. P. or the proletarian party, and I am ready to vote an emphatic NO against letting the Workers Party die, especially thru a desire on the part of the majority to isolate it from the masses. It matters not what actuated the majority in writing their thesis, the fact remains, that the struggle for Communism must continue.

To hang a shingle on the door of our many district offices, as well as on the door of the national office, with the words, "Join the Workers Party" is not sufficient. We must go to the masses. By all and any means but surrender of our principle and leadership we must "Reach the masses" and win them to Communism. Surely, the majority does not think that the toiling masses are already knocking at the door for admission to our party, yet, if that is not the case and they still believe what they say in their thesis, that the Workers Party has won its leadership, what is it going to lead? What's the use of a leader, if there is no following?

If the frequent meetings with those who are already in the party and with the few others that attend our many gatherings and are thus partly molded material for the building of the party, has led the majority group of the C. E. C. to believe that all the exploited toilers are ready to join and be assimilated in the Workers Party, then it is time to arrange their future itineraries thru the "sticks," "bushes" and "backwoods" where they will get a chance to meet the many millions that have never been reached. Pioneer work of this kind will tend to sharpen and keep keen, their knowledge of the real situation, they will thus become conversant with the facts and find plenty of real Communist work to do.

More real work where and when it is needed and less resolutions, especially of the unnecessary kind, will allow our party to grow and remain the fighting, revolutionary leader of the American working class and hasten the day for the decisive, successful proletarian revolution.

Let the S. P., the S. L. P. and the proletarian party have their fields of discussion to themselves, even unto their demise, that is not our funeral. What we must do, is form the proletarian army and march "ON TO THE PROLETARIAN REVOLUTION."

WORDS AND DEEDS

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

COMRADE BROWDER in his article published in the Dec. 6 issue of the DAILY WORKER claims that among all the united front campaigns carried on by the party the labor party campaign was "the least successful in its practical and organizational aspects." This point of view is now shared by the "majority" as a whole judging from their discussion articles published so far.

The same "majority," however, only a short while ago was of an entirely different opinion. In "Our Immediate Work," a pamphlet published for the party membership mainly (there was therefore no need to exaggerate things), on page 5-6 the C. E. C. says: "We can also say, without being challenged that our party has made the greatest gains for itself thru this campaign for the Labor Party. It is thru this farmer-labor party campaign that our party has established itself as a political force in the U. S. . . . NOTHING has contributed so much to develop our party from a sectarian group to a recognized political force in the life of the labor movement of this country than our maneuvers in relation to the farmer-labor party."

So speak the majority after the June 17 and after the Cleveland conventions—it is a document which the majority can not erase from the records.

Unemployment.

Both Comrade Ruthenberg and Bedacht well pointed out that it was under extreme pressure of the minority and of the Executive Committee of the C. I. that the "majority" was compelled to "do something" on the question of unemployment. The attitude of the majority towards this important question can best be seen from the "practical" steps taken by the C. E. C. in connection with this. As far back as Aug. 11 instructions were sent out to all district organizers to organize unemployment councils and to see to it that a resolution is introduced in various labor organizations. There the matter rested until Dec. 6. It was only on that date that another circular letter was sent out asking the district organizers to report whether anything was done in connection with the unemployment question. For four months our C. E. C. was even not interested to know whether the districts carried out their instructions. A careful study of the "majority" theses will reveal that the majority hardly believes that there is an unemployment problem in this country at this moment.

Loreism.

Under pressure of the minority the majority was also compelled to take up the fight against Loreism in the party. But . . . up to the present moment there exists a solid united front between the majority and the Lore groups (which also includes large sections of the Finnish Federation) both on the C. E. C. and way down the line. The real fight is carried on not against Lore and Loreism but against the left wing, the Marxian group, in the party. It is against the latter, and not against Loreism, that Cannon is ready to "fight till death.' Certain representatives of the Finnish Federation are an integral part of the Lore group. One of these is one of the signers of the majority theses. The majority without the help of the Lore group is helpless. It must and will therefore continue its organizational and in effect, in practice, also political alliance with that group despite of its pre-convention theses. Deeds and facts are stronger than words. The Marxian group must solidify its ranks to carry on a struggle for Bolshevization of the party in a real Bolshevist spirit.

Various Forms of United Front.

The majority apparently believes that it discovered a new America when it says that there are various issues which can serve as a basis for united front tactics. Relief for Soviet Russia and protection of foreign born are the pet cases quoted by the majority in support of their new discovery." It is needless to repeat here that the majority had little to do with initiating of these united front campaigns and that as far back as two years ago Comrade Cannon, while in Russia and immediately upon his return, carried on a most vigorous campaign for the liquidation of the Friends of Soviet Russia. Aside from this, the fact that the farmer-labor party campaign presents the best and strongest possible basis for a united front campaign cannot be disputed. Suffice it to remind the majority of the attitude of the reactionaries towards the farmer-labor united front and to all other united front campaigns. It was precisely on the farmer-labor party issue that the bureaucrats in the labor movement really became excited. It was on this issue that the reactionaries split among themselves, and Communism was made the issue in the labor unions. It was precisely on these issues that many of the fake progressives could be unmasked before the masses of the workers. It was the issue of the farmer-labor party that a crystallization of a Communist sentiment took place in the labor organizations.

Comrades Manley and Abern made an "expose" that the Workers Party took a most active part in the farmer-labor campaign and that we spent a considerable sum of money in that campaign. Quite so. But, measuring the results of our work in the various fields by the Manley-Abern standards and arguments we may have no difficulty to show that much of our work was more than a failure. It is high time, however, for Comrades Manley and Abern to realize that Communist work cannot be measured in dollars and cents or by cheap demagogic "exposures."

The majority yells at the top of its voice that it wants a united front from below. Quite so. But here again it was the minority that was always fighting the present majority to make the farmer-labor party campaign a united front from below and to a great extent the minority succeeded, too. It is Comrade Foster who now laments over the loss "of many valuable sympathizers," referring apparently to Fitzpatrick and Nockels. It is Comrade Foster who still lives under the illusion that a labor party will or can be organized by Mr. Gompers and his associates. It will probably be only then that Comrade Foster intends to again revive the slogan of the farmer-labor party in order to "assume leadership."

The party membership must rally around the minority and "fight till death" to make the party a party of deeds and not of words.

Bureau of Italian Section Unanimous For Minority Theses

At a regular meeting of the national bureau of the Italian Section of the Workers Party held in Chicago Monday, Dec. 15, after a reading and thoro discussion of both the majority and minority thesis, by a vote of 7 to 0 unanimously endorsed the minority thesis of Comrades Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht, Engdahl and Gitlow.

The bureau recognizes that the thesis of the majority is not in accord with the principles of the Communist International. The majority in its thesis fail to give the proper conclusions for the course of action which the Workers (Communist) Party of America shall follow in gaining contact with the masses in order to establish in America a mass Communist Party.

It recognizes that the minority thesis expounds correctly the position of the Communist International in relation to building a mass Communist Party in America, one of the most effective weapons being the united front slogan for a "Class Farmer-Labor Party."

It urges the branches of the Italian Section of the party to study carefully both the thesis of the majority and minority of the party so that they can properly express their views in the party controversy.—Signed: Enea Sormenti, National Secretary, Italian Section, Workers Party of America.

Toledo Protests

Editorial Note: The following resolution is published by request of the English branch of local Toledo. The Central Executive Committee has replied thereto stating that it does not believe that the use of sharp language in a discussion in a Communist party a danger to the party.

Toledo, Ohio, Dec. 11, 1924—Workers Party of America, Chicago, Ill. Comrade Ruthenberg:

At our branch meeting last night the following resolution was adopted by the branch to the effect:

Local Toledo English branch in regular session assembled on Dec. 10 1924 do register a vote of protest to the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of the epithets and name calling that is being used in our party paper, the DAILY YORKER, on the party discussion and that this resolution be published in the next issue of the DAILY WORKER.—Yours for the cause. Comrade Buehler, Branch secretary.

thetic understanding of the necessity of the overthrow. It led Communism over the tactic of secret societies of underground conspirators and it proclaimed the right of revolution and revolutionary propaganda."

No enemy could have given the Communist International less credit and could have twisted the history of the Communist International more to the satisfaction of the social-reformers than did Comrade Lore.

Now it is the idea of the Communist International that when a comrade reveals himself consistently in so many cases and in the course of so many years as a supporter of the opportunist tendencies in the Communist International, as an opponent of drastic revolutionary action, as an opponent of Communist discipline, both nationally and internationally, and as inclined to put hopes in the parliamentary action of representatives of the Second International, then he must be named what he actually is—an opportunist and a centrist.

COLD STEEL DISPLAY IN BOSTON

By FREDERICK VOSE.

THE workers of Boston were favored with a display of cold steel in the form of rifles, bayonets, revolvers and machine guns. This display of ruling class force was in the form of the annual police parade—a yearly event calculated to chill to the heart any upward looking aspirations of the workers to better their miserable living conditions.

The dejected looking workers who viewed this display of master class militarism were made to see very plainly that the "cold steel" with which to cool off a "hot temper" should it develop during the coming economic depression, was not lacking in the armament of Boston's legalized strike breakers.

There were mounted cossacks, motorcycle police, machine gun crews in flivvers, companies with rapid fire (riot) guns, besides row after row of awkward looking, common or back alley variety cops.

The class conscious workers of Boston need no interpretation of such phenomena as the armed police parade but the workers of this city who as yet do not realize the class significance of such displays, should realize that they are intended as a sinister threat to the entire working class, from the class of parasites who at present are the rulers in this country, to be used in enforcing continued working class enslavement.

How One Should Not Write the History of October

of those revolutionaries who afterwards formed the kernel of the Communist Party.

Comrade Trotsky was most decidedly opposed to this slogan, which he considered as a narrow slogan, unsuited for mass propaganda. Is that perchance an "anticipation" of the Leninist standpoint?

2. Defeatism and the fight against it. The second distinguishing criterion of the Bolshevik attitude was the slogan that the revolutionary social democrats (we would now say Communists) must, in the imperialist war, before all desire the defeat of their own government. Comrade Trotsky characterized this attitude as an inverted nationalism, or nationalism with a minus sign. Now, however, the deep meaning of this Leninist attitude, whose roots form the chief source of the Bolshevist idea, is now perfectly clear. Yes, the chief source. One only needs to read, for example, the recently published polemic between Lenin and Plechanov over the draft program of the Russian social democratic labor party (Lenin's collected works No. 2) in order to perceive this. In this polemic with Plechanov, Lenin finds fault with the Plechanov draft on the ground that this is a text book and not a declaration of war; there we read about capitalism in general, whilst we require war against Russian capitalism—that is the essence of this polemic on the part of Lenin. Why did Lenin insist upon this? Precisely because he was a fighter and not a declaimer. The slogan of the defeat of one's own government was a declaration of war on every form of pacifism, even when it was hidden under the feather bed of noble phrases, on every one who advocated the defense of the fatherland, even when it was hidden under the cleverest mask. This was the most decided break. A real severance of all connections with one's own bourgeois state. It was precisely such an attitude which determined in reality, in actual practice, the international standpoint of Bolshevism. This was the second difference of principle between Trotsky and the Bolsheviki.

3. Unity with the menshevist fraction of Tcheidse. Even during the war Comrade Trotsky still advocated unity with such elements as the Tcheidse fraction, and he did not have the courage to declare for a definite organizatory break which was the necessary preliminary to a correct policy. It was not without reason that Lenin greatly feared that many comrades would be misled by Trotskyism. It is interesting to note that Trotsky, even in May, 1917, did not perceive his earlier errors. Thus we read on page 350 of the book in question:

"On the 7th of May, 1917, there was opened the city conference of the United Social Democrats (Bolsheviki and Internationalists). The conference greeted Comrade Trotsky who was present as a guest. In reply to this greeting Comrade Trotsky declared that for him, who always stood for the unity of the social democratic forces (heavy type by the "Pravda") unity is not an end in itself, that this formula must be given a revolutionary content, etc. (Page 350)

From this it is perfectly clear that Comrade Trotsky does not only not condemn his fight for the unity of the liquidators, but makes this tremendous fatal error almost the basis, so to speak, of unity with the Bolsheviki, this time fortunately being prepared to give the formula a revolutionary content.

Unfortunately the same faulty estimation of his own mistakes in the organizatory question is also observed at present, (it was clearly revealed by Comrade Trotsky in the last year's discussion). Comrade Trotsky justifies himself with regard to the accusations on the part of "some one of the deep thinking sextons of the type of Comrade Ssorin" on account of his fight against the Bolshevist sectarianism, by a more than strange method.

"My objection to the article was the following: sectarianism still exists as a heritage of the past. But in order to reduce it the 'Meshrajonny' must cease their separate existence." (Page 66)*

Comrade Trotsky already therefore, when he advocated uniting with the Bolsheviki, condemned Bolshevist sectarianism as a bad inheritance of the wicked past.

But do we repudiate this heritage? Not in the least, for this so-called sectarianism was, as a matter of fact the method of the creation of o party, that is the organizatory bi principle of Bolshevism. And when Comrade Trotsky writes on Page 6. of his "preface": That he has recognized his "great organizatory" n takes, and on page 66 justifies the charge of sectarianism directed against pre-revolutionary Bolshevism, this means that he has not yet drawn all the consequences and all the teachings from the history of our party. He can, however, not do this if he considers the birthday of the party to be the day of its union with the "Meshrajonny," or even the glorious October days, in which Comrade Trotsky, not without birth pangs, was himself born a Bolshevik.

4. Fight against the Zimmerwald left. Finally, there must be mentioned the attitude of Comrade Trotsky o a "world scale." Comrade Trotsky who conducted the fight against chauvinists, social patriots, etc., was scornful towards the Zimmerwald left. H regarded them likewise as sectarians as a Bolshevist whim, quite unadapted for the conditions abroad. Already in America, where, as Comrade L ner assures us, Comrade Trotsky anticipated the latter standpoint of Comrade Lenin, he conducted an active fight against solidarizing with the Zimmerwald left. Trotsky could not approve this "split" from the Zimmerwald centrists. The comrades who were entrusted with the editing of "1917" did not take any trouble to illuminate for the international proletariat this part of our party's history, which is quite as important for the international as the question of civil war, of defeatism, etc.; for here there is no less at stake than the choice between the Second and the Third International.

5. The conception of "permanent" revolution. Comrade Trotsky has, as is proved, not only "anticipated" Lenin's later standpoint, but he proved himself to be right in one of the most essential points of our revolutionary theory and at the same time of our revolutionary strategy, and that is, in the question of "permanent" revolution. Comrade Trotsky writes concerning this as follows:

"Lenin, immediately before 1905, gave expression to the unique character of the Russian revolution in the formula of the democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry. This formula, as the later development showed, could merely be of importance, as a stage to the socialist dictatorship of the proletariat, supported by the peasantry." (Page 17.)

What can be the meaning of that? In 1905 there was a fight of the Bolsheviki, who issued the slogan "dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry," on the one hand and the Trotsky-Parvus group, whose slogan was "Down with the czar and up with a labor government!" on the other hand and finally with the Poles, at the head of whom stood Rosa Luxemberg, who issued the formula: "the proletariat supported by the peasantry."

Whose standpoint proved to be correct?

Comrade Trotsky evades giving a definite and detailed reply to this question. Indirectly, however, he finds the correctness of his formula confirmed: The formula of Lenin could "merely" be a stage to the formula of Trotsky. But to say that the standpoint of Trotsky proved to be correct is false. It proved to be incorrect, and the further development has proved its incorrectness. The peculiarity of Comrade Trotsky's attitude consists precisely in the fact that he wished to skip a stage which could not be skipped. (He forgot one trifle, the peasantry.)

"It is not sufficient to be a revolutionary and a follower of socialism or a Communist in general" wrote Comrade Lenin. "One must understand how to find at any moment the particular link in the chain which one must seize with all his force in order to hold the entire chain and to prepare a sure transition to the following link." (Collected works Volume 15, Page 223.)

It is precisely this which the slogan of Comrade Trotsky failed to give. He has "disregarded" that special link of the chain which should have been grasped with all force, he has underestimated the role of the peasantry and thereby practically isolated himself from the workers.

"Magnificent, catching, intoxicating slogans, which have no basis—that is the nature of the revolutionary phrase." (Lenin 15. Page 100.)

It does not follow from the fact that after many years, and after we have passed over a certain stage, the socialist revolution has set in, that Comrade Trotsky is right. Such an assertion would contradict the facts and would be based upon a misunderstanding of the nature of the tactics of Bolshevism, of its, if one may so say, political methodology which unites a persistent march forward to the great aim with an austere soberness, which rejects all prejudices and all superficiality in its estimate of every concrete situation. Here also Comrade Trotsky is in the wrong. Here also his book entirely misleads the reader. Not to mention the fact that Comrade Trotsky remains silent as to how his "permanent" ultra-left phrase was wedded to an extremely right policy and a bitter struggle against the Bolshevik Party.

IV.

The Lessons of October and the Communist International.

One of the practical foundations upon which the "Preface" of Trotsky is based is the endeavor, to put it mildly, to "dispute" the policy of the E. C. C. I. He sets out to take revenge for the discussion he lost in 1923 and thereby to oppose, not only the line of the C. C., but also the policy of the Comintern as a whole. For this purpose he has distorted the meaning of the most important epochs of the class struggle of the proletariat in Germany and in Bulgaria. In this he hints that the mistakes of several comrades in 1917 caused the failure of the Communists in Germany and in Bulgaria in 1923. The structure of this idea is very simple when we strip off the husk of words. XYZ erred in the Russian October, XYZ now leads the Communist International. The Comintern has lost the battles, a, b, c. It follows that XYZ are responsible for this, as they are carrying on their traditions of the Russian October. Briefly stated, that is the meaning of the long effusion.

The frame of this completely ridiculous syllogism has a concrete content. It is therefore necessary critically to illuminate this content, whereupon the whole complicated construction of Comrade Trotsky will collapse.

Point 1. Bulgaria.

Comrade Trotsky writes:

"In the past year we had two severe defeats in Bulgaria. First the party, owing to doctrinaire and fatalistic considerations, missed a most extraordinary favorable moment for revolutionary action (the peasants' revolt after the Zankov putsch). Afterwards the party, in order to make good its mistakes, plunged into the September revolt without having prepared the political and organizatory pre-conditions therefor." (Page XII.)

As the reader will easily see, the reason for the defeat is here considered to be, first menshevik fatalism, and secondly unlimited optimism (no preparation, etc.). These two features are also mentioned in characterizing the types of October opportunism. The connection between the Russian October and the present Comintern leadership is therefore completely set up.

Let us, however, examine the facts a little more closely. The first defeat was the result of the fact that the Bulgarian party had dealt with the peasantry quite incorrectly, and did not know how to estimate their movement or the role of the peasants' league as a whole, or its left wing. They rather adopted the standpoint: "Down with the king, up with a workers' government." At the decisive moment, when it was necessary to take the leadership into their hands and to mount up on the crest of a powerful possants' wave, the party declared itself neutral, claiming that the fight was between the town and the rural bourgeoisie, which was no concern of the proletariat. These were the "considerations" of the C. P. of Bulgaria. They have been committed to writing, and can be now proved by documents. If we wish to have an analogy with our October (we should, by the way, be more cautious with analogies), it would be much more apt to take the Kornilov days (Kerensky-Stambuliski, Kornilov-Zankov). Here, according to the statement of Comrade Trotsky himself, too much support was given to Kerensky, and the distinction between the fight against Kornilov and the defense of Kerensky was not understood. In Bulgaria, however, the exact opposite error was committed.

Wherein therefore lie the "Lessons of October"?

Apart from this, the comrades who are at present members of the E. C. C. I. adopted during the Kornilov days a thoroly correct attitude, and the whole E. C. C. I. exercised a thoroly correct criticism of the C. P. of Bulgaria and urged them on.

The second defeat in Bulgaria is a fact, and Comrade Trotsky describes the conditions under which it took place. Will you be so good, Comrade Trotsky, to say, whether in this case you support the old formula of Plechanov during the time of the menchevist decay: "One should not have taken up arms"? Was it necessary or not for the Bulgarian Communists to take up arms?

Yes or no?

Comrade Trotsky does not reply to this. According to our opinion, it was necessary to take up arms, as only by this means was it possible to maintain contact with the peasantry who were entering the struggle with elementary force. But there was no time for preparation. That is the true picture of the events. The "Lessons" of Comrade Trotsky have nothing in the least to do with it.

Point 2. Germany.

Still more interesting is the question of the defeat of the German proletariat in October last year.

"We have seen there in the second half of the past year a classical (heavy type by the "Pravda") demonstration of the fact that a most extraordinary favorable revolutionary situation of world historical importance can be missed."

According to the opinion of Comrade Trotsky therefore, the failure here consisted in the fact that a "classical" moment was missed. It was necessary at all costs to take up the decisive struggle and the victory would have been ours. Here Comrade Trotsky draws a complete analogy with the October revolution in Russia. There as here, we were pushed forward. In Russia, under the pressure of Lenin, we decided upon action and were victorious—in Germany, without the pressure of Lenin, no decision was made and the appropriate moment was lost. Now, however, under the influence of the Russian October revolution it is declared that the forces for the decisive struggle were not sufficient. That is the meaning

*This refers to the so-called "Meshrajonsky," who existed side by side with the Bolsheviki and at this time stood for unity with the "left" menscheviki. After the July days they, along with Comrade Trotsky, joined the Bolshevist party.

How One Should Not Write the History of October

of the "German events" according to Comrade Trotsky.

But here we have before us mere schematizing and grey abstraction. Comrade Trotsky elaborates how history would have been written if the opponents of the revolt had been in the majority in the Russian C. C.; it would then have been said that the forces were too limited, that the enemy was fearfully strong, etc.

All this is only outwardly convincing; yes, it is probable that history would have been written in this manner. But that is in no way a proof that the forces of the German revolution in October, 1923, were not overestimated.

It is false to say, the moment was a "classical" one. For the social democrats proved themselves to be far stronger than we thought. An analogy with the Russian October is quite out of place here. In Germany there were no armed soldiers who were for the revolution. We could not issue the slogan of peace. There was no peasant agrarian movement. There was no such party as ours. But apart from all that it proved that social democracy has not yet outlived itself. These concrete facts had therefore to be dealt with. At the time of the decisive events the E. C. C. I. declared itself in favor of the October policy. Now as, owing to the objective conditions this suffered a defeat, and as, thanks to the right leaders, this defeat was "greater than necessary," Comrade Trotsky, who has in fact always supported the right opportunist wing which is inclined to capitulation and opposed the left, now gives a "profound" theoretical basis of his conception, and thereby launches a blow against the leading circles of the Comintern. Such lessons must not be drawn either from the Russian or the German October.

It is also quite inadmissable to cling to many errors to which Comrade Trotsky still clings.

One of the lessons, (the actual lessons) of the German October is, that before action the most far-reaching mobilization of the masses is necessary. This work has been greatly neglected. In Hamburg, for example, during the revolt there were no councils and our party organization was not capable of drawing the ten thousands of strikers into the struggle. Thruout the whole of Germany there were no Soviets; according to Comrade Trotsky's opinion that was right, as the Soviets were substituted by the factory councils. As a matter of fact, these factory councils could not replace the Soviets, as they did not comprise the whole population, including the most backward and indifferent, as the Soviets do in the critical and tense moments of the class struggle.

The book of Comrade Trotsky calls for a study of October. This slogan does not contain anything new. It is appropriate for the members of our party as well as for our foreign comrades. Comrade Trotsky's book, or to be more correct, his preface, claims to be a guide in this study. To this we must say, in the most definite manner: it cannot fulfill this role. It will, however, mislead the comrades, who, behind the exterior fine style, will not observe the complete lack of proportion, the distortion of the true party history. That is no mirror of the party but a caricature.

The publication of this "caricature" is by no means a chance event. After what we have said above it is not difficult to perceive to what the conclusions indicated by Comrade Trotsky lead.

In fact, if, as Comrade Trotsky falsely states, in October, 1917, something correct could be carried thru only against the C. C. is it not possible that such a situation may arise again? What guarantee is there that the leadership will be the right one? And whether it is correct at the present time? The sole "test" is October, 1917. Can one trust those who have not stood this test? And did not the Comintern suffer a defeat in Bulgaria and in Germany in consequence of these leaders? Is it not necessary to study the October in such a way that just these problems are more closely investigated?

That is the essence of those problems which Comrade Trotsky, after the failure of his frontal attack in the past year, brings forward for the attention of his readers. Comrade Trotsky can, however, be quite convinced that the party will understand how to judge rightly and in good time this quiet undermining work. The party wants work and no fresh discussion. The party desires true Bolshevist unity.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

COAL MINER KORT

Revolutionary drama in four acts by A. Chunin.

(Review)

By M. A. SKROMNY.

ALONG with political and economic advancement the Soviet Republic is also advancing in art and literature. It is true, the new art and literature of Russia is devoted mostly to the working class. But this is just what the world needs most today. Too much art has been devoted to satisfying the ruling class, to the sex question and other questionable things. The working class, more than any other class has been lacking attention from the artists and writers of today. The reason—there wasn't much money in it. Nowadays art and literature is in most cases the handmaid of capitalism. It is for sale to the highest bidder. And the working class did not have the price.

In Russia it is different. There along side with the new life they are creating new art and new literature.

Among the new plays produced in Russia during the revolution is that of "Coalminer Kort." It is a story of the class struggle with a thrill in it, as the story runs thru the civil war that raged in Russia until 1920.

The story begins in 1917, in a coal mining village of the Ural mountains. The owners of the mine want to raise the price of coal and for that purpose they cut down production, as many of the coal operators in this country are doing. Many people are thrown out of work and an attempt is made to cut down the wages of those who are working. The miners are forced to defend themselves. They present their demands to the manager. He flatly refuses to deal with them and telephones for a company of soldiers. He receives some bad news over the wire and hangs up the receiver with disgust. The October days are here and soldiers can no more be used for shooting strikers. The civil war begins. The "whites" capture the village. The old management with the aid of "white" officers are avenging themselves. The parents and families of the strike leaders are being subjected to insults and attacks. All the young people of the village are gone. They organized a partisan detachment and are fighting the "whites." Finally they recapture the village, but Kort's son is killed while leading his men. The workers take over the management of the mines and Kort, as the most experienced miner, is elected manager. He starts work on a new strip mine which the old management refused to exploit. That helps the workers a great deal. The workers' and peasants' government awards him the badge of the order of Red labor.

The play will be presented at the Soviet School, 1902 W. Division St. next Saturday, Dec. 27, at 8 p. m. under the direction of the well-known Russian actor, Anatoly Pokatilov and with the participation of Aza Namgova, an actress of the Moscow Meyerchold theater. The scenery for the mine scenes is being painted by Lydia Gibson.

AZA NAMGOVA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

JOSEPH BRINKMAN, a young local pianist, was soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at Orchestra Hall. The Society of American Musicians has, in the past two years, put on two contests for young musicians. Recently a sub-contest of the winners of the first and second prizes occurred, and Brinkman was chosen from the four to play as soloist in this concert.

He played the Liszt Hungarian fantasia for piano and orchestra. (We recently made the statement that this work is the first Liszt concerto under another name, an error produced by a lamentable confusion of two tunes.) This fantasia is practically an arrangement of the fourteenth Hungarian rhapsody, and, like the world famous and ever played second rhapsody, starts with a slow movement and ends up in a whirlwind, with a peculiar, wild Magyar flavor thruout. To say that Brinkman played it brilliantly would be putting it mildly. He got one of the longest ovation we have ever witnessed, and deserved all of it. He is a young man, and now his reputation is made. Which proves that contests do a lot more good than is popularly supposed.

Two French compositions opened the program, the overture to "Gwendoline" by Emmanuel Chabrier and Vincent D'Indy's second symphony. Like the "Bouree Fantasque" and the "Joyeuse Marche" that Mr. Stock so frequently plays, the Chabrier work is one bubbling over with liveliness and good spirits. It should be played oftener.

D'Indy's symphony is a work of a different sort. It consists of some exceptionally beautiful and moving themes worked out to a great length with every conveivable device in musical science. But, unlike the symphonies of Brahms, to which it might be compared, it never gets dull and pedantic. The performance of it was superb.

The program concluded with a suite of dances from Stravinski's early ballet, "The Fire Bird." In a way this music is disappointing. Compared with the same author's "Song of the Nightingale," it is conventional and rather stale. But coupled with the fairy tale ballet for which it was written it probably is quite appropriate.

Two years ago the name of Igor Stravinski meant next to nothing in these parts. Within the last year Mr. Stock has played three of the composer's four major works. First there was "The Song of the Nightingale," then "The Rites of Spring," played quite recently, and then this repetition of "The Fire Bird." There remains only "Petruchka" to be played, but "Le Sacre du Printempe" is said to be the masterpiece of this most important composer of the day.

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

SENATOR JAMES A. REED of Missouri evidently likes good liquor. And it is just as obvious that he has not been getting the kind he likes from his druggists. During a hearing before the senate committee on judiciary last Thursday, Mr. J. M. Doran, of the prohibition unit, informed the senator that he could get good liquor at drug stores. The senator retorted: "Your experience does not coincide with mine."

THE Freeman's Journal of Dublin, Ireland, issued its last edition last Friday. The paper was started 161 years ago by the United Irishmen, a revolutionary body. It supported the nationalist cause ever since, but rejected the physical force policy for the constitutional policies of the Home Rulers. It was a bitter enemy of the Easter revolution led by the Commandant James Connolly and just as bitter against the republican party during the civil war of 1922. Its passing will cause no mourning in the ranks of the Irish working class of which it was an implacable foe.

HOW people continue to be wicked for the sake of money despite all the highly paid preachers and religious institutions must be a source of perpetual worry to pious people. Of course, most of the preachers are busy trying to dodge the gallows for murder, and jail for lesser crimes such as rape and seduction. Yet there are plenty of them at large; too many to suit us. Still crime flourishes. The latest juicy bit of scandal involves the famous Irish lawyer, John McCormick. A group of blackmailing Boston lawyers of which the late Joseph Pelletier was a leader, framed up several wealthy men who were easily drawn into temptation. Pelletier was Grand Advocate for the Knights of Columbus as well as attorney for Suffolk county, Mass.

JOHN McCORMICK was passing thru the lobby of the Copley Plaza hotel one night, when a young woman of pleasing personal appearance fell on the ground and expressed the opinion that her foot was injured. The chivalrous singer carried her to her room. Thereupon she immediately asked her escort and McCormick found himself confronted with a female dressed so slightly that he shivered. The lady screamed violently. The inevitable and furious husband appeared as if by magic in answer to the scream and impressed upon Mr. McCormick the fact that his husbandly feelings were so wounded that it would require a hundred thousand dollars worth of vaseline to relieve the irritation. John signed the check.

BUT the ways of the evildoers are hard. Virtue is finally rewarded also capitalist civilization would be in a bad way. Pelletier died. Some say because the other blackmailers held out on him and his heart became affected. Others say that God killed him for his sins. You can take your choice. People who argue that religion is a crime deterrent can ponder over this little story. Everybody involved in it, the victims and the victimized, were religious. And most of them were catholics.

IN securing William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, as president of the American Federation of Labor to succeed Samuel Gompers, the American capitalists can consider themselves lucky. Green is a smooth and willing tool of the plunderbund. He is one of the most unscrupulous reactionaries among the old labor fakers. A very effective speaker at conventions, Green has been used as the pinch hitter against the radicals because of his ability to use radical phraseology while supporting the most reactionary propositions. But (despite Green's suavity, it is not likely that he will succeed as well as Gompers in keeping the rival A. F. of L. chieftains from going into each other's whiskers.

WITH Green occupied with the business of running the federation, speculation as to who shall succeed to his office in the U. M. W. A. places Thomas Kennedy, president of District 7, high among the eligibles. It was reported that John L. Lewis was to be rewarded for his services to the Coolidge machine during the elections by the post of secretary of labor. There is another plum which is more desirable from the money making point-of-view, than even the labor post in Coolidge's cabinet. That is the presidency of the Pan-American federation. There is untold untapped wealth in South America and it is essential for American capitalism that South American labor should be drugged into the proper degree of subservicncy. The man who can fill the position as well as Gompers did, can demand his weight in gold and get it.

CHICAGO LOCAL DAILY WORKER DRIVE OPENED

Thurber Lewis Is City Campaign Manager

"There are many excuses for a member of the Workers Party not selling a subscription to the DAILY WORKER, but there are no excuses for any party member not TRYING to sell one," said Moritz J. Loeb at a rousing meeting of DAILY WORKER branch agents last Friday at 166 W. Washington St.

Comrade Loeb's speech was the first gun fired in a city-wide campaign for which the whole Workers Party is to be mobilized.

Walt Carmon, circulation manager of the Daily, said: "The goal of five thousand new subscribers that has been set in this campaign is no goal at all. It's a dead cinch."

Most of the discussion of the agents was devoted to pointing out the value of the Daily to the movement and to the necessity of breaking down the mental attitude that has led many comrades to believe themselves incapable of selling subs.

Material Prepared.

Special sub folders containing five one dollar sub-cards of two months' duration have been prepared for the Chicago campaign. These were passed on to the agents for immediate distribution to the members in their charge.

Valuable prizes are being offered to the party branches or Y. W. L. areas leading in the drive. In view of the party city central committee's efforts to arouse interest in branch and city party libraries, the prizes offered are in the nature of circulating libraries of various sizes for first, second and third place. Due to the disproportionate sizes of branches the prizes will be awarded on a percentage basis according to the number of members in the branch or area. The exact nature of the prizes will be announced in a few days.

Thurber Lewis, city manger of the Daily, is in charge of the drive. His office is in Room 307, 166 W. Washington street.

BRITISH UNION DELEGATES MAKE REPORT ON RUSS

Even Conservative Leaders Enthused

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The large delegation of fraternal delegates from the British Trade Union congress to the convention of the All-Russian council of Trade Unions, which has just ended at Moscow, has returned with enthusiastic reports as to the conditions of labor and its organizations under the Soviet regime.

This is disturbing to the tories, considering the fact that most of those going to Russia have been noted for their conservative and even near-reactionary views in the British labor movement. Now, much to the astonishment of the British capitalists, these old guard leaders of the staid British unions are talking somewhat like Bolsheviks.

Amsterdamer Praises Russia.

A. Purcell, who is also president of the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, the outstanding reformist opponent of the Red International of Labor Unions heretofore, openly praises the Soviet government and the accomplishments of the Russian industrial unions in the whole range of activity in Russian life. Others, such as Bromley, Ben Tillet, Bramley and Smith are equally enthused.

The capitalist press is viciously attacking the delegation, accusing it of being on a "junket" and of having been bribed by the Bolsheviks. The rank and file of union men are, however, receiving the news of the great industrial, social and political progress in Russia quite joyfully.

May Not Yield to A. F. of L.

It is thought that the British unions will not yield to the efforts made by the American Federation of Labor to exclude the Russian unions from admission to Amsterdam in order to get the adherence of the A. F. of L. They have seen that the Russian unions are genuinely fighting organizations and that they grew from 7,500,000 to 6,400,000 while the A. F. of L. was losing at least a million members.

GOOD FIGHT IN AMALGAMATED SIGNAL FOR BIGGER VICTORIES

By PHIL ARONBERG and TOM BELL.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers officialdom and their slugging tactics accomplished nothing in the recent local clothing workers election except to solidify the Trade Union Educational League elements and to organize an opposition to their terrorist tactics that made the strong arm squad of the bureaucrats hunt their holes.

Wednesday morning the slugging squad of the administration went into action and beat up five left wingers. Thursday morning they went out of action because the militants, incensed by the assaults on men and women of the left wing who were distributing the left wing literature, organized and put a stop to it. From 50 to 75 left wingers watched the polls Thursday and Friday.

We think that the left wing in the Amalgamated and the Trade Union Educational League group in Chicago are to be congratulated on the way they responded as soon as they knew what had to be done and we believe that the reactionary Hillman-Levin machine has been taught a salutary lesson.

The left wing ticket will poll between 3000 and 5000 votes as a result of the interest that was aroused by the attacks of the machine and the manner in which the left wingers organized to meet and beat them at their own game.

There is a new spirit noticeable in all the Trade Union Educational League groups as a result of the good fight put up in the Amalgamated election. The lines are clearly drawn and workers that have hitherto held aloof from the active work of the League are now expressing their sympathy and desire to help as evidenced by the request of a number of shops for protection by the left wingers against the intimidation of the machine sluggers during the election.

Let us now consolidate our gains and go forward to real struggles and real victories.

A Juicy Morsel for Capitalism.

JOHNSTON CITY MINERS DEFEAT LEWIS MACHINE

Farrington's Gang is Doing a Little Better

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JOHNSTON CITY, Ill., Dec. 21.—The incomplete figures from the elections here indicate a complete sweep for the progressive ticket in the voting for international officers, but a neck and neck race for district officers.

John L. Lewis polled only 242 votes against 430 for George Voyzey, progressive. Arley Staples polled 442 against 292 for Philip Murray, Lewis man. Joseph Nearing polled 240 to 282 for Green.

For district president, Farrington polled 238 against 236 for Hindmarsh; Fishwick, 283 against 203 for Hewlett; Conturiaux, 178 to 273 for Walter Nesbit. The voting for district officers in this town shows a gain for the Farrington machine, while the Lewis administration was overwhelmingly defeated.

The old age pension plan was favored by a two to one vote.

A Correction.

In a recent story on the elections in the Pittsburgh district of the United Mine Workers of America, Hargest, nominee for secretary-treasurer against the administration candidate, was referred to as a progressive. Hargest was not endorsed by the progressive miners. The progressive candidate for secretary-treasurer was ruled off the ballot at the last moment by the fakers' machine.

TEN COMMUNISTS MURDERED BY WHITE GUARD ESTHONIANS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

REVAL, Dec. 21.—Ten Communists who were alleged to have participated in the recent uprising in which a cabinet member was shot, were sentenced to death here yesterday after a shamefully perfunctory trial in which no evidence was brot really proving anything against the accused. They were ordered executed immediately.

Three Communists, arrested on a flimsy charge of having something to do with a fire in the railway building, are probably doomed in advance of the so-called trial the Esthonian white guards stage to cover their murder of workers with legality.

Doheny Tries to Get Grip on Mexicans by Advance Tax Payments

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 21.—New light has been shed on the manipulations of E. Doheny, of Teapot Dome oil fame, whereby he seeks to gain control over the Mexican government, in a recent bulletin issued by the ministry. The bulletin reveals that Doheny made an advance of over $3,000,000 to the Mexican government on taxes which were not yet due from the Huasteca Petroleum company, a Doheny-owned oil concern.

"An agreement has been signed under which the Huasteca Petroleum company has advanced to the federal government the sum of 6,000,000 pesos on account of taxes payable on the petroleum production by the company," says the bulletin.

ALBANIAN REBELS CONTINUE MARCH ON CAPITAL CITY

BELGRADE, Dec. 21.—The Albanian rebels continued their sweeping victories today in eastern Albania and extended the zone of their successes to the south, according to dispatches received here.

Scutari, ancient capital of the country, was besieged, the advices stated, with the federal forces driven from all strategic points except an old citadel overlooking the city.

Forces under Tsama Bey, one of the rebel leaders were operating in three directions, and reinforced by the troops of Ahmed Bey, were closing in on Tirana, the capital city.

LONDON, England, Dec. 21.—More than $250,000,000 in arms and ammunition has been shipped from one European country to another in the period from the signing of the armistice until the beginning of 1923, the traffic commission of the league of nations has found.

BRITISH NOTE REVEALS HUGHES' SECRET DEALING

Tried to Hush Up Gun Elevation Note

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The mantle of secrecy that has enveloped the entire question of gun elevation in the American and British navies is expected to be torn aside within the next few days as a result of Great Britain's sending a note to the United States on the subject.

The White House "spilled the beans" on the question of the note at a time when Secretary of State Hughes, chief keeper of the secret was momentarily out of Washington. Reports announced several months ago that such a note was in existence and had actually been received by the state department, but Secretary Hughes has always declined to comment on it, neither denying or affirming, following his usual policy of secret diplomacy.

The British communication, it is understood, makes mention of the fact that gun elevation was not mentioned or discussed in any manner at the Washington conference and, as since then there has been considerable discussion of the subject the proposal is put forward that before any actual elevation is undertaken the powers interested should discuss the question diplomatically. It is not expected that a conference will be called at it could be discussed secretly and settled secretly thru diplomatic channels by capitalist statesmen.

MUSSOLINI IS FORCED TO CALL NEW ELECTIONS IN MARCH AS HIS SUPPORTERS CRY 'COWARD!'

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Dec. 21.—Benito Mussolini, fascist dictator, is finding it increasingly difficult to hold his fascisti deputies together.

When Mussolini introduced a surprise bill in the chamber Saturday, modifying the election laws, giving full freedom to all political parties, his deputies, stunned into silence for a few minutes, broke out with cries of "Traitor," "Coward," "We will shoot you." Mussolini immediately after introducing the bill left the chamber amid wild confusion.

The opposition deputies were elated at the fact that Mussolini has been forced to call for an early election in March.

Mussolini has made this concession to the growing strength of the opposition and the growing rebellion against him within his own ranks. Mussolini declared, "I wish the committees of the chamber to be convoked January 3 and that the chamber the same afternoon resume its work."

Accept Giunta's Resignation.

Mussolini was forced to instruct his fascist deputies to accept the resignation of Vice-Speaker Giunta, because the opposition leaders, including Giolitti, Orlando and Salandra, had left the hall with their followers, and refused to return to the chamber until the fascist deputies voted for acceptance of Giunta's resignation. Giunta has been charged with attempting to take the life of an opposition deputy.

In spite of the fact that deputies, Torre, Volpe, Farinacci, and Buronzo, fascist leaders, voted for the acceptance of Giunta's resignation when presented for the second time, Michele Bianchi, private secretary to Mussolini, tried to break fascist discipline and vote against accepting the resignation. The fascist delegates raised the cry of "You are breaking discipline," against Bianchi, and he replied, "I am disciplined. I have swallowed many bitter pills for Mussolini; I shall also swallow this one." He then changed his vote.

Fascisti Terrorize Strikers.

The boss of the Carrara marble mines, where a strike is in progress, has hired fascisti to terrorize the strikers.

In Brescia, the court convicted eight fascisti who were found guilty of beating six workers. Angelo De Perdino, who was a witness against the fascisti was captured when leaving the courtroom and taken to the fascisti headquarters, where he was terribly beaten. De Perdine is now dying.

WORKERS PARTY, DISTRICT 8, TAKES LEAD IN ORGANIZING COUNCILS OF UNEMPLOYED IN SOUTH ILLINOIS

Another drop in production of the Illinois coal fields during the month of November as against the previous month has increased the formerly heavy unemployment prevailing amongst the union coal miners. Recently the old North mine at Christopher, Illinois, shut down throwing an additional 500 men on the streets.

Intimations have been made that either the old East mine at Christopher or the Ben mine at Buckner, Ill., will also soon close. Rumors are current that a general shut down will take place after February.

Jobless Army Grows.

Franklin and Williamson counties are particularly hard hit by this ever-growing unemployment. Coal mining is about the only industry in that territory. Many miners left their homes months ago to seek employment elsewhere, others had to stay and tighten the belt. As industries are closing down in other places, those who left can be expected to return, adding their numbers to the industrial reserve army.

The miners all over the state have made demands upon their officials that some action be taken to relieve the situation. Numerous resolutions on this matter were submitted to the last state federation of labor convention, which in turn, referred them back to the miners officials. Local unions have demanded, under the heavy pressure of the dismal situation, that the Illinois district officials take the initiative to call a state-wide conference to take up this question. The officials have never made an effort to move, being too preoccupied with perpetuating themselves in power by hook or crook.

Conference Called.

Now the rank and file miners, under the leadership of members of the Workers Party, are taking active steps to handle the situation. A conference has been called for Sunday, December 28, at the French club hall, Christopher, Ill. Delegates will be present from most of the coal mining camps in the two counties. The agenda calls for active measures to counteract the growing unemployment and steps to organize the unemployed coal miners to make their demands effective.

FIMMEN TELLS DUTCH WORKERS RUSSIAN LABOR IS ENTHUSIASTICALLY AT WORK—BUT NOT FOR PROFITS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 21.—The Amsterdam Tribune publishes an interview with Edo Fimmen who has just returned from a trip to Russia. Fimmen was for many years secretary of the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions.

In this interview Fimmen states: "I want to make clear that I made this journey at my own expense, without any support, financial or otherwise, from the Russian government.

"I wen freely over the whole city of Moscow and spoke openly and freely with the citizens. I visited three prisons, of my own selection, and without any possibility of their being apprized beforehand of my coming. I was permitted to go into all the rooms —they are not cells—and speak openly with all the prisoners. I was also allowed to visit all the factories I wished, all the children's homes, and all the barracks. I obtained the conviction that the security and permanence of the Soviet regime does not depend upon bayonets, but upon the support the government receives from the great majority of the workers.

"I would not say that Communism prevails as yet in Russia. But they do have the dictatorship of the proletariat. The working class has taken its fate into its own hands. The economic situation is slowly but surely improving. What especially impressed me was the enthusiasm of the workers for their work. They realize that they are producing for human consumption and not for profits.

"The great fact is that—in Russia the workers have the power."

HUTCHESON WARS ON CARPENTERS IN DETROIT, MICH.

They Voted Against Him in the Election

By ANDREW OVERGAARD.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 21.—William Hutcheson, president of the Carpenters' and Joiners' International Union, is evidently determined to rule or ruin the locals that refuse to deliver the votes to him. Hutcheson is now warring on the Detroit carpenters' unions.

The Jewish carpenters' local union, No. 1191, the strongest local in Detroit, gave Rosen 118 votes and Hutcheson 2. The reactionary officialdom is now demanding that the local turn over its books to the national organization, which is about the same as revocation of the charter.

Hutcheson has recently discharged all the local organizers and seems determined to wreck the strongest locals in Detroit. Detroit is an open shop town and these disruptive tactics seem to be his conception of fighting the open shop in Detroit.

Hat Makers Strike in Jersey.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 21.—Union hatmakers of the firm of C. B. Dunton & Co. are on strike because of the company's change in manufacturing policy. Workers insist that the company continue under its agreement in the manufacture of hats.

ANTHRACITE MINERS RENEW THEIR DEMAND FOR A SPECIAL CONVENTION; CAPPELLINI REFUSES

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 21.—A new demand for a district convention is to be made on the district officials and particularly on President Cappellini by the anthracite miners here in accord with a section of the constitution which provides that "special conventions of the district shall be called by the president upon the written request of five local unions, who shall state the object of the convention in their request."

This is the latest development in this field where the miners are fighting the Lewis-Cappellini machine in an effort to get dozens of long standing grievances adjusted and where ten charters have been revoked in order to drive the men back to work at the operators' terms.

After a comparative quiet for a few days, due to the exit of the Lewis commission, first to confer with John L. Lewis at Washington and then to see that their ex-czar, Gompers, was safely tucked under the soil at Sleepy Hollow, N. Y., the general grievance committee of the Pittston miners went into session again yesterday.

This time however, it was not to report any "progress" towards the satisfactory settlement of their strike, but it was to take inventory of things affecting their welfare. First, it was found that Cappellini failed to appear, altho he had been invited to do so and this was interpreted to mean, that he meant what he said recently, "that he was thru dealing with general grievance committees."

Aroused at Cappellini.

This failure to appear before them is resented very bitterly by the strikers, for it is got many moons since they learned from Cappellini that such general bodies were a power for good, in fact were reported by him, "as the only medium thru which the anthracite miners could secure justice." That belief though, only remained with Cappellini during the hectic days that he was seeking power, when he used these bodies as a stepping stone to his goal. As soon as he reached that goal, as is well known, he betrayed the rank and file and made his peace with Lewis, but the inevitable has now arrived and his "finis" is but a matter of a short time.

The commission of international board members, who had spent two weeks in this section trying to induce the strikers to return to their jobs evidently had used up the first box of tricks without success, so they paid a visit to Washington, D. C., the place where Lewis spends much of his time and there, conferred with that tyrant as to what next "best steps" they should take in the strike situation.

Strikers to Publish Violations.

They have not returned at the time of this writing, evidently deeming it better to go to the Gompers' obsequies in New York than to concern themselves with the welfare of the striking miners. It is generally expected that they will carry a new bag full of tricks when they return.

That this belief is held, is evidenced by the action of the strikers' committee, in declaring that they will soon publish a complete list of their many grievances as a means of winning "public" support.

They also intend to send speakers to the various locals in the district asking for their moral support, so, whatever is done by the Lewis commission on its return, will have to be accomplished thru positive assurance to the men, that victory will crown their efforts.

Renew Convention Demand.

The district constitution provides that "Special conventions of the district shall be called by the president upon the written request of five local unions, which shall state the object of the convention in their request." This section of the constitution, article 7 section 2, does not give the district president power to determine whether or not he shall call a convention.

Cappellini has announced that he will make no further overtures to the strikers, saying that he made his previous offer in good faith, but that it was turned down. A district board meeting is called for today, but what the outcome will be is hard to determine, for even the board members assembling for Cappellini, they evidently seeing his coming fall.

A meeting of the general grievance committee of the Lehigh Valley miners is also called for tonight, when action will be taken to find out the cause for the delay in assembling a special convention, in compliance with the demand recently made. They are also to consider ways and means of how they can best help the Pennsylvania strikers.

Workers Party Holds Meeting.

Cappellini and Lewis were roundly scored by the writer and organizer, Bernardini of the Italian Federation of the Workers Party, at a meeting at Old Forge hand last night. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Old Forge branch (Italian) of the W. P., and was largely attended by strikers.

Voyzey Leads Lewis in Partial Report From Dowell, Ill.

DOWELL, Ill., Dec. 21.—Incomplete returns from the elections in local No. 3703, show the progressives running a neck and neck race with the reactionaries and in the case of Arley Staples, progressive candidate for vice-president, running away ahead of his opponent, Philip Murray.

The partial returns are as follows: George Voyzey, 386; Lewis, 381; Arley Staples, 356; Philip Murray, 193; Joseph Nearing, 333; William Green, 307.

Czechs for Soviet Recognition.

MOSCOW, Dec. 21. — The Prague Tribune, an organ of Czecho-Slovakian industrialists, energetically advocates unconditional recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The paper stresses the point that the antirecognition campaign may result in the union reconsidering attitude towards Czecho-Slovakia and in the increase of its demands at any forthcoming negotiations.

BARBERS HOLD ELECTION NEXT SUNDAY 9 TO 3

The feelings of the officials of the barbers' union have been considerably hurt by the progressives calling them "reactionary."

But their actions and their methods have proven to all the members of local 548 that what was said about them is true.

How any union official can make any proposal in aid of the bosses and then "honest" leaders of labor is beyond understanding. How any official can identify himself with a scurrilous hold-up sheet such as The Chicago Union Labor News and not compromise his reputation, is beyond comprehension. So state the left wing progressives.

Why are these fakers so interested in putting over a three years' contract is something that all the intelligent members of local 548 want to know. And yet they have the unmitigated gall to resent the appellation of "labor fakers." This after they so kind heartedly look after the welfare of the bosses.

"Why have they made their job with the union secure," asks the left wing, "by getting themselves elected for three years now, unless they feared to go before the members of the union every year as has been done heretofore? If they fear to go before the members each year for election, they evidently have good reasons. The pie-card represents to them the beginning and the end of their aspirations for the labor movement."

The Progressive Barber group announces that in this election it will fight for and bring these live issues before the rank and file. It is determined to get a square deal at all costs.

At any rate, reactionaries won't have any booze to peddle for votes to the fakers did last year. Every vote for the progressive group candidates will be a conscious vote cast for the best interests of the union, better conditions, and more wages.

To the Polls!

All barbers to the polls Sunday December 28, from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. and vote the progressive slate straight.

NATURALIZATION EXAMINER ASKS FOOLISH QUERIES

Protests Workmen's Circle Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 21.—Peter O. Fleet, an applicant before the federal court for citizenship, was subjected to most unusually inquisition here by Naturalization Examiner Walter Wheatley. So ridiculous did the examiner's questions become that even Federal Judge J. C. Hutcheson was compelled to interrupt the phobiac speeches of the "examiner." The hearing had to be continued.

It turned out that Mr. Wheatley was dreadfully excited about Fleet's membership in the fraternal organization known as the "Workmen's Circle." It appears that special anxiety was shown to bring out the rather inconsequential fact that the Workmen's Circle had held a meeting last month to celebrate the birth of the Soviet government.

Fleet told Judge Hutcheson that he was a former student of both the Columbia university and the Rice Institute. He is about 30 years of age and is treasurer of the local Workmen's Circle.

Wheatley began a bombardment of questions, reflecting that because the headquarters of the Workmen's Circle [illegible] according to him, had "supported William Z. Foster," therefore, Fleet could be denied citizenship.

So pernicious and meddlesome did Wheatley become that Judge Hutcheson interrupted. "What are you doing making a speech to the court or stirring?" he asked Mr. Wheatley.

When the matter of attendance at the anniversary meeting was thrashed over to no particular result, the judge ordered the books of the Workmen's Circle to be brought into court in the next term, so that he might engage himself. This continues the hearing until April.

Labor Foe Wants to be Mayor.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 21.—Organized labor is keenly interested in the announcement that Victor J. Miller, former anti-union head of the St. Louis board of police commissioners, that he will be a candidate for mayor in the spring election. Miller fought the nomination for governor of Missouri in the last campaign, but was badly beaten.

Union labor regards Miller as one of its outstanding enemies. While head of the police board he turned the police force on striking workmen when it seemed the workers would win.

Your Policy Must Be — Buy a Policy —

Rosy Future Under Rule of Soviets in Russia Will Inspire U. S. Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, William Green, "democrat and red baiter" as the DAILY WORKER headline stated on Saturday, takes up his work in the offices of the American Federation of Labor, at Washington, D. C.

Gompers was a "democrat and red baiter." So Green will only continue his past course when he follows in Gompers' footsteps. He will not be compelled to change his step.

Green will take up the official American labor attack on Soviet Russia, the first Workers' Republic, where Gompers left off.

• • • • •

This is a good time, therefore, to review some of the achievements of Soviet Rule, not in the hope of influencing the anti-Soviet regime in the A. F. of L., but in the desire to reach new masses of workers and poor farmers with the truth.

• • • • •

Soviet Russia has her Red Army and her Red Navy for the defense of the Workers' Republic. But the Soviet army and navy expenditures for 1924-25 constitute less than 20 per cent, or less than one-fifth of all expenditures. The military expenditures of Soviet Russia are only one-third of what they were under the czarist regime. The capitalist states of Western Europe spend twice as much; while in the United States nearly 80 per cent, or four times as much of the national budget is charged "against wars, past or prospective."

Soviet Russia has just reversed the situation in the United States. One-fifth of its revenue is spent for protection against the capitalist enemy; four-fifths for the building of Communist social order. The United States spends four-fifths for murder and destruction, in an effort to promote the interests of American imperialism, while only one-fifth is left for all other purposes, among the least of these being the meager allowances for the education of the children.

• • • • •

Soviet exports, as a result of steady internal development, are rapidly mounting. While the exports during 1923 totalled 47,703,000 poods, the showing for the first half of this year was 350,000,000 poods to England alone; while an additional 132,500,000 poods went to France. This should be very bad news for Secretary of State Hughes who has referred to Soviet Russia as "a vacuum." It is certainly a magic vacuum.

• • • • •

Take another view from a different angle. The reports for the working year 1923-24 show that the exports from the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics reached 460,000,000 roubles in value, while the value of the imports reached 320,000,000 roubles.

This shows that the improvement is nearly double that of the preceding season, 1922-23, when the value of the exports totalled 210,000,000 and the imports 187,000,000 roubles.

This clearly demonstrates how the trade balance is rapidly growing in favor of the Workers' Republic. Thru its own mounting exports, as compared to imports, it will develop credits abroad without being forced to depend on the international bankers or the imperialist governments.

• • • • •

This year showed big increases in the number of acres sown for all grains; while the cotton acreage will soon far surpass that of the pre-war period. The quantities of live stock are everywhere reaching normal figures; there being in Soviet Russia now 21,000,000 horses, 67 per cent of the stock in 1916; 42,000,000 head of big horned cattle, or 85 per cent of the 1916 figures, with approximately the same figures for smaller cattle.

• • • • •

These are only a few figures that paint the rosy future before the Russian workers and peasants under Soviet Rule. Four-fifths of all the funds collected by the Workers' Government go for the development of this promising future. In the United States four-fifths of the national income is spent on battleships, air fleets, armies, guns, poison gas, for "The Next War"—perhaps "The War in the Pacific" against Japan, to steal Oriental markets for Morgan and his friends in Wall Street, thus strengthening the power that enslaves America's whole working class.

Let the workers and farmers of the United States ponder these facts coming out of Soviet Russia. Let them compare conditions under the Workers' and Peasants' Republic with prospects under Morgan rule in the United States. Then they can come to but one conclusion. They must inevitably give their support to the Communist vanguard that is leading the way toward the American Workers' and Farmers' Republic; that is directing the winning struggle that will bring Soviet Rule to the United States of America. That will be their reply to the capitalist agents who now sit in power over organized labor in this country.

U. S. TOE LICKERS IN CLOSE ATTENDANCE ON FAKE GRAND DUCHESS

By ESTHER LOWELL.
(Federated Press Staff Cor.)

NEW YORK.—Grand Duchess Cyril had a lovely time in republican America and is returning to Europe with higher hopes than ever of exploiting her assumed title of czarina of all Russia. She learned a lot from these select members of the United States aristocracy, particularly how to get a lot of attention and a comfortable living for nothing.

Her business manager, Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, grand mistress of the colonial dames, revealed to reporters, as the hasbeen duchess sailed away in the height of her glory, that "The French line courteously provided passage to and from Europe, the Waldorf-Astoria hotel very courteously offered their royal suite and so did the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia and the New Willard hotel in Washington. The Rolls-Royce Co. placed cars at the disposal of the grand duchess and her party."

Jewels But No Jobs.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 21.—While local charity organizations are conducting a campaign to relieve the [illegible] hundreds of destitute families here, and while employment offices say they have 10 men for every available job and two men within the last ten days have committed suicide in fear of dependency because their homes were destitute and the men could find no work, a suspect confesses that he burglarized the home of a St. Louis financier and carried away jewerly valued at $3,000. Among the loot were such articles as one diamond ring valued at $3,200, a diamond brooch worth $1,200 and a pearl necklace valued at $500.

Actors Would Halt Radio Fleecing.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—The Actors' Equity association and the Managers' Protective association will probably work out some method of protecting professional entertainers and those who contract for their services from radio exploitation. At present radio broadcasting stations are using artists for programs and offering no recompense other than publicity. Equity is fighting to have all artists paid for radio services.

BRITAIN NERVOUS AS BALKAN POT BEGINS TO BOIL

Chamberlain's Trip Fails to Bring Stability

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The tenseness of the Balkan situation is indicated by the announcement here of the arrival of British warships at the Albanian ports of Durazzo and Avlona. They were dispatched from Malta.

Great Britain's foreign affairs are in a more delicate condition than at any time since the outbreak of the world war due to the sudden eruptions in Morocco, Egypt and the Balkans. Austen Chamberlain minister of foreign affairs, faces the breakdown of diplomacy which the MacDonald government halted temporarily.

Italy and Jugo-Slavia, both with ambitions in the Adriatic, furnish the material for international complications that, in view of the extreme instability in eastern Europe, may precipitate another conflict.

The Moroccan situation, with the Spanish forces withdrawing from a larger sector hitherto held by them, leaves France with an excuse to extend her sphere of influence and becomes ever more serious for Great Britain, whose Mohammedan subjects are in sympathy with their co-religionists—the Riffian tribes.

The Balkan crisis has arisen and the Moroccan affair has become more serious since the recent European tour of Austen Chamberlain, which was designed to cement relations between the great powers, but which, it is evident now, was not brilliantly successful.

In Egypt a new crisis is loked for next month when elections take place to parliament and the British-owned Ziwar government will have to go to the masses for support of its policy of betrayal.

Coincident also with the arrival of Foreign Minister Ninchitch in Paris with a proposal for the formation of an anti-Soviet Russian Balkan bloc for which allied approval is sought, is the return of the British trade union delegation to London from Russia with an enthusiastic description of the conditions of the workers there.

Government circles are uneasy over the interviews given out by the delegation which are taken as a countermove by labor against the anti-Soviet maneuvers of Austen Chamberlain.

Senate Takes Up Debate on Pay of Postal Employes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 21. — The senate unanimously agreed to begin consideration of the bill increasing the pay of postal employes, which was vetoed by President Coolidge at the session of congress on January 5.

Debate will be limited to an hour the first day and ten minutes for each senator on succeeding days during the discussion of the bill. Senator Sterling, chairman of the postoffice committee, has declared his intention of moving that the bill be recommitted to his committee.

Coolidge has gone to extreme lengths to defeat the pay increase for the postal employes. He has spread the rumor that an employe of the senate has accepted a bribe from one of the postal workers' unions to work for the bill among his friends in the senate. That this rumor has been faked to serve Coolidge's purposes was pointed out in the announcement from the White House that senate investigation committee will not be asked, but that the matter will be turned over to Coolidge's department of justice.

Charge Prisoners Murdered at U. S. Atlanta, Ga., "Pen"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 21.—Prisoners confined to Atlanta prison have been murdered by prison authorities, ex-convicts who have served terms in Atlanta charge. These prisoners who can supply the authorities with money, can buy their way out of jail, according to Dr. E. E. Dudding, president of the Prisoners' Relief Society. It is proposed to have an investigation of the government pardon and parole system, it being charged that forged letters from federal judges and United States attorneys are being used by prison officials to release convicts with money.

"Unbelievable conditions of corruption exist in 75 per cent of the prisons of the country," it is declared. "One or two convicts have been killed, I understand. Graft exists in most of the prisons. It is a case of pay to get in, pay to get out and pay while you are in."

EASTERN KENTUCKY COAL MINERS LIVE IN FILTH LIKE SLAVES UNDER COAL KING'S IRON HEEL

The coal camps of eastern Kentucky, where 40,000 unorganized coal miners are working and living in conditions of oppression and slavery, belong to the blackest pages of American imperialism.

The eastern Kentucky coal fields, comprising the Kentucky River valley and the Big Sandy valley, in the words of a coal miner from Hazzard, Kentucky, combine to make "one of the most detestable labor hells in the world."

This miner, Alonzo Walters, declares, "The wages that are being paid, would, in all probability, cause a Chinamen to turn away in disgust. The mines are death traps in every sense of the word; the camps are so unspeakably filthy and unsanitary that typhoid is quite commonly a raging epidemic thruout the entire section. The employes are subjected at all times to the most slavish and humiliating conditions."

The niece of a coal miner writes the DAILY WORKER the following from the Blue Grass Coal camp, in this territory, "Three weeks ago I came here to keep house for my uncle. The miners here live in make-believe houses. Hovels is the better word to describe them. Behind the houses, only ten feet away, runs a filthy little stream of water which is a breeding place for all manner of disease germs. The wells where the workers from the entire camp get their drinking water, is in a swampy hog wallow. Here one gets the stench and germs from all the outbuildings, enough to kill a whole city full of people.

"The miners here are treated brutally by the coal company officials. The other day a pale faced little woman went to the coal company store and asked for a two-dollar script to come out of her husband's pay. They gave her a one-dollar script. 'But I must have two dollars,' she pleaded. 'I must have bread and potatoes for my family.' But they refused her the script point blank.

"My uncle has worked for this company twelve years. This year his wife was taken seriously ill. The doctor told her she must undergo an operation if her life was to be saved. We had no money. Finally my uncle went to the company and asked for two hundred dollars. The coal company officials flatly refused and told my uncle to get out of the office."

Albert Walters, brother of Alonzo Walters, writes from Russel, Ky., "I am now working here in the C. & O. railroad shops. I hadn't drawn a payday for two months at the Lothair mine, owned by the Algoma Block Coal Co. I couldn't make enough to live on. Nobody can live working in the mines but the suckers and the scabs. The company is now trying to scare the men into another wage cut by shutting down for a few days. When I quit I had thirty cents coming to me. Winchester, the general mine foreman asked, 'Why are you quitting?' I said, 'Well, you see, I have a wife and baby to work for, and I must work for them instead of the coal company.'"

Speaking of the conditions in the Algoma Coal company's camp at Lothair, Walters said, "The files of the Hazard, Ky., Herald show a shocking number of fatalities that are constantly occurring as a result of mine accidents which are easily avoidable. The outhouses have been built so near the dwelling houses of the miners, and are allowed to remain in such filthy condition, that in hot weather the odor coming from them is stifling to the entire camp. The wells which furnish water to the miners' families are located in the midst of all that filth."

In the entire eastern Kentucky coal fields these unsanitary conditions prevail. The miners get their drinking and cooking water from wells dug in various parts of the camps, there being usually two or three such wells in the entire camp. Often these wells are located in close proximity with all the filth which abounds so profusely around them. One such well, at Algala, Kentucky, was dug within thirty feet of a barn where the company mules and horses are kept.

Each camp is supplied with a coal company physician, who receives a regular salary from the company. This salary, however, is extracted from the miners, each of whom is forced to pay a percentage of his pay to the support of the physician. In addition, the doctor charges extra for child-birth cases and diseases. The doctors do not dare to complain about the unsanitary conditions, as they would immediately lose their jobs.

In the next article, we will show how the coal operators control every phase of the lives of the workers, including their political activity, and their living conditions as well as their wages. When a miner gives the least trouble, he is shot down by an "officer of the law," who works hand in glove with the coal operators.

PROVIDENCE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE ACTIVE IN TEXTILE STRIKE, MIDDLEBORO, MASS.

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Dec. 21.—Some two hundred and fifty textile workers of the Nemasket Worsted Mill are on strike here. The weavers took the initiative when they rebelled against the running of two kinds of filling on two looms. At a mass meeting of the rest of the help, held a few days later, they voted to strike with the weavers. This made a whole mill strike and all textile workers were asked to keep away from Middleboro until the strike was settled. This strike is one of a series which have occured in this state in order to stop the extension of the two loom system.

In the spring of this year a cut of 14 per cent in the wages of the Nemasket workers took place. But when Kinney, owner of the Nemasket mill, wanted one loom work done on two looms, which is equivalent to a 50 per cent cut in wages, the weavers refused to work. The strike followed and was later joined by all of the mill employes.

The Amalgamated Textile Councils of America with national headquarters in Providence, R. I. at 185 Westminster street, immediately took hold of the strike thru one of its representatives, Comrade Jim Reid. The A. T. C. of A. was organized on September in 1922 at the conclusion of the big textile strike. One of the men who helped in its organization was Jim Reid, former national president of the National Union Textile Workers of America which was affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The declaration of this union as as follows: "The Amalgamated Textile Councils do not desire to compete with other textile unions; rather it seeks to co-operate with them in and make a united fight against the bosses. As a proof of our sincerity in this declaration we will recognize the cards of other unions and allow their members to talk and vote in our council meetings in the mill where they are employed. The Amalgamated Textile Councils will do all in its power to facilitate the amalgamation of all textile unions of the industry."

Out of the two hundred strikers, only five returned to work. The Nemasket Mill is running twenty-five per cent normal and the prospect of victory for the strikers is very good. Many of the workers on strike now did not even know or appreciate the full meaning of a scab. It is needless to say that from their present experience, their outlook is one hundred per cent trade unionist.

Comrade Jim Reid of the Workers' Party in Providence spoke to the men and women on Thursday. He cautioned the mill workers to be on their alert against the approaches from the company's stool pigeons and to pay no attention to any rumors they may hear on the streets, but to hold their discussions at the strike meetings Comrade Reid, after finishing his speech introduced Comrade Barney Mass, national industrial organizer of the Young Workers' League of America. He also lauded highly the work of this organization as being worthy of the support of all.

Comrade Mass showed the strikers the necessity of organization and pointed out the powerful organization existing in the ranks of the mill owners. He said, "This is not an isolated incident, but a series of strikes which are occurring more frequently and will become more frequent as the open shop campaign gets under way with the aid of the Coolidge administration."

Comrades Nellie Prabulos and Ralph Kominsky of the Young Workers League in Providence have been helping the strikers in their fight. After Comrade Mass appealed for members to the league many remained and a meeting has been called for the purpose of organizing a league nucleus.

After the meeting was adjorned over 100 went down on the picket line, including Reid, Mass, Komisky and Prabulos. As some of the scabs came pouring out of the gate the strikers jeered and laughed at them. The captain of police ordered the pickets to quit making noise. This was ignored. One of the scabs, whose name is Flutey, is a professional strikebreaker and gunman. It is also alleged that he recently shot a man in Lawrence and is at present under a bond. He endeavored to provoke a fight with some of the pickets. But when his bluff was called he hastily retreated.

Appeals for money are now being made in all textile mills for the needy strikers. Over two thousand dollars have already been raised and much more will be raised in order to guarantee the victorious fight of the mill workers. The Young Workers League in Providence and neighboring towns are becoming active in the relief work. With the organization of a league, the morale of the strikers has been increased.

Youth Demands Will Be Put Forward

The active participation of the Workers Party and Young Workers League in the many spontaneous strikes which occur in the textile industries, will make both organizations become the real vanguard of the work ers in this territory.

And now he has to send all his nice rocking chairs, beds, rare old credenzas, antique borgenias, Italian faience, copes and what not else, besides the kitchen table, frying pan and his underwear, to America.

Here, in America, the land of lots of gold, there are plenty of nice people who love nice things, especially if they come from a nice bankrupt Prince. So the auction is on. And soon, in the home of a best family, as others of the best are being shown around, the hostess will pick up a diminutive, exquisitely engraved, jewel-studded silver scalpel and say: "Ever hear of Prince Hen of Prusha? Well, he used to clean his ears with this."

Capitalism is on the decline. A great elimination contest is on between the imperialist lords to see which set of lords will decline first. The last world war gave Germany a very rude shove down the splintery plank. Now a few feudalistic left-overs like Prince Henry must sell their shirts while Morgan sits pretty.

But we are in on this elimination contest. In it with both feet, both hands and head. While the imperialists are at each others throats we follow an elimination program all our own. We struggle to eliminate the imperialists while they struggle to eliminate each other.

They must go down. We must go up! This is the task before us. You'll find the DAILY WORKER on the firing line. To KEEP IT THERE and strengthen every fiber in its make-up is now our duty. To us, the workers of the world, the DAILY WORKER is of major importance. If you can picture the lords of finance without their press, then you can picture our party without its daily. But you can't. And if you want the DAILY WORKER, then help it today so that it may help you more effectively tomorrow.

DUNCAN, FEELING SLIGHTED, QUITS A. F. OF L. COUNCIL

Old Faker Gets Sore at "Mattie" Woll

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 21.—When William Green was elected to the presidency of the American Federation of Labor, the "greatest expectations" of old Jimmie Duncan, the first vice-president of the federation, fell in collapse. Then he resigned, his wounded dignity being unable to endure the affront without this gesture.

In resigning, Duncan stated to his fellow fakers that this force years of being Sam Gompers' companion and his position as first vice-president, entitled him to Sam's place and that Green was an intruder and an upstart. While Duncan appeared to be in his usual good spirits, he evinced considerable bitterness at Mattie Woll, who had seconded the nomination of Green for what Duncan declared were personal reasons.

Woll had been Gompers' valet all his life, according to Duncan, and new knowing that the U. M. W. of A. machine is coming into power in the federation and is to grab the job of secretary of labor, Woll is quite disgracefully changing his love to another more masterful character than himself.

The story being circulated by some that Duncan was turned down because of alleged ill health made the old Scot furious. He was deeply angry at the published report that many of those who voted against him said that they would have favored him if it were a question of his holding office for three or four months but that as it will be ten months until the next convention, they could not elect Duncan because he might not live that long.

GOMPERS' WILL LEAVES LITTLE TO HIS SECOND WIFE

Flag-Making Industry Is Due for Spurt

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Mrs. Gertrude Gompers, widow of Samuel Gompers, late president of the American Federation of Labor, will receive only the "minimum amount" provided by law from Gompers' estate, according to the will made public here yesterday.

Two wills were filed, the first, dated Sept. 21, 1921, which left the bulk of the estate to the widow, had written across its face, in Gompers' handwriting, "I cancel and revoke this will."

The second will, dated Nov. 5, 1924, directed that, after the payment of debts, Gompers' granddaughter and his three sons, Samuel, Henry and Alexander, should receive the rest of the estate.

Money for Flags.

Gompers left $100 each to the American Federation of Labor which he headed for forty years; to the Cigarmakers' International Union; Cigarmakers' Local Union No. 144, New York City; Dawson Lodge No. 16, A. F. and A. M., Washington, and B. P. O. E. Lodge No. 1, New York, directing that the money be spent in each case for an American flag, "and these specific sums are to be devoted by these organizations to no other purpose."

100,000 UNEMPLOYED IN AUSTRALIA

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 21.—There are approximately about 100,000 workers unemployed thruout Australia at the present time. Unemployment is most pronounced among the metal miners, land and sea transport workers, general laborers, professional and shop workers, and manufacturing industries. The brick and clay, clothing trades, iron trades, dental, jewelry and food supply unions show the largest rate of unemployment.

Painters, stone workers, plumbers, plasterers and most of the building trade workers report plenty of work, while the printing trades also report improvement. There is an increase of men employed in the steel plants and allied industries.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

WHAT ABOUT MINNESOTA?

By C. A. HATHAWAY.

THE comrades of the minority have been trying to explain the developments in the Minnesota farmer-labor united front. They say in Minnesota at the present time there exists a strong sentiment against LaFollettelsm and for a class farmer-labor party. They quote articles from Mahoney's paper to prove their contention. Other members of the minority group have charged that we have actually made mistakes during the year and one-half of the most intensive farmer-labor campaigning that any section of our party has gone thru. They say ours was a united front with Mahoney and Cramer—not with the rank and file. Comrade Wicks even charges that the comrades in active charge of the work here were so enamored by this united front with the top that we refused to carry out his instructions as the representative of the C. E. C. when he instructed us to fight for the election of delegates to the proposed convention of the federated farmer-labor party at the state convention that "organized" the Minnesota farmer-labor federation on September 8, 1923.

Comrades, I am going to let you in on a little secret—we did make some mistakes in Minnesota. Furthermore, the active comrades that have direct control of our party here all the work of organizing for two conventions of the state federation of labor and four state political conventions and have watched the after effects of the policies followed, know something of the mistakes that were made. These conventions in Minnesota were not "fake" conventions either, neither were they conventions made up of delegates of party branches only, as was the case in most of the states. These conventions were attended in each case by from three to four hundred delegates representing local unions, farmers' organizations, etc. Furthermore, they were being called in a state that had a functioning farmer-labor party in the field since 1918, and had already established a farmer-labor leadership. Furthermore, the local unions thruout the state had been organized politically in a definite political organization since 1918—three years before our party ever thought of taking up the farmer labor issue. They had just elected their candidate to the United States senate which created a feeling of self-satisfaction on the part of the rank and file which had to be broken down.

These were the conditions that faced us when we returned from the convention of the federated farmer-labor party held in Chicago, July 8, 1923. Outside of myself, our party had no comrades in the farmer-labor party. We had very few English-speaking comrades. We had a situation complicated by three existing organizations—the official farmer-labor party, the farmers nonpartisan league and the workers' party—the Workingmen's league. All of these organizations were under petty-bourgeoisie leadership. Last but not least, we had just two weeks to prepare for a state convention of the working people's league after returning from Chicago. I was the only party member who succeeded in being elected as a delegate to that convention. We succeeded in creating a split between Mahoney and Van Lear and forced the calling of another convention to consider ways and means of reorganizing the entire movement.

Before we actually got the call issued we had to break with Mahoney by going to the rank and file of the unions and get them to demand the calling of the convention based on representation from local unions. From the very beginning we started the process of building up our own independent power which we retain to this day in spite of the attack that has been launched on us by Mahoney, Cramer and the reactionaries generally. Our criticism of these leaders was tempered only by the need that the party had for them nationally and only on instructions from the C. E. C.

I think, however, that before going any further, Comrade Wicks should be answered. I do not object to criticism but the very title of Comrade Wicks' article in the Monday DAILY WORKER, "A Question of Leadership" makes the blood of every Minnesota comrade boil who had anything to do with the September convention in Minneapolis. We in Minnesota have always had considerable respect for Comrade Lenin's leadership and still have, but we have seen Comrade Wicks in action. Comrade Wicks was sent to Minnesota to assist us in applying the united front tactics to the situation here. He was sent by the present minority of the C. E. C., then the majority. He apparently misunderstood his instructions—he thought he had been sent on a vacation. As soon as he landed here he became so much engrossed with his personal affairs that he could not take care of anything else. During the course of the convention itself his time was fully occupied. After a stormy morning session the steering committee appointed by the D. E. C., made up of Comrade Wangerin, Johnson, and myself, tried to get Wicks to go to lunch with the committee to decide on the question of policies at the afternoon session. Comrade Wicks was already booked. Again at supper time, with the left wing completely disorganized and the right wing led by Van Lear completely in the saddle, Comrade Wicks again ignored the committee. Comrade Wicks' trip to Minnesota was useless, except insofar as our local comrades learned a lesson in what not to do at a convention.

Late in the evening session the question of electing the delegates previously referred to, came up. Our committee introduced the resolution and fought for it. It was met by a bitter attack from the reactionaries. Even workers who are now members of the party refused to support us in the fight. We were left absolutely alone with eighteen votes, all told close to three hundred and fifty. At this point a point of order was raised that no organization had been created at the convention (only a provisional organizing committee had been elected) from which to send delegates and that therefore no funds were available with which to send them.

The chairman sustained the point at the same time Comrade Johnson withdrew the resolution, the steering committee feeling that if the matter was pulled out the provisional committee could still send delegates. Comrade Wicks then showed the "Left" leadership by rushing up the isle and instructing the committee to "split the goddamned thing wide open." We could not have taken a single delegate with us on such a split and the steering committee refused. A caucus of party delegates was called immediately after the adjournment of the convention. Comrade Wicks then was busy with his private affairs and did not attend the caucus. The caucus was breaking up at two o'clock in the morning.

I do not know whether Comrade Wicks reported to the C. E. C. or not on his "Leninist" leadership in Minnesota, but the steering committee did send in a detailed report on the situation including their action on the resolution to send delegates to the federated convention. This report was mimeographed in full by the present minority and sent to party workers together with a letter telling them that this was a model report and that the tactics followed should serve as a guide to them in similar situations. So you will see that if our tactics were in error up until this convention they were shared by the present minority of the C. E. C. So much for Comrade Wicks.

Immediately after this convention the present minority started their negotiations with Mahoney relative to the organization of a state convention, and from that point on we started our wild orgy of a united front from the top that lasted right up until the June 17 convention. Mahoney and Cramer, the farmer-labor party and farmer-labor federation were all set for LaFollette from the beginning. We never carried out our own policy in Minnesota from that time on, we were trying to develop tactics that would retain for us the support of Mahoney personally, we were trying to cringe him at home and at the same time create an organizational cleavage from the LaFollette movement, but yet of course, we had to support him in the event that he was nominated. All of these maneuvers made our membership so dizzy that apparently some of them have not as yet regained their equilibrium.

At the second convention of the Minnesota farmer-labor federation held in March of this year we were concerned only with the one problem of getting the Minnesota party to endorse the calling of the June 17 convention. This convention not only gave their endorsement to the calling of a national convention, but the "class" farmer-labor federation gave their endorsement to LaFollette as the candidate to be nominated at that convention. Our local desire to fight on this issue was subordinated to the needs of the national situation.

After the repudiation by LaFollette of the June 17 convention, a meeting of the state committee was called to decide whether they would continue their support of the convention. At this meeting Comrades Hedlund, Johnson and myself launched an attack on LaFollette, Mahoney and Cramer raised the slogan in their speeches of "hold the June 17 convention and nominate LaFollette" and even with them fighting for LaFollette we had a narrow speak in the committee. After the C. P. P. A. convention July 4, you know what happened to Mahoney and Cramer, well, the same thing happened to the farmer-labor federation.

From its very inception the Minnesota farmer-labor federation has been a LaFollette organization—we created it for him. He did not like the name because we had smeared it with red. After July 4, Sinclair, the LaFollette campaign manager, had said that they would create their own organization, Mahoney, however, outgeneraled them; he called the state committee together and they issued a statement supporting LaFollette and called on the workers to join the organization in order to make the LaFollette campaign effective. Within a few days after this statement was issued, peace was made between the two groups, Sinclair even agreeing to give to the federation a portion of the campaign funds collected within the state.

Thruout the federation a fight was immediately started on the members of the Workers Party. We were charged with a violation of trade union discipline because of our support for Comrades Foster and Gitlow. Our campaign meetings held during the campaign were not much more than party membership meetings. The LaFollette wave swept everything before it, even the unions that had previously been classed as left wing fell in line. Active trade unionists were supporting Comrades Emme and Youngdahl, but at the same time were supporting LaFollette. We found that all we had was a house of cards that crashed on our heads as soon as the LaFollette wind came up. Communism had made no inroads on the masses. We had captured conventions, but we had not succeeded in winning the workers to a revolutionary program.

The experiences in Minnesota convince me that the majority is correct in their position. There is no class farmer-labor movement in Minnesota. The federation has become the Minnesota C. P. P. A. If our party is to take over the leadership of the workers in this state it will have to form its united fronts on the basis of the immediate economic and political needs of the working class. By fighting on that basis we can most effectively destroy the influence of Communism and develop our party into a mass Communist Party.

UPON ONE POLICY WE ARE ALL UNITED and that is to Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

A MOST complete discussion upon future party policy is possible today because we have the DAILY WORKER. Every party member who reads the DAILY WORKER, yes, and every one that does not because he cannot read English, will understand this to be an advantage of prime importance to the theoretical development of our members.

But the DAILY WORKER serves the party in many other ways. It is an all the year around weapon against the foe, it is an educator, it is a propagandist—and also, it is a bond, a chain, which ties member to member, city to city, district to district. It is the DAILY WORKER that helps to centralize our party into the effective machine it should be.

We must keep the DAILY WORKER and make it safe for 1925. To do this we must give our dollars generously today. If we expect to win, then the DAILY WORKER must live and prosper. With the DAILY WORKER, forward to victory, or—nothing. It should be easy to choose.

INSURANCE POLICIES are in the hands of the branches. They are priced $10, $5 and $1. The Central Executive Committee has decided that every member shall buy. Every member should buy no less than a $5 POLICY.

And while the party seethes with discussion over our future policy and tasks, there is one Policy upon which there must be unanimous agreement. That is the POLICY to BUY A POLICY to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

SLOGANS, SENSIBLE AND OTHERWISE

By GERTRUDE WELSH.

(Explanation—All quoted sentences or phrases are taken from the minority thesis, tho in every case, instead of using the words, "Workers Party," or "party," I have substituted "DAILY WORKER," "newspaper," "party," or "press." Exclamation points are my own.)

OUR party is now concentrated on the task of building up the DAILY WORKER, putting it on a financial basis that will guarantee its continuation as the surest means of maintaining and spreading the power of Communist ideology. Upon one policy we are all united and that is to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925; this is the slogan of the paper's appeal for support as published daily on the same page with the discussion of other party tasks.

Imagine a split on this policy! Imagine a minority springing up and maintaining grandiloquently: Of course, we agree heartily with the theory of upbuilding the DAILY WORKER; everybody knows that it is the only class paper in the United States; absolutely, we realize that it alone conducts labor's offensive against capitalism; but, ye gods of sectarianism, think ye such truths will "penetrate" the "proletarians and poor farmers"? Think ye this task can be performed "merely by a mechanical addition" of new subscribers? The "sentiment of the masses" is not for the DAILY WORKER, but for a class farmer-labor press!

And with this for a starter, the minority would set about composing a thesis, quite a complicated affair, which might contain, however, the following epigrammatic summary: "The campaign for a farmer-labor 'press,' if conducted upon a correct conception of the united front tactic, will not obscure and hide the 'DAILY WORKER' or substitute some other 'paper' for it (!) On the contrary, it will bring the 'DAILY WORKER' to the fore as never before (!) C. will make our 'paper' stand out as the leader in the struggle in the interest of the workers and poorer farmers" (!!)

What a travesty of wisdom would this be, what ridiculosity, yet does it differ in import from the C. E. C. minority's attitude toward the plans agreed on by the majority for strengthening the Workers Party? I suggest that, if the minority were scrupulously consistent, (by imagination tremble with the strain) they would not be participating in the DAILY WORKER drive nor sponsoring the undiluted DAILY WORKER slogan, but instead, would be trying to form a "left class 'paper' bloc" in the LaFollettelzed columns of Mahoney's Minnesota Trade Union Advocate, with the view, as they would say, of "splitting away" his readers and "absorbing" them into our subscription list!

Strangest of all reads the analogous tale of what would constitute this "splitting away" process. Mahoney's readers would not be referred to the DAILY WORKER for information or guidance—by no means; the minority wouldn't let them catch sight of it for fear of stopping them after they had been "set into motion." Nonetheless, 'tis said they might incidentally be told that these self-appointed disruptionists all belong to the DAILY WORKER staff. Out of the minority's sentimental sense of duty, perforce, might they hear of the DAILY WORKER, as of an old-time sweetheart whom one remembers fondly, tho mostly in one's dreams. What the Mahoneyites would be propagandized with, of course, would be a "class farmer-labor 'press'." And yet, upon a more careful reading of the minority thesis, one might conclude that they wouldn't hear so much about this, either. For the minority might not have a shred of a suggestion as to how the "class farmer-labor 'press'" should be organized; in fact, might not be sure if it ever would be organized—that's the hell of it.

What the minority thesis might remark is: "The inevitability of the formation of a farmer-labor 'press' is not the basis of our campaign. We use this slogan as a means of agitation and to establish contact with workers who are moving toward independent 'newspaper' action, to win them for the 'DAILY WORKER' and to build our 'paper.' It is quite possible that the actual organization of a class farmer-labor 'paper' which will establish itself firmly and function over a period of time will not be the line of development, but that the best of those elements which we bring under our influence in leadership like the campaign under the slogan "For a class farmer-labor 'press'" can be absorbed into the 'DAILY WORKER' without passing thru the stage of actual organization into a separate 'paper'."

So, coming down to just plain newspaper "facts for workers," what the Mahoneyites would hear, all-in-all and above all and beyond all, reveals itself as naught but a slogan, a naked, fleshless skeleton of a slogan, and this slogan, friends, Romans and menpfome men, is, as has been mentioned before, nothing more nor less than "For a class farmer-labor 'press'."

What effect its reiterated utterances would have on the Mahoneyites, I am at a loss to predict (tho they have a bad reputation for knifing Communists in the back, just how they would handle mesmerists is problematical,) but I am wondering a little what is to become of the DAILY WORKER in the meantime. Whether there would be any paper left or not would depend on how many journalists and readers the minority could mobilize into becoming phrase-mongers. Perhaps, after all, the loss of those who would be tempted by such word-salads would be insignificant, and the DAILY WORKER might discover that its subscription list would grow fatter and healthier on a better-balanced diet.

But I forget, my analogy has carried me away; it is not the DAILY WORKER that is at stake, but only (!) the Workers Party. We all agree on the policy to insure the DAILY WORKER, but minority comrades refuse to accept the slogan of insure the Workers Party. While rejoicing over their consistency with Communist principles in supporting a Communist press, and none other; nevertheless how can we help but despair at this spectacle of the minority's mind divided against itself, penny-wise and pound-foolish?

A Communist Catechism

More Questions and Answers.

By MAX BEDACHT and JAY LOVESTONE.

6. Question—If there is no farmer-labor party in Germany, France, or Soviet Russia, why talk about one in the United States? Why not throw out the slogan "Follow the Workers Party"? If the German Communists don't demand a farmer-labor party, why should the American Communists demand one?

Answer—This is the worst possible kind of Communism. In nearly every European country the struggles of the Communist Parties for leadership over the working masses is a struggle between the Communists and the social-democrats of some type or other. In short, the struggle takes place in a distinct working class political movement. In the United States the situation is totally different. In order for the Communists to establish the political leadership over the working masses in the United States, the workers must be separated ideologically from capitalism. Until the workers learn in increasing numbers that their class interests demand conscious political action against and not with the capitalists the leadership of the Communists over the workers cannot become a vital issue to them. Whether or not the establishment of such Communist leadership over these workers is accepted simultaneously with the breaking away of the proletarian masses from the ideological bondage of capitalism will not be decided by the sound of a slogan "Follow the Workers Party" as much as the quality of the actual leadership supplied by the Workers Party in the factual establishment of the political independence of the workers from the capitalists.

7. Question—Instead of a farmer-labor united front, why should we not build a whole series of united fronts on immediate problems? Wouldn't this be a golden key to the solution of avoiding wrong united fronts from the top only?

Answer—It is the duty of the Communists to help the working class to assimilate the experiences of its struggle. These struggles may have various forms and may assume different objectives. But no matter how various the forms and objectives of these struggles may be, there is always one final paramount experience that we, Communists, must seek to have the workers draw out of these struggles to the intensified consciousness of their need for political action as a class against the exploiters. To get this idea into the heads of the masses it is not sufficient to form a united front here or there in this or that party. The necessity for defensive action against an injunction and elsewhere in the country against an open shop drive against the capitalists. It is necessary to unify and co-ordinate separate actions on a national scale thru the introduction of one unifying slogan which holds good and meets a mass need in the north as well as in the south and in the east as well as in the west simultaneously.

Therefore, it is not sufficient for the Workers Party, if it wants to become a mass Communist Party, to propose and organize in all the different struggles of the workers in the various parts of the country united front tactics. It is necessary that in all these actions there continually be emphasized the idea of and need for a political union of all the workers in the country.

Regarding the argument that a F.-L. P. campaign cannot be carried on as a united front movement from below, we need only cite the history of our own party's experience. The present minority of the C. E. C. this year, and last year when it was the majority, has had to wage a continuous struggle with the Foster-Cannon group against their conception of united fronts from the top. One of the bitterest fights in the last convention of the party was waged over a criticism made by the Ruthenberg-Pepper group against the present majority for its wrong application of the united front in Chicago because that united front was made exclusively at the top with such fake progressive labor leaders as Mr. Fitzpatrick, Mr. Buck and Mr. Nockels.

It was in Chicago where we were presented last year with a glaring example of the united front from the top only. The opposition of Foster to our proceeding with a vigorous F. F. L. P. organization campaign was based on his fear of breaking with such "progressive" labor leaders with whom "previously" contact had been established. If the Foster group had not been pursuing the wrong united front tactics from the top only and disregarding the rank and file, the followers of Fitzpatrick below, the Foster group would not have feared so much a split with these labor bureaucrats and they would have gone along with our organizational aim of winning these masses away from Fitzpatrick and Co.

The best proof of the fact that such tactics, as pursued by Comrade Foster, were united front tactics from the top only is to be found in the small number of Fitzpatrick followers who went with us after our break with him.

8. Question—How much truth is there in the contention of the Foster-Cannon group that since there is no other party at present ready to lead the workers, then the workers will have to turn to the Workers Party for leadership?

Answer—Such an attitude is a travesty on Marxism. It is a confession in bankruptcy. This argument might hold water if the workers were conscious of their lack of leadership. The workers being conscious of their lack of leadership, in some need of leadership and with no competition in sight for us, would of course, then turn to the W. P. But that is a Fata Morgana mirage which haunts the majority. The sorry fact is that the workers, as a mass, as a class, are not at all conscious of their need for new, revolutionary, proletarian leadership. The working masses still follow cheerfully and quite often blindly the leadership of capitalism. To wait for them to turn to us for leadership is equivalent to a declaration of bankruptcy of our party—to a liquidation of our party.

9. Question—Is the C. E. C. majority fooling the members when it maintains that "The C. E. C. is seeking the advice of the Comintern on the labor party policy which will become known in good time."

Answer—Of course, the Foster-Cannon group is fooling the membership when it says that they are simply misrepresenting the facts. At branch meetings, in an effort to create favorable sentiment thru the cheapest kind of gutter demagogy, C. E. C. majority "logicians," like Bittelman, yell that they are taking their case to the membership while the minority is always talking about the C. I. The Foster-Cannon group voted against the motion the minority of the C. E. C. made to accept the proposal of the E. C. of the C. I. to have it consider and act on the party controversy at its enlarged session scheduled for February. In the discussion of this motion, Foster, the public leader of the C. E. C. majority, and Cannon, the leader behind the back-drop, even accused us of trying to cheat the membership by referring the question for decision to the C. I. prior to a party convention. These comrades might have made the effort to learn that the C. I. has time and again made it its business to consider the problems of its various sections in order to help them and in order to prevent their making mistakes.

10. Question—Who is responsible for the lie that the minority members of the C. E. C. were opposed to giving the membership the chance to discuss?

Answer—The membership knows exactly who was responsible for this lie. The facts are these. Immediately after the publication of the election statement the minority members of the C. E. C. insisted on the publication of its election statement and a discussion of same in two documents in the press. Our subsequent efforts to have the C. E. C. act on this matter, as we requested, failed. When the C. I. proposal to consider our question arrived we declared to the C. I. that we are planning to open the party discussion immediately and will be glad to comply with its decisions. It was the minority pressure that forced the majority of the C. E. C. to print our election statement and to organize those

AT PRESENT THAT'S ABOUT ALL WE CAN SAY!

It is the Hungarian Section of the Workers Party speaking. The letter to us ends in the words of the caption above. But the Hungarian Section had said its all. We learned that it intended to do everything possible to carry its part of the responsibility to make the DAILY WORKER safe for the coming months. Every line in the letter expresses a deed, an act. It is a letter, the contents of which might well be acted upon by all sections of the party, all districts, locals, and branches. Read it!

To the DAILY WORKER: We do not think the Daily can be insured by words. It could and it should be insured by deeds.

This is what we have DONE to insure the Daily:

1. At our recent convention we instructed our branches to raise their quota of the $50,000 fund.

2. After the convention we took the quota of the Hungarian Section and on its basis we figured out for each and every branch its respective quota and called upon the branches to fill it. Every quota is a pledge from the branches, backed by the Section.

3. To start the work, we wrote a check for $100 to the order of the DAILY WORKER. This check is enclosed now.

And this is what we are GOING TO DO:

1. We are going to see to it that the pledges be filled as quickly as possible.

2. We are going to make as many comrades as possible hustle to get subs for the DAILY WORKER.

3. In case that what we have done and what we mapped out to do to insure the DAILY WORKER is not enough to insure it, we are going to do more.

At present that's about all we can say in support of the campaign.

Fraternally yours,
D. HAJNAL,
Secretary, Hungarian Section, Workers Party.

CHICAGO PARTY ACTIVITIES

UPON report made to Local Chicago city central committee on fight carried on by the left wing in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union election for the left wing candidates, and their program of measures vitally needed by the members of that union, a motion was carried unanimously backing up this fight with all the resources of the party.

Extensive preparations were made for the Chicago aldermanic elections to be held Feb. 28. These elections are so-called "non-partisan" and Communist candidates will be entered in all wards possible. A general campaign committee composed of the following elected: Abern, Kruse, Gomez, Herson, Hammersmark, Ida Dalles, Thurber Lewis, Candella, N. Juel Christensen, H. Epstein, Mrs. Kalousek, Manes, N. Shafir, Cejak, A. Maki, Robert Minor and two members of the Y. W. L. Sub-committee on organization which is to organize ward committees, propose candidates, organise meetings and general propaganda activities composed of Abern Kruse, Lewis, Manns, Epstein and Mrs. Kalousek. A sub-committee on petitions which is to organize the work of gathering signatures and filing petitions composed of the following: Hammersmark, Christensen Candella, Cjeka and Abern, and finally a committee on publicity composed of Comrades Gomez, Dalles and Shafir. Signatures required to petitions to enter candidates are two per cent of the votes cast in the last municipal election and petitions must be filed before Jan. 30. Many wards offer good possibilities for entering Communist candidates. Only the working class wards will be concentrated upon and all opportunities will be made use of to bring our message to the workers during this campaign. The Communist candidates will in definite terms state their position on the many vital working class issues.

On the now developing unemployment situation the city central committee adopted the following statement:

Unemployment in Chicago is on the increase. At the free employment office during November there were 156 persons registered for each 100 jobs available. These figures mark an increase over the two preceding months, altho they do not reach the high mark of July and August.

Our party must take the leadership in gaining the measures for relief of the unemployed workers and create the organizations necessary to attain this aim. Our party members must take up energetically the formulation of the demands of the unemployed and initiate the fight for the realization of these demands. They must bring the issue into all trade unions and workers' gatherings. Apply our slogans to the concrete situation and with these slogans penetrate the masses, organized and unorganized, employed and unemployed, to prepare them for action, following closely the program adopted by the C. E. C.

Our immediate slogans must be: "Work or Compensation for the Unemployed." "Governmental legislation making appropriations for relief of the unemployed, funds to be administered by the labor organizations." "Employers to pay regular wages to workers when they cannot keep steadily at work, out of their accumulated profits."

The city central committee elected a committee composed of Swabeck Bell, Davidson, Milklavich and two comrades to be selcted from the Y. W. L. Committee was instructed to gather information about development of employment, prepare publicity and assist our membership in propagandizing the needs of the unemployed. It was also instructed to make arrangements at the earliest possible date for a series of unemployment mass meetings and take steps toward organization of the unemployed.

To effectively prepare the work of our party, to establish a united front fight against child labor, to bring this issue to all working class organizations, to bring pressure to bear, to bring the state legislature to immediately ratify the child labor amendment to the constitution and to compel the state and federal legislature to pass a law providing for full government maintenance of all school children of workers and poor farmers. The following committee was elected: Abern, S. Borgeson, John Anderson, Charles Erickson, Chilofsky and two from the Y. W. L., Reiseroff and Greenberg.

Applications: A total of 36 applications were accepted including a Czecho-Slovak branch of ten members organized in Brookfield, Ill.

The minutes of the last district executive meeting showed that during the four months period July-October more new members had been initiated into our party in this district than any previous similar period.

Workers Party, Local Chicago, Martin Abern.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR NEW YEAR'S EVE BALL OF T. U. E. L.

The New Year's Eve ball of the Trade Union Educational League is now an institution in Chicago. The affair will be held this year at the West End Women's Club, at 57 South Ashland Blvd.

The revival of militancy in the trade union movement shows that the members of the T. U. E. L. are using their heads in meeting the attacks of the reactionaries. On New Year's Eve they will give their feet a little exercise.

The admission charge is only 50 cents.

Italian West Side Branch Unanimous For Minority Thesis

The minority thesis was unanimously indorsed by the Italian Side branch, No. 1, by a vote of 41 to 0. The following resolution was unanimously passed:

"Having heard Robert Minor speak in support of the minority thesis and Tom Bell in support of the Foster-Cannon thesis, the West Side branch of the Italian Section of the Workers Party indorses the minority thesis. We declare in favor of the continuation of the class farmer-labor party united front slogan as an effective means of building a mass Communist Party in the United States.

"After two meeting nights of thoro discussion, we declare that there is a mass need for independent political action of the working class and we condemn the sectarian defeatist attitude displayed in the majority thesis.—Signed: G. Balocco, Secretary."

The branch voted that every member must take out an insurance policy to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. This motion was also unanimously carried.

sheep. The minority tactic of constant contant with the farmer-labor sections of the American working class is mighty good common sense. As Communists we cannot pursue a policy of "splendid isolation" and hope to engage in every struggle to advance the cause of the working class. It is the duty of every Communist to discuss the minority and majority propositions and to view all angles with an open mind. I firmly believe that our C. E. C. will arrive at their conclusions in due time and map out a policy to guide us in the future campaigns our party will engage in.

Until such a decision has been reached we of the rank and file should keep plugging and put thru the immediate tasks before us.

The injection of personalities into the argument will get us nowhere. All engaged in this debate have rendered a lifetime of service to the working class. As Communists we are concerned with FACTS.

If I can be convinced that a policy of "splendid isolation" is the correct tactic for a Communist Party for American conditions, then I will support the majority viewpoint. The mass farmer-labor party under Communist leadership meet with my hearty approval, therefore I support the minority position.

The LaFollette Labor Policy

The publicly owned and very successful Canadian National railway is about to follow the example of the Baltimore and Ohio—which seems to be the most sensible of the privately-owned roads—and introduce the co-operative shop employes plan.

The above quotation is the first paragraph of an editorial entitled "The B. and O. Plan," published in the Milwaukee Leader of December 16.

Readers will sense at once that the Leader is not hostile to the B. and O. plan nor to the capitalist tools masquerading as labor leaders that are trying to put the plan over for the honor of glory and profit of the capitalists with some incidental pickings for themselves.

The Leader goes on to say:

> O. S. Beyer and William H. Johnston, who aided in the installation of the plan on the B. and O., have been consulted by the heads of the Canadian road, and have aided materially in getting things started. . . . This plan differs from the company union affairs, for, in this one, the regular unions are the ones that conduct the affairs of the workers. It is bona fide co-operation, not a blind to fool the public and the workers.

The Leader then cites some alleged benefits for the workers, the major one of which is described as "recognition of the shop craft organizations as a constructive and helpful policy of the railroads."

The "management"—a euphonious term for capitalist coined by middle-class advisers of the workers—is also to derive some benefits, and these are listed as follows:

> Better quality of work and increased production—stable shop forces and improved morale—fewer grievances and misunderstandings—conservation of material and elimination of waste—new business secured thru employes and their organizations—good will of patrons and the public generally.

This is the frankest and most shameless exposition of the policy of class collaboration yet published and it is significant that it is the official organ of the Wisconsin socialist party, which is a strong supporter of LaFollette, that makes this brazen admission. The close connection of LaFollette, the socialist party and Willim H. Johnston, head of the Machinists' Union, chief supporter of LaFollette in the trade union movement and sponsor of the infamous B. and O. plan, is so obvious as to need no further proof.

Here we have a plain and easily understandable demonstration of the labor policy of the LaFollette movement endorsed by its three principal wings—LaFollette, the middle-class idol, Johnson, the class collaborationist spokesman and C. P. P. A. head, whose B. and O. plan was endorsed by Gompers, and the socialist party which furnishes a few class struggle phrases to give the noisome mess a working class flavor.

The praise lavished by The Leader upon the B. and O. plan—"this plan differs from the company union affairs, for, in this one, the regular labor unions are the ones that conduct the affairs of the workers"—shows that its only objection to company unions is that the betrayal of the workers is not accomplished by the "regular" labor leaders.

This infringement on the jurisdiction of the "regular" labor leader being overcome by the B. and O. plan, The Leader, the socialist party, the LaFolette movement and its labor leaders enthusiastically join in boosting it.

One question: What is the difference between the LaFollette labor policy as disclosed in the article quoted from The Milwaukee Leader and that of Rockefeller, Gary, Vanclain and other labor exploiters, except that labor officials are recognized as the logical persons by whom the interests of the workers are sold to the capitalists?

All workers who answer this question correctly will receive as a prize one of the "Back to 1776" campaign buttons of the LaFolletteites.

Justice in France

Those well intended political sapheads who hailed the defeat of Poincare by Herriot as a victory for progressivism, have an excellent opportunity to analize the difference between capitalist liberalism and its opposite in the light of Herriot's conduct since he became premier fo France.

Herriot was elected on a reform platform. One of the principal planks in his platform was recognition of Soviet Russia. He dodged the issues as long as he could, but was finally forced to take action by labor, by those elements who are interested in trade with Russia and the small investors who hope to get something out of the billions loaned to the czar thru direct negotiations after recognition.

But on the very day that the Soviet ambassador arrived in Paris, Herriot ordered wholesale arrests of Communists. He removed the Communist mayor of a French town because he was a strike leader. He ordered the imprisonment of Jacques Sadoul, ex-French natal officer, who was sentenced to death by court martial for having refused to enter into a conspiracy against Soviet Russia on the instructions of the French ambassador. Sadoul is threatened with the firing squad, the now a citizen of the Soviet Republic and a member of the Soviet embassy to Paris. Unless the French workers deter Herriot, Sadoul will pay with his life for his devotion to the working class.

In contradistinction to the campaign of terror carried on by the liberal Herriot against the Communists, we have his policy of forgiveness to Caillaux, Malvy and the pro-kaiser wing of the French capitalist politicians during the war, who were arrested, indicted and convicted by the anti-kaiser wing. Herriot fights for amnesty for the pro-kaiserites. It is jail for the friends of Soviet Russia and deportation for radicals.

Poincare, capitalist tool, labelled reactionary, did not go so far in persecuting radical workers as Herriot, labelled progressive, did. Poincare could not get away with it so easily. Herriot no more than MacDonald, will fail in his efforts to win more favor in the eyes of big business by out-Heroding Herod.

What is the difference between a liberal and a capitalist? They differ only in their methods. In periods of calm the liberals use honeyed phrases and uphold free speech and such things, but when capitalism is threatened by the workers, they act just like the reactionaries.

The Debt Controversy

It is becoming clearer every day that France does not entertain the slightest notion of taking immediate steps to liquidate its gigantic debt to the United States.

This should cause no surprise to any one. We have been told a good deal about the great relief that the Dawes plan was going to work for France. It has been our position all the time that the Dawes plan, it its attempt to solve certain capialist contradictions, has only produced new ones. We have maintained that the complicated problems arising out of the terrific war debts incurred are inextricably interwined with the difficulties in the path of the realization of the Dawes scheme.

After considerable rumor about the steps that the French government was preparing to take towards the refunding of the American debt we are at last told that "France must know how the Dawes plan is going to work before she can make definite promises."

This simply means that the French government is confessing its inability to meet the bill. If the French government could take even the most half-hearted steps towards a debt agreement with the Washington government it would do so, because such efforts would enhance tremendously the standing of the franc and the world financial prestige of the Herriot government. Certainly the Herriot administration can ill afford not to endeavor securing recuperation in this direction.

All the efforts and negotiations in the direction of liquidating the French debt to Great Britain are only maneuvers by the debtor French government against the creditor governments of Great Britain and the United States. Imperialist France is trying to drive a better bargain and gain time in its refusal to pay the war debts by seeking terms with one creditor as against another. But victorious France is in no position economically to pay the costs of the war.

We wonder what would happen to the so-called moral fibres of our well-kept editors of the employing class press if a working class government would so arrogantly persist in not meeting "obligations duly contracted." We recall the vehement attacks on the Soviet government merely because it did not declare its readiness and willingness to meet the debts incurred by the czar's expenditures of pogroms and militarist reaction.

Declined with Thanks

Charles Evans Hughes, Morgan-Standard Oil-steel trust secretary of state, breathes his most honeyed phrases in greeting the appointment of a new Japanese ambassador to the United States. "Silent" Calvin Coolidge became articulate long enough to deprecate bellicose statements by rear admirals, so-called because of the aversion to lifting their posteriors from the swivel chairs. These warlike gentlemen like the smell of powder from the shoulders of society ladies. They like to spit fire and drink fire water. Sometimes these morons are useful to the capitalists in fanning the flames of public passion to a white heat. They are then unmuzzled. But just now, Wall Street is soft pedalling its fighting vocabulary.

The two leading functionaries of Wall Street, Hughes and Coolidge, are speaking like Quakers. Japan is irritated and almost in a state of panic over the proposed naval maneuvers in the Pacific. The suspected secret alliance between England and the United States does not add to the Mikado government's equanimity. In order to soothe the troubled mind of the Mikado, the United States government offered to send its fleet on a visit to Tokio after participating in next year's naval maneuvers at Hawaii. But the Japanese government declined the offer with thanks. Soft words don't butter parsnips or cause conflicting interests of the capitalist nations to vanish.

William Green, secretary of the United Mine Workers of America, successor to Gompers, is, as the capitalist press remarks with smug assurance, "a Baptist and a member of the Elks and Odd Fellows."

For anyone who knows the witch-burning character of the baptist church and the social quality of the two fraternal orders mentioned, no further comment is needed. 100 per cent Americanism in the A. F. of L. has another able champion.

Money in Movies for Big Capitalists

(Editor's Note—This is the first of a series of three articles by Comrade William F Kruse, director of Workers' Movies. The second article will be "Movies in Politics" and the third, "Movies in Schools and Church.")

By WM. F. KRUSE.

WHILE the federal trade commission is going thru the motions of "investigating" the "Motion Picture Trust," the movie magnates are tightening their hold on the industry and constantly boosting their capitalization as well as their profits. In the year 1924 new stock issues to the amount of $184,591,606 were announced, the greater bulk being issued by film producers, the largest number of transactions by constantly enlarging theatre chains.

During the nine month period ending Sept. 30, Famous Players-Lasky announced an income of $2,900,501, only slightly less than the same period in 1923. The Loew interests announced their 1924 income from theatres and rentals at $40,628,928 as against only $16,860,160 in 1923.

Even "The Film Daily" is moved to editorial comment on the personnel of the directors of the new "Ritz Pictures Corp.," which includes Frank Vanderlip, "Famous Players," and Walter Hays, of "First National." Can you see anything in this interlocking directors' idea?" they ask. No? Well, wake up. We see a lot."

Serious inroads have been made upon "United Artists," the biggest of the "Independents." Harold Lloyd and D. W. Griffith have already sought shelter in the snug berths of the trust, and Charley Chaplin is said to be coralled at least so far as his next picture is concerned.

The federal investigators seem to be having eye trouble in locating the "Trust." They profess to be fooled by the large number of names under which these closely interlocked companies masquerade. Yet a simple instance of the control of the "first-run" theatres on Broadway, New York, where trade tradition demands every picture must go to establish its "market," is enough to convince anyone except a government "investigator."

The blatant sentimentality of the stage success, "Welcome, Stranger," set it out as a "sure killer" in the film field. Instead of selling the story to the trust a group of "independents," calling themselves "Belasco Productions, Inc.," made it into a film not much worse than the play. Since the stage original had run on Broadway successfully there was no reason why the film should not do the same. Even with the good-sized earnings of these "first-runs" on Broadway, it is absolutely necessary that feature pictures make their debut here if they are to have standing in the trade. And the earnings are not small. It costs $14,000 a week to run the "Rialto," the federal men were told by Hugo Riesenfeld, and about half of this goes for rental. The "Capitol" took in $70,468 in one week of "He, Who Gets Slapped," and $67,885 for "Scaramouche." These two films, which contain considerable appeal, should stand at the head of the list.

So every film producer wants a Broadway "first run." He needs it in his business. But when Belasco Productions came to Broadway no one said, "Welcome, Stranger." Instead, it sounded something like, "Where do you fit?" It was necessary for the backers of the film to advertise in the New York daily press that with two exceptions "all big Broadway motion picture theatres are owned and operated by the several largest film producing companies or affiliated with them, and, therefore, must exhibit exclusively the photoplays of their respective controlling corporations."

Out of the projected $75,000,000 production budget on the Pacific Coast, two companies, Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn, admittedly will spend about half.

Squeezing Out Little Fellows.

But it is not alone in production that the trustification process goes forward exactly as in other older industries. The film industry's belated arrival upon the field of economic development rushes it thru stage after stage in breathless rapidity, jumping in a year the distance that the older industries crawled in a decade. Every issue of every trade paper carries news of the acquisition of chains of theatres by aggressive individual capitalists, then the merger of these chains into ever growing combines, the crushing of competitors by the building of palatial new houses; and the eventual grobbling up of all economically stable properties by the trust.

The building programs running into many millions of dollars and conducted in almost every part of the country must be interpreted as evidence of warfare within the trade rather than of general "prosperity." The same trade paper that announces the building of a two million dollar theatre in Chicago around the corner from two other movie palaces, also contains a notice of the closing down of eleven theatres in southern Illinois, Missouri and Tennessee, on account of "poor business," and breathes a sigh of relief over the destruction of two theatres in Superior, Wis., which will relieve the industry there of "surplus seating."

In upstate New York two companies each have twenty-five theaters, they combine and there are fifty. In St. Louis, William Goldman, already owning several theaters buys half interest in a chain of fourteen more; a few days later, same city, Fred Wehrenberg, owner of two houses, building third, lays down $300,000 for a chain of five more. Balaban and Katz, having 40 theaters in Illinois, invade the Detriot field.

The tremendous hold that a trustified movie industry can exert on public opinion is shown in the case of Hot Springs, Ark. N. Y., a town of less than seven thousand population, too small to support a daily paper, yet six motion picture company operates a chain of seven movie houses there.

Need Labor Movies.

There is no space at this time to discuss the use made by the capitalist class of its control of this powerful means of propaganda. A ruling class will always make maximum use of all available means of publicity, and the American capitalists are astute enough to augment their powerful newspapers, college rostrums, pulpits, etc., with the more subtly appealing, more effective motion picture. Just as it is the lawyer to the capitalist press in labor disputes, so the capitalist movie theater must be answered with the labor theater, and the capitalist film with the labor film. Even tho we can only match our hard won pennies against their dollars, still we must wage the fight unrelentingly in the field as in the others. Information on workers' movies can be secured from the International Workers' Aid, 19 E. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

Against the Esthonian Hangmen

Editor's Note.—The following manifesto of the Communist International and the Communist Youth International, was issued nearly three weeks before the workers' uprising against the farcical trial and assassinations mentioned therein.

It gives in vivid outline the background of the latter class war raging in Esthonia, this little satrapy of England, which has repeatedly been used as a base of military operations against Soviet Russia.

To the Workers of all Countries!

IN a torture chamber, described as a court of justice, the white-guardist Esthonian government of speculators and robbers of state funds is wreaking its vengeance on a hundred and fifty brave and staunch representatives of the revolutionary workers of Esthonia. The bourgeoisie accuses them of treason, of preparing a revolutionary upheaval, of attempting to set up a workers' and peasants' government in Esthonia. It has handed them over to a military court in order to expedite its revenge. The judges and prosecutors in Esthonia constitute a small band from the camp of international fascism.

It is not the first time that the Esthonian bourgeoisie has launched a blow at the class organizations of the Esthonian workers. There was the arrest of those who participated in the trade union congress in the year 1919; the shooting of 26 workers in Isborsk without any trial whatever; the shooting of the old Communist worker, Kingisepp, in the spring of 1922; the murdering of another Communist, Kreuks, in March 1923 in the streets of Reval by a member of the secret police; the persistent and systematic destruction of all class organizations of the workers, which was twice repeated in the course of the last year—in January and August—; and finally this trial of 150 revolutionary workers, who are threatened with shooting or imprisonment with hard labor.

The bourgeois power in Esthonia has become bankrupt. Various groups of the bourgeoisie—big peasants speculators, social democrats—have succeeded one another in the administration of the country—and all with the same result. Different groups of parasites, the speculators and embezzlers of state funds, have enriched themselves; but in the country, among the working masses and the peasantry, among the city petty bourgeoisie and intellectuals, there has only been an increase of misery. Factories have been closed, unemployment has increased, the state finances have approached nearer and nearer to complete bankruptcy. The promises of social reforms and of distribution of land among the peasantry, with which the Esthonian bourgeoisie began its rule, have not been carried out.

They cannot be carried out because of the complete incapacity of the bourgeois power to promote any development of economic life. Little Esthonia, under the rule of the bourgeoisie, is condemned to be an insignificant appendage of one or the other groups of world imperialists.

The only way out for the workers and peasants of little Esthonia consists in the creation of a workers' and peasants' government, based upon the class organizations and in close alliance with the international working class. The alternative is: either workers and peasants' power, or delivery over of the country to the international capitalists.

The bankrupt bourgeoisie is already following this course of delivering over Esthonia to subjection by English capital. But in this attempt at betrayal of the interests of the mass of the population of Esthonia, the Ethonian bourgeoisie encounters the energetic resistance of the united class conscious Esthonian proletariat. And the face of all the bourgeois and petty-bourgeois groups, actively supported by the Esthonian social-democracy, has now decided to open the way to this treachery by means of crushing the organizations of the Esthonian working class.

In January of this year there was carried out simultaneously thruout the whole country, mass house-searchings and wholesale arrests of Communists. The Esthonian secret police broke into perfectly legal workers' meetings and seized the victims they had marked down beforehand. All the active functionaries of the Esthonian trade union movement were victims of this attack, as well as the pioneers of the Esthonian working women. In other places again, it was the staff of workers' educational organisations or finally, the members of the Esthonian state assembly, who are legally immune from arrest. There are ten members of this assembly who are organized in two revolutionary workers' fractions: in the fraction of the Communists and in the fraction of the labor party.

The Esthonian bourgeoisie particularly hates these members of parliament, as, following the example of the revolutionary workers' fraction of the Tsarist duma, they ruthlessly exposed the robbers of the state's funds, the acts of violence and the betrayal of the Esthonian "democracy" which is being prepared. The immunity of the members of parliament was treated as a scrap of paper. All the workers organisations of the country have been dissolved. The proletariat is to be rendered silent.

Bravely and resolutely the prisoners of the Esthonian bourgeoisie are continuing their struggle within the walls of the Esthonian torture-chambers. The farce of the formal legal proceedings is converted by them into a political trial of the bourgeoisie. They do not recognize this class court. Jan Tomp, a leader of the revolutionary Esthonian workers, threw in the face of the hangmen the courageous declaration, that the proletariat will soon place the judges in the dock. For this "contempt of court" he was handed over to a court martial and condemned to death. The bloody sentence has been carried out!

All honor to the revolutionary Esthonian workers! By their steadfastness, by their heroic courage, they have already rendered an invaluable service to the whole working class. May they, in their courageous defence of their revolutionary standpoint and their class organizations, receive the support of the whole international working class, and in the first place of the workers of Esthonia.

Workers of all countries!

Your intervention has already stayed the hand of the executioner which has been raised against the workers' leaders. We must not allow the Esthonian rulers to take revenge on the flower of the Esthonian working class! May the voice of your protest resound everywhere against the class court and the hangmen's revenge!

Esthonian hangmen, remember, you will have to pay with your heads for the lives of the leaders of the Esthonian proletariat!

Down with the Esthonian executioners!

Long live the revolutionary proletariat of Esthonia!

Letters From Our Readers

Gompers and the Mexicans.

The other day, before Sam Gompers turned up his toes, we received this letter regarding the way the Mexicans seem to have been influenced by Gompers. We assure the writer that the noise he heard of the Mexican "workers" acclaiming the old faker, was publicity. The Morones gang in Mexico is like the Gompers gang in the U. S. A., they speak for "labor" which either isn't class conscious yet, or which hates their guts. These gangs only get away with it because the revolutionary left wing in the unions either isn't born yet or is sleeping instead of fighting. The letter follows:

"Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 30.

"Editor DAILY WORKER:—One of the strangest things and something I can't understand is Gompers' influence over the Mexican working class after his betrayal of them into the hands of the American capitalists.

"The price paid for recognition of the Mexican government by the United States, was the oil leases given on the terms of Doheney. The deal was engineered by Gompers, McAdoo and Hughes. How the Mexican working class can support Gompers for his act as American capitalists is too much for me. I just can't understand it as the facts are so well known.

"How he can make out that that deal was a benefit or advantage to the Mexican workers is beyond me. I can understand Obregon, Calles, Hughes, McAdoo and the other international crooks playing the game, but not the Mexican working class.

"I may be wrong, but I feel Sam Gompers is to find his Waterloo in Mexico, and his influence to corrupt the European working man gone forever.—Signed: Henry Donderey."

Define Your Terms.

To the DAILY WORKER:

Would it not be a good idea to set aside a particular column for definitions and how to pronounce words that are unfamiliar to young people and new readers who, I expect, will be many for some time to come? Few have dictionaries and fewer still have the latest and I hardly think even the latest dictionary has all these words used in the DAILY WORKER, like Bolshevik, menshevik, and chinovik, and many words are used in a particular sense in socialist literature as far as I have been able to learn.

Here is a list of words that are puzzles to me and I believe they are to many others. I know some of these can be found in the dictionary, but I put them all down here. How, are they pronounced? And what do they mean?

Marxism, Leninism, Marxian-Leninism, materialism, Marxian library, opportunism, propaganda, parliamentarism, pseudo-Marxism, socialism, Communism, G. O. P., Soviet, Bolshevik, chinovik, menshevik, Fascist, imperialist, socialist, syndicalist, proletariat, bourgeois, autocracy, bureaucracy, democracy, ideology.— Emil Benson, R. 5, Box 86, Petaluma, Cal.

Calls for Amalgamation.

Editor The DAILY WORKER: I read in the DAILY WORKER of Monday, December 15, your story headed, "Baking Trusts Amalgamate, So Must Your Unions." I showed it to my fellow workers and they said: "That looks like the truth." So I hung it in the office so that everybody can read it.

I hope you put more in the DAILY WORKER about the amalgamation of the food workers' unions.—Food Worker of Pittsburgh.

HARD COAL STRIKE MAY SPREAD

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE dwellings of preachers should not be taxed, declared a member of the board of review of Chicago. "These poor men are not working for money and I don't think their homes should be taxed" said the good natured capitalist servant. Officially they are no working for money. They are acting for the lord, and theoretically every nickel they get goes to the heavenly treasury. But many people have their doubts, particularly as Jesus and company appears to be as broke today as the first time he started passing the hat.

THE pope has made it clear that even tho he has denounced the Soviet government, the holy shrapnel was not meant for the Russian "people." He makes exceptions in the case of the aristocratic prostitutes of both sexes who fled from Russia when the workers and peasants took matters into their own hands. His holiness will continue to keep vitamines inside the ribs of the czarists, hoping against hope that whatever bread he throws to them, may float up the Tiber some day in the form of rubles, or raw material in the form of souls which the canny Italian knows how to turn into lire.

COMMUNISTS have been charged with many directions and crimes but it took the Herriot government to strongly hint that they are itinerable stock gamblers. A report that the French government intends to expel all foreign Communists who attempt to profit financially by spreading reports on the bourse, of Communist danger, was made by the Paris "Soir" of police. Capitalist governments are known to make financial war on each other, and the Herriot version is no doubt levelled against the Soviet ambassador. It is another indication of the shakiness of French capitalism and its fear of Communism.

• • •

THE New York Nation, a liberal weekly, published a story in its issue of Dec. 17, written by Louis Fischer who was in Georgia, Caucuses, during the late counter-revolution in that country. The article states that the Georgian rebellion could not have taken place but for the assistance of such alleged pacifists as Ramsay MacDonald, then premier of England and Herriot, radical socialist premier of France.

BOTH had met with leaders of the Georgian bourgeoisie and promised them support. This despite the fact that Soviet Russia was officially at peace with both countries and MacDonald and Herriot were stressing their pacific intentions. The testimony from a non-Communist source proves the Communist contention that social-democrats are the most slimy and treacherous enemies of the working class and of Soviet Russia. His treachery did not save MacDonald's official head and Herriot is sure to get the same treatment from his present masters.

JAPANESE papers have published the terms of an alleged secret agreement between the United States and England, providing for common action in the Far East. Washington has agreed to the development of the Singapore naval base. Britain claims the base is designed to strengthen Australia, but the Japanese see in it a threat to their domination of the eastern Pacific.

THE word of a capitalist government means nothing and a treaty means even less. It is valid just so long as it serves the purpose of the hirelings who sign it. That there is an agreement between England and the United States today for a "hands off" policy in certain spheres of world pillage is obvious. How long the agreement will stand the test of the two powers' conflicting interests in other quarters is another question.

BUFFALO OUT TO RAISE ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR DAILY

By JOSEPH SIMINOFF,
Local Organizer, Workers Party.

BUFFALO, Dec. 22.—Buffalo has pledged itself to raise its quota of $600 to make the DAILY WORKER safe for 1925 and then some more. The English branch has opened up the campaign with the sale of $65 worth of insurance policies at its first meeting and has pledged to raise twice that amount before the end of the campaign. The members of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League realize the great value of a Communist daily in this country and are out to build a more powerful DAILY WORKER.

The C. C. C. has decided to arrange a bazaar for the end of January for the DAILY WORKER. The C. C. C. has issued a call for a united front of labor to insure the only English daily that represents and fights the battles of the workers. A number of organizations have responded and are out to make a financial success of the bazaar. "$1,000 for the DAILY WORKER from Buffalo," is our battle cry.

'BRITISH TORY PROPAGANDA,' IS SOVIET REPLY

Brands As Lies Stories of "Trotsky Revolt"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Dec. 22.—"British tory propaganda!"

This was the answer today of official Moscow to world-wide reports of a new upheaval in Russia, occasioned by attempts to oust and banish Leon Trotzky, soviet commissar for war.

Dispatches from European capitals stating that Trotsky was leading an open fight against the Soviet, that the strong opposition to him, had tried to force his retirement and that his reported illness was a ruse to cover his exile, were flatly denied by high Soviet authorities.

Lies of Counter-Revolutionists.

These and other sensational reports, Soviet officials charged, emanate from British tory sources. These anti-Soviet leaders in Britain, official Moscow said, are closely allied with counter-revolutionists within Russia and with those who, in western Europe and America are trying to force a break in the Russo-French treaty and generally conceal the wonderful progress being made by the Soviet rule at home.

Trotsky, despite reports, still holds his position as war commissar, it was declared.

Krupskaya, widow of the beloved Lenin, declares that Trotsky must be fought by means of Lenin's teachings, but not by drastic steps.

Country Condemning Trotsky.

Resolutions against Trotsky's policies continue to pour in from the provinces, but none demand punitive measures. Health Commissar Siemasko, in an interview, denied that Trotsky's illness was "camouflage."

"Trotsky really is a sick man," he said. "He must take a rest."

Trotsky's right hand man, Frunze, is acting head of the war office, but Trotsky continues in the position of war commissar.

Negroes Valuable as Laborers, But Social Menace, Says Virginian

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 22.—Characterizing Abraham Lincoln as the original Garveyite who wanted to return the Negro race to Africa, Dr. W. A. Plecker, Virginia state registrar of vital statistics, deplored the mixture of the white and Negro races thru intermarriage.

Plecker declared "The Negro as a laborer is valuable, and if it were possible to preserve the race in purity with him in our midst he would be a great asset. Because this cannot be done, they are a great problem." Plecker declared the mixing of bloods a menace, but admitted that in spite of Virginia's law prohibiting the marriage of a white person with a person with even the trace of African blood, mixed marriages are continually taking place.

Plecker showed his extreme fear of the mixing of the races and advocated the setting up of the strictest artificial barriers between the two races.

In spite of these laws, the races continue to mingle and marry, even in Virginia.

Traffic in Slaves Continues in Arabia; Are Used as Soldiers

LONDON, England, Dec. 22.—Traffic in slaves is still being carried on in the African Sudan, where slaves are stealthily transported across the Red Sea into southern Arabia, it has been found. Trading dhows, or Arabian boats, ply between the Arabian coast and Africa and carry a number of slaves on each trip, hidden below. These slaves are disposed of in the Arab slave markets. Often the Arab chiefs wait at the ports to receive the slaves, then taking them into the interior.

The slaves are used as soldiers and servants." Most of the trading takes place on the coast of the Red Sea one the Hedjas coast, between Wejh and Jeddah.

ROSEN, LEFT-WINGER, WINS PHILADELPHIA CARPENTERS BY 5 TO 1

By R. BAKER.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—The election in the Carpenters' Union is showing that the left wing has a tremendous following in opposition to the Hutcheson gang.

Not all returns being in as yet, on Local No. 1051, the German Local, it shows 77 votes for Rosen, the left wing candidate against Hutcheson.

But in the Italian Local No. 1050, the heavy Rosen vote was nearly unanimous, Rosen getting 190; Brown, the Illinois labor faker, 4; and Hutcheson getting only two votes. In the Jewish Local No. 1073, Rosen got 283 votes, Brown only 4, and old King Hutcheson limped in with 87 votes. Five to one is not a bad vote for Local 1073, but look at that 95 to one, for Rosen against Hutcheson in the Italian local.

GIANT THRONG GREETS GERMAN RED LEADER

Berlin Toilers Welcome Released Prisoner

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 22.—At least 150,000 workers lead by Communist Party leaders gathered here today to greet the return of Erich Muehsam, Communist leader, who was released from a Bavarian prison where he served five years for participating in the Bavarian revolution in 1919. Comrade Muehsam was paroled by the Bavarian government.

The great mass of workers met the imprisoned rebel at the railway station. Despite heavy police detachments, the demonstrators insisted on speechmaking.

Muehsam addressed the crowd and assured them that he was as firmly convinced of the success of the Communist movement as before he went to jail and more so. Then the Russian revolution was beset by foes within and the capitalist world without, he declared. Today, he continued Soviet Russia is impregnable and stands as a beacon light to the workers of the rest of the world.

Owing to the intense enthusiasm caused by Muehsam's release among the workingclass, heavy cordons of police were placed around the offices of government officials. The Vorwarts, official organ of the German socialists was also closely guarded by police.

Big Paris Demonstration.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—Thirty thousand Paris Communists marched yesterday in a chilling wind to Butte Chapean Rouge, singing the "International" to participate in a demonstration against the reactionaries and for general amnesty for class war prisoners.

The Fascisti under General Castelneau, are growing in numbers, but they have not yet mustered up sufficient courage to attack the Communists. The decline of fascism in Italy and the imminent downfall of Mussolini is having a deterrent effect on similar movements in other countries. The experience of the Italian workers in handling the black shirt menace has not been lost on the French Communists.

Coolidge Men and Financiers Behind American Legion Fund

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 22.—The plutocrats are flocking to the support of the American Legion endowment fund campaign. Mrs. Hoover, wife of the secretary of commerce, Marshall Field III, and Col. Albert Sprague, are the latest representatives of the employing class to follow the lead of Coolidge in accepting places on the honorary endowment fund committee.

Secretary of War Weeks, who relies on the legion to take the lead in shoving his militaristic program down the throat of the people, said, "I am pleased to indorse this worthy project."

12,000 MINERS THREATEN TO JOIN IN STRIKE

Revolt Against Lewis Growing in Pa.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 22.—Twelve thousand Lehigh Valley coal miners may join with the 12,000 employes of the Pennsylvania Coal company who are on strike for three weeks, when a vote is taken this week on the question of parking their picks in sympathy with their fellow workers.

District President Rinaldo Capellini, the renegade radical who sold out to the companies immediately after his election, has warned the Lehigh Valley miners of serious consequences provided they down tools.

Same Treatment.

Capellini sent telegrams to the twelve locals advising them that a strike would mean the same treatment that was accorded to the brothers of the Pennsylvania company when their charters were lifted.

The agents of John L. Lewis are doing their level best to break the strike of the Pennsylvania employes and send them back to work without a settlement of their demands. The strikers are demanding a special convention which Capellini declines to grant them.

PULLMAN CAR CO. TRIES TO START A TEN HOUR DAY

To Force Overtime at Straight Rate

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PULLMAN, Ill., Dec. 22.—The Pullman Car Co., thru B. McCarthy, its general foreman, informed the workers of the steel cabinet department, who refused to work overtime at the regular rate instead of time and a half as always paid previously, has threatened them that unless they work overtime on Saturday afternoon at the regular rate they need not report for work on Monday next.

They are now putting in 50 hours per week, with time and a half for overtime. The company wants them to work 60 hours per week at the regular rate. The company plans to inaugurate the 10-hour day in all the shops beginning Jan. 1, 1925: The prevalent sentiment among the workers is that they will refuse to accept the company terms for a 10-hour day.

The fake, company "shop committees" which are supposed to represent the workers, are holding sessions in secret and they never dare report to the workers what steps they are taking when they discuss the questions affecting the hours and the wages of the workers.

LOS ANGELES WORKERS MAKE UNITED FRONT FOR SACCO-VANZETTI

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 22.—The efforts of the Workers Party on the united front for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti was proved a great success by last night's meeting held here in a joint mass meeting of the Workers Party, the I. W. W., the unions and fraternal organizations interested.

There were 800 present and $300 were collected for the Sacco-Vanzetti case to carry on the fight against the outrageous death sentence. But the best result of this meeting, which is the first one in the campaign, is the inauguration of a permanent executive committee to push the work.

OPEN SHOPPERS RUN SCHOOL FOR SCAB PRINTERS

Get Ready to Break Strikes in Future

The Open Shop Employing Printers' Association of Chicago, which is warring on the printing trades unions, is running a school which supplies open shop printing concerns with "apprentices of all kinds," who have been trained to work under the "open shop."

Supply Strikebreakers.

One of the objects of the "school" is admitted to be the supplying of strikebreakers in case of labor trouble. The association declares as one of its aims, "Securing the mutual assistance of its members in upholding their right to operate their plants upon the principle of the open shop thru CO-OPERATING TO GET OUT WORK IN CASE OF LABOR DIFFICULTY BY FURNISHING ASSISTANCE TO SECURE HELP IF NECESSARY OR OTHERWISE."

The "open shop" organization maintains an "employment bureau," which is used to displace union men who have been found out and fired by the anti-union "open shop" printing firms. The school which is called "The Chicago School of Printing," is used as a means of spreading propaganda against the printing trades unions.

Prints Open Shop News.

The association prints a monthly magazine called "Open Shop News," which contains propaganda against the unions. The December issue of this magazine calls on the employers to establish Christmas savings funds for next year, because, "the employe who has a Christmas savings fund account thru the firm is not going to leave his job on a minute's notice." In other words, payment of the fund to the employe can be delayed, keeping him on the job until he can be replaced.

Foreign-Owned Mills Use Company Stores to Enslave Cuban Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 22.—A condition that Gompers and his delegation failed to comment upon when in Mexico, is the direct violation of the law by the Cuban Cant Corporation, which pays its workers with chips instead of money. This corporation, which has many mills thruout Cuba, gives the workers scraps of paper and afterwards the workers can use the paper only at the company stores, which charge ridiculously high prices for all goods sold. This is a system worse than feudalism, for the workers can obtain the necessities of life at only one place, the company store, and must pay much higher prices than prevail elsewhere in Cuba.

The "Ariega" law prohibits the use of chips and I. O. U.'s in payment for service rendered. The corporation is a foreign concern, which is not to be controlled by American capital.

GENERAL LABOR WAR IN SWEDEN—100,000 WORKERS LOCKED OUT

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 22.— Sixty-five per cent of Sweden's organized labor, numbering many more than 100,000 men, will be locked out New Year's day by the employers. These workers are demanding wage increases of from 20 to 30 per cent, and the lock-out has been announced by the employers' associations in retaliation.

Engineers, textile workers and many other trades will be affected. The government is urging the men to stay at work at their old wage.

TEACHERS MUST ORGANIZE TO GET WAGE INCREASES

Charge Engineers Are More Intelligent

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 22.—If recognition is to come to the teachers of America they themselves must organize, F. G. Stecker, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Teachers declared here. Stecker says the engineers and firemen receive higher wages "because these men are more intelligent and therefore more useful and better remunerated." They are more intelligent because they perceive the conditions of the economic period in which we are living and seek as best they can to adapt themselves to these conditions.

"We live in a period of organization," Stecker continued. "It is useless to deceive ourselves that only laborers and a few elements with which we are more or less out of sympathy are organized. Every controlling force in our American life, financial, political, economic, social, professional and even cultural, owes its success to organization. Teachers are the most notorious exception. It is for this reason that unconsciously the American public is so little interested in the teacher."

The American Federation of Teachers is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

J. H. HOOVER GETS GETS JOB ONCE HELD BY BURNS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Despite the protestations of Attorney General Stone, that the vacancy caused by the dismissal of William J. Burns from his position as chief investigator of the department of justice would not be filled, the expected has happened.

After public excitement over the Teapot Dome graft scandal and the corruption exposed in the department of justice died down, the promise made by the government prior to the election were conveniently forgotten Now that the excitement is over, we find J. H. Hoover slipping his feet in Burns' shoes.

Spying on Unions.

The new attorney general promised after his appointment, that the bureau of investigation would not be used for spying on unions and radical organizations. But is a well known fact among newspaper men in Washington that agents of the department of justice have been active recently, trying to engage men and women for espionage work, in trade unions and political parties of the workers.

LABOR BOARD IS ASKED TO FIGHT WAGE INCREASE

So. Pacific Threatens Rate Increase

The United States railroad labor board has been called upon by 45 western railroad companies to either rescind the recent five per cent wage increase granted the locomotive engineers and firemen or allow the railroads to increase their rates.

The labor board has done all in its power to prevent the employes from receiving the wage increase which has already been gained on eastern railroads. The board on Nov. 29, granted the wage increase, but changed the working rules, depriving the employes of much of their overtime pay. The unions refused to accept this settlement and forced the companies to grant the wage increase without changing the working rules.

The labor board is now appealed to by the Southern Pacific line to nullify this settlement on the ground that it was "obtained under duress and the threat to strike." "The companies must either be enabled to reduce operating expenses or to advance the rate charged the public," says the petition to the railroad labor board.

Judging from the past decisions of the labor board, the men will be cheated out of their wage increase if the labor board can possibly accomplish it by making its usual decisions in favor of the railroad companies.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Wall Street may send a regular general to rule Porto Rico after the resignation of the present governor, has gone thru the mill. Horace M. Towner, present incumbent, desires to be relieved of his post according to information released by the state department. It is more likely, however, that Wall Street is dissatisfied with his management of its affairs and wants to show the iron fist without any silken glove.

The more likely candidate for the job is Major General H. H. Bandholds, of the United States army who has discharged several diplomatic missions for his masters in the past

C. E. RUTHENBERG FACES SENTENCE MONDAY, DEC. 29

Judge White Puts Off Appearance in Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. JOSEPH, Dec. 22.—Judge Charles E. White today postponed the sentencing of C. E. Ruthenberg until Monday, Dec. 29.

Attorney I. E. Ferguson had requested Judge White last week to postpone his order for the appearance of Ruthenberg for sentence until early in January, in order to give the defense time to appeal to the higher court, but Judge White set the day before Christmas as the date for sentence. The postponement today was made on Judge White's own initiative.

Meanwhile the Michigan supreme court will act upon a motion of the defense Tuesday for a return of the mandate authorizing Judge White to sentence, in order to permit attorneys for the defense to come into court with a motion for the rehearing of the case. If the motion for the return of the mandate is denied Ruthenberg will have to appear in Monday for sentence and after sentence the only recourse to keep Ruthenberg out of prison will be an appeal to the United States supreme court and bail granted by that court while the case is pending.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Walter N Polakov, distinguished American engineer, has dispatched the following letter to the workers and technician of the Autonomous Industrial Colony "Kuzbas," at Kemerovo, Tomsk gub. Siberia:

"Tom Barker has ben good enough to keep me posted on the progress your are making at the 'Kurbas Colony.' Considering all the handicaps you have to meet, the results you have attained appear wonderful. As some of you may remember I was contemplating joining your colony but on account of my health was unable to do so. Nevertheless my interest in you makes me feel happy that you are doing so well and that your American pioneer spirit is overcoming the obstacles in the new frontier.

Transfusion of Gold Into Capitalist Austria Is Proving Big Failure

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, after two years of convalescence under the direction of the League of Nations, even the biggest financiers confess that one of its prize invalids, capitalist Austria, is as sick as ever. In fact, it may be said, that Austria is worse off than ever.

Every scheme known to the diplomats and the bankers of the Versailles peace has been used to put Austria on its feet again. But without avail. Austria is as shaky a pillar in the capitalist structure of western Europe as she was two years ago.

* * * *

The tremors running thru the whole Austrian capitalist edifice are aggravated by the fact that the workers and peasants have lost many of their illusions as to what the League of Nations, with its loans, is able to do for them. They have gone thru the period of the Morgan-Dawes nostrum. This was clearly seen in the recent great upheavals; the strikes of the metal workers and the railway men.

It is pointed out that all the reconstruction promised thruout Austria, that was to place this political unit of capitalism on its feet again, has merely taken place on paper. New injections of foreign gold are needed to prevent the patient from completely collapsing. If these are withdrawn, and they cannot be kept up indefinitely, the outlook becomes rather dark for the allied imperialists.

* * * *

Liberal long-term loans from abroad, for private enterprises in Austria, is the hope held out for Austrian capitalism. Of course, the only nation making loans these days, on any considerable scale, is the United States.

"Austrian business is very shaky! A tacit moratorium exists," laments Arthur Brisbane, leading brass checker of the Hearst press. "You can't help noticing these troubles and threatening troubles in Europe," he continues. "Think them over before you buy European bonds. It takes only a small revolution to upset big bond issues."

* * * *

Brisbane urges that investors put their money into bonds in the United States. But patients have been known to die of too much blood as well as too little. The United States has a surfeit of gold. Austria has practically none at all. Austrian business interests are unable to pay their debts. Austrian capitalism has become aenemic. It asks for a transfusion of American gold, for which the usurers of Wall Street demand their exhorbitant rates, because Austrian capitalism is a big risk.

Two years of transfusion, however, have not helped. Commissioner Zimmerman, the Dutch receiver over Austria, appointed by the League of Nations, sounds the note of alarm. He fears that the international standing of the Austrian crown will suffer. That means greater difficulty in getting foreign financial aid. A case of aggravated aenemia.

* * * *

The purchasing power of the Austrian crown is gradually decreasing at home. That means higher prices for the workers to pay out of their meager wages. That means hunger, growing struggles; ultimately the struggle of the workers for all power. That is the only way out for Austrian workers. They must profit by the example set them by the Russian workers and peasants.

ELECTION CALL OF MUSSOLINI FASCISTI FAKE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Dec. 22. — The opposition parties have passed a resolution branding Mussolini's claim to want a new election "with all political parties given freedom of expression" as a fake, and declaring that his electoral bill "clouds the political issue." The resolution of the opposition charges that Mussolini's bill "will make impossible the holding of elections by the fascist government under the conditions announced."

Mussolini's motives in introducing a bill into the chamber of deputies whereby the chamber adjourned until Jan. 3, are his anger at the failure of his closest collaborators, who have been forced to resign one after another, deputies say. Mussolini is risking another general election because he was constantly losing prestige during the present session of the chamber.

The opposition controls almost all of the important papers of Italy, and is almost certain to make heavy gains in the election provided the votes are properly counted. But the fascisti still control the state power, and hence have an advantage in the elections. Mussolini is weak in the large cities and in the south of Italy. His strongest support comes from the rural sections.

U. S. MINISTER LANDS IN CHINA WITH MORE CASH

PEKING, Dec. 22.—Jacob Gould Schurman, American minister to China, arrived in the Chinese capital today, after an absence of five months He was welcomed by the American legation guard and members of the foreign diplomatic corps.

Has Lots of Dough.

The American ambassador is reported to be in a position to spend a large sum of money in disorganizing China and preventing the unity of the nation, which is the aim of the present government. The United States government is trying to bring Japan and France into the already existing Anglo-American bloc for the re-division and Dawesation of China.

Japan so far is holding aloof and is more inclined to look benevolently on the diplomacy of Soviet Russia which stands for the independence of the Oriental peoples against the robber powers of the Occident. For the Japan ruling class it is the lesser of two evils.

TOKIO, Dec. 22.—Resolutions protesting against the forthcoming 1925 United States naval maneuvers in Hawaiian waters were adopted here today held at meetings under the auspices of the Kokumin Tabeika political society to discuss Japanese American relations. Bancroft tomorrow and request him to transmit the resolutions to President Coolidge and to the United States senate.

YELLOW PRESS AIDS EMPLOYERS' COSSACK PLANS

Unite in Campaign for State Police

The close cooperation of the Illinois manufacturers with the newspapers of the state, in trying to pass the "state police" measure which would supply the manufacturers with armed and mounted strikebreakers, is revealed in a letter which has come into possession of the DAILY WORKER.

The letter written to the "State Police Auxiliary Committee," by Paul Goddard, past president and member of the executive committee of the Illinois Press association, reads as follows:

"I desire to congratulate you on the splendid work you are doing in the interests of that great constructive public measure, 'State Police'," writes Goddard to the state police committee. "The newspapermen of Illinois should appreciate the high compliment you pay them when you make your appeal for support for the state police law direct to the people thru the columns of their newspapers."

Goddard compliments the "state police auxiliary committee" on the propaganda they are spreading in favor of the cossack police bill. Goddard shows that the Illinois newspapers are supporting the anti-labor strikebreaking "police bill."

"That kind of publicity is honest and above board," says Goddard to the publicity committee working for the police bill. "WE HAVE HAD TOO MUCH UNDERHANDED WORK IN THE SECURING OF OUR LAWS. MONEY HAS BEEN LAVISHLY SPENT IN BRIBING MEN IN HIGH PLACES AND WITH A FULL!

"No matter what the personal feelings of the editors of the state police bill, they should applaud your plan of appealing to the people by honest to goodness advertising in the newspapers of Illinois. I am writing this letter entirely unsolicited."

Chinese Students Strike; Can't Stomach American Faculty

PEKING, China, Dec. 22.—A strike of students against the arbitrary attempt of the American faculty to impose western religious rigmarole on the Chinese students has closed the Yale College in Changsha, Hunan province. The college is American endowed.

One of the chief causes of the walkout was the insistence of the American faculty that the students read the Bible. The high school department is also closed as a result of the strike.

SCRIBES INVENT "RED REVOLTS" AS PROPAGANDA

Seek to Break Off Russ Relations

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 22.—The spectacle of timid bourgeois hunting holes to hide in, is the chief result so far of the "self-made revolution" created by a few Paris newspapers who hire reporters with vivid imaginations to concoct fairy tales about the danger of a "Communist uprising."

There is, of course, the one explosive situation existing at Amiens, coming from a scare story printed in La Liberatire, a monarchist paper, telling of "plots" by Communists to capture the garrison, seize all arms and "take the city." There was no such plot, but the scare given the bourgeoisie provoked the formation of a fascisti battalion of 5,000 shopkeepers and capitalist recruits who promise to suppress all radical workers' unions and parties, and thus start real trouble.

Putting Herriot in a Hole.

Another product of the scare, which is part of a deliberate campaign by certain groups of capitalists and monarchists to force a breaking-off of relations with Soviet Russia, is the discrediting of Herriot. If he moves it legally against the Communists, and they have done nothing more than usual, to suppress them, he alienates the support of great masses of workers and poor peasants, while if he does nothing, the capitalist newspapers call him a "weakling" and influence all the bourgeois elements to overthrow his cabinet.

The great effort being made by world reaction to break off the relations Soviet Russia has established in the west is seen by this and other propaganda campaigns, especially the wild rumors flying about concerning the mythical "revolts" against the Soviet government.

But the lies continue. The liar in Stockholm reports that some unnamed source in Odessa says that "Trotsky has ordered Stalin arrested." The liar in Vienna adds that "street fighting is going on in Kazan between followers of Trotsky and of Zinoviev." The Bucharest liar supplies the details of how "Stalin was captured by soldiers, who would not release him until their garrison was destroyed by artillery." The busy liar at Helsingfors, chips in with a story of a new Kronstadt revolt now about four years old.

BIG LEGAL FIGHT IS NOW ON TO SAVE MANY COMMUNISTS FROM PRISON AND DEPORTATION

Bringing the revolutionary working class movement face to face with the serious possibility of a retrial of William Z. Foster, leader of the great steel strike of 1919, and of the trial of all the thirty-two Communists indicted in Michigan, the decision of the Michigan supreme court, upholding the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg, is one which goes far beyond the individual case it considered.

The Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington Street, Chicago, is taking up the challenge. First, there is the immediate danger to Comrade Ruthenberg. Ruthenberg is executive secretary of the Workers Party, and his name is known to the class conscious workers thruout the United States. Application for a re-hearing has been made. In all likelihood, the case will have to be taken to the United States supreme court.

Once more the slogan is going out: GET BEHIND THE MICHIGAN DEFENSE!

While concentrating its immediate attention upon the Ruthenberg case, the Labor Defense Council is obliged to make preparation for a strong defense which will have to be put up for the other Communist leaders in the event that Ruthenberg's conviction is upheld by the United States supreme court.

Meanwhile, the Labor Defense Council is defending many other cases. For instance, there is the case of John Bukss, of Wheeling, W. Va., who has been found "guilty of distributing copies of the Workers Party program." Bukss's case will, in all probability, go to the United States supreme court.

John C. Schedel, whose arrest following his return to this country after deportation to Germany, has aroused widespread protest, is still out on bail, but his case is by no means settled. Within a short time, he may be brought to trial and perhaps re-deported, leaving his wife and children practically destitute in this country. The Labor Defense Council is prepared to fight this case through.

Comrade Vajtauer, a member of the Czecho-Slovak Federation of the Workers Party, has already been ordered deported. The Labor Defense Council is trying to secure his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus.

The work of the Labor Defense Council has now become so various and so extensive that its activities must be brought home intimately to every one interested in the legal defense of Communists. Money is needed if this work is to be carried out successfully—if Communists are to be properly defended. Send in your contributions now—and continuously!

May Deport Klein.

Efforts on the part of the government to deport Thomas Klein, member of the Workers Party in Philadelphia, are being strenuously combatted by the Labor Defense Council. Klein has just received a re-hearing. If he is deported, it will be a veritable catastrophe for his wife and seven children, who will be left destitute.

LETTER FROM KUZBAS SHOWS RUSSIAN INDUSTRIES RAPIDLY RECOVERING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KEMEROVO, Siberia.—(By Mail.)—Industries are steadily increasing their output. Dr. Elsie Reed Mitchell, the doctor for the eighth group of American who went to Kuzbas via the Pacific Ocean in the summer of 1923, writes. Comrade Mitchell's letter follows:

"I am glad to be able to tell the readers of the DAILY WORKER that all of our group are well and no one has left Kuzbas—except Kask, whose death from fin-pneumonia early last winter was felt deeply by all of our group and the entire colony.

But our number has been maintained by a new Maravich baby, another girl who does credit to her environment as a marvel of physical development and perfect good nature.

"The industry is flourishing, and the coke and chemical plant was opened last spring after unheard-of efforts, which included finding all sorts of necessary material in all sorts of places, including the two basements, down among rubbish and debris. Some of this dispersion was intentional counter-revolutionary sabotage of long ago, some was undoubtedly, to preserve things by making them appear valueless, and some was accidental. Our one turbine has done wonderful work all these months, but will not continue unsupported, as the second was "found" by a visiting commission at Kolchugina, about 50 versts away, just the other day!

"It is now here and will be installed as soon as the cement foundation is in. When the first turbine began to run by the excess gas from the coke ovens there was an immediate saving of 30 tons of coal a day.

"Our coke goes to the Urals. The other important products, benzol, naphtaleine, toluol and tar are not being fully used yet, as the small industries of the country are not yet fully prepared to use them. Nevertheless, our success has sufficiently satisfied the government to cause them to turn over Kolchugina to us also. The reason it logically belongs with this plant is that the coal has some different properties which exactly supplement ours in producing the coke.

"Besides the coal and coke in this distant region, we must have our own foundry, forges, blacksmiths, carpenters, etc., in order to supply all our needs right here on the spot. We are about 400 Americans and 10,000 Russians. The Dutch engineer, Rutgers, is our head.

"When we arrived in Sept. 23, we found that every one practically had enough to eat. Occasionally beggars still came for clothes. This year the co-operative is full of everything necessary and every one has money with which to buy—real money, stabilized early this year. I enclose you a kopek paper, which continues to be worth ½-cent. It furnishes a good companion to the 50 kopek of 1923, which was the smallest piece printed for years and which deteriorated so rapidly it soon became valueless.

"When we came every colonist was still getting a regular monthly ration at 60 per cent of the wage, of all the necessities. This was abolished in the spring of 1924, and now the two kitchens, one on each side of the river, and individuals buy and pay for what they like.

"We still have a little American food, such as baking powder, crisco, and some canned stuff; but nothing has come from abroad for months and, of course, will not. The only hardship for us is that coffee is considered a "luxury" in this tea-drinking land, and is therefore, taxed to the limit. I am lucky in having brought along several pounds of green beans which I have not needed to use until now.

"Our hospital of 65 beds and our clinic (ambulatory) on each side of the river, do a heavier work than would be needed among the same number at home—naturally, after war and famine. All the women are delivered in the hospital.

"Miss Mehlmann is running a really modern school for Americans, gradually making material. The Russian schools are crowded to the limit; can't let them in under 7. Night schools for adults and factory school for apprentices, between 16 and 18 years.

"I have learned quite a bit of Russian and finally secured a good history, but it is hard reading.—Kemerovo, Siberia, Nov. 18, 1924."

Moscow Communists Demand Freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti

MOSCOW, Nov. 8.—(By Mail.)—At a gathering held at the Anglo-Saxon section, International Communist Club for Political Emigrants, in Moscow, Nov. 20, to celebrate the seventh anniversary of the Russian October revolution the following resolution moved by Comrade William D. Haywood was unanimously passed:

"This meeting of members of the Anglo-Saxon section of the Zagorsky Club for Political Emigrants expresses our strong protest and indignation at the exhibition of class justice on the part of the United States capitalist courts which have held Comrades Sacco and Vanzetti in jail for years on a charge of murder; a charge supported on circumstantial evidence, supported by avowed perjurers. In spite of the admitted unreliability of the evidence against our comrades, the Massachusetts state supreme court has rejected the appeal against conviction and confirmed the sentence of death.

"This meeting sends its heartfelt greetings and encouragement to our comrades and calls upon the organized working class to exert all its efforts to save them from the vindictiveness and vengeance of the capitalist class.

"At the meeting a collection was taken up which we are forwarding to you, thru the Prambank, for the Sacco and Vanzetti defense, receipt for which (see bill enclosed)."

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—Dante and Ines Sacco are beautiful children. Dante is eleven; Inez is four. With their clear-eyed, auburn-haired little mother and their good friend Susie, they live in three rooms of an old New England farm house near Rockville, in the rolling country behind Boston. Geraniums bloom in big pots on the kitchen window sill, enlivening the clean bare room.

Ines and Dante smile greetings with Rose, their mother, when friends occasionally visit them. Ines laughs quickly, tossing her dark brown head and flashing her big chestnut eyes. Dante smiles wistfully as tho he could not be too happy. The mother's face warms up with a warm, swift smile that relapses rapidly into a more drawn look.

Rose Sacco looks physically very well but around the grey eyes tiny lines of care show. She realizes, she says to the friends who have come in, that she must keep her grip on herself for the children. But the thought of Nicola Sacco, innocent of the crime for which he has been convicted, spending his fourth year in Dedham jail, weighs heavily upon her heart.

Dante shows his school geography and follows eagerly on the various maps the course of a visitor's travels as she points the way. Geography and history are his favorite studies. Mother Rose is asking what are some of the good new books for children; it is hard to find what they want at the little local library.

Dante is in the 7th grade. He doesn't mention that some of the boys taunt him and worry him saying that his father is a criminal and going to be electric chair, even tho the school principal told them all that the case was not settled and that the father should be given the benefit of the doubt. Dante knows about his father's case in more than a boy's way. When his father was on hunger strike Dante pleaded with him to stop so that he might live and return to the family.

Little Ines romps from one friend to another, delightedly showing her picture book to one, playing with another's chain of keys. She doesn't know yet about the father whose dream of freedom for mankind made him prey of those who want only masters and slaves. She doesn't know about sweet-tempered Bartolomeo Vanzetti who is confined in Charlestown prison because he dreamed a better world with her father.

Rose Sacco knows that workers who fight for a better life must suffer to win it for others. She knows she has many unknown friends helping to carry on the fight with her. She should be addressed at Box 93, Hanover St. Station, Boston, Mass.

New Zealand Youth Rebels at Training For Capitalist Wars

By W. FRANCES AHREN.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WELLINGTON, New Zealand.—The unpopularity of the compulsory defense training scheme for boys in New Zealand is shown by the fact that during the second week of October, 54 boys were brought before the courts and charged for evading the compulsory drills. All were fined.

Since the compulsory defense act became law in New Zealand the number of convictions for offenses against the provisions of this law total some thing in the vicinity of 30,000, and periodically, when the magistrates are particularly bilious, there is a fury of disfranchisements in addition to the usual pains and penalties.

If familiarizing lads with the courts is an evidence of popular approval of the law, the defense act is the most successful measure on the New Zealand statute book. There is certainly little else to commend it.

Notice! Carpenters and Miners!

It is essential that we have information as soon as possible regarding the vote cast for the left wing candidates in the recent elections in the carpenters' and miners' unions. The reactionaries at the head of these organizations may be depended upon to rob us of our vote wholesale and thus to minimize our showing. Therefore, it is the duty of every left-winger in these unions to let us know at once how his local voted. You should take this matter seriously and act upon it without delay. Please let us hear from you.

The main building of the embassy was again, as on the day of unfurling the flag of the union, decorated with Soviet and Chinese colors.

Red Ambassador Entertains.

PEKIN, Nov. 8.—(By Mail.)—Comrade Leo Mikhailovitch Karakhan, ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, held a large dinner party last night in honor of the Chinese government and the representatives of the national army and all the Chinese public.

The dinner was attended by all the members of the cabinet, who were the guest of honor: the premier, Mr. Hwang Fu; the minister of foreign affairs, Dr. Wang Chen-ting; the war minister, Mr. Li Shun-cheng; the minister of justice, Mr. Chang Yao-tseng; General Hu Ching-yu, commander of the second national army; Mr. Shen Chun-hsing, vice-minister of foreign affairs; Prof. Chiang Monglin, acting rector of the Pekin National University; Mr. Wang Ting-chang, director of the protocol department, and Mr. Chu Ho-shiang, councillor of the War Office; Mr. Hsiang Hsi-ling, former premier; Mr. Yuan Liang, chief secretary of the cabinet; Senator Lei Yin; Mr. Yi Peichi, representing Dr. Sun Yat-Sen's headquarters; Messrs. Wang Wen-yu, Chang Kia-ngau, Wang Ta-cheng, M. P.'s, and other members of parliament; Professors Koo Chin-chao, Ma Shu-lun, Li Yu-ing, and others; Mr. Shao Piao-ping and other representatives of the Chinese press. Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, who was not personally, sent a special representative in his lieu.

Proposing the toast to the health of the guests, Mr. Karakhan made the following speech.

Urges Chinese Have Courage.

"I am happy, on this day, which is the anniversary of our revolution and our national holiday, to welcome here the representatives of the Chinese government and national army and of the people of China.

"China is now passing thru hard days, which are made still more difficult by the internal struggle and foreign intrigues. However, you must not lose courage and confidence in your victory. If you are resolute and ready to fight to the end without any fear of obstacles or intimidation.

"The example of Soviet Russia ought to show that with the will to fight and co-operation, while energies into which all the Chinese people have been drawn, victory is bound to be yours. Indeed, the Chinese people must and will conquer, but it is necessary that not individual leaders but all the nation be attracted to the construction of a new national life.

"There is this in common between struggle and destinies of the people of China and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics that our internal difficulties during the last six years and yours during all the years of the Chinese republic are intertwined and are indissolubly bound with external conditions and the international situation of the country.

Treaties Should Be Torn Up.

"I was glad when I saw this morning the statement of the Chinese minister of foreign affairs, who spoke—quite naturally in careful terms—of the revision of treaties with foreign powers as being in the order of the day. Now, as I am not the foreign minister of the republic of China, I may be permitted to say more definitely that those treaties should not only be revised, but should be torn asunder, abolished, because they strangle China and because China cannot live under them. No government, no efforts to reconstruct and improve the administration of the country can be successful unless you will throw off the chains that bind each movement and each attempt of yours to help the Chinese people.

"The principles laid down in the agreement recently concluded between the union and China and which I hope will in the nearest future serve as a basis for the pending negotiations, must—as it seems to me—become, in a certain sense, the plank of the foreign policy of any Chinese government.

Must Break With the Past.

"We break with the past and say to China: There must be an end to crimes and robbing which characterized the czarist policy in China. With us the old is dead, and the October revolution, whose seventh anniversary we are celebrating today, has achieved this end. However, China must live to see that what the October revolution did voluntarily, did by the very force of its existence as an example of revolution of oppressed against its oppressors, that the new principles on which we have built and will develop our relations should become the general and usual principles ruling China's relations with all other powers. How can it be done? There is, of course, no special means universally fit for it, but a preliminary condition to it is that all China must be united in a common and unbending will to be nationally free and independent, that every merchant, laborer, official, each peasant and every honest-minded Chinese generally must be ready to support the government, which is entering upon the path of national liberation of the country.

"On this day, commemorating our victory over czarism and imperialism, we say to you: Open without any fear and resolutely the struggle against the external and internal chains that bind the life of the Chinese people, its capacities, its happiness. Liberate it, give it the place in the world which is due to your great people. In this fight, when you will have begun it, you must know that the peoples of the Soviet Union will be with the Chinese people.

"Long live the brotherhood of the peoples of China and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics! Long live China's liberation from the chains binding her national life!"

Ideals Not Yet Achieved.

Mr. Hwang Fu, acting premier, responded, on behalf of the guests, by the following toast:

"Today we have the honor to be present at the celebration of the anniversary of the Russian revolution. In China, thirteen years elapsed since the day of the revolution, but the revolutionary ideals are not yet achieved, while the revolution in Soviet Russia has made big strides, owing to the energy and persistence of the Soviet government. We hope, therefore, that the Soviet government would be willing to help us with its counsels. The relations between our countries were for a long time interrupted as a result of the European war and revolution. Personally, I advocated very strongly the resumption of normal relations between Soviet Russia and China and I have made declarations to this effect when I was minister of foreign affairs. Then under my initiative Dr. C. T. Wang started negotiations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, but he did not succeed as did not the revolution in China. Now Dr. C. T. Wang holds the post of minister of foreign affairs and hope that the Soviet ambassador will avail himself of this fact and will ring negotiation to a successful end, bus fulfilling the hopes of China, on behalf of which I am speaking now.

Make Up For Lost Time.

"Today is the anniversary of the tussian revolution. while the coup d'etat here took place on Oct. 23. This difference of two weeks gives us the right to hope that perhaps we shall make up for a lost time and the cause to which I attach a very great importance will be brought to a favorable conclusion. I raise my glass to the health of the Soviet ambassador and Mr. Karakhan and all present."

The best mutual feeling prevailed thruout the soiree and many friendly chats, in groups and individuals, entwined the party, and the pleasantness of which was greatly enhanced by a music band, whose excellent performance during and after the dinner was greatly enjoyed by all those present.

The main entrance gate and the whole building of the embassy were brilliantly illuminated during the evening.

LATIN-AMERICAN WRITER AMAZED AT STRIDES OF RUSSIANS

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, Dec. 22.—"Foreigners cannot but be amazed at the big stride with which the great Russian people have entered upon the path of construction after such formidable revolutionary upheavals," writes Mr. Adolph Agorio to the editors of the Soviet papers. Mr. Agorio is a well-known Spanish writer, born in Uruguay, South America; he is a member-correspondent of the Madrid academy and a member of the French society of writers.

"In my book, Might and Right, published in 1916, I predicted not only the Russian revolution as such, but also those methods which were destined to secure the triumph and victory of the movement . . . Today, I am glad to be in a position to state that my sojourn in Leningrad and Moscow has confirmed the correctness of my views on the Russian proletarian revolution."

RUSS WORKER CORRESPONDENT TELLS OF LIFE

Workers' Control and Workers' Culture

By A. POVERENNY.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

EKATERINOSLAV, U. S. S. R.—(By Mail.)—Just like other unions, our builders' union has its workers' correspondents who contribute to their wall newspapers, to the local (Ekaterinoslav) press, as well as to the central building trades organs. The workers' correspondents describe our achievements in the building trade, the life and conditions of adult and young workers and the tasks before us. But their main task consists in drawing attention to any shortcomings or evils, and in endeavoring to remedy them thru the press and by collective action.

There is not a single error nor any undesirable element who has managed to get into our ranks somehow or other (be it a contractor, a pseudo expert, or some other fool) who can escape the sharp pen of the workers' correspondent. Workers' correspondents have the full backing of the trade union, the party nucleus and even the central committee of the union, and can, therefore, work without any interference. Workers' correspondents are responsible to the people's court of justice for libel, but hitherto there has not been a single case of libel on the part of the workers' correspondents.

Fellow workers of the building trade in America:

Write and tell us if you have workers' correspondents in your country, under what conditions they carry on their work and in what way the local Communist Party helps them to fight against the evils of capitalism. Tell us if they are organized, and, in fact, everything concerning your labor press.

Cultural Work Among Ekaterinoslav Builders.

I should like to tell our fellow workers abroad about the cultural work carried on among workers of the building trade in the town of Ekaterinoslav (Ukrainian S. S. R.).

First of all, I want to tell you that this cultural and educational work is not carried on by "philanthropic soldiers" and by "kind, bourgeois social workers," but by the workers themselves.

I will tell you in the first instance about the cultural work in the enterprise itself (during building and repairing operations). Newspapers are read and international events are discussed during the one hour dinner interval. Lately our workers took especial interest in the general election in Great Britain, and heated discussions took place. Working men expressed their opinions very freely. Wherever building is going on, there are always red and Lenin corners, tastefully decorated by the workers themselves.

Real Workers' Culture.

Our cultural center is our club "Town and Village." Here the work is carried on very thoroly and on propagandist lines. We have various sections, corners and circles. We have a dramatic circle, as well as trade union, political, Marxist and scientific-technical circles, also a class for the liquidation of illiteracy, a reading room where silence is enforced, a rest room, etc. In their club, workers of the building trade gather after their eight hour working day everything that is needed for their development, their studies and rest. The Young Communist League and the Young Leninites take an active part in the club's work. The workers are very pleased with their "palaces of culture," and 70 per cent of them are members of the club.

Fellow workers of the building trade in America, send us thru the agitation and propaganda department of the Comintern information for our trade paper Postroika (The Building Trade) about the manner in which cultural and political educational work is carried on in your country. Tell us what you do in the matter of self-education and how you spend your leisure. All this interests us very much, indeed, and we will be very grateful if you will write to us about it.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

A FEW DEFINITIONS.

By EARL R. BROWDER.

FARMER-LABOR PARTY: A political coalition of trade unions, farmers' organizations, and all "workers' parties" for parliamentary purposes.

Communist Tactics Within a Farmer-Labor Party: Relentlessly to combat the illusion that such parliamentary combinations can win gains for the workers, and by proposing concrete action for partial aims to lead the workers to the revolutionary struggle and to the leadership of the Communist Party—the only real class party.

The minority thesis clamors for "a farmer-labor party fighting the class battles of workers and farmers."

Comrade Ruthenberg told us what the minority means by this when he said (Workers' Monthly, November, page 32):

"Even the dominated by conservative labor leaders, a party created by the C. P. P. A., based upon the labor organizations if represented, would have been a labor party." . . . "A party based upon the economic organizations of the workers and farmers would be compelled in some degree to fight for the economic interests of these two classes."

* * *

Is it permissible for the Communists to participate in a farmer-labor party, or to advocate the formation of such a party, unless at the same time they carry on a relentless struggle against the illusion that such a movement will "fight the battles of the working class"?

It is not!

The Fifth Congress of the Comintern warned against just such ideas in the case of farmer-laborite Communists. It said:

"It became quite clear at the Fifth Congress that representatives of right wing tendencies . . . had attempted to distort the tactics of the united front . . . into a mere policy of alliance and organical coalition 'of all workers' parties' . . . The C. I. resolutely condemns this petty-bourgeois tendency."

When is the slogan of a farmer-labor party a correct slogan for revolutionists? Only when it conforms to the requirements of all united front slogans, of which the Fifth Congress said:

"A mere formula is not enough . . . the parties of the Comintern in the present period very often do not know how to apply the tactics of the united front . . . with the result that these tactics run the danger of being transformed from a revolutionary Bolshevik method to opportunist tactics and the source of revisionism."

"All attempts to interpret these tactics as a political coalition with counter-revolutionary social democratic parties, are opportunism and are repudiated by the Comintern."

The Fifth Congress told us how to apply the united front tactic; and its instructions left no room for a farmer-labor party slogan after the mass movement for a farmer-labor party had disappeared.

Here are a few quotations from the thesis of the Fifth Congress:

"The revolutionary united front tactics can be correctly applied only when each section, fully conscious of the dangers of these tactics and without adopting mechanical formulae, sets itself the concrete tasks of winning the masses in the fight for definite daily aims and daily demands."

"If these tactics are applied wholesale and according to stereotyped formula, they will lose all their significance and will even have the opposite effect."

"We Communists, by ably conducting the tactics of the united front, will win over to our side considerable sections of the rank and file social-democrats in the economic and subsequently in the political fight."

"The partial demands we put forward must have practical bearings on life; i. e., they must be such as will be supported by the wide masses of the toilers."

It is our task:

"To lead the economic struggles in such a way that the main strength is concentrated on the creation of organs of the united front from below (strike committees, factory councils), and to point out to the working masses the political significance of these struggles."

* * *

The words of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International are in themselves the very best refutation and condemnation of the minority thesis, which sets up the abstract slogan of "a farmer-labor party to fight the class battles of the workers and farmers" as the only possible form of the united front on the political field. In the minority thesis we have the American expression of that international right wing tendency which the Fifth Congress warned us against. The minority is wrong. The C. E. C. thesis points the only correct road for the revolutionary struggle.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE DISCUSSION FROM A RANK AND FILE MEMBER

G. KOSTIS.

THE minority of the C. E. C. is ready to launch a campaign for a labor party and compete with LaFollette for the formation of such a party. The majority of the C. E. C. on the other hand, scared from the noise created around that slogan by the minority, or even because they have not the courage to admit the serious mistakes committed in the past by the entire C. E. C. in the application of the united front tactic in regards to the farmer-labor party, comes forth with the declaration that "we are not opposed to the labor party in principle."

It is high time for us the rank and file members of the party whose proletarian instincts have not been befuddled by negotiations and dickerings with the Mahoneys and Hillmans and who have no fears of losing our positions as leaders of the party, to raise our voice and declare most emphatically to both groups of the C. E. C. that we are "in principle" and "always" against the establishment of a labor party; that we believe along with the Fifth World Congress, that the only "class farmer-labor party" at a given country is its Communist Party; and that any other farmer-labor party is necessarily opportunistic and will eventually become the last bulwark of capitalism.

The United Front and the Farmer-Labor Party.

The Fifth Congress directed the Communist Parties to apply the tactic of the united front "from below" by raising slogans for immediate demands, in order to expose the opportunism of the leaders of the reformistic economic or political organizations of the workers, on the one hand, and on the other to win influence and leadership of the masses for revolutionary struggle. The Fifth Congress gave instructions to apply the united front tactic from "below," as there also is the possibility of its application from "the top," which it cautions us to avoid. All this means, that the tactic of the united front can be effected with organizations with which we could form a united front from below or from the top, that is with organizations already existing and not with non-existent ones. Therefore, the tactic of the united front deals with REALITIES and not with EVENTUALITIES. The creation then of a farmer-labor party is not an application of the united front tactic in the political field, as the minority of the C. E. C. wants us to believe) but the grossest misinterpretation of this tactic.

The minority is unable to understand the spirit and the practical aim of the tactic of the united front and brazenly proclaims in its thesis that the only application of this tactic in the political field is to unite ourselves with the . . . non-existent farmer-labor party and because that party does not exist, let us build it ourselves and make it a "class party" at that! It is impossible for me to understand by what labyrinth of reasoning the minority succeeded in reaching this conclusion, but I must admit that, if the conclusion reached has no other practical value, it will at least give a chance to the comrades of the other countries, who need a little diversion during these days of white terror and persecutions, to laugh at our expense.

Why the Minority Wants a Farmer-Labor Party.

Besides its funny aspect, the conclusions reached by the minority, has also its tragic side, that is, it shows clearly to what extent the minority is influenced by opportunistic tendencies. We can see from its thesis and the discussion that followed, that the minority wants to build the labor party for the following two main reasons: first, because they are afraid that other opportunists, outside of the party, will overtake them and build this farmer-labor party and so the minority will lose the chance of leading such a party. It is exactly for this reason that they have stuck both ears to the ground to feel where this so much talked about "sentiment" of the workers is leaning to. And they stress so much the importance of this "sentiment" in their discussion, that even the majority of the C. E. C. fell for it. Secondly, because they believe that thru the labor party we will be able to fool the workers who are not as yet ready or willing to become members of the Workers Party and thus we will have another revolutionary (?) mass party besides the Workers Party, and hasten in this manner the coming of the revolution.

In reply to their first contention we say, that we do not share their fears, for the simple reason that we have not the ambition to become the leaders of a reformistic party; on the contrary, we feel that it is our duty to fight ideologically any attempt to build such a party, and in case that this party is established, in spite of our opposition, to expose its reformist program thru the tactic of the united front and to lead the labor unions, of which we will be members, and which would compose that party, to the path of the class struggle, bearing always in mind our immediate aim which is the weakening of the power of the bourgeoisie and the freeing of the minds of the workers from opportunist illusions.

I will add just a few more words on the famous "sentiment" of the workers. The whole political situation of the last two years in America shows clearly that the workers who are for an independent political action, are not inspired by the ideology of the class struggle, but are permeated by the petty bourgeois psychology of reformism and class collaboration. They do not want class action, but "independent" parliamentary action and consequently they are not for a class revolutionary party, but they want to organize a party which will strive for parliamentary reforms.

Now, instead of trying, as it is our duty as a class conscious vanguard of the working class, to change this sentiment of the workers into a revolutionary one, calling upon them to fight along with us for our class interests and showing them, thru their daily struggles against the bourgeoisie the illusion of reformism and parliamentarism, we are called upon by the minority of the C. E. C. to instill more methodically into the minds of the workers the dangerous psychology of parliamentarism, and even take up the initiative of building such a reformist party, which by necessity will be counter-revolutionary, no matter how the minority pleases to call it.

We will now take up their second argument. The minority, reading the thesis of the Fifth Congress, struck upon the paragraph stating that a Communist Party in order to lead the workers to the revolution, must be a mass party. Therefore the minority, for sheer eagerness to immediately bring about the revolution and realizing that the workers in America are not as yet ready to join en masse the Workers Party, conceived the grandiose idea of building a camouflage Communist mass party.

The minority evidently believes that the realization of the revolution depends exclusively upon the activity of a Communist Party, and it is this idea that drives them to imagine the craziest schemes for immediate results. We can here, therefore, call to their attention the two main factors necessary for the realization of the revolution, and these are the following: First, the collapse of the economic structure of the bourgeoisie with the consequent weakening of its economic and therefore its political power, and secondly, the will of the workers for revolutionary action. The first one, which by the way, is the most important, is created by the very contradictions of the capitalist system, and the duty of the Communist Party is to work unceasingly for the realization of the second factor.

This task requires heavy sacrifices and daily struggles on the part of our party, struggles based on the tactic of the united front—as formulated in the thesis of the majority of the C. E. C.—struggles aiming to the revolutionization of the minds of the masses and not cultivating the reformistic spirit. But the minority cannot wait. It wants immediate results and believes that we can succeed in achieving them by reformistic manipulations and parliamentary acrobatics.

What is a Communist Mass Party?

A few words as to what the term "Communist Mass Party" means. For a Communist Party to be a mass party, does not necessarily mean that it must number millions in membership. This, even after the success of the revolution, is neither possible nor desirable, if the membership is not real Communists (see the recent weeding out of doubtful elements from Communist Parties). But it means —and this is very essential—that it must have the influence and the leadership of large masses of workers for revolutionary action. Every Communist worthy of the name is expected to possess such elementary knowledge, but it seems that the minority lacks this knowledge and for this reason is only interested in securing the leadership of the masses, ignoring entirely where, the kind of leadership proposed by them, will lead to.

I will close my criticism of the thesis of the minority with the example of the Communist Party of Greece, that proud party has not more than three thousand members, yet it is a great factor in the political life of that country, just because it succeeded in winning the leadership of the trade unions, by taking part in the daily struggles. The Communists of Greece are not members of the Communist Party, except the above mentioned small minority, yet the comrades of Greece never for a moment conceived the idea to build a labor party as proposed by the minority of our C. E. C. On the contrary, they always fought and until now very successfully, the formation of farmer-labor parties, which the opportunists have tried to foist upon the working class.

The workers of Greece have always followed the Communist Party in its struggles, not because it proclaimed thru its press, that it is the only genuine party of the working class (this we can do ourselves very easily) but because they have found the party always by their side and leading them in their daily struggles against the bourgeoisie.

Stating the above, I am not attempting to underestimate the importance of the numerical strength of a Communist Party, but I want to emphasize the fact, that our revolutionary leadership of the working class and the recruiting of class conscious workers for our party can be accomplished only thru our energetic participation in the daily struggles of the workers and our ceaseless revolutionary action, the intensification of which will depend to a large extent upon the economic revolution of the world situation in general and the American in particular, and not miraculously by methods of political camouflage, as proposed by the minority.

Immediate Tasks of Our Party.

The immediate and most important task of our party is its reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei. This is our first step toward the Bolshevization of our party, without which it is absolutely difficult if not impossible, to apply the tactic of the united front, which, with all the elaborate programs of the C. E. C., will be a dead letter, as long as the present organizational form of our party chosen a year ago (a lot is being said about the Bolshevization of the party and many responsible comrades repeat in a parrot-like fashion phrases from the thesis of the Fifth Congress, like the "monolithic party hewn out of one block," etc., etc., while on the other hand they do everything to create separate fractions and groups inside the party. For this disgusting condition the present form of organization of our party is 90 per cent responsible, and this condition will continue, in spite of the exhortations of the Fifth Congress against the formation of fractions, as long as the present form of organization, stinking with Second Internationalism, continues to exist.

The last convention of our party decided to reorganize the party on industrial basis, notwithstanding the naive way in which it proposed to accomplish it; the Fifth World Congress gave explicit instructions for the reorganization of the party; and the federations in their conventions have unreservedly supported the decision of the reorganization.

Until now, however, all the energies of the C. E. C. towards that direction have been limited to the publication of a few articles and lately to some spasmodic attempts in the district of Chicago. It is the duty of the C. E. C. to stop this criminal neglect and, as long as they all agree on this, to immediately proceed to the reorganization of the party on the basis of the shop nuclei, because it is a tragic joke to discuss the ways and means of building a mass party, when we neglect just the like the very first step in that direction, when the first raid against the party will make it crumble like a house of cards, if it finds it organized in the present form. Speaking of the reorganization of the party, it would not be an exaggeration to state that the present discussion on tactics would not have followed the opportunistic way of reasoning, as expressed by the minority of the C. E. C., if our party was a real Bolshevik party based on the shop nuclei.

Comrades, I demand from the C. E. C. the immediate reorganization of the party.

Support the thesis of the majority of the C. E. C. which propose the only practical plan of revolutionary action according to the decisions of the Fifth World Congress, and at the same time rassing from these thesis with a red pencil the dangerous declaration that we are not opposed to the labor party in principle."

Fight relentlessly the opportunistic tendencies of the minority.

BROWDER—A STRANGER TO FACTS

By MAX BEDACHT.

WERE it fast coloring that our majority applies to the questions at issue, one might get appalled at the dangers that beset the party, if the minority point of view carries. But even a superficial investigation must disclose the cheapness of the tinsel used by the majority in its attempt at camouflage.

Unable to prove their charge of "farmer-labor Communism" otherwise, the majority sets up a ridiculous theory of "anti-farmer-labor party issue" that slaps everything in the face that the Communist International ever said on the point, and everything that a Marxian analysis could justify.

But the weakest points of the majority are facts. The nonchalance with which the majority disregard and twist the facts is almost admirable.

The other day I pointed out how the minority had raised the question of necessary action on the Pan-American Federation conference in Mexico in April and again in May, but that the majority did nothing, until the eve of the convention. Comrade Browder, chosen by the majority for this task because, I suppose, he is best fitted for it, answers this charge.

Disregarding the fact that the minority had raised the issue at least eight months ago, he goes even himself one better. He insinuates that Comrade Lovestone had a nice junketing trip at party expense, but that nothing whatever, not even a report, came of it. And, on the eve of the Pan-American conference the "poor" majority was forced to do its work without the benefit of knowing the facts as gathered by Comrade Lovestone at party expense. "But" so concludes Browder, "our job was not so bad after all, was it?"

Here are the facts in the matter:

On April 14, Comrade Lovestone introduced a set of motions relative to the establishment of united action of all the Communist Parties on the American continent on all question which concern them all alike. This motion was accepted in the form of an instruction to Comrade Lovestone, who was to attend the congress of the Communist Party of Mexico as a fraternal delegate.

On May 3, after the return of Comrade Lovestone from Mexico, he submitted an eight-page closely written report. This report is part of the minutes of the central executive committee. Your insinuations of the squander of party money, of trips to Mexico, Comrade Browder, are belied by the facts. This report of Comrade Lovestone was not only accepted by the central executive committee, but on decision of the central executive committee, it was forwarded to the Communist International.

Some of the recommendations of the report of Comrade Lovestone were identical with subsequent decisions adopted by the Communist International on the question of co-ordinating the activities of the Communist Parties of the two continents.

The report of Lovestone dealt with the political and economic situations, with the Communist Party of Mexico, with the convention of that party, with the question of imperialism, and with the Philippines. It also contained a number of recommendations in the form of instructions to the Trade Union Educational League. For instance:

That the Trade Union Educational League be instructed to get in touch with the Mexican central executive committee to secure co-operation with the left wing trade union blocks under complete or partial influence of the two parties;

That the Trade Union Educational League be instructed to work out a program for a fight against Gompers and Gompersism in the Pan-American Federation of Labor, especially with a view toward preparing for the December conference of this organization.

The report further emphasized the necessity of establishing closer co-operation in anti-imperialist activities, and proposed for this purpose the formation of a Pan-American Bureau of all parties, to be formed in Mexico City on the occasion of the conference of the Gompers outfit. It also contained recommendations for the co-operation of the Young Workers League of all the Pan-American countries.

The instructions to the Trade Union Educational League were accepted at a meeting of the executive council, on May 14, the only objection of the majority being that the Trade Union Educational League need not be "rushed" because it would do these things anyhow.

How can you, Comrade Browder, in the face of these facts, throw out the insinuation of junketing trips at the party's expense without ever giving a report? How can you reconcile these facts with your fables contained in your article of December 19?

I hope, Comrade Browder, you will not consider it an insult if I remind you that your fight is supposed to save the party, and not the majority. Sticking a little closer to the facts might hurt you, altho it would bring you nearer to telling the truth.

Comrade Browder excels himself in his defense of the majority's policy on unemployment. With a skillfulness that can hardly be matched he succeeds in finding a hypothetical question for his ready-made answers, thus escaping the necessity of giving a straight answer to the real question. We ask: Why was not action on unemployment made part of our industrial activities? Browder answers the question: Why was not unemployment action carried out in place of our industrial action? Comrade Browder, you may just as well make up your mind right here and now that we do not let you get away with your sleight of hand tricks.

While he dexterously insinuates that the minority wanted the party to abandon all industrial work for unemployment action, Browder sets up a new theory. He points out that you cannot start any unemployment action "just because there is unemployment. No! There must first be preparations, an ideological campaign.

Altho the industrial crisis has by no means reached a climax, yet unemployment shifted from industry to industry taking on a mass character now here and then there. For a long time unemployment was rampant in the textile mills of the New England states. It had a mass character there. When the minority pointed that out in the central executive committee, the majority said: Unemployment in the textile mills in the New England states is not caused by a deep depression in the textile industry, but only because textile production has been shifted to the south where cheaper child and women labor promises higher profits for the textile barons. In other words, our central executive committee majority, instead of action in the situation of the unemployed textile workers in the north, told them: "Perhaps you are hungry. But be content in the knowledge that for every one of you that is hungry there is some child down south that works and consequently eats—at least a little."

Now our central executive committee majority proclaims thru the mouth, or pen, of Comrade Browder that they are ready for action. But somehow unemployment of the textile workers seems to have menshevist tendencies. Now that we are ready for action, there is no more mass demand. The textile mills are working again. But they started work in full force with a simultaneous execution of general wage reductions.

In June the central executive committee passed an industrial program. That program contained this: There are the masses the slogan "No wage reductions and lengthening of hours." That looks nice in the program. But what was done? The matter now stands thus: We could not do anything in the case of mass unemployment in the New England textile mills because we were not ideologically ready for that action. Now that we are ready, that damn elusive unemployment in this particular industry gives us the horse laugh. We could not do anything about the slogan of "no wage reductions" because we were not ideologically prepared.

And now that we may be prepared, wage reductions in this particular industry are an established and an accepted fact. That is the alibi of the central executive committee majority.

Unemployment has had a mass character for a long time among the coal miners of southern Illinois. Any organized action could have been linked up with our election campaign as well as with our campaigns against Farrington and Lewis. But we were not prepared ideologically. Why did that menshevist unemployment insist on existing before we were ready, before the national elections, before the referendum in the miners' union? Let us be sure that Browder will answer with some plank in an election leaflet for the national election as well as for the referendum in the miners' union, which speaks about unemployment. But the question put to the majority is not what have you said, but what have you done about unemployment? And the question, Comrade Browder, is not why did you not drop all your industrial activities to take up unemployment, but why did you not supplement your industrial activities by taking up action on the field of unemployment?

A Communist Catechism

More Questions and Answers

By MAX BEDACHT & JAY LOVESTONE.

11. Question—Isn't it true that a farmer-labor party must be based on the mass organizations of the workers and poor farmers? If the masses aren't yelling for a farmer-labor party, how can the Communists do anything else but oppose a farmer-labor party?

Answer—Of course, that's true. What about it? All the more reason for the central executive committee majority being lamentably wrong when they definitely indicate in their thesis that these mass organizations and the bureaucracy now controlling them are synonymous.

Are we not, on the basis of the developing economic crisis, heading for a situation in which these masses revolt against their reactionary leadership and overthrow the present bureaucracy? In preparation for this, is it not necessary for the Communists, who always must set the pace for the masses and advance the political ideology of these masses, at this time to throw out the slogan of a farmer-labor party which is to be organized on the basis of these organizations of the workers and poor farmers?

Is it not our task as Communists to propagate these slogans which, if applied, will satisfy a mass need and which if propagated will hasten a revolt of the masses against their bureaucracy?

Because such movement and such slogans as the farmer-labor party can be utilized by the Communists as effective means of precipitating such revolts they, therefore, take on additional value and increased importance to us.

These movements must not always somehow or other develop themselves. As long as the economic and political conditions prevailing demand them it is our task to facilitate and hasten their development.

In this connection it is also interesting to note what Comrade Stalin says in his excellent book. "Lenin and Leninism," page 43: "The theory of spontaneity is the theory of opportunism, the theory of bowing before the spontaneity of a workers' movement, the theory of serial denial of the leading role of the vanguard of the working class. . . . The theory of spontaneity is the ideology of trade unionism."

12. Question—Why should Communists want to sit around a conference table, as that famous rank and filer, Joe Manley, would say, with a lot of labor fakers, bureaucrats and petty bourgeois minded trade union officials?

Answer—We will call on Comrade Lovestone to answer all such renowned rank and filers like Manley. We quote from the concluding report made by Losovsky at the Fifth Congress: "We do not sit at the same table with him (Johaux) 'for the sake of his beautiful eyes' but because there are millions of workers who follow him and because there are tens of millions of workers who are neither with us nor with him."

13. Question—Is there the slightest bit of truth in the Foster-Cannon contention that the formation of a farmer-labor party means the conscious formation of a reformist party?

Answer—First of all, let the Bittelman of June, 1924, answer the Bittelman of December, 1924. In the June number of Workers' Monthly, Bittelman said: "The only test for progress in the American labor movement of today (we hope he wasn't speaking of one day or a few months) is INDEPENDENT POLITICAL ACTION, a class political party of workers and poor farmers. He who is indifferent or opposed to independent political action and to the immediate formation of a class farmer-labor party is a reactionary no matter what language he uses. The only real progressives in the American labor movement today are those who favor and work for the formation of such a party."

Of course, such an argument betrays a lack of knowledge and even greater lack of understanding of the most elementary principles of Marxian method. When the Foster-Cannon group talks of a labor party it speaks not of a labor party but of the labor party. To this majority the campaign for a farmer-labor party is not a process contingent upon numerous factors, like the stage of the class struggle, leadership, etc. They cannot see the possibility of a revolutionary working class emerging from this process. The Foster-Cannon group looks upon the whole farmer-labor united front campaign as only incidental to the general attempt of establishing "real" all-inclusive labor party. We maintain that the formation of a farmers-labor party is only incidental while the whole campaign is in our opinion the decisive object to be exploited by the Communists. We want to reap the benefits of the campaign for a farmer-labor united front while the majority of the central executive committee in a thoroly un-Marxian fashion sets the goal of the labor party above everything else and neglects all the other aspects of the campaign to the achievement of their goal.

In other words, we propose to enter the farmer-labor party movement to exploit the process of the development of the class consciousness of the masses for the strengthening of our party and the establishment of our party's leadership over the masses. We work on the basis of sacrificing the farmer-labor party at any and all times for the immediate interests of the Workers Party. For the central executive committee majority on the other hand, the farmer-labor party organization is the sole object and the immediate advantages of such a campaign the goal to be attained to the goal of the all-embracing labor party in which, according to Foster's statement at St. Paul, the Workers Party will take its rightful position as a hopeless minority.

The difference between the Foster-Cannon misconception and our Communist conception of this question is this: Foster and Cannon say that the formation of a labor party, the all-inclusive brand of theirs, is the goal of the farmer-labor party campaign. They go on to say that if such a movement exists amongst the working masses, then it is the duty of the Communists to assist it, but always with a view of helping to accomplish the creation of a reformistic labor party. They wind up their poor case with a declaration that if there is no movement for the formation of their trade marked all-inclusive farmer-labor party the Communists should not bother about it.

We, the minority of the central executive committee, maintain that the American working class, still so largely under the domination of bourgeois ideology and leadership, must develop the idea of separate political interests of their class. Until a large section of the working class in the United States develops this idea the question of Communist leadership over the working class will not be a live question. The slogan for a farmer-labor party best expresses this elementary basic need of political independence of the great masses of the workers from the capitalists.

Therefore, we, the minority members of the central executive committee, do not seek the establishment of a labor party irrespective of situations and possibilities. It is, however, the aim of the minority of the central executive committee that the party should gain the leadership of the working masses during the very process of their breaking away from capitalist ideology and domination. The kind of a labor party that will grow out of this process will be decided by the conditions and not by the desires of the Workers Party.

Foster and Cannon say the workers don't want a farmer-labor party now, therefore, it is impossible to form one.

It is our Communist understanding that the workers need independent political action and the slogan and campaign for a farmer-labor party tend to develop this political independence, and irrespective of whether or what kind of a farmer-labor party results from this the Workers Party will benefit from such a campaign.

THOUSANDS OF WORKERS JAILED IN BOSS' PENS

New York Will Hold Bazaar for Victims

It seldom occurs to the American workers that there are hundreds of thousands of revolutionary workers imprisoned in the capitalist prisons of Europe and Asia. They seldom think that hundreds of thousands of revolutionary peasants are suffering the worst torture in the pest-hole prisons of India, Java, China and Japan. They seldom think of the scores of class-war prisoners in American prisons, the hundreds of foreign-born workers over whose heads deportation warrants are hanging. They seldom think of the plans of the United States government to put all foreign-born workers under the control of the police department.

Against Militant Workers.

These are facts that no worker dare forget. The capitalist class and the capitalist government are conducting a campaign against the organized labor movement, and against the masses of militant workers.

Who is to help these workers—and their families who are being persecuted? Who is to provide them with food and clothing? Who is to take care of their children?

Only the workers and the sympathizers with the radical movement will lend a helping hand. The pitiable stories that come from the prisons of Europe and Asia, the stories of suffering and torture, must arouse the indignation of every worker. In Germany, Poland, Italy, Finland, Esthonia, Spain, Rumania, Jugo-slavia, Lithuania, Hungary, Latvia, the revolutionary class war prisoners are suffering the worst torments that capitalist government can invent.

A Joint Bazaar.

The International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council are undertaking the aid of these victims of the class struggle. Funds are imperative. These leaders in the fight against the degradation of the working class must be saved. The two organizations, therefore, have arranged a joint bazaar, which is to take place on Feb. 11 to 14, at the Lyceum, 66th St. and Third Ave., New York City. There are to be days and evening of pleasure and enjoyment. There will be a Finnish, a Slavic and other evenings. There will be orchestras, singing societies and dancing—and plenty of refreshments.

Every worker and sympathizer must help to make this bazaar a success. Every worker should try to get (1) contributions on the Honor Roll Call; (2) articles for the bazaar; (3) bring all friends along. Contributions should be sent to the Joint Bazaar Committee, 208 East 12th St., New York City.

Only a few tickets are left. Get them now at the school, 208 East 12th street, or at the theater box office. Do not delay. The demand is big, but the supply is small, as the theater seats only 375 people.

So many people overlook this one matter of fastidiousness. And do so in spite of the fact that in conversation the teeth are the one most noticeable thing about you.

The comrades are preparing group masques and also some original individual masques carrying a class character such as Philadelphia has never seen before. There will be thousands of "Freiheit" balloons. A victrola will be given away free to the lucky number. Detroit Makes Big Showing with Films For Working Class

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 22.—Five days, three theaters, one week, one city—this shows the field for working class films if they are taken hold of energetically and properly exploited. This was done in Detroit, Mich., with "Beauty and Bolshevik" and "Russia in Overalls"—and the end is not yet.

William Mollenhauer, who had charge of this fine program writes that "the manager of one of the theaters, who has had poor business in his house for months, was breathless at the size of our crowd. He wants two more dates and figures he can clean up big. The only question is a financial detail of who is to pay for the advertising. The shows will probably be held Jan. 5 and 9."

And right on top of this record, a similar "five day, three theater, one week, one city" program was run with "Polikushka," "Soldier Ivan's Miracle" and "With the Russian Miners" as the pictures. For the first time one of our pictures was run in two theaters in the same town on the same day.

Detroit is not the only town reporting a clean-up in the new Russian drama. From Dillonvale, Ohio—Frank Sunkisk, secretary of the Young Workers League, writes: "The Beauty and Bolshevik picture was a great success here." And from Dayton Ohio, the secretary writes: "The comrades find it much easier to sell tickets for this picture than for the others, probably because of the sex angle in the title. Everything is set for a big success."

Dates are being made rapidly, but there are many more to be had. Any local labor organization can book the International Workers' Aid films by addressing that organization at 19 South Lincoln street, Chicago, Ill.

LEAGUE AND PARTY MAJORITY THESES ENDORSED THREE TO ONE BY CHICAGO Y. W. L. MEET

After thoroly discussing the statement of the national executive committee of the Young Workers League on the task before the league, presented by the national secretary, Comrade John Williamson, a meeting of the members of the Chicago league, assembled in the Greek Hall here, went on record overwhelmingly in favor of the N. E. C. statement.

The resolution read as follows:

"The meeting of the members of the Young Workers League of Chicago, having heard the statement of the national executive committee of the league on the problems and tasks before us, declare; itself in wholehearted agreement and harmony with the position and policies as set forth therein.'

"We indorse the stand taken by our national committee on the situation with the Workers Party and we declare ourselves in agreement with the policy of the central executive committee of the Workers Party as expressed in its thesis, published in the DAILY WORKER, November 26, 1924.

"This meeting further declares its approval of the position of the national executive committee of the Young Workers' League and of the central executive committee of the Workers Party in their efforts to maintain the correct Leninist position by following the line of the Communist International, and thru the conducting of the struggle against the Second-and-a-Half Internationalist tendency of Lore, and against the right wing, revisionist deviations of the Lovestone-Ruthenberg tendency."

This resolution was carried by a vote of almost three to one against the resolution presented by Comrade Kaplan, indorsing the minority. The vote was 67 against 26.

The discussion lasted over seven hours and was quite thoro. After the two main speakers had presented the viewpoint of their position, more than a score of other comrades alternated for the two thesis. At midnight, the question was called for; it was put, with the above result, which puts the Chicago young Communist unit squarely on record for the position of the national executive committee of the league which is supporting the central executive committee of the party.

The membership meeting was the culmination of two weeks of discussion in the branches where the sentiment in favor of the majority group was equally as overwhelming.

BUREAU OF UKRAINIAN SECTION OF OUR PARTY IS UNANIMOUS FOR POSITION OF THE MINORITY

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—(By Mail).—The bureau of the Ukrainian Section of the Workers Party of America, at its meeting of Dec. 19, 1924, unanimously approved the thesis of the minority of the C. E. C. The following is the decision adopted in this resolution:

"The thesis of both the majority and of the minority of the C. E. C. agree in their analysis of the present economic situation in the United States and of its development in the immediate future. They say that the evermore developing disintegration in the capitalist production will be the basis of the sharpening of the class struggle.

"In the past we were successful in the application of the united front slogan 'for a class farmer-labor party.' This opinion is expressed in both theses and we fully agree with it. Then in the immediate future with the class struggle more sharpened, this slogan will be still more successful for the Workers (Communist) Party. This is the conclusion drawn by the minority of the C. E. C. With this conclusion the Ukrainian Bureau agrees.

"The comrades of the majority of the C. E. C., in spite of the fact that they see the sharpening of the class struggle in the United States in the immediate future, want to drop the slogan 'for a class farmer-labor party.'

"In our opinion this departure from the Communist tactics by the majority of the C. E. C. has its root in the majority's wrong understanding of some of the Communist principles as expressed in its recent support of Comrade Lore branded by the Communist International as the representative of the tendencies of the Second-and-a-Half International and in its wrong application of the united front tactics.

"The united front of the Workers (Communist) Party with other workers' organizations under the slogan of the struggle against unemployment, against child labor, in short, under slogans based on everyday struggles of the working class against the bourgeois, therefore also under the slogan for a class farmer-labor party, which gives a definite form to the present not entirely conscious tendency of the workers and poor farmers toward independent political action. This united front will bring more closely to the Workers (Communist) Party the working masses. It will give our party the opportunity to extend its influence among them, revolutionize them and to develop itself into a mass Communist Party.

"On this basis the bureau of the Ukrainian Section of the Workers Party of America approves the thesis of the minority of the C. E. C., that is, of Comrades Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht, Engdahl and Gitlow.

"Signed: Bureau of the Ukrainian Section of the Workers Party of America, M. Durdella, Secretary."

Boston Lettish Branch Endorses the Thesis Presented by Minority

FAMOUS MOVIE FILM, "POLIKUSHKA," WILL RETURN TO CHICAGO

The famous story, "Polikushka," by the immortal writer, L. N. Tolstoi, which was the first moving picture by the Moscow Art Theater, is coming back to Chicago for one evening only. The picture was shown in Chicago at the Orchestra Hall only once last winter. Thousands of workers who were unable to see the picture at its first showing are anxiously awaiting its coming back. The picture will be shown THURSDAY NIGHT, JAN. 15, at Gartner's Independent Theater, 3725 Roosevelt Road, near Independent Blvd. Mark the date on your calendar and tell your friends about it.

All friendly organizations are requested to postpone their meetings on that date.

Millions for the Boss Press

The capitalist press has several perfectly good reasons for supporting the capitalist system, but one is sufficient and that is the support given the capitalist papers by the big capitalists. The daily papers and the magazines could not exist for one week without subsidies from big business in the form of advertising.

Here is a partial list of the trusts and firms advertising in the newspapers and magazines of this country and their yearly expenditures:

Advertising	Newspapers	Magazines
American Tobacco Co.	$1,700,000	$ 242,981
Lever Bros. Co. (soap)	1,500,000	664,795
Standard Oil of Indiana	1,500,000
Victor Talking Machine	1,500,000	1,142,065
Calumet Baking Powder	1,200,000
Dodge Bros. (autos)	1,200,000	403,810
United States Rubber Co.	1,100,000	265,250
Funk & Wagnalls (Lit. Dig.)	1,080,000	651
Liggett & Myers Tobacco	1,000,000	150,620
Wm. Wrigley (gum)	1,000,000
Corn Products Refining	900,000
Buick Motor Co.	600,000	441,850
H. J. Heinz Co. (pickles)	600,000	885,734
Goodyear Rubber	525,000	531,797
Hart Shaffner & Marx	500,000	311,550
Colgate & Co.	430,000	1,183,439
Proctor & Gamble (soap)	400,000	1,167,000
Quaker Oats Co.	400,000	616,620
Chevrolet Motor Car Co.	325,000	595,725
Eastman Kodak Co.	225,000	488,130
American Radiator Co.	175,000	431,220

It is surprising that the capitalist press should kill news unfavorable to the capitalists, distort the news to favor its clients and carry on a persistent propaganda against the working class movement?

Is it surprising that the capitalist press should malign, slander and lie about Soviet Russia, the only workers' government in the world, the only government that is laying the foundation for a social order that will consign the reptile press to the limbo of the past?

It is not surprising. The capitalist press supports the system of which it is a part. It supports its supporters. The DAILY WORKER is as partial to the working class as the capitalist press is to big business and the exploiting classes in general. The DAILY WORKER is not subsidized by advertising. Only a few sympathizers at best will advertise in a revolutionary paper. The main support of our Daily must come from the workers, the class for which it fights. We call on the workers to subsidize their own paper.

Let your slogan be, "Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925!"

Specialists in Bank

Practically every up-to-date capitalist concern in the United States has one or more specialists whose duty it is to devise ways and means of convincing the employes of those concerns that their interests are identical with those of their masters. Sometimes this task is performed by the labor fakers much more effectively than it could be done by a paid hireling outside of the ranks of organized labor. The object is the same: an attempt to substitute class collaboration for the class struggle.

A certain William H. Leiserson, arbiter for the associated clothing industries, recently delivered a lecture under the auspices of the Chicago branch of that den of stoolpigeons, the Young Men's Christian Association, on "The Way to Industrial Peace." He gave his scheme the grandiose title of "Citizenship in Industry" and declared that it was even an improvement on Henry Ford's "good will" theory of labor relations.

The speaker declared the "labor is no longer a commodity" and that the bad old days when the employers bought his labor power for as low as he could pay for it, were no more. The late Samuel Gompers peddled the same kind of hope. He held that because a provision of the Clayton Act declared that labor was not a commodity, it simply was not. This is pernicious nonsense.

The proletariat under capitalism still sell their labor power, their only property, on the market. This ability to produce surplus values for the boss is subject to the law of supply and demand like any other commodity, except insofar as the economic organizations of the workers modify this law. This status of labor will exist as long as capitalism exists. Only when that system is overthrown and the workers become the ruling class will the commodity status of labor power be changed.

This Pollyanna bunk put out by claquers of the capitalist class will not fool the well informed class conscious worker. He knows quite well that only when labor is well organized on the industrial field in industrial unions, which give his class the maximum of industrial power, and on the political field under the banner of a revolutionary party, the Workers (Communist) Party, are the workers on the high road leading to freedom from the chains of wage slavery.

Battleships and the Balkans

We were right the other day when we referred to the "unstable Balkans."

There are all the making of a first class war in the scrap between Italy and Jugo-Slavia over the Albanian uprising and now Britain sends battleships to "protect British interests." What these interests are is not stated, but as always they are undoubtedly a continuation of the historical policy of British imperialism—a consolidation of the warring forces against Britain's most dangerous enemy which in this case is Soviet Russia.

The war pot boils in Europe more noisily than ever. The tension increases in geometrical proportion as imperialist rivalries and avarices in Morocco, Egypt and the Balkans force their way to the surface and strain the resources of the diplomats.

Austen Chamberlain, the imperialist spokesman, has just made a tour of the European capitals on an anti-Soviet Russia crusade. He was supposed to have persuaded the great powers to sink their differences until some measure of stabilization could be had in shaking Europe, but he is like a man who tries to put out fire with kerosene.

The explosive ingredients of which Europe is composed today, make it more and more difficult to bring a semblance of peace altho the spectre of Communism drives each national ambition into the arms of its hated rival for a while.

British battleships and the Balkans are a good fuse for the gigantic bomb that is Europe.

The "Backbone of the Nation"

The utter servility of the middle class is disclosed by a flood of letters to the Chicago Tribune protesting criticisms of Samuel Insull chairman of the board of the Chicago Rapid Transit company made recently by a contributor to the "Voice of the People" department of The Tribune.

Chicago has the worst transportation of any city of its size in the world.

Chicagoans pay seven cents fare for surface car service that forces them to spend ten per cent of their waking hours on Insull's cars.

Yet a mild complaint voiced by a timid but overburdened middle-class soul brings an army of defenders who all sign their names to their letters so that the great Insull may recognize them and appreciate their sterling worth.

This is the class that the capitalist press always refers to as the "backbone of the nation." This may be its anatomical function in the national organism, but if this is true the national backbone has the same stiffness as a piece of boiled spaghetti.

The Insull incident is an indication that big capital in America is in no immediate danger from a middle-class revolt with Chicago as its center.

An Illinois state senator says: "If there is anything that can be done to help settle the renting situation which may prove fair to both landlord and tenant in the way of legislation at Springfield, I am for it."

This bold and revolutionary utterance will doubtless terrify the rent hogs and places the fearless senator definitely in the left wing of the parliamentarians.

The Soviet government has allocated 400,000 acres of land in the Volga and Caucasus regions for settlement by Russian workers returning from the United States and Canada. Evidently the Communist government of Russia pays attention to something else besides chopping off the heads of those who do not agree with them, as the capitalist press gives us to understand.

It was rather thoughtless of Rykoff to turn the guns on the barracks in which his friend Stalin was imprisoned, after the former had demanded the surrender of the garrison. You may have read this in the capitalist press. It was born in Berlin and looks rather illegitimate. But it will not be the last of the brood.

In the early days of the Bolshevik revolution, whenever Trotsky disagreed with Lenin over government policy, the capitalist liars had the two leaders arrest and sometimes assassinate each other. We may expect Trotsky and Zinoviev to while away the hours in such innocent pastime during the present illness of Trotsky.

Dispatches tell of crowds in Spain hailing a miracle in the shape of the preservation of the body for four hundred years of an alleged saint. Spain must be a land of miracles. Nothing else could explain the fact that they can still get Spaniards to enlist for the Moroccan war.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge received the degree of doctor of laws from Boston university. She once taught the sign language in a deaf and dumb school. Her husband was not one of her pupils, but she could teach him nothing in the dumb line.

Chancellor Marx of Germany has failed to form a cabinet. This kind of a thing does not please the capitalists at all. They would like a dictatorship, but if they attempt to get the one they want, they may get the opposite.

Even the New York Nation is getting disappointed with Premier Herriot of France. Another idol shattered! Who will be next to dangle the carrot of hope before the easily gulled liberal donkey? Vincente Blasco Ibanez, perhaps!

Lady Astor admits she likes gin and rum. This frankness on the part of a vociferous temperance advocate is astonishing, unless she was rather rummy when she made the admission.

The Class Struggle in Germany

By Isidore Stoler

BY the time these lines are printed the German reichstag elections will be over, the second parliamentary "stabilization" act in Europe will have been finished, the social democracy will be revelling in orgies of jubilation over the "triumph of reason," the "deliverance of the republic," the victory of "black—red and gold," and the "defeat of Communism."

Why? What is it all about? What is going on in Germany, in Europe?

October—May—December.

IN Europe things are happening at a dizzy rate. The political atmosphere compels one to breathe fast—to be choked. Every month is a month of history, every week is a lesson in political economy, every day an episode of open, brutal, cynical class struggle. This is particularly the case in Germany. There is hardly a worker, no matter of what political creed, no matter how brutally exploited, who does not carry with him an unwritten historical chronicle, with certain dates of years and months standing out in blood-red. Most of these unwritten chronicles begin to date from 1914. Up to 1914 every thing is blurred, vague as in a trance relieved from its things, persons, events begin to assume definite shape, become three-dimensional: August 1914, November 1917; November 1918; March 1921; October 1923; May 1924; December 1924. Poincare Lloyd George, Clemenceau, Baldwin and Mac Donald, Ebert, Scheidemann, Erzenburg, Ludendorff, Noske, Herriot, Foche, Nollet, Wilson, Hoover, Dawes, Morgan—every one of these men has played or plays a real part in the life and struggles of the Gearman workers, and they stand out in bold red letters in that peculiar memory of the masses, called class consciousness.

OCTOBER, 1923. There are some German comrades who say half-jestingly that the German revolution will have to be set for a month other than October; October rouses in the German working class a feeling of disappointment, a certain sense of weakness and shame. There is a real danger in this feeling of weakness for it leads to a chronic underrating of our own strength, of our ability to fight and crush the bourgeoisie. The German proletariat has had to listen too often to the banality that its revolution of 1918 was really no revolution.

BESIDES, the Russian revolution is so near, so intimate an event to the German worker that he involuntarily begins to compare: Russia—Germany. "There, power is in the hands of my class comrades—here in the hands of class enemy; there every hour, minute, second of every worker's labor is being used to build up his own, the workers' status—here, I work and slave for my oppressors, for the German and foreign bankers; there, the workers are celebrating the seventh anniversary of that great event—here, Noske and Scheidmann and Kautsky are celebrating the sixth anniversary of treachery, white terror, enslavement." And this thought weighs heavily on his consciousness and creates a sort of self-repression which is dangerous and difficult to overcome.

BUT revolutions are not made or crushed by Freudian analyses. History and its compelling economic laws are on our side. The machine of capitalism is out of gear; a sixth of the earth's surface has been cut out of the "spheres of influence" of world-imperialism; capitalism cannot feed or shelter its slaves; the slaves; colonial and wage, are rebelling; the class struggle is become a reality even to the complacent, self-satisfied, stupid and characterless petty-bourgeoisie, which always believed that "everything that is alright and for the best."

IN October 1923 "it nearly happened." The German bourgeoisie was more than nervous; it was hysterical; it didn't know what to do, or what the next day would bring. The French general staff was preparing to repay the kindness Bismarck had shown to Thiers in crusing the Paris Commune, fighting General Seekt crush the German Commune if it dared raise its head; the whole capitalist world was nervous with expectation. But "October" did not come. We need not go into an analyses of the whys and wherefores; fatal errors in leadership lack of initiative, resoluteness, daring cunning; perhaps lack of preparedness—ideological as well as military.

THE lesson was bitter but great. The German party began to take ideological stock, of itself, changed its leadership, and began to think and act in terms of November . . . In May of this year it mobilized nearly four million voters at the polls. The mass character of the German party was definitely established. Almost daily, 62 Communists representing the revolutionary proletariat of Germany could tell the representatives of the German bourgeoisie and their lackeys, the social-democrats: "We came here to bury the republic not to praise it." This the bourgeoisie and especially the social-democrats could not stomach. Bourgeois parliaments were not made to be forums of the revolutionary working masses.

THE contradiction is too great, too flagrant. How can the 100 odd social-democrats bear a daily reminder that they are demagogues, traitors to the working class, lackeys to the bourgeoisie! Imagine if you can, dear comrade, that you are a social-democratic member of the reichstag; imagine further that a Communist member mounts the platform and reads from a document the following words:

". . . We are doing what we have always emphasized: We shall not desert our vaterland in the hour of need." (Declaration of the S. D. reichstag faction on August 4, 1914.

Or "Those who talk peace must shut up! The final word shall be spoken by the cannon." (Vorwarts, October 1918.)

Or: "Vielhundert Tote in einer Reih—Proletrsier."

"Karl, Rosa, Radek und Kumpanel —Es ist keiner dabei, es ist keiner dabie, Proletarier." (Vorwarts, Jan. 14, 1919)"*

The next day, Jan. 15, Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht were murdered.

THE Communists had to be silenced for another reason—the most important reason: The Dawes plan was being foisted on the German proletariat; the whole bourgeoisie and the social democracy hailed the "rising dollar-sun" (so the Vorwarts calls the Dawes plan), as a new era of peace and prosperity. The 8-hour day was abandoned, wages reduced, rebellious workers victimized; lockouts became the order of the day, strikes had to be crushed by all means—or else the colonization of Germany would fail and the attempt to enslave the German workers might be frustrated; the revolution would then take on flesh once more.

REICHSTAG was therefore dissolved. With what hopes? In the hope that in the interim the C. P. would be crushed and a vital force would be destroyed. How was the C. P. to be crushed? was it to be forbidden and outlawed as before the May elections? No. The bourgeoisie has also learned a lesson or two from the practice of the class struggle. They saw that in spite of the illegality of the party in the previous elections, 4,000,000 workers had voted for us. We had regained a strong position in the shops and factories.

THE shops and factories are the blood-vessels of the revolution. If we are strong there—we are unconquerable. The bourgeoisie know this well. New methods of persecution were therefore adopted. The party remains "legal;" but here are some features of this legality: (a) the 8,000 political prisoners in Germany are almost without exception leading functionaries of the C. P.; (b) Another 8 or 10,000 active Communists are compelled to live away from home so that their party work is crippled; (c) thru systematic confiscation of our posters, leaflets, and pamphlets and thru the arrest of our speakers at meetings (literally WHOLE MEETINGS) by the S. D. chiefs of police (Richter and Severing) the unorganized and "non-partisan" masses are kept away from us and cannot be reached by our propaganda; (d) there are hundreds of local groups of the C. P. with not a single party member employed, all of them have been thrown out of work because they are Communists.

IN some places whole districts report only 30 per cent of their members employed; to be a Communist, or even an active trade unionist means the sack, starvation, demoralization.

IT is under such odds that the C. P. of Germany is fighting on. Small wonder then that we expect to lose votes and parliamentary seats. Now we are not parliamentary fetishists. The S. D. fight among themselves over every seat; to them it means bread and butter, perhaps even champagne and a villa. To us the number of votes is a barometer of our strength, and a seat in parliament a chance to allow our voice heard from the parliamentary forum. If we receive only two million votes in the December elections, the best proof will have been furnished that the German C. P. is a mass party, which means be crushed. Considering the white terror it will be a wonder if we do get that many votes.

IN the meanwhile the German social-democratic party is fast developing into an open counter-revolutionary organization whose highest aim it is to delay the inevitable (they know they cannot prevent it), to shield the bourgeoisie against the revolution, and to poison the masses with hatred and fear of the class struggle and of the revolution. With the help of that half-fascist organization "Schwarz-Rot-Gold," the S. D. work hand in hand with the bourgeois parties "to protect the republic" and to crush the fighting spirit of the proletariat.

THERE is not a lie too mean to be launched against Soviet Russia (in this they work hand in hand with Kerensky who is in Berlin); in the Amsterdam International, it is the German reformists who form the most bitter opposition to establishing the unity of the international trade union movement; they even dare to slander the British delegates at the Russian T. U. congress, and call them Moscow traitors because they are honest enough to call red red, and yellow yellow.

IN the German trade unions under their control they have instituted a real terror a la John Lewis (or has Lewis learned from them?) against Communists and against every pressure; they are even honest enough to praise and congratulate the Hungarian social democrats for expelling the opposition from the trade unions, because it dares open its mouth against the bloody Horthy regime; their chief of police in Berlin, Richter, has even dared to arrest Egyptian nationalists here for protesting against British bloody imperialism. And so on, and so on. The crimes of the S. D. against the working class are too numerous to be exhausted in an article.

BUT it is their turn next. This they know and fear more than the pope fears the devil. That explains their treachery. Who said we Communists don't believe in a day of judgment?

*Hundreds of dead in a row—Proletarians, Karl, Rosa, Radek and company are not among them, not among them—Proletarians.

Unemployment Intensifies the Struggle

To the DAILY WORKER: Among the latest "reforms" promulgated by the capitalist class is that of Professor John H. Commons of the University of Wisconsin, in which is embodied a disguised scheme to entrench and thus perpetuate class exploitation under the present system of wage slavery. The proposed law, of the well-known "Wisconsin idea" type, proposes to have employers pay the unemployed worker a part of his wage-loss during plant shut-down and lay-off unemployment-periods. It is similar to other "reform" measures now in effect, such as the better-known industrial accidents compensation laws.

The writer opposes such innovations in America. I have always contended that unemployment is a most essential phase in the social revolution. As a bait to unthinking bosses, unemployment entices them to intensify the misery and want of the proletariat by expropriating the gains made in good times—to slash wages, increase hours and speed, and "discipline" his wage slaves. By this practice the capitalists are voting themselves into extinction. The movement for the ultimate victory of the revolutionary proletariat is dependent upon the natural class struggle development. This struggle is intensified by unemployment; after all, revolution brews in the empty stomach of the downtrodden. In periods of no work the proletariat has an opportunity to think; only the revolutionary ideology of Communism penetrates his mind in indelible terms. The leadership of Communism rises as the inevitable collapse draws near.

Make Capitalism Bearable.

In the sequence of events this economic condition, while immediately profitable to the capitalists, ultimately, as Marx has so ably put it, "digs capitalism's grave." Certain attempts are made to check this natural tendency. The increased attraction of Communism during unemployment is well recognized by the bourgeois, and "Red raids" are instituted in grand publicity fashion to terrorize the proletariat and to frighten him from the Communist standard. Since these Red raids are admittedly futile, the capitalist class now proposes, thru Professor Commons, a device that is by far more vicious and demoralizing to natural class development. It will make capitalist rule bearable to the unthinking proletariat interested merely in bread, and stem natural educational developments. Further, it will bring "capital and labor together," as the latter concedes to the capitalists' financial peace terms. It will unharness the workers' reserves of productive energies, now restricted as he endeavors to increase his share of the products of his toil. The net result, then, is to increase the "harmony," "efficiency," speed, and profits —while the capitalists give but a small percentage of the wages lost during unemployment caused by over-production.

In short, any legislation endeavoring to compensate for unemployment, should be opposed here for this reason. It stagnates the natural progress for the reconstruction of society and increases the difficulty of the organization of educational and social revolutionary groups.—J. L.

Reply to J. L.'s Letter.

To the DAILY WORKER: J. L. in his letter states that unemployment insurance should be opposed by all revolutionists, on the ground that it decreases the misery of the unemployed workers, and so stagnates revolutionary development. The theory on which he proceeds is that the increasing misery and starvation accompanying present-day unemployment, because there is no hasten the social revolution, should not be directly combatted by revolutionists.

Misery Makes for Apathy.

This philosophy of misery, as expounded by the writer of the letter is erroneous. While hunger makes for struggle, abject misery and starvation make for inertia and apathy. This has been repeatedly proved by the history of class movements. Chronic famine-ridden masses, as are found in India and China, do not lead the revolutionary struggle. The leaders are, rather, those classes whose living standards have advanced with the capitalist mode of production in its advanced stage, and who, in the present historical decline of capitalism, find their standards lowered during unemployment.

The lowering of the living standards by the more powerful capitalists causes the class struggle to loom forward as the workers stubbornly resist the encroachments on their established status. It is the instability of the modern capitalist society that accentuates the class struggle: the continuous fluctuation in the workers' standards, owing to the economic instability of capitalism.

True, the volume of revolutionary sentiment is increased by unemployment, but the revolutionary working class cannot profit from unemployment accompanied by extreme misery and starvation. Both of these conditions are inherent factors in capitalism, and they increase as it declines. There is no reason, then, why Communists should advocate submission to extreme misery. Quite the contrary. Such conditions would only delay the final downfall of capitalism, and besides, would furnish every agent of the capitalist class with a powerful ideological weapon to combat Communism, by fighting out that we only regard the unemployed as revolutionary "cannon-fodder."

Incompatible with Capitalism.

The plan of Professor Commons is a typical liberal measure. It provides that capitalists should bear the "cost" of unemployment, by insuring the workers so that when unemployment comes, the worker will receive part of his wages to tide him over to the next "prosperity" period. But the decline of capitalism carries with it the fact that it cannot at the same time maintain its ruling class and insure the sustenance of the workers. Any real scheme of unemployment insurance, under a capitalist management then, is impossible, because if it provides sufficiently for the workers, it will eliminate the capitalist.

Commons' plan, therefore, is chimerical, as any plan must be that assumes capitalist capable of giving the workers any adequate insurance. His plan is also absurd in that the burden he places on the shoulders of the capitalists is but a minute fraction of the real cost of unemployment to the workers.

By engaging in the struggle for relief of the unemployed, whether from the state or from the employers themselves, Communists can direct the struggle of the masses against the power of their class enemy. It is the aim of Communists to blend the immediate needs of the workers with the ultimate goal of Communism.—W. K.

PROGRESS IN SOVIET RUSSIA

Economic progress of Russia out of the industrial quagmire inherited from the bankrupt capitalist regime is reflected in figures made public by the government. These figures show that in the last four years the production of oil has increased more than 50 per cent, the production of coal has doubled and the production of iron has increased more than five fold.

The actual production of these basic commodities since 1920 in tons was as follows:

	Oil	Coal	Iron
1920-21	4,189,000	8,496,000	126,000
1921-22	5,112,000	11,379,000	180,000
1922-23	5,796,000	12,839,000	335,000
1923-24	8,480,000	16,218,000	720,000

This uninterrupted progress toward complete recovery is also reflected in the constantly increasing foreign trade. The U. S. department of commerce reports that in the first nine months of 1924 Russia had a foreign trade of $202,800,000 as compared with $104,800,000 in the same period of 1923. In other words the foreign trade has practically doubled in two months. Imports this year amounted to $83,400,000 as compared with $56,600,000 in 1923, while exports increased from $54,200,000 in the first nine months of 1923 to $119,400,000 in the same period of this year.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IN the early days of the [illegible] when the rival propagandists for Germany and England undertook to sing the praises of their respective imperialism, one of the favorite arguments used by the supporters of John Bull, was that England carried civilization to hitherto uncivilized parts of the world. Now, what kind of civilization was this, that went forth in the bibles of British missionaries, followed by the whiskey of her traders and the bullets of her armed forces?

* * *

THE leading world powers recently held an opium conference. Of course it was a farce. Like the peace conferences held by the robber nations, it was merely a mask to deceive some sincere liberals who believe they can scrape off some of the filth from the capitalist system and make it less severe on the nostrils. That opium conference came to an end without a single constructive measure being adopted. And for the very reason that those who attended it were in the business of making profit from the production and sale of the deadly drug.

* * *

CHINA is one of the greatest sufferers from the opium evil. According to a French scientist, five per cent of the Chinese people smoke or chew opium, and social diseases have followed so fast in the train of the opium habit that the Chinese race faces the prospect of annihilation unless the cause of the plague is removed. And here is where the hypocritical British capitalists come in. England forced the opium curse on China at the point of the sword. It was not known in that coubtry until the year 1700. The British "East India Company" poisoned China and the Orient with the drug and made fabulous profits on its sale. A Chinese emperor seized millions of dollars worth of opium and threw it in the harbor.

ENGLAND, Christian England, declared war on "heathen" China, annexed Hongkong for good measure and exacted a heavy cash indemnity besides. The British propagandists who polluted the atmosphere with praise for the pirate empire did well not to fish up these disagreeable facts, when it was necessary to inflame the minds of the masses against her commercial rivals. And Britain is not the only sinner against China and against the exploited peoples of the Orient. But she is the worst sinner, not because she is any more willing to poison a whole nation for profit and for diplomatic reasons, but because she has been at the game longer than the rest.

IRELAND threatens to leave the League of Nations if that organization supports the British contention that the Irish Free State had no right to register the Anglo-Irish treaty with the league. Those bourgeois Irish nationalists who thought they would be allowed to strut around like "independent fellows" by the hard-boiled British Empire will soon have good reasons to change their minds. They had better watch England swiping what ever concessions she gave Egypt in her hour of stress, now that things look a little brighter.

WHEN Comrade Rakovsky came to Paris after France recognized the Soviet government, the first thing he did was to look around for secret archives, where he might possibly run across some interesting documents that would tell a story of the czar's regime. Regretfully he announced that he could not find anything. But it appears that Comrade Krassin, the ambassador, was luckier. The latter got his fingers on the copy of a secret agreement entered into between France and Russia in the year 1916, providing for the partition of Turkey to the mutual advantage of Russia and France.

CAPPELLINI, THE TRAITOR, WAGES WAR ON MINERS

Coal Diggers Getting Ready to Can Him

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 23.—After learning that the general grievance committee, representing the Pittston region strikers, had decided to give publicity to the many grievances existing in this district, so as to inform the general public why they had come out on strike, Cappellini, the renegade, told the press that he, too, would give publicity to some facts in connection with the strike, and at a meeting of the executive board in this district yesterday, he was given permission to do so.

Because it shows how far a "jockey" of this type will go, after riding a radical horse to power, I will give his statement in full:

To The Mine Workers of Pittston:

"I refuse to call any more meetings of the executive board to meet the general grievance committee of the Pennsylvania Coal company, for the reasons that all the members of the board have committed themselves against this illegal strike and nothing can be done other than what they were told in the several meetings had with them; and they have deliberately refused to abide by agreement fairly entered into, and show their lack of regard for a solemn contract by calling all the miners of that company out on strike whenever it meets their fancy.

The Sacred Contract.

"I regret very much the position in which the miners' organization has been placed, and believe the officers of our union and the great bulk of the men themselves are willing to abide by our contract. The district and national officers have already shown their good faith by requesting the general grievance committee to have their men return to work so that their complaints could be taken up properly for adjustment. This they refuse to do. Not only have they refused the district officers, but the national as well.

"In the face of the defiant refusal of the general grievance committee to have the men resume work, I, as district president, am making this statement. I believe, first, in the sacredness of contract; that agreements should be lived up to; that agreements made must be binding on both sides or the whole system of collective bargaining will fall flat. In view thereof I feel I am right in refusing to meet the general grievance committee, and I have acted in the only way honor and dignity permitted.

"It is not the men, the rank and file, who constitute the union, who have done wrong. They have allowed themselves to be misled by a general committee which has usurped authority not vested in it, and the sooner the workers wake up to that fact and take the advice of the regularly constituted authorities of the organization, the assurance and harmony will supersede chaos.

Against Fakers' Wish.

"Men of the rank and file, how long can you continue this illegal strike and maintain your position? What will be the final effect on your great organization which has done so much in the past to better your wages and conditions? Can such an illegal strike last, and win, in the face of the opposition of your

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Dec. 23.—Thousands of armed guards are patrolling the streets day and night, breaking up demonstrations of unemployed workers. Twenty per cent of organized labor is now unemployed.

The unemployed workers have served notice that if doles are not increased in time to make Christmas purchases, they will increase their activity.

Large numbers of unemployed have marched on city hall, where a cordon of police repulsed them. Many workers were ridden down and injured by mounted police. Fifteen were arrested. The government has voted fourteen million dollars for immediate distribution.

MILITANTS IN MACHINISTS' UNION ANNOUNCE CANDIDATES FOR COMING ELECTION; FIGHT THE "B. & O. PLAN"

The left-wing group in the Machinists' Union, which has in the past been the leader of all the movements for progress in the metal trades organizations, the group that led the fight for amalgamation and all other progressive measures in the recent convention, is announcing a full slate of candidates for office for the nominations now taking place in the organization.

The left-wing militants compose the only elements that have a definite program to offer to the membership. All possible efforts have been made to make possible a united front on the basis of a real fighting program of action with the so-called "progressive" group led by Anderson. But all efforts have failed due to their refusal to come out definitely for any program at all and also due to their failure to include any outstanding left wing fighters on their slate.

The left wing slate is as follows:

For international president—Julius Emme, Local 459, St. Paul, Minn.

For general secretary-treasurer—Tim Buck, Local 235, Toronto, Ont., Can.

For editor of journal—A. Overgaard, Local 390, Chicago, Ill.

Members of the executive council, U. S.—H. S. Mellvaigh, Local 497, Tacoma, Wash.; John Otis, Local 536, Pittsburgh, Pa.; P. Jensen, Local 492, Chicago, Ill.; H. Garner, Local 209, Hammond, Ind.; Alfred Goetz, Local 62, Detroit, Mich.; Andrew MacNamara, Local 52, Pittsburgh, Pa.

These militants deserve the support of the rank and file. As their records show, they are the fighters for progressive measures. They are the leaders in the fight for amalgamation. They are leading the fight for independent political action and the fight against the B. & O. class collaboration, and they were the backbone of the railroad shopmen's strike of 1922.

The nominations take place in January. The laws provide that only the two nominees receiving the highest number of nominations will be placed on the ballot.

Every militant thruout the I. A. of M. should see to it that the left wing candidates receive the endorsement of his local union.

The full program of the left wing will be published tomorrow.

This unit has gathered in pledges amounting to $515.00, of which $318.00 has been turned into cash. Altho the nucleus counts only 16 members, they have so far more than quadrupled their quota. At the last meeting of the Finnish branch every one of the 116 members pledged himself to buy a $3.00 insurance policy. The Bulgarian branch reports that at its last meeting it came within a few dollars of filling its quota.

English Branches Do Well.

The North Side English branch has raised $213.00 of its $300.00 quota and has pledges on hand to carry it well over the top. Douglas Park English has paid in $80.00. All of the English branches are making a commendable showing in the campaign.

ALLIED REFUSAL TO EVACUATE GERMANY AS TWICE PROMISED DISCREDITS SOCIAL-DEMOCRATS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 24.—The announcement that the council of ambassadors of the allies, at the instigation of the interallied military committee headed by Marshal Foch, would refuse to carry out their promise to evacuate the Cologne bridgehead, strikes a vital blow at the social-democratic party of Germany, which has led the German nation into acceptance of the Dawes Plan as an exchange for the promised evacuation and will bring hundreds of thousands of workers to the Communists.

Entente Breaks Two Promises.

Not only is the evacuation of the Cologne bridgehead promised to the Germans by the London conference which inaugurated the Dawes Plan, but it was also set forth in the Versailles treaty that this evacuation was to take place on January 10, 1925.

The excuse raised by Marshal Foch, who again appears on the stage with a saber dangling at his belt, is that France is endangered by Germany's failure to fulfill the disarmament provisions of the Versailles treaty.

It is charged that Germany really has more soldiers than allowed under the Versailles treaty, by calling most of them "police" and by shifting new classes of raw material into brief training and then keeping them out of service but in reserve.

Never Objected to Workers' Repression.

The allied countries were quite well aware of this practice and never objected so long as the troops were used against the workers. In fact they encouraged Germany to arm and drill the illegal "Black Reichwehr" to crush the Communist attempts at revolution, especially during the Ruhr invasion.

The interallied military control commission which examined the military resources of Germany were, indeed, almost ordered to give Germany a "whitewash" report and let Germany go with a formal reprimand. Many of the officers who understood this and drew up such a whitewash report are now much astonished at the report being used to blackmail Germany again and refuse evacuation.

Politics and Business.

Undoubtedly new political and trade factors have a hand in this sudden blow at the German hopes to obtain evacuation. England is unwilling to leave Cologne until the French also are out of the Ruhr. The French say that their departure is for the present physically impossible—and so the matter stands, neither wishing to leave first.

The social democrats told the sack.

"TO BEAT ANY OPPONENT, KEEP HIM OFF BALLOT"

So Rules I. L. G. W. U. Joint Board

The reactionary machine of the Chicago joint board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have decided that the safest way to insure the election of officers in whom the membership has no confidence, officers who have proven unable to conduct union business, and who spend huge sums of money for good times for their supporters—these officers have decided that the safest way is to keep their opponents off the ballot.

On Friday, December 19, the examination of candidates for business agent took place at the meeting of the joint board at 328 West Van Buren street.

Incumbents Not Examined.

Those already in office were not examined, altho some of them were today don't know their duties. One of the machine candidates was asked what ought to be the duties of a business agent, and most of the delegates admitted that they didn't know what he was talking about in his reply.

But here come two intelligent, militant workers whose sincerity in the movement is not questioned, who have militantly fought for responsibility in the union and who are liked by the membership because they fought for an accounting of expenditures and against extravagant expenses. And this is where the joint board stopped.

No Union Democracy.

Altho all tricks to manufacture charges here failed, nevertheless, the bought and paid for joint board delegation, fearing that these candidates were too popular among the members, and fearing that these candidates would defeat their own henchmen, voted to rule them off the ballot.

Practically the same happened to E. Nadle, who was supported by the rank and file because he stood for establishing responsibility in the organization. Together with the other two he was considered as a good, constructive worker who would build the union instead of disrupting it as the present staff has. So Nadle was ruled off. Also candidate L. Gold was rejected.

Membership Aroused.

The membership is burning in protest against this action of the joint board. Wherever a group of ladies' garment workers are met they are to be heard protesting. "It is expected that those who have put over this job will change their mind," said one member of the union on Market street during the noon hour yesterday. "Because," said he, "there is a limit to how much even a cloakmaker will stand and if they all raise a protest this time the present staff will have to leave office in spite of their supporters' action last Friday."

MEXICAN PEASANTS RESISTING ROBBERY, MEET CALLES' TROOPS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 23.—President Calles is showing rather early the traitorous politician that hides beneath the cloak of his claim to represent labor as the head of the labor party. The peasants, who armed themselves and fought to defeat De la Huerta, who, led by Communists, fought under the red flags bearing the hammer and sickle emblem, are now being attacked by government troops by order of Calles.

At Aguas Calientes yesterday, the peasants, angered at the profiteering of the proprietors of the city slaughter house, seized the premises and defied the authorities to oust them. At once, the Calles' government troops were ordered at all haste to entrain for Aguas Calientes. This act of repression against the peasantry is sure to anger the whole peasant movement of Mexico.

PRESIDENT OF CARPENTERS LOCAL QUITS

Expulsion of Militants Proves Hot Potato

The reactionary tools of President Hutcheson, of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, in local 181 of this city, bit off more than they could chew when they undertook to railroad five militants out of the organization without the semblance of legality or trial according to the constitution.

At a meeting held last Monday night, the president of the local, Albert Sorgenson, resigned. There was nothing else for him to do as he was discredited thru his action in acting as a tool of Jensen and Hutcheson, in railroading the radicals. He is now of no more use to the chief fakers so they drop him like a hot potato.

The vice-president, also a machine man took the chair at the meeting.

Three members of the trial committee of five have sworn to an affidavit that the expelled members did not plead guilty as the falsified report of the farcical trial declared. The chairman however refused to have the case reopened, saying that it was now up to the general president.

As the expelled members did not have a trial they feel that no action has yet been taken by the local that would render it obligatory on their part to appeal to the general president. They did not have a trial to which they are entitled, as the membership agrees that the cooked-up proceedings against them was worse than anything that could be framed in a capitalist court.

The fight to secure justice thru working class action for the railroaded members of local 181 has only started. The members of the union should attend every meeting and not allow the victory to the reactionaries by default. They figure on the apathy of the majority of the membership and are adopting a policy of tiring out the opposition. The militants must organize their forces to meet the machinations and tricks of the bosses' lackeys.

The members of the local note that John Steffen chairman of the so-called trial committee appears to have been rewarded without undue delay. He is now in Indianapolis, in the Tabulating Committee, and the work of that outfit is to count Hutcheson in as international president.

The Rothard article alleged that Ebert had been active in bringing about a strike among munition workers.

THRU LABOR BOARD'S DECISIONS ENGINEERS HAVE LOST WORKING RULES GAINED BY THEIR UNION

The five per cent increase in wages recently granted by the United States railroad labor board was no increase at all, as it lowered the standard of working conditions which had been obtained by enginemen and firemen after years of bitter struggle against the employers. Robert C. McNall, for many years a railroad firemen and then an engineer, tells just what hardships the engineers and firemen must face.

"Before we ever had a union," said McNall, who now resides in Greenwood, Mo., "certain conditions were granted us by our employers, and since then they have been constantly trying to take those conditions from us. We used to get ten miles for 'doubling' a hill, i. e., when our train was so heavy we had to cut off on the side of the hill and take the train up a piece at a time. Likewise we got ten miles for running for water between tanks. Certain other conditions, too, we traded to the employers and the labor board to bring out a peaceful culmination of the Adamson law. We are considered overpaid when we receive seven dollars a day. Our overtime pay is blood money, and we undermine our health when we get it".

McNall then told of the short life of the engineer, whose arduous occupation kills or wrecks him at an early age. "The average life of an engineer from his promotion to his death, discharge or retirement is eleven and four tenths years" Mc Nall said. "Since 1909 I have seen fifty-seven of our engineers discharged for some slight lapse, 19 retired on account of health, and 17 of our brave fellows go to their deaths after the manner traditional of a man who does his duty, 'died at the throttle'.

"Considering we have only about 78 men in all on our division, you can see that 93 men have been sacrificed in 15 years, and only 78 working. We are charged double rate for insurance that we may leave our families comfortable when we get bumped off. The engineers have to stand a harder physical examination than do recruits in the United States army, and the minute a man gets deaf or near-sighted or color-blind, he is cast aside, his services no longer satisfactory.

"The time has come that unless you force your employer you will get, not an increase, but a decrease in wages.

CHILDREN MUST BEAR BRUNT OF SCHOOL DEFICIT

Classes Will Be Made to Hold More Pupils

Recommendation that class room memberships be increased in order to save the city $411,400 in teachers' salaries was made to the building and grounds committee of the board of education by Superintendent of Schools McAndrew. McAndrew recommended a classroom of at least 44 pupils each. Educators declare that this number is entirely too high if the children are to get anything out of their schooling.

The board of trustees received a letter from the Teachers' Federation charging that the children are being made to pay the penalty for tax graft.

This recommendation is to come before the finance committee meeting for final passage. It is expected that it will meet with much disapproval at this meeting. However discussion on this measure has been going on now for over three months and it is certain that it will finally go thru since it is evident that the only real pressure brot by the board for relieving finance shortage is economy at the expense of education. So far there is no indication that the school board intends to go after the money stolen from the school treasury by the tax grafters.

district and national union? Will you as mine workers of the Pittston district be bamfed? These are the questions you should ask yourself now. In fact, you should have asked them before you laid down your tools. Had you done so and acted in accord with your contract, there would have been no strike.

"As a result of the general committee calling an illegal strike, you have lost your membership in the United Mine Workers' organization, but let me say to you, the door is not locked, only closed. To open it you must first show that you will, as your consciences must necessarily dictate, return to work and abide by your contract; if you do this you will find the officers of the United Mine Workers of America, the organization you should be members of, ready and willing at all times to assist you in adjusting your grievances as provided by agreement solemnly entered into.

The above is Cappellini's pour-out of "facts" as promised to the capitalist press. Read it again, please, just to see if you can convince yourself that a "labor leader" is responsible for it. . . . "Traitor" is too good a name for a man of his ilk. He boastfully starts his statement of "facts" with "I refuse to call any more meetings of the executive board to meet with the general grievance committee," so I must repeat my charge that he deserted "his illegitimate child."

From the time of its organization and until Cappellini won for himself the position of president of district one, he had proclaimed that the only way the miners' grievances could secure justice, was thru the instrumentality of these general bodies.

Now on Lewis Payroll.

However, his gang did succeed in electing Brennan with that kind of fight in 1921, and our "hero" in the Lewis act of today, because an organizer. His whole statement of "facts," if sent out unsigned, could very easily be mistaken for an operators' document.

Driving Them Back.

It does nothing but tell them what he and Lewis have told them since the start of the strike, which is, to go back to work and observe the "sacred contract." No pretense is made to tell the readers of the capitalist press that the strike was brought about by flagrant violations on the part of the operators; that the strike is to save the conditions that have won by the organized efforts of these men, thru the instrumentality of the general grievance committee's nor does he say to the strikers, that he will prevent the operators from taking away the conditions that are the subject of discussion.

The Junk Pile.

The men are determined to win their fight, even if they have to relegate the officials to the junk pile, and action in that direction is now being taken. Already the Lehigh Valley general body has asked for a vote in the locals that are attached to it, to consider a sympathy strike, and it is not unlikely that other such bodies will take similar action.

The Hudson general body which was promised action in ten days, before Cappellini left to see his "boss," John L. Lewis, at El Paso, has not had one word of encouragement yet concerning the disposition of their many grievances.

Instead, it is claimed that a special meeting of the district board has been called for a future date, at which time the Hudson men will be asked to appear before the board to relate their many grievances again, and then, action looking towards settlement will be started. This company keeps itself busy, giving parties and banquets to its employees to help them forget their troubles at the many mines it operates.

German Government in Delicate Position

PARIS, Dec. 23.—The council of ambassadors scheduled to meet tomorrow to consider the report on German disarmament, today announced it had postponed the meeting until Friday, to give the council added time to digest the contents of the report.

Though Germany has been busy thru Ambassador Von Hoesch, seeking the evacuation of Cologne by Jan. 10, the date originally scheduled there was a strong feeling here today that the contents of the disagreement report would lead to a postponement of this date.

Dawes Plan in Jeopardy.

Ambassador Von Hoesch has argued that unless Cologne is evacuated, Germany will not be able to select a government capable of carrying out the Dawes plan, to which the foreign office has replied that if execution of the Dawes plan rests on so slender a foundation, it might be often in jeopardy.

Reports that Germany has not carried out the disarmament terms of the Versailles treaty have led to the belief that evacuation will not be carried out.

Working Old Trick.

The interallied military committee presided over by Marshall Foch decided that Germany had not carried out the provisions on disarmament of the Versailles treaty and was adopting the old trick practiced during the time of Napoleon, when a new army was trained by the strategem of shifting men under cards, thus not increasing the number prescribed.

Until recently the interallied commission was in favor of giving Germany's secret military preparations a good coat of whitewash and the present action came like a bolt from the blue. It is held in some quarters that the British decisions not to evacuate Cologne on Jan. 10, is connected with dissatisfaction over the operation of the Dawes plan.

Misgivings as to Future.

The social democrats and centrists who are the main support of the Dawes plan look with misgivings on the future. The nationalist elements are taking advantage of the situation for factional purposes and there is ever talk of a putsch to dissolve the reich stag.

Communists Gain Strength.

In the meantime the Communist Party is growing in power and numbers. In the recent national election with practically all of its leading officials in jail or in hiding, it polled over 3,500,000 votes or little less than in the previous election when it sent 62 deputes to the rechstag.

Freezes to Death.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—Failing to locate on the "skid-road" any Coolidge prosperity, even to the extent of a shipment to some work camp, and not possessing the price of a night's lodging in Chicago, Oscar Johnson tried to avoid arrest for vagrancy by passing the night curled up out of sight in a fence corner. He was found in the morning, frozen to death, in the yard at 625 W. Madison. His empty pocket contained only a letter addressed to him at Chicago. He was apparently 30 years old.

RAID QUITE HOME AND ARREST COUPLE 'CAUSE WIFE'S SKIN IS DARK

In their effort to shield gunmen and their accomplices among the outrages committed by the police none is so dastardly as the one committed against the quiet little family of the Andersons. Arthur Anderson and his colored wife, Rosa, were descended upon at their home at 4638 St. Lawrence Ave., and thrown into cells at the 48th St. station. The reason given by Officers Mc-Morrow and McKenna for this atrocious raid on a peaceful home was that they were tipped off that colored and whites were mixing. That was their sole excuse for the arrests!

Editorial Room Slaves of Brass Check Press Must Now Be Organized

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, newspaper editorial workers constitute one of the most helpless lots of wage slaves to be found anywhere in the nation.

They get little encouragement to organize. The jurisdiction that the International Typographical Union once claimed over them has been surrendered.

Repeated appeals to the American Federation of Labor, especially to its late president, Sam Gompers, to aid in their organization, has always fallen on deaf ears.

The editorial worker today, for America's kept press, is as helpless as the unorganized slaves of New England's textile mills and just as poorly, paid.

* * * *

It is estimated that there are about 3,200 editorial workers on Greater New York's dailies. There must be tens of thousands over the nation. Howard A. Lamb, writing in "The Labor Age," estimates that there are continually 500 jobless seeking work in New York City alone. It is estimated that there are 20 schools of journalism pouring at least 2,000 new workers into this field yearly.

* * * *

Workers on newspapers, mechanical as well as editorial, are faced with the large consolidations at frequent intervals. These are taking place continually. Frank Munsey, the steel trust millionaire, as well as newspaper and magazine publisher, within a few months, has put the Globe, the Mail and the Herald out of business in New York. Competition for advertising is eliminated, dual and triple expenses are wiped out, bankrupt institutions are made good moneygetters, for Munsey, while new thousands of workers are thrown idle upon the streets. The number of newspapers, in 1923, decreased by 81, four of them dailies.

* * * *

It is an excellent situation for the newspaper owners. Fewers jobs and more hunting them. Meager wage scales still further beaten down under the growing pressure of the unemployed.

Beginners in the editorial departments of the kept press, if they are lucky, may get the wages of low-paid stenographers, from $20 to $30 per week. Otherwise they will get much less, especially in smaller cities. Experienced men and women writers are forced to be content with a weekly wage of $35 to $50 per week. Anything above that is the exception rather than the rule. There is no limit to hours; no power, except the boss's will, to dictate the conditions of work.

* * * *

To be sure the newspaper owners fear the flare-back from these brutalizing conditions. While the Typographical Union and the Printing Pressmen's Union, with other newspaper workers' organizations, have their own "homes" to take care of the sick, the aged and the incapacitated, the editorial "down-and-outs" in New York, as an isolated example, are to receive the charity of the late James Gordon Bennett, former owner of the Herald. He has set aside $3,000,000 for the James Gordon Bennett Memorial Home for New York journalists. This charity, however, stands practically alone. Newspaper editorial workers are almost too docile even to receive this attention.

* * * *

It is to the interest of workers in all newspapers trades that the editorial workers be organized. These helpless white-collar brain workers must be convinced of their identity of interest with the mechanical workers. No newspaper wage agreement is complete unless it dictates wages, hours and conditions for the editorial room workers, as well as those who set the type, make-up the pages, mould the forms, run the presses, do the mailing and finally those who drive the wagons and the boys who sell the papers on the streets and deliver them to the homes. Similarly, no struggle is complete, no newspaper strike is 100 per cent, unless it calls out the editorial workers as well as all the rest.

* * * *

The big newspaper owners are everywhere strengthening their positions. They are ever ready to pick a weak spot in the front presented to them by the workers. One example is the recent bitterly fought strike of Hearst's sheet in Seattle, Wash., the Post-Intelligencer.

* * * *

Amalgamation is sorely needed by all newspaper workers, just as badly as the organization of the underpaid, overworked editorial slaves is needed. Amalgamation of all the printing crafts will come. When it does come it must include all brain as well as hand workers.

AMERICAN WORKERS SEND FRATERNAL GREETINGS TO VICTIMS OF FRENCH CAPITALIST BRUTALITY AND TERROR

(I. W. A. Press Service)

The International Workers' Aid, having learned of the widespread raids thruout France and the arrests of 300 of their fellow workers by the white guard movement, sends its fraternal greetings to the victims of the white terror.

The International Workers' Aid which is now conducting a campaign on behalf of thousands of workers in capitalist dungeons thruout Europe and Asia declares that the brutality and terrorization to which the capitalists are resorting in their efforts to suppress the working class are proving futile.

American Workers Understand

The American workers know what these wholesale arrests mean. In 1919 and 1920 the capitalists of America similarly resorted to such methods and despite the arrests of over 3000 and the deportations which are still going on, the capitalists and their henchmen could not succeed in intimidating the American workers. Such methods only aroused the indignation of millions of workers and those who carry them into effect have been politically destroyed.

Be assured, fellow workers of France, that the American workers are with you in your fight against the violent deeds employed by your master class in its endeavor to enslave you.

Down with imperialist brutality and terror!

Long live the fighters for the freedom of the working class!

Hail International solidarity of the workers and farmers!

Union Bakers Fight R. R. Ward.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—Union bakers at work in California are assessing themselves $1 per capita to fight the R. R. Ward Baking Co. octopus in the state. These promises proved to be stalls to stave off union agitation. Now the union fight against the concern is on in earnest.

WHITE GUARD KILLS LEADER OF MACEDONIA

Shoots Prof. Tchaulev in Milan Cafe

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Dec. 23.—An agent of the Bulgarian white guard Zankov government, today shot and killed Professor Peter Tchaulev, a leader of the Macedonian League, in a small coffeehouse at Milan.

Dimitri Stephanov, the white guardist, picked a quarrel with Professor Tchaulev, accusing him of being a Bolshevist agent. Tchaulev, an intellectual leader of the movement which aims to liberate Macedonia from all its present spoilers, including Bulgaria, Greece and Yugo-Slavia, replied in a conciliatory way, but Stephanov drew a pistol and shot the professor five times.

Tchaulev Opposed Zankov.

Professor Thaulev was one of the three most prominent leaders of the Macedonian League. This is a purely national liberation movement. However, when the Zankov white guard overthrew the Stambulitsky peasant government of Bulgaria, the Macedonian League was inclined to oppose Zankov.

The white guards, led by General Protogurov, approached the Macedonians and made an agreement by offering some concessions, if the Macedonians would limit their activity. After this was agreed upon, however, the white guards were triumphant over the peasant forces and turned upon the Macedonians, murdering many of them in cold blood, finishing Alexandrov, one of the three Macedonian leaders along with Professor Tchaulev.

Following this, Professor Tchaulev announced that the Macedonian League would take a new position, and issued a program, advocating the federation of all Balkan countries in a union which would prevent the constant trespassing of one upon the other and the baiting of one another by imperialist intrigue of the greater powers.

A United Front with Communists.

To accomplish this, he advocated that the Macedonian League would enter a united front with any elements willing to fight for this aim. Naturally, only the Communists were internationalists enough to agree. This was followed by an alliance between the various Balkan Communist parties and the Macedonian League.

Wage Increase Sought by Building Trades Workers' New Contract

The demand of the Chicago building trades workers for a flat wage of $1.50 an hour, which in the case of the carpenters is an increase of 30 per cent, has been the signal for the Building Construction Employes Association to lament about "increased building costs."

The district council of the carpenters last spring signed a two-year contract, with a wage rate of $1.25 an hour, but stipulated in the contract that a raise could be asked provided notice was given before Jan. 1. The carpenters have now served such notice.

Plasterers, bricklayers, electricians, lathers and painters are already receiving $1.50 an hour. The steamfitters receive $1.37½ cents an hour and the ironworkers $1.25 an hour.

ROTTEN HOUSING CAUSES DEATHS IN FATAL FIRES

Workers Hold Protest Mass Meetings

By ROSE PASTOR STOKES.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—At the very moment that the Russian Soviet government had opened several of the most beautiful palaces as homes for the tired mothers and little children of workers, children and mothers of the working class were compelled in capitalist America to sacrifice their lives in a firetrap tenement to satisfy the greed of the landlords.

The fire occurred at 13 East 98th St., where six lives were lost, one family being entirely wiped out. Outside, the tenement stands as the nothing more were the matter with it than a bad case of broken windows. Inside, the rotten stairways are burnt to a crisp. The stairs and hallways are the charred witnesses of the death-trap conditions that prevailed before the fire broke out.

The fire had just started when a devoted friend and neighbor cried the alarm to a woman on the second floor.

"I'm coming," she replied, and it seemed that there would yet be plenty of time to escape. But the house was built—not for the safety of the workers but, for the profits of the landlord. I saw three coffins today, in one of them the charred remains of the mother who had cried "I am coming!" The others contained the bodies of the father and the daughter, all of them burned beyond recognition.

I talked with a man, the father of a family who lived on the ground floor. With a broken, quavering voice he tried to tell us how some of them were saved. He shook his head. "Yes, yes, it was not a safe place but, what can we poor people do? Everywhere we go, they ask always more and still more rent. We lived in these rooms for ten years, yet we had to fix everything ourselves. The landlord would never do anything necessary to make the house safe or comfortable or clean. Yet he always raised the rent—a few dollars at a time. Every time a tenant moved we saw him ask for or twelve dollars more for the rooms.

"Don't you think," I asked him, "that the workers got together and established a government only for workers (for there are millions of workers to only thousands of bosses and landlords) a government of workers, like Russia, that we should change all this for ourselves and do as the Russian workers are doing?"

"Yes," he replied, "we could. I have been in this country for over forty years. As a worker, I was always a union man. I know what it means to be on strike for many long months. I know what it is to go hungry. I have been in the struggle and I know that we could do everything for ourselves if we would only get together and beat the capitalists. I'm an old man now, but I hope the younger ones will do what every worker knows we need to do."

A protest meeting against the firetrap tenements has been arranged for Friday, Dec. 26, at 8 o'clock. The hall, 64 East 104th St., is in the neighborhood of the fire. The meeting is to be held under the auspices of the women's committee of the Workers Party and the United Council of Working Class Women. Already much local interest has been created in the meeting and a large audience of men and women of the working class is expected. There will be prominent speakers. Also, plain mothers of the neighborhood will have something to say.

IMPERIALISM A THREAT UPON EVERY WORKER'S LIFE, SAYS MANUEL GOMEZ AT CHICAGO OPEN FORUM

That the economic and ideological development of society do not keep equally advanced, the material development usually leaving the progress of ideas far behind, is shown by the rise of American imperialism and the lack of comprehension of its scope and importance, is the conclusion of Manuel Gomez, speaker at the open forum of the Workers Party at the Ashland Auditorium Sunday evening.

The natives of Santo Domingo are ruled by United States marines. Hayti is ruled by American troops. The elections in Honduras are influenced by sending warships and machine guns to make the choice of American bankers the president. In Cuba, the general strike was broken by demonstrations of force made by the United States.

These are not incidents of war, but the ordinary events of "peace time." Comrade Gomez dwelt at length on the rise of American imperialism as one phase of the whole historical age of imperialist development thruout the world. The United States has an empire in and around the Carribean as sort of "Mittel-Europa" like the kaiser had before the war with Mexico as its center.

The speaker outlined the pre-imperialist stage of capitalism, citing the farewell address of Washington about "no entangling alliances" as one proof of the 100-year period of national development during which the policy of all countries was generally "no aggressive expansion." This was the age of national consolidation of Germany, Italy and other nations. Comrade Gomez cited Pavlovitch's work on Imperialism which shows that Bismarck was not an imperialist in the strict sense of the word, but the unifier of the German nation. And so with other statesmen of that day, who considered colonies as expensive nuisances.

Beginning of Conquest Period.

But from about 1880 the capitalist system had entered into a period of imperialist expansion, and in 25 years the great powers seized over 10,000,000 square miles of territory from weaker peoples. The period when "free competition" accompanied by "free speech" and "stable parliaments" was over. Trustification and combination became the dominant factor and completely altered the political superstructure. Political power steadily became centralized and this affects every phase of life.

Imperialism is not something far away, in "far Cathay," but is a part of economic life, just as threatening to the worker in the shops, mines and mills of the United States as to the workers and the poor peons of Latin-America.

Comrade Gomez traced the rise of trusts, the Standard Oil, the Havemeyer trust, the copper and woolen trusts, but above all the steel trust, the first billion dolar combine formed by fusion of Morgan and Rockefeller interests. This was the first instance of outstanding importance of the penetration of finance capital into industry. Now, the bankers, once a mere auxiliary to industry, dictate all major industries. Monopoly ruled, monopoly princes came to be usual.

Government and Imperialism.

This centralized power of finance and industry had been reflected in a monopoly power in government. The foreign policy of the United States once diffused to respond to the needs of the whole bourgeoisie, became the policy of Wall Street, the crowning monopoly of the age. Trustified industry looked beyond the borders of the nation for raw materials, while trustified finance sought an outlet for accumulated surplus of capital, a market for the export of capital.

The contradictions within capitalism, chiefly the capital accumulation tended to choke further development if export of capital was not attained. Even now the banks in some cases are refunding large deposits. A New York bank had refused to take a $2,000,000 deposit as it could not place it out and would only lose by paying interest to the depositor.

Imperialism Bulwark of Capitalism.

The way out in general, however, is temporarily provided by the exploitation of weaker peoples. Capital can be exported, and with the cheap labor enforced, a super-profit is returned. The United States has become the imperialist power par excellence.

The United States has three major imperialist maneuvers. The Dawes plan to conquer Europe; the open door in China to conquer Asia, and the closed door—the Monroe doctrine, to pillage Latin-America.

Comrade Gomez, briefly gave a history of the Monroe doctrine, showing that it arose in the days of the holy alliance which threatened interference in Latin-America to restore revolting colonies to Spain. The United States, after 50 years of sleeping on the Monroe doctrine, picked it up as a precedent authorizing something new, the "right" of America to interfere in the internal affairs of every Latin-American country.

An advertisement showing how the bankers were grabbing Peru, taking up $2,500,000 gold 8 per cent bonds stating quite openly that they had installed a Mr. Cumberland as customs collector to be sure that the revenue of Peru would be in the hands of the bankers and the same gentleman was "financial adviser" to the Peruvian government. This is because that exported capital is not only exported goods, but needs guarantees of returns with interest. This year's export of capital is already over a billion dollars.

Imperialism Brings War.

Meanwhile wars are preparing, the export of capital and resultant competition on the labor market of the world of American workers with the oppressed races of Latin-America and colonies, strikes a vital blow at the American workers' standards. The remedy is the overthrow of imperialism, not only by direct assault by the workers against the capitalist rule at home, but by alliance with the national movements among the oppressed races of Latin-America and a common struggle between the exploited classes of both territories to crush imperialism and inaugurate a new society thru the dictatorship of the workers and farmers.

An enthusiastic audience gave a good response in applause, questions and discussion. The open forum will not be held next Sunday, Dec. 28 owing to the suspension of other activities to permit a membership meeting of the Workers Party. But on the Sunday following, Jan. 4, the subject will be "The Men Who Own America" and the speaker, Leland Olds, the well-known economist.

A Thousand Workers Bounced Out of Jobs At Montgomery-Ward

On Monday, the bosses in the Montgomery-Ward mail order house at Chicago Ave. and the river, notified 1,000 employes, mostly girls and women, that there was no more work for them. Rumors are that more will be laid off today.

While some promise is made that those laid off will be restored after the first of the year, most of those who are the sufferers are disconsolately looking for jobs elsewhere.

Coal Wagon Drivers Demand Increase of 20 Cents Per Hour

Chicago coal drivers are demanding a wage increase of twenty cents an hour, and a strike is threatened which would tie up delivery of winter coal. The teamsters' representatives are to confer this week with officials of the Chicago coal merchants' association. Over 2,000 coal company employes are involved. At present a 70 cent an hour rate prevails. The men work ten hours a day.

COOLIDGE AGAIN WARS ON POSTAL WORKERS RAISE

Administration Senators Try to Block Bill

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 23.—In another effort to block the passage of the bill increasing the pay of postal employes, the Coolidge administration senators have started public hearings on the Sterling bill which increases the mailing rates on newspapers and magazines.

The Coolidge administration will attempt to substitute the Sterling bill for the postal pay increase bill which was vetoed by Coolidge at the last session of congress. It is a certainty that this substitute bill will not pass the senate, as newspapers have protested against it thruout the country. Coolidge's postmaster general, New, recommended this bill in an effort to sidetrack the postal employe pay increase bill which Coolidge does not want passed over his veto.

BRITISH TRADE UNIONISTS REPORT THAT SOVIET RUSSIA SHOWS HUGE GAINS FOR WORKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 23.—The British trade union delegation, in advance of its full report, has issued a summary of its findings. This summary has riled the tory press, which attacks the staid labor men, Purcell and Bramley, who are its signers, as "Bolshevist agents."

The statement, in part, is as follows:

"Social, industrial and economic conditions of Russia have enormously improved since the visit of the British delegation in 1920. Members of both delegations and expert advisers formerly residing in Russia for many years are agreed as to the very rapid process of economic restorations now operating under the direction of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Workers Enhused Over System.

"The financial stability of Russia is more secure than was expected. The Russians have almost balanced their budget and have restored their productivity relative to the pre-war standard at a rate which compares favorably with the general European average.

"Industrial undertakings are being rapidly developed, especially those responsible for electrical power and equipment. The high degree of organizing and administrative capacity and enthusiasm of the workers under the new system of state ownership deeply impressed the delegation.

Houses Better Than Britain's.

"Housing conditions of the workers are being rapidly improved. New housing schemes making provision for the erection of model cottages superior to some of the government houses provided in Great Britain are being pushed forward with great energy and ability.

"A great effort is being made to eliminate illiteracy, and many kinds of educational activity are being generously subsidized and urged forward by the Union of Socialist Republics and trade union organizations.

Care and Culture of the Workers.

"Workmen's clubs, holiday homes and rest houses are also being used for education of illiterates, including children and adults, and the proportion of the working class population without education is being reduced very rapidly.

"Administrative departments of the Soviet state are well organised and efficiently controlled, especially those to which members of the delegation devoted special attention, namely, those dealing with state insurance for health, unemployment and medical care of workers and their dependents.

Workers' Sports Real Benefit.

"Every effort is being made to improve the moral life of Russia, and prostitution, gambling and other vices are being rapidly eliminated by educational effort and drastic state regulations.

"By the creation of workers' clubs, rest houses, sport and physical culture centers, trade union organizations are securing for their members trade union benefits in addition to real wages, which is much appreciated."

Justifies Recognition.

In conclusion, the summary says:

"Many other important changes will be referred to and dealt with in the report, which will contain necessary information to justify the trade union and labor policy supporting full diplomatic and economic recognition of Russia. The report will also prove that millions of new capital could be properly and safely invested in development of enormous economic possibilities of Russia and will fully justify the claim made on behalf of British labor that Russia under Soviet rule has so far improved material and moral conditions of its people as to have now earned a permanent place among European nations."

The delegation travelled about 6,000 miles, remained six weeks in Russia, some going to one section, some to another, and some particularly making a visit to the Soviet Republic of Georgia, which has long been a bone of contention between the Second International yellow socialists, among them Ramsay MacDonald, and the Union of Soviets. MacDonald had issued a number of statements that the Georgian people were "suppressed" by the Bolsheviks. The Moscow authorities sent the British labor delegates down to Georgia to let them see that Ramsay was lying.

WORKERS PARTY SPEAKERS FLAY LABOR TRAITOR

Raises Big Issue in Connecticut Unions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 23.—At a mass meeting held in Trades' Council Hall, the Workers Party speakers gave a history of the Joseph Tone case, already familiar to the DAILY WORKER readers.

Tone, a former organizer of the International Association of Machinists, and leader of the striking shopmen, accepted the position of commercial agent for the New York, Ontario, and Western railroad.

Prominent officials of the Machinists, like Robert Fechner and Vice-President Connolly blessed the appointment. Even the New Haven Trades' Council officially congratulated Tone on his appointment.

Communists Attack Tone.

The speakers, Ida Rothstien, prominent militant in the Ladies' Garment Workers' International Union, and William Simons, district organizer of the Workers Party, condemned Tone's act, marking it as desertion from the ranks of the workingclass. They urged the shopmen present to become active in their unions, to fight for amalgamation of the railroad unions into one industrial union; to fight against the class harmony policy of the labor leaders. Comrade Rothstien drew lessons from her years of experience in strikes, and in fighting against the rotten leadership in her union. Comrade Simons explained how the present state of leadership in the labor movement caused the Brockton shoe workers' revolt last year, and similar rank and file action in other industries.

Labor Council Endorses Tone.

Altho the Tone case (he is a state senator) is well known thruout the state, the only organization that sincerely attacked Tone for his desertion has been the Workers Party.

The Connecticut Labor News, a corrupt, double-faced organ of a labor misleader, who thanks to Gompers' exit took his place as first vice-president of the Cigarmakers' International Union, attacked Tone, but the action was prompted by rivalry for political plums. The labor leaders generally condone Tone's act, because it is quite natural to them to leave the working class ranks, whenever more money is offered. Loyalty to the working class is unknown to them. Labor is a stepping stone to personal profit. The Workers Party, local New Haven, will make this case an issue in the local unions of New Haven.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

MINORITY THESIS PROPOSES PENETRATION OF THIRD PARTY

By WM. Z. FOSTER.

A significant feature of the minority thesis is its failure to acknowledge the mistake of the third party alliance. It is characteristic of the minority to be stiff-necked and to assume an air of infallibility. They never admit mistakes. They still persist in defending their opportunistic maneuvers in the Chicago and St. Paul conventions, in the grab at the farmers, and in the August thesis. A case in point is that of Comrade H. M. Wicks, a prominent leader of the minority, and one who speaks much of Leninist leadership. Just a couple of months ago he, in a wide breach of Communist tactics, principles, and discipline, supported the ultra-reactionary, James Lynch, for president of the International Typographical Union, for which he was censured publicly by the party. Typically, instead of confessing his mistakes, he persists in it and tries to justify it. In this attitude he merely follows the course taken by the minority generally regarding party policies.

But the minority attitude in failing to acknowledge the third party alliance mistake is far more sinister than merely their customary refusal to admit mistakes. Its real significance is that they still mourn for the third party alliance. And, more significant still, is that instead of being corrected and brought back to a Communist line by the Comintern decision, they are ignoring it and going still further to the right. Now, they are actually cousing to accept the LaFollette movement as the expression of the labor party movement. This conclusion is inescapable after a reading of their thesis and the arguments they produce to sustain it.

The minority, simply substituting the term "farmer-labor party" for the "LaFollette movement," practically consider the latter in theory and practice as the mass political movement of the workers and poor farmers and propose to work within it. Stripped of verbiage and understood as it really is, the minority thesis does three things. (1) While presumably laying the theoretical basis for the "class" farmer-labor party, it actually lays the basis for the LaFollette movement; (2) While ostensibly indicating the organized expression of the "class" farmer-labor party movement, it is in reality pointing out sections of the LaFollette movement; (3) While proposing a pretended "class" farmer-labor party policy, it really outlines a program for penetrating the LaFollette movement. Let us look at these propositions more in detail:

1. Minority Fails to Find Theoretical Basis for "Class" Farmer-Labor Party

The minority thesis is supposedly written in defense of the use of the slogan "For a class farmer-labor party" by the Workers Party. Consequently if it has any purpose at all it must be to demonstrate the existence of a definite movement for the formation of a farmer-labor party of industrial workers and poor farmers and to analyze the forces producing it. With a great fanfare of trumpets the thesis sets out to do this. It speaks of the decay of world capitalism, of use of the government by the big capitalists against the workers and poor farmers, of the "open shop" drive, of the big agricultural crisis, of the industrial crisis, of the struggle of the petty bourgeoisie against the big capitalists, and of the general sharpening of the class struggle.

But after all the travail of the minority thesis, does it show the existence of a concrete "class" farmer-labor party movement or a tendency in that direction? It does not. It simply brings out the following propositions:

1. That masses of workers, farmers, and urban petty bourgeois are deeply discontented from the growing pressure of capitalism.

2. That these masses are breaking away from the republican and democratic parties.

3. That they have formed themselves into a petty bourgeois movement under the leadership of LaFollette.

4. That within this movement there are class antagonisms which will eventually disrupt it.

But where does the "class" farmer-labor party come in in this analysis? Nowhere. The minority thesis does not show such a movement to be in existence now nor does it even prognosticate that it will come into existence at the break-up of the LaFollette movement. The thesis, supposedly written to justify the use of the "class" farmer-labor party slogan, does not indicate a movement at the present time to correspond to that slogan, nor does it hold such a movement to be inevitable. The thesis says, "It is quite possible, that the mutual organization of a class farmer-labor party which will establish itself firmly and function over a period of time will not be the line of development."

What Minority Thesis Is.

What we have in the minority thesis is this: An analysis which simply indicates that there is a LaFollette movement, which analyzes the social content of that movement and the forces that produced it, and which prophesies that eventually the proletarian elements will break away from the LaFollette movement. Then, without having showed that there is a "class" farmer-labor party movement in existence now or in definite prospects for the future, the minority thesis, by a sort of leap-the-gap procedure, hops right to the conclusion that the "class" farmer-labor party slogan stands justified.

The minority thesis analysis has a great hole in it. As it stands, it cannot serve as a justification for the use of the "class" farmer-labor party slogan. Something is lacking in it. It cannot show a "class" farmer-labor party movement in existence now. Therefore, if the slogan is to be of value, it must demonstrate the inevitability of such a "class" farmer-labor party movement. The minority, typically evasive upon all major theoretical points, lack the intellectual courage to defend the inescapable conclusion from their slogan, that is, that the "class" farmer-labor party is inevitable. Their thesis now is merely an analysis of the LaFollette movement and a prophesy that it will break up, together with an irrelevant and lugged-in advocacy of the "class" farmer-labor party slogan. The thesis does not in any sense lay the theoretical basis for the use of that slogan.

2. Misrepresenting the LaFollette Movement as the "Class" Farmer-Labor Party.

Altho the minority thesis fails completely to establish the existence of a definite "class" farmer-labor party movement now, as distinct from the general LaFollette movement, and it fails to show that such a movement must develop with the breaking away of the masses from the LaFollette movement, still, by a sleight-of-hand jugglery, it not only seeks to leave the impression that one day there will be a "class" farmer-labor party, but also that there now exists an organized movement corresponding to the "class" farmer-labor party slogan. The method is insidiously simple.

In naming organizations and movements supposedly giving body to the "class" farmer-labor party idea, the minority thesis adopts a significant shift in terminology. It drops the term "class" farmer-labor, which ostensibly represents the new form of such party that the minority advocates, and it merely refers to the farmer-labor party in general terms. Thus it brings to our attention a miscellaneous collection of granger farmer-labor parties and true, by raising no issue of their "class" nature, to palm them off upon our party as sections of the "class" farmer-labor party movement. Thus we find cited for our edification the LaFollette farmer-labor parties of Minnesota, Washington, Colorado, South Dakota, and North Dakota. This substitution of the LaFollette movement for the "class" farmer-labor party movement runs all thru the minority thesis. It is but one indication of many that the minority, while advocating their mythical "class" farmer-labor party, are prepared to accept in its stead the LaFollette movement.

The C. E. C. majority thesis lays down the correct principle that in order for the Workers Party to profitably propagate the "class" farmer-labor party slogan, there must be mass sentiment behind it. It demands that the minority show the existence of such sentiment. The efforts of the minority to do this are the chief comedy feature of the party discussion.

The Fabulous Five.

First, their thesis cites the five LaFollette farmer-labor parties above-noted, together with the defunct Cannonsburg party. Then, seeing the glaring inadequacy and incongruity of this showing, the minority began a campaign of discovering flourishing "class" farmer-labor party movements in various parts of the country. There was California, for example, where a bunch of renegade ex-members of the Workers Party and socialists, all of whom supported LaFollette, were trying to revive the socialist party under the banner of the farmer-labor party. The minority actually tried to call this contemptible maneuver a mass demand for their "class" farmer-labor party. After that came the farmer-labor resolutions of the moulders, potters, and stone cutters, at the A. F. of L. convention, which those resolutions were adopted by the T. U. E. L., efforts long before the LaFollette movement absorbed the farmer-labor party proper. Next, was Massachusetts, where even when farmer-labor party sentiment was rampant in the country, no real trace of organization could be built up. This place has just experienced a tremendous outburst of "class" farmer-labor party sentiment, to hear the minority tell it. The truth is that Organizer Ballam, a minority supporter in the minority, was just throwing out a little smoke screen for factional purposes. Now comes Comrade Wicks, who discovers further blazing mass sentiment for the "class" farmer-labor party in Buffalo. He says that someone told him there is a rumor afloat that it has been said the dead Buffalo labor party will be brought back to life again. Such is the mass support the minority find for their "class" farmer-labor party. Only one minority stronghold has failed to "deliver," Philadelphia. What's the matter with Comrade Jakira? We breathlessly await the manifestation of a great "class" farmer-labor party outburst in his bailiwick.

In their citing of mass sentiment for their "class" farmer-labor party slogan, the only things tangible are the granger farmer-labor parties, sections of the LaFollette movement. They are not "class" parties at all. They are LaFollette parties. But this gives the minority no great difficulty. They are prepared to accept these parties and to work within them. The whole course of their thesis and supplementary arguments proves this.

3. A "Class" Farmer-Labor Party Policy Which Means Working With the LaFollette Movement.

In reality the thesis of the minority proposes a policy of working within the LaFollette movement, or "third party," as an organization with which the Comintern prohibited Communists from even making an alliance. This is evident from an analysis of the minority "policy."

Three general lines of action are open to the advocates of the "class" farmer-labor party slogan. These are:

1. They can remain within the realms of propaganda and simply advocate the principle of a "class" farmer-labor party.

2. They can proceed to organize such sentiment as is to be found for their slogan into a definite "class" farmer-labor party.

3. They can work within the LaFollette movement for the realization of their "class" farmer-labor party.

The first of these is the policy of Comrade Brahdy and his group, the second is the old Pepper-federated policy, and the third is that of the minority party. All three are untenable. The minority do not dare to declare openly for any one of the three. If they stood for the first one, they would be driven out of court at once, because in the very nature of things such a slogan as the "class" farmer-labor party demands a definite organizational policy. If they stood for the second policy they would fare no better, because the Workers Party has had its stomach full of federated parties, and if they stood for the third, frankly, they would also be defeated for obvious reasons. It is a hard situation. So the minority meet it by advocating all three policies simultaneously and in utter confusion. In this certainly we have hope to avoid the issue of a definite policy. The practical working out of their confused proposals, however, would amount in substance to putting into effect the third policy, that of working within the LaFollette movement.

The Heart of the Minority Thesis.

The minority thesis starts out with a great blare of trumpets to support (1) policy, that is of simply propaganda of the "class" farmer-labor party slogan. They enlarge upon its value as a propaganda instrument and minimize the organizational side. Says the thesis, "Our immediate campaign must be one of agitation. Whether the left class elements will be eventually organized into a farmer-labor party or fighting the battles of workers and farmers, is not the essential question at present." And again, "The slogan, 'For a class farmer-labor party' remains our most effective means of agitation for political action on a class basis by the workers and poorer farmers."

Having thus soft-soaped the elements in the party who realize the futility of a campaign to organize the "class" farmer-labor party, the minority thesis, by typical example of its not letting the right hand know what the left hand doeth, plunges headlong into an immediate campaign of organization around its beloved and belabored slogan of a "class" farmer-labor party. This time it has found a great love for (3) policy and unblushingly advocates permeation of the C. P. P. A., the heart of the LaFollette third party movement.

But upon this dangerous ground it penetrates only to the outskirts of third party, the minority thesis does not rest long. It hastily takes refuge in (2) policy, the famous August-thesis-Pepper-federated policy. We are told that participation in the third party is to be strictly limited in scope and time. Our dose of poison is to be small. The thesis promises us a plethora of splits from the C. P. P. A. and the inauguration of a whole series of fake federateds all over the country. The minority thesis aims to please. In its grab-bag it has a little present for every group, except the one against the usage of the slogan at all, the majority group. It pleases those who are for the slogan for propaganda purposes only, those who foresee the glory of a new federated or, perchance, a flock of them, and those, who are a numerous group of minority followers, who stand squarely for participation in the LaFollette third party.

What Will Minority Do?

Now the question arises, which of these three general lines of policy, (1), (2), or (3), would the minority actually follow if the party were so unwise and unfortunate as to support their thesis? Let us consider each phase: As for (1) policy, the minority would, of course, use the "class" farmer-labor party slogan for propaganda purposes. But, this propaganda would have to be followed up by a definite organizational program That much is absolutely certain. Even the minority grudgingly admit it Therefore, the attempt to create the impression that the slogan has great value simply for propaganda purposes is vain and futile. Whether they wanted to or not, the minority would be driven to take organization al steps to put their slogan into effect.

The question is merely which of the (2) or (3) policies they would apply in seeking the inescapable organization. What an alternative for the party to contemplate! We would have the choice of either forming a new federated or of working within the third party! Now, which course would the minority take? The answer is not too difficult. For a time, no doubt, with "sectarian" objections to penetration of the third party remained strong, the (2) policy would be at least partially applied. We would be confronted with numerous splits in the C. P. P. A. and mushrooms of Communist sympathizers into skeleton parties. There would grow up probably a thick underbrush of little federateds. But this would be only a temporary stage.

These little federateds would be a burden upon our party's hands. Forlorn orphans, they would be at once a pity and an expense. A policy of birth control would be inevitable. The situation would be intolerable to be W. P. The opportunist minority, allowing out their present tendency to accept the LaFollette movement would soon probaly propose to put an end to the hopeless splits and organization drives that called into being these worthless little "class" farmer-labor parties, liquidators and rivals of the Workers Party. While not abandoning in theory their "class" farmer-labor party, the farmer-labor Communists would postpone its formation indefinitely. The policy of penetrating the third party, which they now propose as a temporary expedient, would become the settled farmer-labor program of the Workers Party.

The policy of the minority leads straight to penetration of the LaFollette third party. Their thesis analysis develops, not the "class" farmer-labor party movement, but the LaFollette movement. The organizations they seek to palm off as "class" farmer-labor parties are in reality only sections of the LaFollette movement. Their pretended "class" farmer-labor party policy leads directly to a liquidation-opportunistic policy of penetrating the LaFollette third party. Such a "policy" as the minority proposes must not be adopted. It would poison our young and struggling Workers Party with the worst forms of opportunism. In its latest decision the Comintern emphatically repudiated every suggestion of penetrating the third party movement as highly injurious to the integrity and development of our own party. We must support this decision, we must check farmer-labor opportunism once and for all by overwhelmingly defeating the minority thesis.

MAJORITY RETREATS RIGHT INTO ARMS OF FARMER-LABOR PARTY

By JULIUS CODKIND.

TAKING the position that there is no present mass movement toward a farmer-labor party the majority proclaim that we should withdraw from this field and apply the united front tactic in other avenues, as the opportunity arises.

Where are these other avenues to lead us?

The majority holds forth, as the leading united front tactic of today, the establishment of unemployed councils in which the Workers Party should take the leadership. "Very well, let us proceed to form these councils.

We are in the midst of our unemployed agitation. Comrade X, of the majority, is addressing a vast mass of five hundred unemployed workers. We assume for the sake of charity that in this unmixed crowd of unemployed there are no Communists or sympathizers. He speaks to them of the necessity of forming councils of unemployed to fight for "Work or Wages." He proves that every worker is entitled to a job. He holds them spellbound. They stand convinced that it ought to be. They accept his leadership, but within him he knows that he has yet two tasks to perform.

First, he must tell them how! Second, he must win them to the Workers Party.

Can he can approach his average American crowd, even of unemployed, and convince them only thru the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat, will they gain their objective, the writer stands convinced that the majority is correct in abandoning the slogan of the farmer-labor party and the effort toward its attainment. At one stroke, Comrade X has performed his double task, and by repeating his success thruout the country before the great masses of workers he has prepared their minds for the revolution and there is no need for the farmer-labor party.

However, Comrade X of the majority will probably approach his task by explaining that only when the workers will control the government will they be able to impose on the bosses the "Work or Wages" proposition. He will explain that to accomplish this, the workers must organize their own class party and then like a good Communist, he will judge rightly that this is as far as he can go now without losing the confidence of his unemployed workers.

However, he is still under the necessity of gaining and holding prestige, not only for himself but for his Workers Party, so he will go on to describe fully the position of the Communists, emphasizing his own belief that the Communist determination to establish Soviets is the correct and only solution, but that he is careful to explain at the time nevertheless, that he and the party join loyally in the effort of the workers to attain government power thru those methods that the workers themselves deem best.

Now, what has Comrade X of the majority done?

He has gone as far as he could in urging a Communist program. He has explained the Communist position thoroly, without creating prejudice. He has implanted in the minds of the listeners a doubt of their own remedy, and left a slight but subconscious idea that if this falls they can still try the Communist tactic.

Very good! Comrade X of the majority has done as well as anyone could have expected of him. Nevertheless, Comrade X (in company with Comrade Y of the minority, who dislikes the task fully as much as Comrade X) will have to march along on the road chosen by the very workers he has just made class conscious by his own unemployment agitation, until they get ready to try his Communist tactic. And that road is the LABOR PARTY, which he himself has been compelled to accept in the logical progress of his own speech.

The General Labor Congress and the Farmer-Labor Party.

Another avenue that the majority suggests as a good way to establish a united front, is, to immediately begin to popularize the idea of a Labor Congress to prepare the minds of the workers for the coming tasks."

Of course, one might suggest to the majority that the sentiment for such a labor congress does not exist, and according to their own law on the labor party they contradict themselves when they propose to work for something for which no sentiment exists. It is well to remember that they criticize their own expenditures for the farmer-labor party for which so much actual mass sentiment did exist when the Workers Party took the field. How much more will it cost to build up a movement for a labor congress to prepare the minds of the workers for the coming tasks? Let us remember—to build up a movement for a congress that holds out no objective to the workers outside of the proposition that the Workers Party is to prepare their minds.

Let us assume, however, that the majority has gained its point. The victory has been won in the party. The farmer-labor party has been cast aside. All obstacles have been overcome; a labor congress is in session.

Can the majority there offer the program of the Communist Party, i. e., the Workers Party, for acceptance, in line with its own policy, which reads as follows:

"A fundamental principle of the united front tactics is that a Communist Party must absorb into its own ranks every section and group of the working class that accepts in the main the principles and slogans of the Communist Party."

Will the majority dare to dismiss this congress without affecting a permanent form of organization? No, they won't dare. They won't even dream of such an absurdity. They will provide a permanent form of organization. What will that organization be?

We must remember, if the form of organization is anything less than the Communist Party, that it becomes a drag on the wheels of the movement. Let us be lenient, however. Let us grope with the majority for a means to avoid the formation of the labor party, for this seems to be their real objective. Very well. Let them propose some form of organization whose character will be such as to make unnecessary for the organization to enter the parliamentary field, i. e., the elections, for if it enters the parliamentarian field it becomes a political party of labor which must stand in conflict or in alliance with the Workers Party

Perhaps the majority proposes a new I. W. W. You never can tell!

Who Are the Opportunists?

The majority is most solicitous of the welfare of the minority. It wants to save all these young Communists who have but found the party with the last couple of years as a result of the party's united front tactics. It wants to save them from the clutch of the farmer-labor party, so it declares war on the farmer-labor party for their sake. Pepper, Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht, Gitlow, must be saved by Foster, Dunne and Browder. In New York also, the old guard minority are busily being saved, by newcomers.

The Workers Party seems to have disappointed our newer members. It held forth the idea of a vast labor party. Now it is evident that a labor party can never be proportionately as large as the labor party of Great Britaain. What is more bitter still, is that the labor party here cannot hope to become a powerful factor on the parliamentary field, so why should we bother with it, walls the majority.

Certainly our majority, howling "opportunism" and "farmer-laborism" at the minority is not opportunist or "farmer-laborist." Of course, it was opportunism and farmer-laborism to prevent the majority from making the Workers Party look foolish by defeating their desire to maintain their "united fronts" with the Fitzpatricks at all costs, and from going into a third party convention to nominate LaFollette for president.

Of what use is a labor party that can serve only as a rallying point for such organized labor bodies as are ready to break their alliance with the petty bourgeoisie, but are not yet prepared to enter the Communist Party? Our nasswer to this question, based on the arguments and thesis of the majority, must be that the only use of such a party is to breed opportunism and farmer-laborism in our own ranks.

It is becoming evident that in the United States, a possible Labor party must find its leadership in the Communist Party. To the minority that appears to be most welcome, but the majority seems to fear that the two class parties will become all mixed up and the Workers Party lost in the shuffle.

Even such an absurdity cannot prevent the determination of Communists to move toward the formation of a labor party to be dominated and led by the Communist Party of America, openly, fearlessly, determinedly to the goal of Soviets and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

A Communist Catechism

More Questions and Answers

By MAX BEDACHT & JAY LOVESTONE.

14. Question—Who must be the leaders of all united front campaigns?

Answer—The Communists, of course. In this connection it is necessary to state that the Ruthenberg-Pepper group has had considerable difficulty in impressing this elementary Communist truth upon many of the comrades high in the councils of the present majority of the central executive committee. We cite the following from a report on the united front farmer-labor campaign in the city of Chicago made by Comrade Swabeck, district organizer, on June 10, 1924, to the central executive committee.

"We had decided and did pursue the method of as much as possible following the lead of the national officers of the farmer-labor party and mainly stressed the necessity of unity."

The comrades of the present minority of the central executive committee fought against this anti-Communist concept of the united front tactics and will continue to do so.

15. Question—Where does the Foster-Cannon group get the notion that because of the fact that Hillquit and some other socialist party leaders may attempt to use the farmer-labor party slogan, therefore, this slogan becomes useless for the Communist Party?

Answer—This argument is the trade mark of the centrist. The centrist has so little confidence in his own principles and tactics that when he meets apparently the same principles and tactics from some enemy he does not dare to put forth his own for fear that the masses wouldn't know the difference.

16. Question—Since the Foster-Cannon group is bitterly opposed to submitting the question immediately to the workers does it get the nerve to fool the membership that the C. I. has as good as endorsed its stand already? What is the meaning of the C. E. C. majority spokesmen talking themselves blue in the face repeating the following section from the last advice from the C. I. on our farmer-labor campaign? "In case of a split at the June 17 convention the question of whether or not the Workers Party shall act altogether independently in its own name in the election campaign or whether it shall launch a campaign under the name of the F. L. P. will depend largely upon whether it (the Workers Party) is successful in the split and will depend on how far it maintains contact with the working masses at the June 17 convention"?

Answer—The declaration of the C. I. applies only to and was given only for the consideration of a method of conducting a specific election campaign at hand and was not put for ward in any way at all and does not at all pretend to deal with the question of the farmer-labor party as an issue and slogan.

Commenting on the American question at the meeting of the commission in the presidium of the E. C. of the C. I. on May 20, 1924 Zinoviev said: "I believe that if we study everything we will say that in the year 1924 things are not so elementary that we can simply go along with any movement that is against the trusts and we cannot propagate the idea of an independent labor party. WE MUST DARE TO PUT FORTH THIS IDEA AND IT MUST BE REALIZED, NAMELY, A SEPARATE LABOR PARTY. IT IS OUR MAIN DUTY TO SEE THIS IN MOTION. IN AMERICA THERE IS A DANGER OF OUR FALLING INTO DE LEONISM THAT WE MUST STATE QUITE OPENLY . . . The tactics of forming a farmer-labor party were absolutely correct on condition of course that we retain a Workers Party of our own. That is the American plan. In France it was possible to conduct the election campaign under the slogan of a "workers' and peasants' bloc." In America we must drive this party forward but at the same time we must build our own party. That must remain . . . We must not regret that we formed the F. F. L. P. We are glad about this fact that we have a farmer-labor party as the basis of our movement." Well comrades, this does not look much as if the C. I. has endorsed the position of Cannon-Bittelman-Foster! Does it? Of course, not.

17. Question—How many contradictions are there in the Foster-Cannon thesis?

Answer—Altogether too many. In fact the whole thesis is a contradiction. For instance, they accuse the Marxian group of the party, the founders of the Communist movement in America, who were members of the C. I. at a time when many of those who now are yelling loudest "liquidate" were not at all connected with the Communist movement, of taking political action in the narrow sense of parliametary action. The Lord have mercy on these new savior of our movement! The whole Bittelman thesis is nothing but one overwhelming proof that whenever the majority of the C. E. C. speaks of political action it has in mind only one form of political action—parliamentary action. The C. E. C. majority cannot imagine that a farmer-labor party can have any other purpose or function than that of serving as an election machine. They cannot imagine that even a farmer-labor party (in which the Communists are the dynamic force of course) can be made a school for the working masses in which to learn and to apply the many forms of political action, school to teach that political action will only then become effective when the workers abandon the idea of being saved by proxy thru elected representatives and assume the idea that the workers must take over the job of emancipating themselves thru their own action, by mass political action.

18. Question—Why does the Foster-Cannon group always insist on befuddling the minds of the membership by insisting that the test of the correctness of their proposed change of policy lies in the correctness of the entrance of the Workers Party into the election campaign? Why does this basically opportunist group do so much yelling in its thesis about the minority not eulogizing the dynamic force of the C. E. C. to enter the campaign as the Workers Party alone?

Answer—The minority of the C. E. C. refuses to make a virtue out of necessity simply because a set of circumstances which we were unable to control developed and compelled us, at the eleventh hour, to abandon the farmer-labor united front as a basis for the election campaign. There is no reason whatever to pretend to theorize now that this abandonment represents an unshakable dogma. Comrade Gottwald wrote to the Czecho-Slovakian Communists that: "We are all patriots of our own party. That is perfectly correct. But the best party patriotism is to see the weak side of one's own movement."

It is on this basis that the Marxian group of the party is of the opinion that the outstanding feature of the first election campaign of the W. P. is the fact that it was nothing but an election campaign in the narrowest sense. The Central Executive Committee made no effort to conduct a political campaign combining united front political actions, such as unemployment campaign, recognition of Soviet Russia, etc., with the election campaign in order to transform the election campaign from one of mere propaganda for our candidates into one of political action.

over on their other allies. But things did not turn out as the plotters expected. By the time the last shot was fired on the western front, worms were dining on czar meat and the red cavalry was gallopping over the steppes where once the czar's cossacks' sabre rattled. The agreement was not worth very much, so it slumbered peacefully in the archives of the Russian embassy in Paris, never expecting to be disturbed by a Bolshevik envoy.

KRASSIN has the tell-tale story and the Bolsheviks are good propagandists. They do not believe in secret diplomacy. "Nothing is too good for the workers," is their slogan. The probability is that the world will learn a little more of the ways of capitalist governments. The first thing the Russian Communists did when they seized power was to turn the light on the secret diplomacy of the czar. Did the socialists of England and Germany do that when they got possession of the government apparatus of their respective ruling classses? They did not, because they are faithful servants of capitalism.

MUSIC.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

The Chicago Mendelssohn club, the most important of the local men's choral organizations, opened its season at Orchestra Hall last Thursday night. The soloist of the evening was the tenor, John Barnes Wells.

The Mendelssohn club are always interesting. They range from the ultra classical to the popular and unnecessary. It is of course impossible to review this program in detail, but one can hit the high spots.

Of the choral compositions the most interesting occurred at the end, an ode "To the Spirit of Beauty," by Horatio Parker. This man Parker knew how to write music. The only trouble with him was that he occasionally let a dull and churchy atmosphere creep in.

There was one little song by a Bohemian composer that fits Oscar Wilde's description, "a little scarlet thing of Dvorak's," and a moving setting of Henley's poem "Invictus," and a good rendition of the "Song of the Golden Calf" in "Faust," a setting by George W. Chadwick of Boston of a poem called "Joshua' which is the bi ble jazzed up, and a great deal more. Most of it was worth hearing, and it was excellently sung.

Mr. Wells has a high, rather smal' tenor of smooth and enjoyable quality He can sing the English language so that one can understand it. And so he needs no further praise.

He sang a good many songs, some of them his own. Especially good was his interpretation of that poignant, affecting aria of Handel, "Where'er You Walk" from the opera "Semele." His compositions were of a sentimental of humorous character, than can easily become vulgar or trite.

Insurance Money Arriving

Contributions Prove the DAILY WORKER Campaign in Full Swing Towards Success

Nearly five thousand dollars has been receipted for up to December 21 in the campaign to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925. This is a praiseworthy beginning. But it is only the beginning. We have taken the first step of the ten big strides towards the $50,000 fund. We want to announce the completion of the $10,000 lap within the week. We hope every party member and branch will give this thought and action.

Ours is a party of militant members and branches. This will be proven on January 13, 1925, upon which date the DAILY WORKER will print a 100,000 edition of a SPECIAL BIRTHDAY NUMBER. In this BIG SPECIAL there will be a PAGE OF MILITANT BRANCHES. Upon this MILITANT PAGE will be found the name of every MILITANT BRANCH in the party. Those are MILITANT branches which remit for INSURANCE POLICIES before January 8th.

Be counted among the REDS. See to it that the party sees the name of YOUR BRANCH upon the MILITANT PAGE of our BIRTHDAY SPECIAL. To now only a small percentage of the party branches have remitted for POLICIES sold. District organizers, central committees, federation secretaries and federation editors must give more than the usual co-operation to awaken all party branches to the need of selling and remitting for INSURANCE POLICIES at once.

Notice! Carpenters and Miners!

It is essential that we have information as soon as possible regarding the vote cast for the left wing candidates in the recent elections in the carpenters' and miners' unions. The reactionaries at the head of these organizations may be depended upon to rob us of our vote wholesale and thus to minimize our showing. Therefore, it is the duty of every left-winger in these unions to let us know at once how his local voted. You should take this matter seriously and act upon it without delay. Please let us hear from you.

The Struggle in the Anthracite

The news of strike action contemplated by the 10,000 miners employed by the Lehigh Coal company in the anthracite district in sympathy with the striking miners of the 10 locals whose charters have been revoked by John L. Lewis, shows that the discontent with the Lewis-Cappellini policy of supporting the coal operators against the members of the union is growing. The efforts of the executive board members of the United Mine Workers to close the breach between Cappellini and the miners whom he has betrayed all thru the year seem to have failed and the downfall of Cappellini is now a matter of time.

There is little doubt that Lewis is quite willing to let Cappellini hang himself. He has lost control of his district and it was this control that made him valuable to Lewis. When he fails to deliver and Lewis is put to the desperate method of revoking charters to prevent a landslide against him as in the recent election, it can be presumed that Cappellini, caught between a revolting membership on one side and on the other the vengeance of the officialdom, to whom he sold himself, is not going to last long.

In this game of internal union politics the anthracite coal diggers serve simply as pawns for the corrupt leaders who play fast and loose with their wages, working conditions and their very lives. The Lewis administration will try to provoke the miners into some form of dual unionism and then ultimately drive them back into the United Mine Workers, after the miners are demoralized on terms made by the officials.

The miners must not fall for this. The expelled members must maintain their organization and fight for reinstatement as a unit. If they allow themselves to be demoralized by the administration stoolpigeons they simply play into the hands of the operators and Lewis.

The expelled anthracite miners and their fellow-workers who want to strike in sympathy with them have a real issue on which to fight. They have the proof that violations of the working agreement have been continuously overlooked by the officials and that the agreement has been revised from time to time in favor of the operators.

They must have organization to carry on their fight against the Lewis machine and they must build a left wing group that wages the struggle the year around and not only in times of crisis like the present.

The Progressive Miners and their program furnishes the rallying center for such a movement. This left wing organization has put up a splendid fight in the recent campaign in the union and the anthracite miners should now join with their fellow workers in the soft coal fields and add strength to the growing movement for a union that fights for the rank and file instead of for the operators.

The membership organized around the Progressive Miners, can make the U. M. W. of A. something more than an incubator for secretaries of labor in strikebreaking governments.

"Peace" Plans—Their Meaning

The dove of peace, with feathers somewhat soiled from flights thru Egypt, Morocco, the Balkans and the Far East, is hovering over the capitals of the imperialist nations—if we swallow whole the recent bulletins from Washington, Downing Street, Paris and Tokio.

Messrs. Coolidge and Hughes breathe the sweetest sentiments for Great Britain and Japan and the spokesmen of these nations come back with all the alacrity displayed by the snappy end of a vaudeville team.

This is what it is, vaudeville—played on the biggest stage in the world—this love-thy-neighbor-as-thyself stuff that the monthpieces of imperialism get off their chests these days.

On the same day that Coolidge announced that Great Britain would be entrusted with "our" interests in the Pacific and on the same day that Baron Hayashi repudiated war rumors and expressed the greatest friendship and admiration for the United States, came the news of an appropriation $300,000,000 for "our" navy.

There are certain other factors, having on the surface little connection with the above facts, but nevertheless part of a new maneuver of world capitalism. Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, has made a tour of the European capitals and from Paris to Rome he left a trail of conspiracy against Soviet Russia. It was after his visit to Paris that Herriot issued his blast against Soviet Russia and the French Communist Party. It was after Chamberlain's visit to the Vatican that the pope issued his denunciation of Soviet Russia and Communism.

In the United States the wife of Cyril, claimant to the throne of the czars, has been received with royal honors and afforded the protection of the secret service department. The foreign minister of Jugo-Slavia has arrived in Paris with a plan for an all-Balkan bloc against Soviet Russia.

Let us look for the cause of all this hustle and bustle in the dark places of world capitalism. We find it in China where the Soviet diplomacy, approaching the masses of the Chinese people as an equal, has solidified all the warring factions against western imperialism, where the Chinese eastern railway, the great artery uniting China and Siberia, is now operated by Soviet Russia with Chinese consent.

To what extent the American ruling class is committed to an alliance with Great Britain is hard to say. Our rulers are taciturn on these matters and all we know is that the deepening antagonisms of trade and imperialistic enterprise existing between America and Great Britain are disguised with the usual "blood is thicker than water" bunk and that the eastern peoples have turned to Soviet Russia as their friend and ally and left Great Britain and America, France as well, out in the cold. Japan is not displeased entirely with this state of affairs and can afford to smile benignly upon its erstwhile rivals for Chinese hegemony who are in a little worse fix than she is.

The dove of peace, therefore, is an imperialist dove. There has been no dulling of the rivalry between Great Britain and America or Great Britain and France, but the robber clique is willing, if able, to unite for the time being against the new great proletarian power—Soviet Russia.

The inspired dispatches telling of uprisings in Soviet Russia, of dissensions within the Russian Communist Party, the worked-over tales of disease, famine and death coming from Helsingfors, Riga, Warsaw, Vienna and Belgrade—are all part of this new attempt to weaken Soviet Russia and to wipe out national antagonisms long enough to concentrate on the destruction of the workers' and peasants' republic of Russia.

World capitalism plays with fire. Any offensive against Soviet Russia leaves in the rear of capitalism a working class that at once becomes an enemy of its rulers and hostile to their plans. The masses of workers may not understand just what Soviet Russia represents in their struggles and the major part it plays in their behalf, but they know that it is hated by world capitalism, they know that it does not fight the workers and they cannot be mobilized for a major war that an attack on Russia would precipitate.

Let us watch the "peace" moves of the Coolidges and Chamberlains and Herriots and not be fooled by a sudden apparent conversion to the gospel of light and love designed to give the working class of the world a false and dangerous sense of security.

The German Communists Win

A commission of allied ambassadors is to notify the German government that the expected withdrawal of French and English troops will not be carried out and another betrayal of the social-democrats is brought vividly to the attention of the German masses whom they cajoled into an endorsement to the Dawes plan in the recent elections.

Painful yelps arise now from the social-democratic press. They are loud in their denunciation of the allies who, say the Eberts and Scheidemanns, "have violated the Dawes plan." This is about the poorest excuse that these yellow windbags could have thought of because the essence of the Dawes plan is the enslavement of the German working class. Methods do not matter.

The allied imperialists had promised the evacuation of troops if the German people gave the incoming government a mandate for the Dawes plan. The social democrats painted a picture of peace and prosperity that was to come to Germany as a result of the generosity of the House of Morgan and they deceived millions of workers who were weary of the struggle.

Only the Communists fought the Dawes plan in a revolutionary manner. They rolled up some 3,500,000 votes for their program in the face of the worst persecution ever seen in Germany, with all their best speakers and writers in jail and with warrants issued for all Communist members of the reichstag.

Whatever Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, was able to organize against the Communist-International during his recent European tour, has been more than discounted by the latest action of the allied imperialists.

Hounded by the nemesis of capitalist contradictions, the rulers of France and England have, by their latest act, made the German Communist Party the strongest force in Germany today.

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

The "Communist revolution" in France was greatly exaggerated, declares United States Ambassador Herrick in a private memorandum to the Washington government. The only casualties were a sore foot for Herriot and palpitation of the heart for the frightened bourgeoisie.

Henry Ford's plants in the Detroit district will close for eleven days to give his managers a chance to make an inventory. The 125,000 employes will have a holiday, without any pay, of course. This means they will be unemployed for that length of time.

It is strange, observes Arthur Brisbane, that hostility to the catholic church is greatest where that church had complete sway until recently. Such a wise man as Arthur undoubtedly is, should know that is the very reason for the hostility.

Election and Referendum in I. W. W.

The Red International Affiliation Committee, which is interested in assisting the revolutionary element in the Industrial Workers of the World, has issued a statement regarding the election and referendum ballot now in the field for action by the membership. The statement is as follows:

* * *

To the members of the I. W. W.:
Fellow Workers:

We have before us the referendum ballot submitted by the general administration appointed by the sixteenth general convention for the election of a general secretary-treasurer, perhaps other officers, and decision on proposed constitutional changes and other matters.

On the 25th day of the convention, the following were nominated for general secretary-treasurer: Ed Delaney, 18 votes; J. I. Turner, 11 votes; Arthur Coleman, 10 votes; James P. Thompson, 10 votes; Joe Doyle, 6 votes, and Charles Selleman, 1 vote. The convention took a special vote to break the tie between Coleman and Thompson and gave third place to Coleman.

The constitution of the I. W. W. states: (Art. III, Sec. 3-a) "The General Secretary-Treasurer, the Assistant Secretary, and the General Organizer . . . shall be nominated from the floor of the convention and the three candidates for each respective office receiving the largest number of votes in the convention shall be submitted to the general membership of the organization for election; the one receiving the greatest number of votes for each respective office to be declared elected."

Why Only Two?

In spite of this, the referendum ballot carries the names of Turner and Coleman alone, and there has been no announcement that the other nominees have desolined, or why they did so. There seems to be some mystery about this, which may be solved by the suggestion that those who made up the ballot did not want the vote split between two supposed friends of Rowan as against one supposed enemy of Rowan.

The Red International affiliation committee does not endorse either Turner or Coleman, because it knows only by rumor what they stand for. But we call upon each one of them to declare himself in a public, signed statement, just where he stands in the struggle over principles which the last convention did not settle, or even put into form so that the membership could settle.

Candidates Must Speak Up.

The entire membership has a right to know how each candidate stands: (1) For or against the "injunctionites"; (2) For an I. W. W. based on the revolutionary class struggle or for a non-revolutionary job union; (3) For hall-cat, anarchist decentralization or democratic centralization based on job committees; (4) For building the I. W. W. by organization of the 2,000,000 unorganized, or by withdrawing revolutionary workers from and splitting up existing unions; (5) For or against affiliation to the Red International of Labor Unions, and why; (6) Will they act legally but with resolution against the split movement developing in California and the northwest; (7) Will they enforce obedience to the order of general administration by the Industrial Worker or take it over; (8) Will they open organization papers which actually reach the members to discussion on policies, or will they continue the present censorship?

When the candidates have taken a stand on these vital subjects, and on the important questions now on referendum, the members will not have to vote blindly and take grab-bag chances.

Could "Politicians" Do Worse?

There are 78 questions besides elections on the ballot. Nearly all the tedious decisions are left to the referendum, the only ten per cent of the membership votes on referendum, and most of the real workers are away on jobs. This shows the need of basing the unions on Job committees.

Further, the complicated nature of his ballot makes it almost impossible for anyone not a student of constitutional cross-word puzzles to tell just what will happen in case any given question is carried. The I. W. W. scorns "using the ballot"—then issues one as big as a bundle stiff's blanket.

Just as an example of what may happen, we take the attempt to change from the present form of the G. E. B. back to the old form composed of representatives elected by the unions. At present, the G. E. B. is composed of the general organizer and the chairmen of the general organization committees of the various unions, as adopted at the 1923 convention and is the referendum following (See article III, Sec. 1-a-b. Sec. 2, Sec. 3-a and b).

An Example of Confusion.

One would expect in a referendum ballot to find this clearly indicated and a general, internally coherent substitute for the whole provided, thus minimizing the possibility of internal conflicts resulting from the adoption of only a part of the provision for a return to the old order. This was not done.

The provisions for a return to the old style of the G. E. B. are contained in eight separate questions on the referendum ballot, numbered 12 to 19, inclusive, each a substitute for some single part of the present constitution, except for questions No. 18 and No. 19, which provide new features.

The result is that if "12" is carried and "15" is not, there will be a considerable conflict, for "15" repeals a section which provides for a general organizer and an assistant secretary, and "13" excludes these officials from the general administration!

The same is true for No. 17. If No. 12 and No. 15 are carried, and No. 16 or No. 17 is voted down, a Philadelphia lawyer will be required to tell just what will happen. For No. 15 says: "Shall Art. III, Sect. 3 (a) and (b) be stricken out, and the following substitutes adopted?" This is voted on, "Yes" or "No," and then the substitutes are made in Nos. 16 and 17 into separate questions, each of which is to be voted upon, "Yes" or "No"! There are numerous others which we will not deal with for lack of space.

A Heritage of Socialist Rubbish.

This social democratic theory that manifold ballots and many referendums can take the place of leadership, courage and revolutionary theory has resulted in "democracy" only for a small minority and shut off genuine membership rule.

True democracy demands centralization and leadership, responsible leadership. It demands that members have an opportunity thoroly to discuss every important problem that faces the organization both in press and in meetings. It demands that general policies be thrashed out in this manner, voted upon only after being understood, and experienced, able and revolutionary officials elected and held responsible for carrying them out in detail.

For Real Conventions.

Instead of long and fruitless conventions, such as the 25-day one just endured, composed of timid and colorless members chosen like jurymen because they have no opinion or experience, unwilling to take a stand and unable to frame their suggestions intelligently, we should have large, representative conventions made up of delegates from every branch—especially job branches—with full power to act decisively on major matters. On questions that have been thoroly discussed, these delegates would stand instructed, and business be thus greatly expedited and really settled.

Of the 78 questions submitted only 9 have importance vital enough to consider. The R. I. A. C. has considered these 9 questions very carefully. The others are unimportant or trivial, too referring to clauses of the constitution which do not exist.

No Stifling of Issues.

Question No. 28 shows a laudable desire to limit the length of the annual convention, and to systematize work. But by the form in which the question is put the G. E. B. is given power to arrange the agenda and to limit debate on any matter. This is plain dictatorship by the G. E. B. Any faction in control of the G. E. B. can cut off all debate on any important question, or keep it off the floor entirely by confusing it with nonsensical variations of it. Ten days is long enough for a convention. There should be an order of business. But the only sensible, fair and democratic way to make it up is for the convention itself to draw up the order of business when it first meets.

One move in the right direction, and a very encouraging sign is question No. 14, designed to get a little efficiency in the general headquarters by permitting officials to succeed themselves in office.

Decentralization and Petty Bourgeois Proposals.

No. 45 provides that an already impoverished general administration is made still more feeble by having its income slashed in two. Reduction of the per capita tax from 15 cents to seven and a half cents is decentralization and was intended as such.

Along with it goes question No. 7, providing for striking out the constitutional provision that "None but actual wage workers shall be members of the Industrial Workers of the World." This shows that the anarchist petty bourgeois, stump rancher type is growing powerful in the I. W. W., and is making common cause with the "skid road bum" and the "spittoon philosopher" group, against whom there has been a growing opposition. Adoption of question No. 7, will allow non-workers to join, in spite of Article 1, Section 2, which is inclusive, not exclusive. The adoption of this amendment would make the I. W. W. anything but a labor union, and the Red Internationalists are flatly opposed to it.

The grip of the anarchists on the I. W. W. is shown also by the provision to make it impossible for officers of political parties to join the I. W. W. This comes as question No. 9. It does not draw any line of distinction between parties; it makes no difference between the parties which represent the interests of the working class. Further it is a violation of the traditional "non-political" stand of the I. W. W. and makes it definitely "anti-political."

This is certainly an anarchist measure of the non-worker element that does not base its theory on class distinction. The group that would open the I. W. W. to non-working hordes, as proposed in question No. 7, would be equally happy to close its doors to real workers, if they happened to believe in class conscious political action by the working class. Pretending to shut out "politicians" is only giving a monopoly to those politicians who are known as anarchists.

Which Principles? Is the I. W. W. a Political Party?

The tendency to turn the I. W. W. into an anarchist debating circle is shown also in question No. 35, for more and quicker expulsions. This is a grant of blanket power to conventions to expel anyone for violation of I. W. W. "principels." First, it is autocratic. Secondly, it is idiotic, as no one knows what these "principles" are, since the 16th general convention definitely refused to state what I. W. W. principles consist of. Thirdly, this is clearly leading the way to expel members for holding opinions, not for actions alone.

Only political parties lay down sets of social ideas and demand ideological conformance to them. Passage of this amendment makes a political party out of an economic organization. It should be opposed. Labor unions cannot question opinions of their members. It is suicidal. Give room for all opinions and let the best one win.

Expel the Injunctionites.

But question No. 77 deals with another sort of expulsion. Rowan, Bowerman, Trotter, Ryan and Anderson (the injunctionites) have broken class solidarity. This is not a question of their opinions, nor are they charged with holding minority opinion, but with calling the sheriff of Cook county to place them in power over the I. W. W. and in calling for a split in the I. W. W. when they could not win thru the courts for lack of money to pay lawyers.

There are the sort of things men should be expelled for. The detective, the grafter, the traitor, have no place in any labor organization. This is quite different than to shut a worker out for having this or that political opinion, or differing on matters of tactics within the movement. An industrial union, especially, must take in anybody who works for wages, so long as he stands by his class and does not scab on or betray it.

Two Good Measures.

Question No. 75, making it possible for officials of the I. W. W. to hold political office and office in labor parties is a move in the right direction and should be favored. So is question No. 47, permitting industrial unions to levy assessments on their membership.

The Communists in the I. W. W. hold to the theory of democratic centralization. This does not mean that material facts can be overlooked in particular industries for an impractical because of formal uniformity. We are realists. We know that wages conditions and treasury needs, wages and so on, differ widely. We do not believe in decentralization because of that, however, but in specialization.

The I. W. W. up to now has been about as wrong as it could have been on this matter. In pursuit of an artificial, superficial and universal perfection it has rigorously centralized the very things it should have left room in for variation in application, and at the same time scatter its energies in a decentralized effort to claim every industry in every country in the world and to fight every other labor organization of every kind, which questioned the wisdom of this attitude.

An Example in Red Unionism.

In conclusion and as an example of what we hold up as an ideal of labor unions, industrial unions, we point out the 23 industrial unions of Soviet Russia. During the time when the I. W. W. was shrinking in membership from 28,000 to 31,000, the All-Russian Council of Labor Unions which have a powerful position within the Soviet system, increased from 5,500,000, to 8,400,000.

The revolutionary industrial unions of Russia, during the time when anarcho-syndicalist confusion in the I. W. W. was bringing it to its present chaotic condition, have, in close cooperation with the Russian Communist Party, been reconstructing, remodeling and enlarging the whole productive machinery of Soviet Russia. During the time when wages in the I. W. W.'s special field in the U. S. A. have been slashed 35 per cent and a chronic crisis begun, the Russian workers have worked out a real solution for their peculiar unemployment problems and have increased money wages 25 per cent in 1923, gained 94 per cent in 1924, and increased real wages much more than that.

Into the fraternity of revolutionary proletarian fighters, the Red International of Labor Unions, to which these Russian unions belong, the Red International Affiliation Committee again invites the Industrial Workers of the World. Further, upon any special issue, all adherents of the R. I. L. U. stand ready to make common cause with the I. W. W. against the capitalist enemy, such as in the fight for class war prisoners.

For unity and revolution.

CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGES MUST BE MET BY FORCE, SAYS CANUCK GENERAL; THUMBS DOWN ON BALLOT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CALGARY, Canada, Dec. 23.—Radical governmental changes obtained by parliamentary constitutional methods must be met by force of arms just as sternly as those obtained by violence, declared General Griesbach, of the Canadian forces to the military institute at Calgary. He said: "I take it that as soldiers and citizens loyal to their institutions, you are not prepared to accept the dictatorship of the proletariat patterned on the Russian model WHETHER OBTAINED BY CONSTITUTIONAL MEANS OR BY FORCE. We will best maintain peace by frank declaration that Communist propaganda carried to its conclusion means war."

GLASGOW JOBLESS ... WAY INTO HOMES AFT... CTIONS; POLICE REFUSE ... NTERFERE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GLASGOW, Dec. 25.—Several thousand workers stormed the houses from which 300 unemployed families had been evicted, broke them open, and restored the evicted workers to their homes. The dismal slum streets were filled with police and throngs of angry workers.

The police, who were assigned to Kitchener and Jellicot streets where the unemployed were evicted for non-payment of rent, smiled and looked on, refusing to interfere.

The crowds of workers shattered the timbers which locked the unemployed from their tenantless houses, threw open the doors, and allowed the evicted tenants to return to their homes.

Several ex-service men were among those who fought to re-enter their homes. "You didn't need eviction notices in 1914," they cried to one of the landlords.

The rental agents represent large estates in West Scotland and Dalmuir. The tenants had been unable to pay an aggregate of $200,000 a month rent because of long continued unemployment.

One of those evicted was a crippled child, who was wheeled from his home in an invalid chair. The workers who broke down the doors of the houses wheeled the lad back into his home.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

DESPITE the howling of the jingoes for a larger navy, a larger army and more airships, we now learn on good authority that the United States is ahead of any other nation in the world in aviation. Rear Admiral Moffett is our authority. "We are so far ahead of anybody else in naval aviation that it will take them a long time to catch us" declares the rear admiral. There is no danger that the Wall Street government will neglect its military arm. All capitalist governments are based on force and would not exist over night without a plentiful supply of bayonets to back it up. It needs bayonets more to protect its robber rule against the exploited classes within, than against other capitalist robbers on the outside.

SENATOR LAFOLLETTE, in denouncing the Communists for insisting on being a part of the American working class movement, condescendingly allowed them the right to organize, but not to associate with other groups. "Boring from within" was treacherous and deceitful, he declared in substance. But "Bob" was the champion borer from within in America. Even while while attacking the republican party, he was still a member of that organization and enjoying its patronage. But "Silent Cal," fortified with 14,000,000 votes, has decided to cut LaFollette off from the patronage, which enabled him to build up his machine in Wisconsin. Senators Ladd and Frazier will also find less pork than usual on their plates after March 4.

ALLIES QUARREL OVER LEAVING COLOGNE ZONE

Socialists Lose Bet On Dawes Plan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 25.—An undercurrent of discord between France and England is developing over the evacuation, promised to Germany, of the Cologne district on Jan. 10.

This evacuation, pledged by the allies in the Versailles treaty and again promised in the Dawes plan conference at London this year, is in the center of a three-cornered fight. Germany, quite naturally, demands that the allies live up to the treaty and the conference agreements.

France, thru the report of Marshal Foch at the head of the inter-allied military commission insists that Germany has not disarmed as promised and that the allies must not, therefore, withdraw troops from Germany. England, whose troops are those occupying the Cologne district, is willing to evacuate, but not before the French leave the Ruhr. And France refuses to leave.

Not as Promised.

The council of allied ambassadors meets here on Saturday to discuss the evacuation. In advance of the meeting each nation is issuing statements that the council will do this or that, according to the interests of the particular diplomat. However, it is fairly well settled by agreement of both England and France on one point, tho arrived at for different reasons, that the Cologne bridgehead shall not be evacuated on the date promised.

The English foreign office unofficially stated yesterday that the English representatives at the council meeting will be instructed "to work for the shortest possible extension of the occupation." It is added that England believes that "Germany has done all that could be expected" in disarming. This is open disagreement with the loud cries of Marshal Foch who is shaping the policies of the Herriot cabinet.

Herriot Bends to Foch.

As an answer to the British, Herriot yesterday, after a conference with M. Laroche, of the French foreign office and a representative of Marshal Foch, framed a rejection to Germany's request for evacuation of the Cologne zone and today announced that "the allies" will not evacuate it as agreed. He officially announced that the troops must remain because Germany has not fulfilled its obligations. This will be submitted to the council of ambassadors on Saturday.

Meanwhile, the yellow socialists of Germany who have risked their all on the faith of the allies are desperate as further occupation will certainly increase Communist influence.

NEW YORK CITY I. L. G. W. NO. 38 VOTES SATURDAY

Wischnefsky is Favored Against Drasin

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 25.—Local 38, I. L. G. W. U., one of the oldest locals of the international, will have elections of local officers Saturday, December 27, at the union headquarters, 877 Sixth Ave, New York City.

The present manager, B. Drasin, has joined the reactionary machine and is now a loyal supporter of the bureaucracy in the I. L. G. W. U. He is running for re-election and against him for the same office is running Don Wischnefsky, who, altho independent, yet has opposed the expulsion policy of the bureaucracy.

As B. Drasin is not only a loyal supporter of the reactionary machine, but is utterly incompetent, his defeat is not merely a partisan question but an absolute necessity, if the union is to make any progres whatsoever or grow stronger.

The other candidates for office who are true militants are Nathan Wilkes, for chairman; V. Abraham, H. Formin and N. Wilkes, for executive board.

Several other militants were rejected on technical grounds and Joseph Zack, one of the leading militants who is the recording secretary and the secretary of the strike committee in the last strike, was rejected because of the efforts of B. Drasin and the high bureaucracy, despite the fact that the objection committee of the local, a non-partisan committee, recommended unanimously that he be placed on the ballot.

Klan Terrorizes Paris, Ill.; Forces Sheriff to Resign

PARIS, Ill., Dec. 25.—The Ku Klux Klan is threatening a reign of terror here following a clash between the pro-klan city police and the anti-klan sheriff's forces over an arrest of anti-klansmen by the city police.

The sheriff and deputies protested the arrest, but the klan police called in reinforcements and threatened violence if interfered with. Fifty special klan are stalking about the town looking for trouble and heavily armed.

Sheriff Leo Sizemore resigned after his bondsmen threatened to withdraw their bonds and the state's attorney demanded his resignation. He has often had to disarm klansmen that prowled around outside the city limits. Both sides are pouring adherents into the town, and trouble may yet ensue.

CHALIAPIN AT CIVIC OPERA SAYS MENSHEVIK TALE IS TOO ABSURD

Feodor Chaliapin, of the Chicago Civic Opera company, laughed when he was told of the report emanating from the Russian emigre colony in Paris, that the Soviet government has complained about his payment of $32,000 income tax to the United States.

"It is too absurd to bother making a statement about. But if you must have one—this is the first I'd heard of such a complaint. I really know nothing about it," and with this he dismissed the entire matter. Then another kept press tale was exploded.

WORKERS PARTY CITY SECRETARY ENTHUSIASTIC FOR "DAILY" DRIVE

"There is no one more opposed than I am to making salesmen of our party members," said Martin Abern, secretary of the Workers Party of Chicago, "but I have yet to be convinced that the business of getting 'subs' for the DAILY WORKER is necessarily being a salesman.

"I think instead of making salesmen of our members it makes organizers of them. The personal contacts that are made and the experiences that are gained by general subscription getting on the part of our membership, are a very beneficial influences on our party. It raises the standard of our personnel and affords excellent opportunites for getting new members."

The above interview was granted on the occasion of the Chicago subscription drive for the DAILY WORKER in aid of which the whole local membership is being mobilized to accomplish the goal of five thousand new subscribers. The competition between the local party branches in the races to win prizes in the form of circulating libraries on the basis of a percentage of subscriptions according to membership figures, promises to become keen as the drive progresses.

In the office of District 8 of the Workers Party, Arne Swabeck, district organizer, said, "I confess I am at a loss to say what the district movement would do without our "Daily". Any party member who is not aware of the inestimable value of the DAILY WORKER to our party needs to be taught a thing or two about what the "Daily" has done for us. The local sub campaign being conducted in Local Chicago should enlist the energetic support of every party member not confined to his bed. Personally, I should be very much ashamed to report to my branch at the end of the present drive that I had succeeded in getting no subscribers."

Thurber Lewis, Manager of "The Drive", looked up from his desk in Room 207, 166 W. Washington St., and said to the reporter, "It is not a matter of party discipline for every member of Local Chicago to turn in from three to five subs. Nor will any member be disiplined for, as Comrade Loeb, Business Manager of the paper, says, not TRYING to sell a sub. It is solely a matter of party conscience and party pride. I sympathize heartily with the confused embarrassment with which a party member who has NOT tried will have to report the incident to his branch."

PHILADELPHIA MEETING

PHILADELPHIA — The Workers Party membership meeting takes place Sunday, Jan. 4, from 2 p. m. until 11 p. m. at the Machinists Temple, Northeast corner 12th & Spring Garden streets. Members in good standing only will be admitted.—R. Baker, secretary.

We Are All Agreed

THE response which the party has so far made to THE DAILY WORKER INSURANCE POLICY CAMPAIGN proves that the entire party has made an energetic beginning in its task to make THE DAILY WORKER safe for 1925. This drive which has made so good a start, must not stop until the goal is reached. THE DAILY WORKER needs $50,000 and $60,000 must therefore be the minimum amount raised.

The Central Executive Committee wishes to reaffirm its stand taken at the opening of the campaign. The Central Executive Committee is unanimous on this matter and in recalling to the attention of the party membership the following facts, it calls upon every section of the party, every member, to continue its work "TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925" until the goal is reached.

1. THE DAILY WORKER is one of the greatest achievements the party has yet made.

2. The 1923 campaign to establish THE DAILY WORKER succeeded not only in its original purpose but also made possible the establishment of the party central printing plant and a home for the party's national office.

3. The funds which the members intrusted to the Central Executive Committee for the establishment and operation of THE DAILY WORKER have been conserved to the last penny and expended with the utmost economy.

4. The management of THE DAILY WORKER has been efficient and competent to the end that the deficit incurred during 1924 is far lower than what was expected.

5. An immediate task of the entire party and each one of its sections, which can under no circumstances be avoided or neglected, is TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

Signed—CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA, Wm. Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg, James P. Cannon, Benjamin Gitlow, Earl R. Browder, Jay Lovestone, Max Bedacht, Fahle Burman, Martin Abern, Alexander Bittelman, Ludwig Lore, J. Louis Engdahl.

COAL MINERS GIVE REASON FOR STRIKE

Attack Boss-Cappellini Combination

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 25.—The athracite miners of District No. 1, United Mine Workers of America, have given a stinging reply to the combination of operators and union officials that seeks to drive them into unbearable conditions by breaking the strike called by the general grievance committee.

In large posters headed "Why We Are on Strike" the miners excoriate their traitorous officials, particularly Rinaldo Cappellini, district president. "The strike was imposed upon us thru the failure of the company officials and officials of District No. 1 to heed the crying need to have unbearable conditions remedied," the miners say.

Lockout Eight Months Old.

Grievances presented to the district officials of the union eight months ago are still not adjusted. At the Ewen colliery, for instance, there was a lockout of 120 men eight months ago. These men were even ordered restored by W. W. Ingles, chairman of the conciliation board last July in his instruction to the company, but neither the compahy or the union officials have moved. Such things are the ground of the grievance committee's strike order.

On Tuesday, Dec. 9, when Rinaldo Cappellini, the agent of John L. Lewis' reactionary machine and president of District No. 1, U. M. W. of A., appeared at a meeting of the grievance committee, he was asked:

Traitor Cappellini Says "None."

"What assurances, Mr. Cappellini, can you give us that our grievances will be adjusted without delay, providing we call off the strike and return to work?"

"None!" was Cappellini's reply.

The miners are incensed all over the district at the district officers who have even ignored the appeal of thirty-one locals of the U. M. W. of A. for a special convention to discuss who was right in the revokation of the checkoff of the striking locals. The miners contend that they were enforcing the agreement which provides for deinite settlement of grievances within limited times.

There are many grievances long pending between the miners and six collieries. At the Underwood colliery there are five complaints registered by the miners. These consist of two separate vein complaints of underpayment on car scale, a complaint of poor powder which reduces output, poor coal furnished the employes and the blacklisting of 62 men.

At the Ewen colliery noted above 120 men were laid off March 1, a long negotiation thru Cappellini with the company has failed to have any results. At this colliery also, there is violation by the company on wage paid in the Marcy vein.

At the Central colliery two grievances exist since April, one of rock measurement, another of forcing dead work on agreement which was broken after the miners struck the coal by working thru 500 feet of bad work.

At No. 6 colliery three complaints exist of discrimination by the company and bad powder which cuts the wage return. At colliery No. 9, an agreement on loading bone was violated by the company not paying. In addition there are complaints on powder and the underpayment of shaft miners. At the Butler colliery three grievances pending in one instance since May, regarding second mining and a violation of the agreement by the company on rates of pay for new work.

RUSS WHITE GUARDS AGAIN MAKE ATTEMPT TO COMPETE WITH TECH AID

The Russian czarists of Chicago are again making an attempt to interfere with the affairs of the Technical Aid Society. This Saturday the society is giving a performance "Coal Miner Kort," at the Soviet School, and the counter-revolutionists decided to show their "movies" again in the same neighborhood and at the same time. The Technical Aid Society is not bothered by this. It has the confidence of the workers and the performance will have the usual success, especially after it was announced that the scenery for this performance was painted by Lydia Gibson. When the counter-revolutionists attempted to interfere with the affair of the Technical Aid Society a few weeks ago they met with utter failure.

GREEN HELD OBSTACLE TO THIRD PARTY

Pre-Convention Canvass Shows Defections

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—Plans of LaFollette supporters to establish a permanent new political party in the United States received a severe jolt today.

Close on the heels of the announcement that the railroad brotherhoods would vote against forming of a third party at this time came strong indications that farm organizations affiliated with the present progressive campaign also were opposed to the new movement and would instruct their delegates to fight it at the annual convention of the conference for progressive political action in Chicago in February.

The sentiment of the farm leaders was expressed in a secret poll taken by a member of the executive council of the conference.

"I have found only one man among the representatives of the farm organizations who favors going ahead at this time with plans for a third party," said this council member. "The farmers do not want to go on a wild goose chase until they can see that they will achieve some definite results by uniting with a third party movement."

Third Party Up to Convention

The whole question of starting the new party is to be thrashed out at the conference's convention. The formal call for the meeting has been drafted and awaits only the signature of Wm. H. Johnston, chairman, before being sent out. It will go to the same organizations which met in convention in Cleveland last July and endorsed the independent presidential candidacy of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, included are the rail unions, farm organizations, the socialist party, and unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The rail group fought the call and does not plan to be represented officially as an organization at the Chicago convention.

Green Against Move.

Any hope that unions of the federation might be induced to send official representatives admittedly has been dimmed by the induction of Wm. Green as successor to Samuel Gompers. At the federation's executive council meeting at Atlantic City last August, Green opposed granting endorsement of LaFollette, and in the El Paso convention he was one of the leaders who insisted on the federation reasserting its non-partisan political policy and rejecting a proposal to unite with a new party. Himself a democrat, Green, however, believes that the federation must remain neutral in politics and devote itself exclusively to the economic betterment of workers.

Farm Groups Hold Key

Should the farm organizations, as the poll indicates, withdraw their support, the progressives will lose the backing of some of the most powerful groups which supported the LaFollette campaign.

In the face of these latest developments, Johnston said that nothing would be permitted to interfere with plans for the Chicago meeting. He expressed confidence that enough strength would be shown for a third party to make it a success.

"We are going ahead," declared Johnston.

CONSTRUCTIVE PROGRAM ISSUED BY MILITANT LEFT WING CANDIDATES IN MACHINISTS' UNION ELECTION

The left-wing group in the Machinists' Union has issued a program of union policies upon which the left-wing candidates stand in the fight for making the union a militant organization that will get results for its members and rebuild its shattered ranks.

The Left-Wing Candidates.

The candidates named below are those who stand for the policies set forth in the program. They have endorsed this program and are pledged to carry it out. Here are the candidates:

For international president—Julius Emme, Local 459, St. Paul, Minn.

For general secretary-treasurer—Tim Buck, Local 235, Toronto, Ont., Can.

For editor of journal—A. Overgaard, Local 390, Chicago, Ill.

Members of the executive council, U. S.—H. S. McIlvaigh, Local 497, Tacoma, Wash.; John Otis, Local 536, Pittsburgh, Pa.; P. Jensen, Local 492, Chicago, Ill.; H. Garner, Local 209, Hammond, Ind.; Alfred Goetz, Local 62, Detroit, Mich.; Andrew MacNamara, Local 52, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Program of the Left-Wing Candidates in the Machinists' Election.

1. Amalgamation of all crafts in the metal industry into one industrial union covering the entire industry.

We favor calling a conference of all international unions in the metal trades for the purpose of devising ways and means to bring about amalgamation and that the machinists in that conference present a plan for amalgamating these organizations in this conference. An educational campaign shall immediately be started in the columns of the Journal. The executive council shall be instructed to carry on agitation among the other metal trades for amalgamation. The machinists' delegates to the American Federation of Labor shall actively support amalgamation and submit resolutions favoring industrial unionism

2. Development of Shop Committees.

The present antiquated shop committee and shop chairman system must be developed so that these committees wield some power in dealing with the bosses; to fight for better conditions; against lay-offs; and for reduction of hours of work in time of industrial depression. This committee must lead a fight for sanitary conditions in the shops; for protection of the lives of the workers in the shop thru safety devices; dining rooms. These committees shall invite the unorganized workers to participate in this fight for better conditions and thru such contacts these unorganized workers will join the union. Agitation shall be carried on for workers' control of industry, thus awakening the class consciousness of the masses. These shop committees will in time develop into real fighting bodies, against the capitalist class, and be one of the mediums thru which the working class will take over the means of production.

3. Organize the Unorganized.

A national drive shall immediately be started by the international to organize the unorganized. The slogan of this drive to be against wage-cuts and favoring the reduction of work ing hours. We stand for more effective organization on the economic field, as against banking, investing our money in insurance companies, etc.

4. Independent Working Class Political Action.

We stand for the class struggle on the economic and political field. We are opposed to political class collaboration such as practiced by President Johnston in alliance with the LaFollette movement and for the same reason that we oppose his class collaboration on the industrial field thru the B. & O. plan. We stand for a united front of all trade unions and other organizations of workers and poor farmers to fight for the immediate demands of the exploited masses and for the ultimate overthrow of the capitalist system and for the establishment of a workers' and farmers government.

5. Against Racial Discrimination.

We are against the present attitude in our organization of excluding the Negroes from membership. We are in favor of following the example of other labor organizations that have already opened their doors for our colored brothers. We are by the present stupid attitude, helping to make scabs to be used against us when we go on strike.

6. Freedom of Expression Within the Union, and Reinstatement of Suspended and Expelled Members.

We stand for the complete freedom of opinion in our organization and the right of members to express themselves on all issues confronting the labor movement. We believe that the organization can only insure its own growth by allowing revolutionary minorities, who are always the backbone in the struggle, to function unhindered. We stand for reinstatement of all members expelled or suspended for radical activities.

7. Against Class Collaboration in all Forms—B. & O. Plan, Etc.

We are absolutely against the present schemes of developing the union into an efficiency apparatus for the bosses. We know that the interests of the capitalist class and the working class are not identical, and that it is necessary to carry on a relentless struggle against capitalism until the present system has been overthrown and the workers have taken over the means of production for use instead of for profit. We are against the creation of a small servile sect of workers who will co-operate with the bosses at the expense of their fellow workers. We stand for workers' control of industry as against all these class collaboration schemes which will only help to destroy the morale of organized labor and thus help to destroy the labor unions in this country.

8. Biennial Conventions.

We stand for a convention every two years which gives the membership an opportunity to pass upon the activities of our officials during their term of office. We believe that a biennial convention will help tremendously in the building up of our organization, as the rapid political and industrial development in this country forces the labor movement to make changes in their policies and tactics as well as forms of organization.

9. Young Workers and Apprentices.

The International Association of Machinists has not followed a policy of excluding the young workers engaged in the trade from active participation in union affairs, but to the contrary have made all efforts to eliminate any barriers that might exist preventing this equal participation in the affairs of our union.

It is our duty to further recognize the demand and need of a six-hour day and five-day week with full pay for all young workers of our trade. By supporting and fighting for this demand we will be advancing the welfare of the American youth workers and creating an opportunity for further employment in the machinist trade.

A systematic fight should also be waged against the so-called trade schools subsidized by the employers associations as they aim at undermining and destroying the union.

10. Recognition of Soviet Russia.

The left wing has carried on a systematic campaign for the recognition of the first workers' and farmers' government of Russia, and thru their agitation the I. A. of M. has gone on record for such recognition.

We stand not only for recognition on this issue, but for a real struggle of all trade unions to make the United States government recognize Soviet Russia and that our delegates to the American Federation of Labor wage a militant fight to force the A. F. of L. to change its attitude on this matter

11. International Solidarity.

The I. A. of M., at the present time, is loosely affiliated with the Federation of Metal Workers in Berne which is a part of the Amsterdam International. In order to effectively fight against war and prevent international scabbery, it is necessary to have a real functioning and fighting international organization. There are at present two internationals, the Amsterdam International and the Red International of Labor Unions with headquarters in Moscow.

A great international unity movement is taking place in Europe today, and the Russian trade unions and the R. I. L. U. have carried on a consistent agitation for unity of the trade union movement. A great International Unity Congress will no doubt soon be held, and it is, therefore, vitally necessary that all the various internationals follow the example of the Transport Workers' International in admitting the strongest trade unions in the world—the All-Russian Trade Unions. We advocate that delegates to the Berne International be elected by the membership, and that they be instructed to vote for the admission of the All-Russian Metal Workers' Union into the Berne International.

I Am With You!

I believe that this district will come thrue 100 per cent for the campaign to INSURE OUR DAILY. I want to congratulate you upon the thoroness with which you are doing the job.

Enclosed you will find our district bulletin sent out a week ago This is our first move to get results. I will follow up with more matter and give the campaign here my personal attention and direction. I am with you in this wholeheartedly.

RIGHT WINGERS IN THE I. W. W. HAVE ORGANIZED

Committee in Seattle 'To Exchange Ideas'

By HARRISON GEORGE.

It has long been the contention of the Communists that the revolutionary members of the I. W. W. must organize themselves definitely into a rather exclusive group to formulate policies of revolutionary education and programs of organizational work to be fought for in a militant way.

This is necessary because the I. W. W. as a whole is suffering from a confusion of ideas; firstly, about theories of the class struggle, upon which clarification must be had or confusion will lead to defeat; secondly, a confusion in methods of determining immediate policies of the conduct and aims of the struggle for immediate ends, hours, wages, the fight against government persecution, and so on.

The R. I. L. U. Position.

The Red International Affiliation Committee has repeatedly urged the revolutionary industrial unionist element as distinguished from the pure unionist, pacifist, stump rancher and anarcho-syndicalist elements, to organize and fight for its ideas in an organized way The revolutionary left wing would not have lost the many things it did lose at the 16th general convention, if it had been organized and fought as a unit.

The Red International Affiliation Committee repeatedly said that the left wing would have to organize itself or be beaten by the non-revolutionary - anarcho-syndicalist - pacifist combination. It would certainly organize itself in opposition. The way the right wing conducted itself in the last convention proved that it had a caucus and was beginning to solidify.

Now, in the Industrial Worker, the paper controlled by the injunctionite right-wing bloc, there appears in the issue of December 6, page 2, column one, a definite organizational call put out by a committee than can be no other than the nucleus of a right-wing opposition. Here it is:

"NOTICE—There is a committee in Seattle, Wash., elected from the following industrial union branches: 210, 310, 330, 400, 510 and small I. Us. They want the ideas of all the fellow workers, either thru the minutes or by mail. This is for the purpose of exchanging ideas and to getting to some common understanding of what the members want. Send all mail to John Brinkman, Box 365, Seattle, Wash."

The above committee, it may be pointed out, has a perfect right to organize. It should be noted that it is elected "from" and not "by" the I. U. branches. It is an unofficial committee quite within it rights in "exchanging ideas and getting to some understanding as to what the members want."

Organized Right Wing.

The point is, that it is a right-wing non-revolutionary committee organized to propagate right-wing, non-revolutionary ideas And a further point is that if the revolutionary left membership it cannot do so by continuing its haphazard unorganized struggle by little temporary cabals, intrigue and total lack of definite policies and programs which must be carried to the membership in uncensored papers of general circulation.

The right wing in the I. W. W. is organized. The left wing is unorganized. There is only one alternative for the revolutionary elements—organize or lose. Soon or late, this will be the result. Organize or lose!

Serbian 'Democracy' Decides to Follow The Path of Benito

Watch the Coal Miners Plan Their Fight On the Growing Jobless Evil

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the kept press is making much of the fact that 200 homeless and jobless men marched into a church in New York City and took over the place for the night.

An attempt is made to give the impression that the unemployment problem has been solved; just as a Christmas basket, given at this season by the Salvation Army or some other professional charity organization, is supposed to stifle the cravings of hunger for a whole year.

* * * *

Urban J. Ledoux, of Boston, who is apt at publicity stunts at the expense of the jobless, staged the invasion of the Camp Memorial Congregational Church, on New York's lower East Side. The church was due for early desertion by its dwindling congregation. The pastor was addressing an audience of four when the jobless men entered. Two of these were trustees. After hurried consultation the church officials agreed that the men could stay.

Just how long they will stay depends no doubt upon the whims of Mr. Ledoux, who broke into the limelight some years ago by auctioning off the jobless on the Commons, in Boston, in Bryant Park, New York, and in other cities.

Ledoux has his counterpart in Dr. Ben Reitman, the reformed anarchist, of Chicago, who has taken to religion, but also dabbles in the unemployed problem as another means of getting space in the bosses' press.

* * * *

The unemployment situation presents too great and too serious a problem to be meddled with by fly-by-night notoriety seekers.

It is a problem involving millions of workers, men and women, and also children forced into industry, that is merely burlesqued by makeshift panhandling.

The eagerness with which men of the type of Ledoux and Reitman exploit the plight of the jobless is only paralleled by the inertia of the trade union bureaucracy in refusing to take active steps to meet even the immediate needs of the problem.

A glaring example of this inertia was seen at the conventions of the United Mine Workers of Illinois and the Illinois Federation of Labor, when the labor officialdom did its utmost to gag every effort of the left wing militants to raise the unemployment issue, especially as it presented itself thruout the coal fields of the state. It was attacked as Communist propaganda.

* * * *

Nothing has been done since the holding of these two conventions by the officials of the coal miners' union, in spite of the fact that unemployment is increasing. The figures for November show an increase over the previous month.

In this crisis, as in every other vital issue confronting labor, the Communists present the only program meeting the needs of the hour, and pointing the way to the ultimate solution of this problem. The Workers (Communist) Party furnishes the leadership for the struggle against the unemployment evil.

* * * *

That the rank and file miners in Illinois, especially in the southern sections of the state, are rallying behind our Communist leadership, is seen in the preparations made for the Unemployment Conference called for this Sunday, Dec. 28, at French Club Hall, in Christopher, Illinois.

This conference will not only voice the needs of the jobless but will set about satisfying those needs. It will raise the demand that industry must maintain its workers, it will urge unemployment insurance, call for the unity of the employed with the unemployed, and provide for the organization of shop committees and unemployment councils. But these workers will realize that all concessions won under capitalism, will be inadequate, that the problem can only be solved thru the abolition of the employers' profit system and the building of the Communist social order.

Workers do not want a hard bench for a night in a deserted church. Workers demand the right to live and enjoy life. Capitalism will never grant them that right. They will win that right thru their own organized strength, thru the triumphant struggle for their own emancipation. The Conference of Coal Miners at Christopher, Ill., this Sunday, should attract the attention of thinking workers everywhere.

Croation Peasants' Party Is Dissolved By Jugo-Slav Plutes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Austria, Dec. 25.—Stephen Raditch, leader of the Croatian peasant party and adherent to the third Internationale, is being sought by the police at the instance of the Jugo-Slav ministerial council. The Croatian peasant party has been dissolved by order of the council, on the ground that it contains too many "Communist elements."

Britain, France, Italy, Poland, Jugo-Slavia, Roumania and Greece are making a concerted drive on the Communists in the Balkans, because of the headway the Communists have gained there. Radich is now said to be at Agram.

GUESTS OF T.U.E.L. BALL EXPECTED TO LOOK NORMAL

New Year's Eve Date of Hardy Annual

Last year it was a masquerade ball. This year it is a ball without the masquerade, but the possibilities for enjoyment are no less because the female of the species is not permitted to wear more than her usual allowance of camouflage.

What we are talking about is nothing more or less than the annual New Year's Eve ball of the Trade Union Educational League. We think everybody should know what we had in mind hence the digression.

Only Half a Dollar.

It is the big event of the year among radicals in this city and a militant who has fifty cents for a ticket would no more tolerate the thot of missing it than a devout Musselman would think of foregoing a visit to Mecca provided he had the price of a pair of sandals and a supply of cocoanut butter to soothe his tootles from the affect of the sun's rays.

Time and Place.

The place where this event will be held in the Women's City Club, located on the corner of 37 S. Ashland Blvd. This is a most delightful place for an affair of the kind as your worthy press agent can testify having been there once upon a time when the Voice of Labor lived and flourished. This is about all we have to say about the matter for the time being but unless we are overcome by the Christmas spirit we will remind you of your duty to yourself and your friends on New Years Eve.

P. S. Don't forget to bring Mrs. Wife if you have one. If not—you are out of luck.

RAILROAD BOARD NOT TO CHANGE S. P. DECISION

Refuses Carrier's Plea to Prevent Wage Increase

The U. S. railroad labor board has denied petitions of western carriers asking that the board set aside recent settlements made between the locomotive engineers and firemen and the Southern Pacific railroad granting its engineers a five per cent increase in wages.

The labor board and the carriers have managed to entangle the wage dispute with so much red tape that even a Philadelphia lawyer could not digest the decisions and counter-decisions of the board. The railway employes of the Southern Pacific, however, have won the wage increase and retained their working rules, which the decision of the labor board changed to the detriment of the employes. The other western roads, following out the decision of the labor board, granted the increase, but took away the working rules of which the unions had fought for years.

The labor board declares, in denying the carriers' petition, that the carriers have misinterpreted the law in "assuming that the federal adjustment board has the power to suspend a wage increase affecting a carrier because a similar increase, if extended to another carrier, might tend to produce a rate increase for the second carrier." The agreement affects only one carrier, says the board, and the board has no right to infer that it will be extended to other roads.

TEXTILE WORKERS HAUL IN BELTS AS JOBS FADE

Gloom Grows as Mills Slash Wages

By ESTHER LOWELL.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent

FALL RIVER, Mass., Dec. 25.—Iceberg silence on the possibility of wage cuts in Fall River textile mills following the action of Lawrence, Lowell, Manchester, and Rhode Island mills, is maintained by the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers Association. Secy. Charles E. Smith stiffly remarks that he had "nothing to say on that subject."

The report from Lowell that Massachusetts and Appleton mills have ordered an average 10 per cent wage cut thickens the gloom of the workers of Fall River whose hopes were raised two weeks ago by a flass report that 20,000 of them would be given work at once in the mills.

Workers Line Streets.

Good times are certainly not in view at Fall River. The streets are lined with overalled men unemployed and betting the look of desperation in their eyes. In the restaurant I heard two waitresses talking about a young couple. "They owe nearly $500 now. Neither of them has worked for a year. And they have three kids." Last summer the city kept some of the men busy on public works under the $300,000 loan given by the state Charity organizations took care of the worst cases, but the corner grocer floats many of the textile worker families who found work only two or three days a week at best.

The mills are working on an average of 50 per cent of normal, both Smith of the cotton manufacturers and William Harwood, treasurer of the Textile Council, agree. Smith says the situation is extremely uncertain and refused to predict any improvement.

Strikeless Union.

The American Federation of Textile Operatives, a union which seceded about 15 years ago from the United Textile Workers, has the bulk of organization among the workers. Wm. Harwood, treasurer of the council and representative of the Yarn Slashers, says the A. F. T. C. has had no general strike in Fall River for 20 years, but it contributed to the 1922 fight in Rhode Island and northern New England. He was one of the early workers who came from Great Britain 30 years ago. In his own union he says that not over 10 per cent of the men (100 per cent organized) were working at times during the last year.

James Tansey, now president of the United Textile Council, was first president of the United Textile Workers, which maintains an office under John Compos in Fall River. His organization has strength among the Portuguese, who are increasing their numbers in the 121 mills.

ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE PARTY'S MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS

1. The official representatives of the C. E. C. will be held responsible for the proper organization and conduct of the mass membership meetings in the ten cities where representatives of the C. E. C. and minority are scheduled to speak.

2. The district executive committees in the various districts of the party shall immediately arrange for mass membership meetings to be held in each town where there is a city central committee. The dates and places of these meetings shall be announced at the opening of the mass meetings already scheduled, and as much sooner as possible.

3. In order to avoid duplication of voting at the mass membership meetings, only those members shall be allowed to vote who belong to branches affiliated to the city central committees in the cities where the mass membership meetings are being held. This rule shall apply to the meetings already scheduled in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Buffalo, Minneapolis, Detroit, Pittsburgh and New Haven. At these meetings members affiliated to outside city central committees shall be allowed to attend the meetings without voice or vote.

4. In order to insure a fair count of the votes of the membership at the mass membership meetings, the C. E. C. representatives at each meeting shall appoint a sufficient number of tellers, to be divided equally between the majority and the minority.

5. A record shall be kept of the vote cast at the various mass membership meetings and forwarded immediately to the national office of the Workers Party.

Fraternally yours,
WILLIAM Z. FOSTER, Chairman.
C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

New York Y. W. L. Branch for Majority

NEW YORK CITY. Dec. 25.—At the last meeting of Branch No. 5, Young Workers League of New York, Comrades Jack Stachel, district organizer of the league, and Herbert Zam, both leading comrades favoring the position of the minority of the C. E. C. of the party, presented that position of the minority. After a considerable discussion by the membership, the branch voted to indorse the position of the majority of the C. E. C. of the party which is being supported wholeheartedly by the national executive committee of the Young Workers League. Sentiment in many other branches of the league is also favorable to the position of the C. E. C. and the N. E. C. of the league—supported almost exclusively by rank and file comrades.

Chicago Russian Branch Supports Majority Position

After three meetings where the theses of the majority and minority were thoroly discussed, the Russian branch, Workers Party of Chicago, voted last night in favor of the majority. The lively discussion was wound up by M. A. Stolar, speaking for the majority and Boris Deviatkin, speaking for the minority. The latter acted as chairman and also spoke last, contrary to the proceedings in all other discussions where the representative of the majority spoke last.

When it finally came to a vote, 18 voted in favor of the majority and 13 for the minority. The vote for the minority was taken three times, but it did not rise above 13. Two members of the branch, who are also members of a shop nucleus, did not vote as they pay their dues and vote on party matters at the shop nucleus. They announced that they were in favor of the majority.

Northwest Jewish Branch, Chicago, for Majority 23 to 6

"At our last meeting, after thoro discussion, our branch, by a vote of 23 to 6, decided in favor of the thesis of the majority of the central executive committee and against the thesis of the minority. Signed—A. Firstein Northwest Jewish Branch, Chicago."

Lithuanian Bronx, N. Y., Branch Endorses Majority Thesis

At its meeting held on Sunday, Dec. 21, the Lithuanian Bronx branch endorsed the majority thesis by a majority vote. There were no representatives giving the views of both sides at this meeting. The members of the branch were capable to present arguments for both sides.

Cleveland Membership Meeting.

The Cleveland membership meeting held in accordance with the instructions of the Central Executive Committee will take place at Hungarian Hall, 4309 Lorraine avenue.

German Branch in Chicago Votes for The Minority Thesis

After a thoro discussion of the tasks of the Workers Party, held in its regular meeting Tuesday, Dec. 23, the Chicago German branch of the party decided by a vote of 8 to 6 to endorse the minority theses.

Comrade Arne Swabeck, district organizer, presented the viewpoint of the majority; Comrade Max Bedacht that of the minority. Comrades speaking for the minority from the floor, expressed their fear that the abandonment of the farmer-labor party campaign would mean an abandonment or at least curtailment of the political activities of the party.

Comrades of the majority point of view, on the other hand, expressed the opinion that the party had enough to do if it would carry out its industrial program of amalgamation, organization of the unorganized, etc.

Minority Thesis is Endorsed by Terra Cotta Italian Branch

The Terra Cotta Italian Branch of Chicago, at its last regular meeting indorsed the minority thesis by a unanimous vote. "We indorse the Ruthenberg-Lovestone thesis of the C. E. C. minority, and declare against the dropping of the united front, class farmer-labor party slogan which is a weapon to help us build a mass Communist party," said the resolution, signed by G. Bomanini, secretary of the branch. The vote was unanimous for the minority thesis.

Unanimous for Minority.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The vote in the Buffalo Italian Branch was unanimous for the minority by a vote of 15 to 0.

quite popular thruout the country with the rail magnates. Hillman's steps towards class collaboration have been more guarded and his path more liberally decorated with red fire and revolutionary trimmings. But even the New York Times, finds Gompers behind Hillman in many respects. One point is worthy of note.

HILLMAN is author of the policy in the needle trades that insists on a high standard of production from the workers. This kind of thing under capitalism is class collaboration at its worst. It is not surprising that the Nation goes off on the wrong foot in discussing such questions. What bourgeois liberals really want is industrial peace not better conditions for the workers or their ultimate emancipation from wage slavery.

HENRY FORD might have secured the Muscle Shoals power plant if he had waited until after the elections. Coolidge promised it to him, but the promise was made at an inopportune moment. It fell foul of Teapot Dome and other things. Now Senator Underwood of Alabama, a democrat, is fighting for a bill, that would turn over the power plant to private interests. President Coolidge, originally supported Underwood's bill, but when he saw the hand writing on the wall, he withdrew his support. Another group wants the shoals operated by the government but so long as the government is in the hands of the capitalists, the private interests will have it anyhow.

CHARLES R. CRANE, of Chicago, was charged by the Soviet ambassador to Turkey, with plotting the overthrow of the Soviet government from Constantinople. Crane was placunder surveillance by the Turkish police, and three days later he left for Palestine, Egypt, and India. This means that he has transferred his seat of operations to other sections. One of the arguments used against Soviet recognition by Secretary of State Hughes is that the Russian government interferes in domestic affairs of other nations. But it is no exaggeration to say that every U. S. ambassador and consul in the world is interfering in the domestic affairs of those countries to which they are assigned.

Pullman to Discuss Party Controversy at Meeting Friday

A meeting of the Workers Party members of Pullman has been called for Friday, Dec. 26 in Stanick's Hall, 205 east 115 St. The most important order of business will be discussion of the party controversy, and speakers representing the majority and minority theses will be heard.

Two delegates to the Chicago city central committee were elected to represent Pullman at the last meeting of the Pullman city central. A discussion by the party members living in Pullman is expected to enliven the proceedings, and all are urged to be present.

Workers' Demands in Sweden.

STOCKHOLM.—The Metal and Leather workers in Orebro, members of the Gothaer trade union, present the following demands to the Branting socialist cabinet: Immediate dissolution of the bourgeois regular army and establishment of a workers' and peasants' police system; arming the workers and peasants, and disarming the bourgeoisie; that Sweden leave the league of nations; dissolution of the upper house and abolition of the monarchy.

The workers demand wages and working hours in accordance with their own scale; the large industries, mines, and large estates to be nationalized under workers' control.

Thousand Dollars Pledged By National Office Center

Party Headquarters Pays in Cash Over Three-Fourths Amount Pledged—Will Other Party Offices Follow Lead?

THE membership is backing this campaign. It realizes the worth of the DAILY WORKER to the party and the working class. From every section of the country come letters stating that everything will be done to meet quotas assigned,—yes, to beat them.

Below we print a list of contributions made by comrades that work in and visit the DAILY WORKER building. It is a formidable list. If every party headquarters thruout the country could do equally well, the campaign would be one-third over.

Every headquarters of the party, whether district, federation or local, should make it a point to sell policies to sympathizers that visit such party centers. If more than $1,000 can be secured in pledges from members and sympathizers that visit the national center, of which three-fourths has already been paid in cash, then comrades elsewhere can do proportionately well.

Their first conversation betrayed the fact that she was not fastidious
AT a distance she had appeared unusually neat, immaculate. But upon their first face-to-face meeting he discovered that her teeth were not clean. And he soon lost interest.
So many people overlook this one matter of fastidiousness. And do so in spite of the fact that in conversation the teeth are the one most noticeable thing about you.
Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.
Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel—a different problem entirely.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

POLITICAL ROMANCING MUST GIVE WAY TO REALISM

By ALFRED WAGENKNECT

WE have had a period of legal romancing to which the "illegal romancing," so called, of underground days, can not hold a candle. Let's quote Pepper in proof. (Liberator, Sept. 1923) "The bankrupt farmers are overthrowing the most sacred fundamental law of capitalism, namely, cash payment, and do not pay their debts. The Negroes of the South are making an unarmed Spartacus uprising." And again, same issue: "The coming third (LaFollette) revolution will not be a proletarian revolution. It will be a revolution of well to-do and exploited farmers, small business men and workers. The revolution will come thru the ballot and, as Magnus Johnson foretells, THRU FORCE OF ARMS."

Well, comrades, the LaFollette-revolution, for the time, seems to have passed its peak. And it is a thing not yet been fired. And the unarmed Negro Spartacus uprisings of the south resulted in a solid Negro vote for Coolidge. Capitalism is on the decline, sure enough, but we seemed to have misjudged the tempo of this decline and the political reaction to it, by many a mile. This cross-eyed evaluation of a year and a half ago led us into opportunist swamps, from which we had to extricate ourselves, with a big boost from the Communist International.

Take our first "big success" in this skirmish of ours for a labor party. On July 3, 4, 1923 there was organized in Chicago the federated farmer-labor party. It was heralded a "mass party of 616,000 workers and farmers connected with the new party not merely formally thru high officials, but thru a rank and file representation." And then, the minute we lost a few high officials, the Fitzpatrick group in Chicago, and a few other high officials in various other "strongholds of the labor party idea" the F. F. L. P. wrinkled up and died, the last "optimistic report" issued being that we had all of a party of 100,000 left in it, ourselves and our nearest relatives.

What was our error? We were crazy for a farmer-labor party. We saw immense masses where in reality only single crooked leaders stood. The capitalist crisis was not severe enough to drive the workers and farmers towards independent political action. The basis for organization was not wide enough and this was proven when, in the end, we found ourselves sitting our own tail and calling it the F. F. L. P. If I might be permitted a pleasantry, Pepper had peppered, aspired long, the orientation of the Workers Party in the daily struggles and its labor party activities so high ly, that we became dopey and chronic romancers. Then the month of August gave birth to the idea that if the F. F. L. P. did not go forward towards a mass labor party, it might metamorphose itself into a mass Communist party. Either way we'd win, so let's again shout, Hurrah! In other words, the idea was that we could perform the miracle of grabbing a mass Communist party in America without connecting ourselves with masses of workers and permeating them with our ideology.

But the F. F. L. P. neither became a mass Communist party nor a mass labor party. A toadstool is what some comrades called it. And having lost out in Chicago we looked for other green fields. Green they were, sure enough. Dakota and the west caught our eye. The industrial east did not move quick enough and so we moved west and grew up with the country. We fell so in love with the farmers that the C. I. had to tell us that such love was not at all legitimate. And whereas this northwest had a tincture in its heart for LaFolette and being so hot on the trail of a labor party that we would sniff most any place for one, we got the foolish idea that an alliance with the LaFollette movement might give us a smell. The C. I. decided it was not the right kind of a smell, this odor of opportunism. So we ran our own Workers Party candidates.

Before last June there was some life in a labor party slogan outside our inflations and extravagancies. A coming presidential election interested many. This was yesterday. Today we are confronted with the question of whether we shall have another chapter or two of romance, or whether we shall enjoy a little realism. Shall we attempt the organization of another F. F. L. P., an aggregation which Pepper termed "a peasant, proletarian party"? (August, 1923, Liberator.) Shall we again attempt to gather into a fold the insignificant (when compared with the mass of workers) near-relatives and dub it a labor party? These near-relatives of ours we can get at any time for any action we may undertake. But they are wholly inadequate to alone constitute a labor party. Who else can we get at this time in a third attempt? Who else is interested? Who else can we, the Workers Party, interest, what with our F. F. L. P. stunt and our St. Paul trick still fresh in the minds of the workers? To again repeat Chicago or St. Paul would mean nothing but a third debacle and a further loss of the confidence of workers' organizations. Communist political activity, our efforts to move the masses against the state, certainly does not end at the point that the parliamentary united front becomes impossible. To me the labor party slogan is impossible today. We can now approach the workers with other slogans which surely will also culminate in political action, or we are not a Communist Party.

We must at least realize that the masses of workers are not as politically advanced as we thought they were. They do not seem to be overanxious now to get into and remain in the LaFollette party. The tempo, the decline of American capitalism is not at all abreast of Pepper's imagination. The hoped for political reaction did not materialize. Not only did a mass labor party not materialize. We did not even get a "left class bloc" for our sweat and money. The degeneration of the "LaFollette revolution until today even the railroad brotherhoods rae not for a third party convention, attests to this backwardness of labor.

I am not one of those that are overly in love with this over-emphasis upon the parliamentary united front. I am not against a parliamentary united front, but it constitutes one of the many maneuvers of our party to me, and it may not be a possible maneuver at all times. I do not want to go into this at length, but a crisis of any seriousness in this country may not push the masses towards the ballot box at all. I remember the march of the West Virginia miners. Here was a political manifestation which, with Communist leadership, could have netted us important results. As Communists we certainly should hold fast to one straight line, the labor party road, is going to lead us to victory. Our united fronts will be as varied as capitalist offensives and the struggles of the workers compel them to be. Today the labor party slogan is dead. There is no possibility of maneuvers in that direction. And if ever again there are, let's hope we engage in them without soft peddling our principles and pushing to the right, but by following the method of the united front tactic to the letter.

The minority position is creating funny angles in the minds of the members of the party. It makes a principle of riding the inertia of a past activity. If the labor party maneuver was good yesterday, it is good today, they say. Dialictics has nothing to do with this kind of reasoning. It is also creating a viewpoint that we must have at our elbow at all times, a farmer-labor party as an ever present side-kick to our party, in which all sympathizers will find temporary heaven. Expose the LaFollette party where the remnants of the farmer-labor party are now at home and tell them that is not a good place to live, and so get recruits for the farmer-labor party and then expose the latter by informing these same elements that they are not even good bums to get members for our party. This seems to be the ideally mechanical, but impossible united front conception of the minority. The viewpoint that seems present in certain quarters that a farmer-labor party should be had to afford legal protection for our membership must also be deprecated.

As one originally opposed to the LaFollette alliance, I feel that the majority position is a turn to the left. It is not sectarian, but steps in the direction of a realization of the actual possibilities of any united front we may make, and a willingness to more accurately evaluate the economic conditions and the resultant reaction of the masses of workers and exploited farmers to these conditions. It means to me that we are at last going to give the Workers Party its rightful place in our maneuvers to emphasize it as the only militant revolutionary party, to give it backbone so that in the future we will not again commit the errors of the past.

THE MINORITY WANTS US TO BE A SECT

By MAX LERNER

EVERYONE will remember that in the days after our split with the socialist party, our movement had a tendency towards what Lenin well termed the Infantile Sickness of Left Communism. At that time our reaction towards parliamentarism, in view of our experience in the S. P., was the other extreme. True, we admitted in words the necessity of parliamentary work for educational purposes side by side with the other political work of the party. But in action we felt very uncomfortable with parliamentary action. Today we seem to have the reverse situation. Despite the fact that we had long ago arrived at the conception that political action was not merely parliamentary action, that parliamentary action was only a secondary phase of political action, yet our minority at present holds that parliamentary action is political action, or, in so many words, that if we give up the farmer-labor party slogan, we give up political action. This conception exhibits a distinct state of mind, a state of mind that tends to consider the parliamentary field the whole field and the other phases of the political struggle only secondary, whereas the Marxist conception is that the parliamentary work of our movement is secondary.

The above state of mind is well exemplified by a specific instance in the case of one of the local luminaries of the minority. In attacking the C. E. C. thesis, a resolution presented by this comrade speaks of amalgamation being the work of the T. U. E. L., to carry out as a department of the party, but is of broad concern to everyone in the party, for the party as a whole to agitate, not alone as an economic slogan but as a political slogan.

This question has already been thoroughly taken up by others. What I wish to point out is the tendency, a very distinct and dangerous one to the right, to make little of one of our most important of political slogans which happens to be also an economic slogan. And yet so much noise is being made about parliamentary action which we must repeat again is one of our secondary activities. Must we tell the minority that the political struggle of the workers in this country will not be fought on the parliamentary field alone? I don't know. It looks as if our minority which is now drifting so rapidly to the right, will have to take back a good deal of what they have said in the discussion to convince us that they do not have to be told this by the party membership in most definite terms.

At the last congress of the C. I. it was brought out that the slogan of a workers' and farmers' government which the C. I. had adopted as a more popular term for the dictatorship of the proletariat had been misused in various countries; that it had been weakened and the real meaning distorted. This was pointed out as a very dangerous tendency and it was decided that the Communist Parties must see this slogan for what it was—the dictatorship of the proletariat and not some distortion.

What happened to this most important slogan in this country during our many adventures in trying to build "left-wing" farmer-labor parties, as advocated by the minority, is an example of what happened to other of our slogans and what will happen to the party. We used or rather misused this slogan of a workers' and farmers' government for "our" farmer-labor parties. We gave them this slogan and with it was carried along the mildest of conceptions, that of a parliamentary combination. I challenge any one of the minority to prove as to whether, anywhere, when we used this slogan as slogans of the farmer-labor parties whether it was understood otherwise. We were willing to distort our most important slogan, a slogan adopted for simplification of one of our most basic conceptions, in order that we might give it to our F. L. P's.

If we ourselves are to create left-wing F. L. P. organizations along the lines of logic of the minority we will inevitably be led into such debasement of all our other slogans as in the case of this one. This will be done whether we like it or not. It is the logic of such situations as have already been pointed out by Comrade Foster.

We had a case in point in the building up of a lone child here in the state of Ohio of which I shall speak in another contribution to this discussion. We have cases in the other and national F. L. P's, the programs of which we had to write and the reformist conceptions of which we even went as far as to defend (in at least one case during the July 3rd convention). On the other hand, we give the F. L. P's our slogans distorted; on the other hand we give them our immediate demands based on a reformist program. What, pray, is left for the party except to be truly a sect and for the farmer-labor party we build as a Second-and-a-Half International party to eventually bury our fleshless skeleton? Is our fate to be similar to that of the S. P. which gave up the ghost for the "good" of the LaFollette movement. It appears to me that if we are allowed to drift as the minority would have us that is where we may land. I feel on the other hand that the majority in our party has the correct Marxist and Leninist conception of the broad political work of a Communist Party and the necessary flexibility to carry it out.

WHAT THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL THINKS OF THE DIFFERENT GROUPS IN THE PARTY

By JAY LOVESTONE.

IN order to get at the difference between the C. E. C. majority and the present C. E. C. minority groups one must look into the why and wherefore of the attitudes adopted not only towards the united front farmer-labor tactics, but also towards other political and industrial problems confronting the party.

* * *

Our Party—Three Tendencies.

When one proceeds with such an examination of the outstanding features of these groups he finds the following characteristics predominant.

1. The group led by Comrade Foster and dominated by Comrade Cannon is superficial, empiric, non-Marxian and in general does not look far enough ahead in its evaluation of social forces and political movements.

2. The Ruthenberg group consists of the more conscious elements, the elements constituting the traditional backbone of the Workers Party from the very day of its inception in the great split of the socialist party. This group is the more Marxian and has a much broader and deeper political outlook.

3. On the extreme right of our party stands the Lore group, the left social-democratic group. The Foster group is politically the central group between the left elements of our party found in the Ruthenberg group and the extreme right elements following the leadership of Lore. In fact, the Foster group is a sort of a bridge between Two-and-a-Half Internationalism in our party and the oldest and most conscious Communists in our party following the leadership of Ruthenberg. Indeed, the Foster and Lore groups shade and merge into each other. In New York, for instance, all the Lore followers are an organic section of the Foster group.

What the C. I. Says.

If we examine the various declarations of the Comintern on the different groups in our party, we will find that it is precisely the above estimate which was made by the Communist International. Furthermore, an analysis of the attitude displayed by the various groups in different situations before the party, shows that the Communist International was absolutely correct in its characterization of the different tendencies in the Workers (Communist) Party.

Comrade Radek in reporting to the American commission in the presidium of the executive committee of the Communist International on May 20, 1924, declared: "With the exception of the group (Lore-Olgin group) which sees absolutely no political crisis in America and does not recognize the importance of the agrarian question, with the exception of this group, the two tendencies in the party which have grouped about Comrade Foster and Comrades Pepper-Ruthenberg, have begun with the conception that America is now passing thru a very serious political and social crisis."

A Correct Estimate.

Continuing his analysis of the groupings in the American party, Comrade Radek declared: "As far as the work of Comrade Foster is concerned, I believe that we may have very serious difficulties with this comrade. I have read Comrade Foster's pamphlet in which he sides with Legien in the dispute between Kautsky and Legien. I am afraid that this group does not look far enough."

Likewise, in the review of the "Bankruptcy of the American Labor Movement," by Comrade Leder, in the International Press Correspondence, Vol. 3, No. 21, February 27, 1923, we find the following: "On the other hand, it appears to me that Foster does not perceive the obliquity of his politico-historical outlook. . . . To sum up, I repeat the opinion already given, that Foster's historical outlook is unilateral and one-sided." It is for this reason that Comrade Leder, in reviewing this writing of Comrade Foster, declared "that Foster's thesis and his substantiation are both erroneous."

In the same discussion of the tendencies in the American party, Comrade Radek spoke of those who "have not understood enough of the revolutionary propaganda of Comrade Pepper." Radek went on to say in his characterization of the two groups that "The group of Comrades Ruthenberg and Pepper appears to be more radical because Comrade Pepper, in his articles has opened up very radical and very revolutionary perspectives for the development in America." When insisting that there be no breach in the American party, Comrade Radek spoke of the Ruthenberg group as "the element of Communist consciousness."

The following concrete examples show that the Communist International has sized up properly the groupings in the American party.

Our Unemployment Campaign—Please Wait!

1. In the full C. E. C. meeting of Feb. 16, 1924, Comrade Pepper proposed a plan to prepare the party to take full advantage of the unemployment situation which in the eyes of everyone equipped with a knowledge of Marxian economics was developing towards a mass scale. It was not until the March 18, C. E. C. sessions and it was not until after the Foster majority had deferred action on Pepper's resolution, that Comrade Brower proposed a propaganda thesis on unemployment in which he declared: "We are certain that unemployment on a mass scale will face the working class in the near future. That does not mean that we can say positively that it will be in the summer of 1924, or the winter of 1924-5 or even that it may not hold off until the summer of 1925."

Judging by the lack of response on the part of the C. E. C. majority members to the unemployment campaign proposals made by the minority members, one would say that it was Brower's economics and not Marxian economics which was the basis of our failure to achieve results in the unemployment campaign. Today in March the Foster majority could not see the economic slump which assumed an acute character as early as May.

Executive Committee Brings "Prosperity."

2. After the Coolidge election the official prosperity drummers of the American capitalist class became rather noisy. They saw in every ripple on the economic surface a torrent of prosperity. The Foster group practically accepted this vulgar bourgeois, unscientific estimate of the political situation when it informed the Comintern as follows: "Our unemployment campaign yet propaganda stage. Awaiting opportune moment for organization. Coolidge election started high boom stock exchange. General tenor capitalist press business future highly optimistic. Announcing projects large orders railway equipment. Number unemployed decreasing."

The inference of this economic "analysis" is clear. The intention is even clearer.

3. In the attitude towards industrial work by the party we find further substantiation of the Comintern's characterization of the two groups. With the Foster group industrial activity and mobilization for the same are an end in itself. Of course, since Marx declared that all class struggles are political struggles, the Foster group in effect, maintains the attitude that industrial activity per se is political activity.

With the Marxian group, the minority of the C. E. C., industrial activities, our work in the trade unions, are only a means to an end. The only most effective means for the political radicalization of the masses. We propose to utilize the economic struggles of the workers against the exploiters and to develop a revolt of the working masses against the reactionary trade union bureaucracy primarily because these channels afford us an excellent opportunity of hastening the establishment of the leadership of the Communist Party over these masses. As Communists, it is our purpose to unify the struggles of the workers, to lend a conscious character to these struggles and to give a political edge to them.

Profintern Instructions Dead Letter.

The industrial program prepared for us with the aid of the Profintern last May has been a dead letter. In that program our party industrial department was specifically told that "all the struggles of the workers shall be turned into political channels" and that our industrial policy must broaden itself beyond the narrow confines of trade union conception policy. We were told that our industrial department must not only have convention policies against the bureaucracy but must also have strike policies, policies for the everyday struggles against the exploiters with a view of giving the struggles a political edge.

The program of the Profintern is an excellent one. But since its arrival in June it has been a dead letter.

The Miners' Convention.

The difference between the two groups was evidenced in the C. E. C. debates on the policy for the last national convention of the United Mine Workers. To Comrade Foster the battle to reinstate Howatt and to democratize the trade union machinery was the central, the dominant struggle. To Comrade Pepper these were very important issues. But the political decision had to be stressed. Fight for Howat! Of course! Fight for the democratization of the trade union machinery in order to facilitate the undermining of the bureaucracy! Most assuredly! But stress and make a unity issue out of national action of the mines; out of the demand for government maintenance of the disemployed miners at full union wages; out of the farmer-labor united front campaign.

The Chicago Garment Strike.

And in his report to the executive committee on the Chicago garment strike, Comrade Johnstone declared on April 2, 1924, that the DAILY WORKER, by raising the issue "On to City Hall" gave the workers the impression that the W. P. was using the strike for its own advancement, and that the DAILY WORKER overemphasized the criticism of Oscar Nelson, a notorious labor-faker alderman. Here we have a glaring example of the misunderstanding of the role of the Communist Party in the everyday struggles of the workers.

The F.-L. P.

This is an organic feature of opportunism in our ranks. Another phase of this opportunistic, narrow basis of the Foster-Cannon group is its theory of the party bowing before the spontaneity of the masses. "There is no conscious mass demand for a class farmer-labor party. Therefore, the Communists CANNOT AND SHOULD NOT agitate for such a party and MUST NOT utilize this slogan." This is the burden of the song that the Foster group is singing in the present party controversy.

Dawes' Plan and Masses.

In the ranks of the American workers there is at this moment no burning hatred of or conscious mass opposition to the Dawes' plan. Therefore, in the eyes of the Foster group it is folly for the central executive committee to attempt to work out a program of action based on the C. I. policy on the Dawes' scheme which will serve to arouse such hatred thru enthusing these masses in the United States with some Communist consciousness."

An Opportunist Ideology.

Comrade Stalin has very well characterized this attitude towards the spontaneity of the masses as follows: "The theory of spontaneity is a theory of opportunism, the theory of bowing before the spontaneity of the workers' movement, is the theory of actual denial of the leading role of the vanguard of the working class. . . . The theory of spontaneity is the ideology of trade unionism." (Lenin and Leninism, page 43.)

The Bridge to 2.5 Communism.

It is this lack of historical perspective coupled with this un-Communist attitude towards the role of the Communist Party as the vanguard, as the driving force and the spontaneity of the masses in the development of the revolutionary movement and the class struggle that serves as the connecting link between the Foster group and the Lore group. It would be insufficient and, therefore, incorrect to state that the Foster and Lore groups have been in an alliance merely for organizational reasons best known to themselves. There is intense sympathy between the ideology of the Foster and Lore groups.

Only on this basis can we understand the why and the wherefore of the Foster majority and Comrade Lore having voted for each other's proposals and policies at least fifty-nine times. Only on this basis can we understand the fact that the Marxian group in the C. E. C. did not vote for a single proposal made by or in behalf of the Lore tendency. More than that. Whenever we attempted to correct Comrade Lore's deviations from the policies of the Comintern we were called persecutors. It is especially significant to note that while we were being called persecutors because we insisted on the C. E. C. complying with the C. I. decision regarding the Two-and-a-Half International tendency in the party, members of our group were being removed from responsible party positions and Lorelites put in their place.

Radek on Lore.

In the light of this situation the opinion of the Lore tendency entertained by the Communist International takes on a particularly instructive and timely value in the present party controversy. It is in this opinion of the Communist International that we find the basis for the organic unity between the Foster and Lore groups.

Thus Comrade Radek spoke of the Lore group in our party in his report before the American commission in the presidium of the E. C. of the C. I. on May 20, 1924:

"In conclusion something about the Lore group. I believe that we are not dealing here with personal lapses of Comrade Lore. He has written articles in which he presents the history of the Communist International completely in the spirit of the Second-and-a-Half International. He represents us as a movement which at first was anti-parliamentarian, for splits in the unions and then crept out to a realistic standpoint. Or in an article on the English labor party, Lore says: 'Poor MacDonald would like to do everything good for the working class, but the liberals won't let him.' In an article on the revolution he says, 'Conditions in Germany have long been overripe for the revolution. But the Communist Party, for which there are international difficulties has succeeded in keeping the workers from the revolution.'"

C. E. C. Instructed to Fight Lore.

"I believe that behind these matters there is one fact in regard to Comrade Lore. During the war there were in America German workers, former social-democrats who for patriotic reasons, were against America's participation in the war. Part of the German comrades in America came to us not as Communists, but as a result of the struggle which they conducted as Germans against America's entry into the war. And perhaps I am mistaken but I have the impression that Lore represents this section. If he has the support of the Finnish federation, an organization with a fortune of $15,000,000, made up of excellent skilled workers having made reformism in them than others. For that reason, I believe that the C. E. C. acted incorrectly when it regarded the lapses of Lore as lapses of a peculiar fellow. This is a centristic tendency in the party against which the C. E. C. must fight.

Lore—Social Democratic.

"The comrades must oppose Lore in the press, they must attack him. The comrades must not be misled by the fact that in the question of the support of the third party he has gone along with us. He did so from a traditional social-democratic point of view—because of compromises with petty bourgeois parties. We are on no account against such compromises. In a revolutionary situation when the petty bourgeoisie is compelled to adopt revolutionary policies, we are prepared to make compromises. In the elections we were for compromises as Russia was the mensheviki or the social-revolutionaries. But in Lore we have a social-democratic point of view meeting with a Communistic point of view and it would be very wrong if the decision of the executive committee of the Comintern should be that the power of the executive committee puts the banner of the executive committee into the hands of Lore and would say he represents the point of view of the executive. This is merely a coincidence."

Zinoviev Tells Truth About Lore.

And Comrade Zinoviev was even more emphatic in his evaluation of the Lore tendency as a menace to the development of our party to a mass Communist Party. We quote from Zinoviev's speech at the same session:

"As regards Lore: from what I have read, he proves that he is no more a Communist. I really do not know whether he belongs in the C. E. C. in the resolution we have said that very politely. Perhaps we will be compelled to tell it to him less politely. The fact that Lore, who was against the support of LaFollette is of no moment. We know the manners of the social-democrats who hide behind some barricades, who say they are against the work among the farmers and the petty bourgeoisie (Kautsky). The American party will find ways and means of stating openly what is the matter with Lore."

Foster-Lore Alliance Serious Menace to Party.

The danger to the party in the Foster-Lore alliance is inestimable. If the Foster group had a mistaken Communist political point of view of its own, the matter would be serious enough for our party. But, in fact, the Foster group, today lacks a political point of view. In its alliance with the Lore group, the Foster group, in which there are found a number of comrades who can be of great service to the party, is thus given a political point of view which is distinctly social-democratic, which is decidedly non-Communist, as the Communist International has shown.

The menace to the party in the Foster-Lore alliance lies in the fact that a group of comrades who are thus beginning to develop a political point of view are being imbued with the spirit of the rankest opportunism which is the basis of Two-and-a-Half Internationalism. In order to avoid just such a calamity for our party, the C. I. instructed the Foster group to work together with the Ruthenberg group against the Lore tendency.

Foster-Lore Alliance Violates C. I. Instructions.

But what has Comrade Foster done to carry out the C. I. instructions regarding Lore? I quote from a document officially signed by Comrade Fahle Burman, executive secretary of the Finnish Federation, and secretly transmitted to Finnish Branch secretaries from Chicago on Dec. 4, 1924. This document is a series of instructions to the Finnish branches to send a full quota to each C. C. C. meeting with the purpose of electing delegates and participating in the discussion with full strength. This closely stenographed six page document, the bearing of the official imprint of the federation executive secretary, Burman, was never officially transmitted to the executive secretary of the party, who by the way is viciously maligned in the document. The best evidence of the Foster-Lore alliance against the Marxian group is given in the following quotation:

"THE C. E. C. MAJORITY IS COMPOSED OF COMRADES FOSTER, CANNON, ABERN AND THE UNDERSIGNED. COMRADE LORE HAS BEEN SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT IN OPINION BUT HAS NEARLY WITHOUT EXCEPTION VOTED WITH THE MAJORITY."

And to cap the climax of this anti-Communist alliance comes the eleventh hour endorsement of the majority thesis SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT, after several weeks of "watchful waiting," to see whether the full force of Two-and-a-Half Internationalism would be necessary to help the Foster group in its fight against the Marxian group in the party.

THE PARTY DISCUSSION CONTINUED

CRITICISM ABOUT THE PRACTICAL ACTIVITIES OF THE PARTY

(The following article unanimously accepted by the editorial staff, was published in the Eteenpain, Finnish Daily, Worcester, Mass. Dec. 3.)

ACCORDING to the custom in the communist movement, the central executive committee of our party has started before the convention a general discussion on party questions and the tasks confronting the party. This discussion has two purposes. First, to get the attention of the membership to their own party, and, second, to have the membership express their wish and their criticism on the activities of the party and its units.

Before all, the fact must be established, that the party has in every way made progress during the year. Its membership has increased, the circulation of party papers has grown and the importance of the whole party is bigger. One of the reasons for this progress, is the fact, that the party is now the only representative of a clear cut class struggle among the labor organizations in this country. As a consequence of this fact alone the W. P. has the best opportunities to become a large political mass organisation. However, such organizations are not built in a day, especially not on the American soil. All the traditional obstacles, that a strictly revolutionary movement meets in this country, must be understood and correctly estimated, and on the other hand, in the midst of the most ardent enthusiasm and optimism, the infant age of our movement and party must be taken into consideration. The W. P. has not yet acquired the experience which is an important condition of progress and which will be gained thru the practical work.

Let us go straight to the point. Aside from this general progress, our party activities still manifest some weaknesses owing to the young age of the W. P. The coming party convention will have to pay attention to this, in order to find the remedies. It is clear that not all the party units, nor the membership as a whole, are the proved and enthusiastic Communists, that they should be. Our whole movement is still in its propaganda phase, and the activities confronting us do not harden the membership, nor do they show the same sacrificing enthusiasm as in other countries, where the conditions make it possible. Owing to this, many members take their party duties very lightly having little regard for the common will—a centralized party. In this respect, taking into consideration the situation under which we are, real Communistic responsibility can be developed only thru suitable educational work.

But our party has weaknesses of an other kind, too. The higher units of the party and the leadership need in many respect to be remedied. The whole history of the American Communist movement shows, that it has suffered from the weakness of its leaders, splits, inner struggles and factional politics, which have not always been directed towards the common good.

We have published recently a report of the latest grouping and policies of C. E. C. We declared outright: we were angered at this unceasing splitting and grouping of C. E. C. and also at the production of theses before every convention.

The existence of these different factions in the C. E. C. does not show up only before conventions. Also between conventions the quarrel goes on among the membership. Some person or group, interested in a "new policy," drafts his theses and starts to quarrel, and soon the fight is in full swing. Then again "the situation is changed" and it is necessary to explain it. The C. E. C. of the party must do something else than draft theses; it must do something else than split hairs on questions that only after a decade will be important. Its members must stop factional politics, the basis of which many times may only be the question who will become a member to the next C. E. C. The playing politics for the sake of politics should be stopped.

Now there is a difference of opinion on the question in what relation we should stand towards a farmer-labor party. It is permissible to disagree on a clear question like this We believe that at the present time there has been no need to draft different sets of theses. The minority says, that even they do not see the possibility for the formation of a farmer-labor party, at present time, but that they wish to carry on propaganda work according to some features of the united front. The majority also advocates propaganda work among poor farmers and farm workers and in this respect they are compelled to work sometimes and in certain districts according to the tactics of the united front. The majority repudiates the slogan "for the farmer-labor party," because the latter has thoroughly merged into the LaFollette movement. The majority claims that the last named movement will represent the same as the "radical" governments do in European countries. It may be so, but it may be different too. It is wrong to compare thoughtlessly the political movements of this country, such as the LaFollette movement with certain movements of European countries, that have history, political experience, and the development of decades behind them. We should not depend too much on predictions and presumptions, because these may collapse. Still less should we build the party tactics according these lines. We remember very well how Comrade Pepper in his flaming articles, when McAdoo was exposed in the oil scandals, told, that only a "miracle" can prevent the creation of a third party. And according to this prediction—which was alone a miracle—the boasting and noisy campaign was started for building up a farmer labor party, a campaign which ate up energy and funds. This campaign lasted over two years, but suddenly a meeting of officials is called and all the previously accomplished organizing work is repudiated and our own candidates are put in the field of election. And after all this, we get theses and statements, in which the idea about the creation of farmer-labor party is still more fundamentally repudiated as useless and unsuccessful. This has been done too hastily. Such politics creates confusion and no one outside the C. E. C. has energy enough to find out what is going on at each time.

Now the members of the C. E. C. accuse each other for the mistakes that have been made in propagating and building up the farmer-labor movement. The fact is all the leaders of our party at one time overestimated the possibilities on this field of action. The whole C. E. C. talked about federated farmer-labor party, its significance and its power too enthusiastically basing its estimation on mere illusions. Now, when those great hopes have not been realized, some of them again begin to overestimate, that the coming of LaFollette has "wholly" destroyed and eaten up the farmer-labor movement. This is no more trie than the assumption of a year ago. The conditions, looked at from the viewpoint of propaganda from which our party must direct its work and movements at present, have not changed very much within two or three years in this country. We, and the Finnish membership in general, have always emphasized the building up of our party, we have always been very unwilling to follow the too flighty maneuvers and movements of the party in its agitation for the farmer labor movement, because it has been plain to us, that our party is unable to build up such an enormous movement in a day. We have emphasized the strengthening of the party by carrying systematical agitation, by increasing the membership, etc. And in this respect we are in accord with the majority of C. E. C. But at the same time we are of the opinion, that also the minority has tendencies in the same direction. We cannot accept such a one-sided declaration, that the farmer-labor agitation has now become wholly hopeless, when it has hitherto had so great possibilities. In short, the viewpoints of both groups have some sound points. Disagreements are very small and can be made big only by political dabbling, by intriguing and by writing separate theses. This is only doing harm to our cause. The unity of our movement should be build on the fundamental point, that at last, after numerous mistakes and incorrect estimates of conditions, we must give our main strength for building up our party.

But for this very reason we must carry our agitation everywhere, and in some states we have possibilities to carry our propaganda thru the slogan of "farmer-labor party," on the condition, that we don't try to make of it a magic word, supposing it solves all the problems It should be used only in the sense of propaganda and not as a tag for forming such a party as the C. E. C. has hitherto used this slogan.

We know very well, that the present controversy in the C. E. C. does not lead to a split, but it has a certain disturbing effect on the party membership, it has distubing influence on the stability of the party. It will injure the unity, which we should be better able to build up. Again the C. E. C. will send representatives to various districts to explain "the changed situation." This will require money and the membership was already last year dissatisfied because of the dictation of the C. E. C. how party questions should be handled in the districts.

As to the other questions the C. E. C. shows the same wrong methods. When, for instance, money was needed to carry on the farmer-labor agitation, then, in the first place, appeals were sent to the membership and branches for voluntary contributions, with the result, that the most dutiful members responded. But right after, an obligatory special assessment was levied, thus some paid only one assessment while others had to pay several times that amount. It seems, the C. E. C. is afraid, that the membership has nothing to do in the party. Therefore the C. E. C. is feverishly piling up one duty after another. All kinds of decisions and duties are imposed upon the membership at the same time. All of them are "important" and "most important." As a consequence the membership is receiving these orders smiling scornfully and do not even try to act in accordance with them. It seems, that there are too many office holders in our national office and somewhat poor order. But in spite of this, when some new activity is started, again a new department is established and it must have a director of its own. Is this necessary?—We cannot tell, but we feel that the next convention should strive to prepare a strict budget for the national office, because the financial burdens of our party are becoming too heavy. It is important also, that our district offices should get their share of the propaganda funds. For, if they have no resources to carry out propaganda, they are of no use. Generally speaking, we should not try to undertake too big tasks, neither financially nor politically, when our movement is only in its preliminary stage.

As to the reorganisation of the party, we have already expressed our opinion. Several writers have lately been dealing with this question. The C. I. has decided that the Communist parties in every country should strive to reconstruct themselves upon the basis of shop nuclei. This principle, as has been many times pointed out, is the best method of organisation. But it is plain, that the execution of the same, we are confronted with several difficulties in this coutnry. For this reason we must start easily and carefully in this respect and the party convention must act carefully in regard of this matter.

It is evident, that the party must enlarge and strengthen its activities in labor unions as well as on the other fields of agitation and recruiting. The solution of these questions will largely depend on how perfectly and soundly our party can approach them. Before all, we need at present time stability, familiarity with our work, educational Communist propaganda, which should have far-reaching aims, but which should be strictly controlled and based on the understanding of the ideology of American workers. Simply, we need awakening and organizing work. The conditions and the sharpening of the class contradictions of capitalism will work for us. But we should be able to speak to the masses about our party, about Communism.

IMPORTED SCABS CAN'T BREAK KY. MINERS' STRIKE

Living Cost Soars As Bosses Cut Wages

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HILLSIDE Ky., Dec. 25.—Coal operators are scouring the country-side getting men to work in the mines of District 23, westhern Kentucky, under heavy guard. The miners of this district have been on strike since April 15. When the men went on strike they were receiving 76 cents a ton for loading coal. They are now asked to accept 46 cents a ton.

Formerly the miners received $6.91 a day for driving a mule; eight hours $6.85 per day for trackliaying, $6.59 for common day labor and $6.06 for outside labor. Now the coal operators want the men to work for $4.20 per day for mule-driving, $4.36 for track laying, $4.09 for common day labor and $2.56 for outside labor.

The cost of living in the strike area is exceedingly high. The men pay $15.00 per month house rent, $4.60 for a ton of coal, $1.35 for a bag of flour, 45 cents a pound for coffee, 45 cents a sack for meal, 15 cents a pound for sugar, 60 cents a pound for butter and 60 cents a dozen for eggs.

Newark, N. J., Now Has English Branch of Young Workers League

By JOSEPH ROGEN.

A group of young people met in the Economic Hall at 71 Montgomery St., Newark, to organize an English branch of the Young Workers' League.

Comrade Ginsburg, a delegate of the executive committee of New York, pointed out the necessity of organizing a branch of the Young Workers' League in a great industrial center, such as Newark. He then outlined the purpose of the Y. W. L., its proper functions and its intentions.

After several discussions, in which all those present participated, the branch was formed.

The following officers were elected: M. Maitlin, organizer; Alec. Barnett, recording secretary; Segelofsky, financial secretary; Lesley Kun, educational director; Joseph Rogen, literature agent; L. Kun and S. Green, delegates to C. C. C.; A. Seltzer, industrial organizer.

The new branch outlined an educational program which includes a class in the A. B. C. of Communism (date of the beginning of the class will be announced later) series of lectures and several socials.

This English branch will meet every Friday night at the Economic Hall at 71 Montgomery St.

We hope that the new branch will succeed in organizing the youth of this city into a militant and revolutionary organization.

Who Killed Hannibal Hurst?

Would You Suspect His Wife? His Daughter? Or Person or Persons Unknown?

You will be interested in solving this mystery—the murder of an aged, prominent financier. The details of this thrilling story will be unfolded in the new detective-love story now appearing in THE BEST ENTRENCHED CAPITALIST DAILY OF CHICAGO.

"DARKENED WINDOWS"

SYNOPSIS:

Who killed Hannibal Hurst?
Who killed Hannibal Hurst?
Who killed Hannibal Hurst?
Who killed Hannibal Hurst?
Would you suspect his wife?
Would you suspect his daughter?
Or would you suspect person or persons UNKNOWN?
Who killed Hannibal Hurst?

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY!

"But it would be very much to the advantage of other parties to have me out of the way," said Detective Flint after an attempt had been made to black-jack him.

"What parties?" asked Graham, the lawyer, with quick interest.

Flint, the detective, hesitated. He had spoken without thought and said more than he intended. "Well," he said, "you know, I suppose, what America is up against with all these Communists that we've let in, don't you? The country is fairly rotten with their plotting."

"Oh, come now! You don't mean to say that you believe all the stories you hear!" exclaimed Graham. "Why, they are nothing but hysterical inventions, most of them. Not that I've thought much about it, to be sure."

"It's funny all the things men like you don't think about," retorted Flint. "Do you know, I sometimes wonder what you do think about. Read your newspapers, man; look at the bomb outrages! Look at the strikes! Who do you suppose is behind them? Ever hear of the Third International?"

"Why, yes—in Europe."

"Europe!" scoffed Flint. "Why, they've got this whole country in a net—threads running everywhere. And there are big hands holding the threads, let me tell you." Flint lowered his voice to a whisper. "I don't mind saying to you, if you will swear to keep it to yourself, that I've been following one of those threads. I got hold of it by accident, and I think it is leading me to some pretty dirty business. There's a big bunch in it and they are plotting something as sure as I'm sitting here. Just what it is I haven't found out yet, but I'm on the track. Perhaps I've got closer than they like, tho I didn't know they had spotted me. But if they have, that explains our friend with the black-jack. I'm sorry to upset your nice little theory, Mr. Graham, but the more I think about it the surer I am."

"Could there be any connection between the two crimes, do you think?" asked Graham, loath to give up a solution which would exonerate Evadne, the murdered financier's wife. "You spoke of these trouble-makers, the Communists; well, you remember, the kitchen maid said she heard Mr. Hurst call out, 'You damn Communist,' and I was wondering——"

"Now you begin to see the direction in which I have been working," said Flint, smiling.

"But see here, Mr. Graham," he added, "it's hands off with this affair I've told you about. It's too delicate, not to say dangerous, a proposition for a novice to mix up in. By a look or a word, without suspecting it, you might queer my whole game. I must have your word that the minute I begin to see the same hand, or head rather, in this attempt on me and in the murder of Hannibal Hurst, you will step out of the game. Until then I shall be glad to keep you posted as to all I do in tonight's affair."

Graham gave his promise readily. All his interest in the Hurst case centered in Evadne. If she were freed from all suspicion of connivance it mattered not a whit to him who was found guilty.

"Give me warning and I will become the soul of discretion," he said. "I'll even swear not to recognize you if I meet you disguised as the very devil himself. According to the story books, that's the sort of thing you do, isn't it?"

Graham laughed gayly at his own nonsense. He was ready to laugh without any excuse whatever. He was excited; he was treading on air. Communist plot—of course; it was a Communist plot. No shadow could fall on Evadne.

WHO KILLED HANNIBAL HURST?
We'll give you just one second to guess!

AND NOW WE'LL TELL OUR STORY!

THREE THOUSAND yellow daily papers of the United States employ tens of thousands of editors, feature writers, reporters, fiction writers who daily dip their poisonous pens into black ink pots and soil mountains of otherwise pure white paper with lies, half-truths, vicious opposition and hypocritical evasion about everything that pertains to the worker and his class interests.

These peddlers of poison tried to bury Soviet Russia under an avalanche of their filth. They stab every strike in the back. They stretch to the breaking point and then tie into a knot the brains of millions of proletarians with their fake propaganda.

THREE THOUSAND daily yellows in the United States spewing poison. If not in the news columns, then in feature stories. If not in feature stories, then in lurid fiction. It's this poison we fight. The capitalist press must be discredited, must be exposed, must be boycotted, must be pointed out as the arch enemy of the working class.

Unofficial Diplomacy

When the three Wall Street bankers, led by "Hell an' Maria" Dawes, went to Germany in order to place that country in receivership, the mission was supposed to have no official government sanction. This would involve some rag chewing in congress. The best thing to do was to let the mission know that it had the government's good wishes rather than give it official endorsement. In the event of the errand being successful, the administration could claim the credit and on the other hand, if it fell down on its job, nobody could blame the Coolidge cabinet for the fizzle.

But while that policy had advantages, it also has disadvantages. The Wall Street bankers went, saw and conquered. They placed Germany's resources in hock and hold the tickets. They also collect the cash, which they turn over to the allied governments as reparations, but keeping a goodly sum for Wall Street which, to do it justice, aided the allies considerably in putting Germany in a position which made it possible to loot her without much inconvenience.

Since the tory government assumed the task of guiding the feet of the British Empire on its uncertain path, bellicose language has come from Downing Street expressing the belief that the United States has no right to claim any part of Germany's cash until the allied governments first get theirs. America, not having signed the Versailles treaty, is not in the game, writes Austen Chamberlain and furthermore the Dawes plan, not being officially backed by Washington, the United States has no right to share in the benefits of a plan in which it took no part.

Charles Evans Hughes, slick Standard Oil lawyer, beams across the herring pond at the wily Chamberlain and remarks that he gave no order to the American experts, namely, Dawes, Young and Robinson, but let it be known to them that he wished to have a provision inserted in the plan, allowing the United States a share in the spoils of defeated Germany, spoils wrung out of the blood and sweat of the German working class. His wish became law.

Since the last shot was fired on the western front in 1918 a diplomatic war has been waged between the allied and associated bandits who defeated the bandits on the other side led by Germany. France and England have been on the verge of war several times. Only weakness and fear of revolution held them back. The United States and England are snarling at each other. The robbers cannot come to terms. They cannot agree on the division of the loot. There cannot be any peace between capitalists.

Today, Wall Street fights Downing Street by means of diplomatic notes and by dollars. Tomorrow the weapons will be deadlier. But the war is being carried on nevertheless. When capitalist governments talk sweetly to each other, you may be sure war is in the back of their heads. The Dawes plan, which was a scheme of the American finance-capitalists to fasten their hegemony on Europe, is one of the war seeds so liberally strewn by capitalists.

Newspaper reports advise us that the league of nations has a ticklish job to quell the Albanian revolt. No doubt. Judging from the league's record in recent imbroglios, a riot in a foundling hospital would be about its capacity.

Calles Cancels Concessions

President Calles of Mexico has issued orders cancelling many concessions held by foreigners who have not complied with the provisions under which they were granted.

Most of these concessions were held by Americans and unless they represent the investment of very little capital or are worthless from other causes, President Calles is going to discover that the friendship of the American Federation of Labor officialdom is a Judas loyalty. Every president of Mexico since the overthrow of the tyrant Diaz has had little trouble until he began to enforce strictly Mexican laws regulating land and natural resources. Immediately after this has been done the American oil and mining-capitalists, backed by the United States government, have fomented and financed uprisings so that Mexican chaos could become an excuse for intervention.

The Mexican labor movement, hitherto the great bulwark against landlordism and capitalist reaction, has been led into the camp of the imperialists. Its only center of resistance today are the Communists upon whose heads the officialdom heaps insult and slander in the best Gompersian style.

It will be interesting to watch the results of the attempt of Calles to assert some few signs of independence. If he has infringed on the privileges of exploitation held by any powerful group of American capitalists he will be told at once that his status is that of a vassal. His new found friends, the Wolls and Greens, will do nothing for him or the Mexican people except to advise submission in the name of "peace and democracy."

If a crisis arises out of this cancellation of concessions, as it has so often in the past, the Mexican people will find their only friends in imperialist America in the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Mr. Gompers' Friends

The paeans of praise sung in behalf of the deceased Mr. Gompers are illuminating. So reactionary a newspaper as the Chicago Tribune declares that "there has never been a labor leader in this country the equal of Samuel Gompers and we doubt there has been his equal in any other country."

The Tribune is absolutely correct, from its employing class point of view. There has never been in the history of American labor a lieutenant of capital in the ranks of the working masses who rendered as much service to the exploiters as Mr. Gompers did. We seriously doubt whether and are quite certain that there can be no equal of Mr. Gompers in this respect in the future of the American labor movement.

In shedding tears over the death of this stalwart ally of the enemies of the working class, one of the blackest, if not the blackest, newspaper in the country, the New York Commercial, declared that "The organization holds nobody fitted to take his place and carry on in the same masterful fashion." Such are the compliments accorded Gompers by the worst foes of the workers of this country.

The comment on the successor of Mr. Gompers is almost as illuminating. Beneath the surface of the numerous compliments showered on Mr. Green by the open shoppers of the country we find an undercurrent of anxiety. It is true that the capitalist reaction has unlimited faith in Mr. Green. The latter gentleman was a delegate to the last democratic national convention and was seated alongside of the bloody strikebreaking sheriff, Don Chaffin of West Virginia. Mr. Green was also a champion of John W. Davis, lawyer for J. P. Morgan and company and the Standard Oil, in the last campaign.

What the employing class fears, therefore, is not Mr. Green but whether Mr. Green, not having the advantages of tradition and prestige that Mr. Gompers had, will be able to carry out its policies against the labor movement as effectively as his predecessor. The friends of Gompers are the friends of Green. But the conditions under which Mr. Green will be working in the interests of the exploiting class will be very much different from the conditions under which Mr. Gompers was working. That is why the friends of Gompers tend to be disturbed at this moment.

The workers of this country know only one duty. The workers know that now that Gompers is dead they must resolutely set themselves to the task of killing Gompersism—the scourge of the American working class.

Paris Developments

Recent weeks have witnessed gigantic Communist demonstrations in Paris. The Communist Party of France has very properly utilized the occasion of the arrival of the Soviet ambassador, Comrade Krassin, to mobilize the working masses for an expression of their confidence in the first workers' republic.

This has brought a howl from the hyenas of the capitalist press. In fact, our zealous imperialist watchdog, the American Ambassador Herrick, has found it necessary to investigate the likelihood of a proletarian revolution in France. This Yankee imperialist bloodhound has assured the Washington administration that Morgan's investments in France are secure.

Now Comrade Krassin comes forward with additional cause to disturb the peace of the international capitalist clique. Comrade Krassin, in occupying the embassy, has found certain documents which the czarists had forgotten, by accident of course, to steal. These documents shed very welcome light on the imperialist machinations on the eve of the war. These documents divulge definitely that imperialist France and czarist Russia were in a secret agreement to slice up Turkey amongst themselves. This agreement was binding upon the two capitalist powers while they were in alliance with Great Britain in the last conflict. This treaty was kept secret from Great Britain by her Russian and French imperialist allies.

The fraudulent pacifist Herriot now shows signs of extreme nervousness. He is frightened to death lest Soviet Russia make public these terms. Herriot fears that the publication of this treaty by the Soviets would spoil his plan to enter into a new accord with Stanley Baldwin's reactionary British government. Besides such a step by Soviet Russia would knock the props from under France's hypocritical policy in the Near East. It would again tend to draw the Turkish government away from France and towards Soviet Russia.

These Paris developments are very significant. They not only indicate the real character of capitalist diplomacy but they also show very clearly the foundation of sand on which the European political imperialist edifice rests.

The Russell Sage Foundation reports that management sharing between the employers and their employes means more dividends for the former. It did not say that it meant more in the pay envelope for the latter.

CALLES SLASHES RAILWAY WAGES TO PAY BANKS

"Labor Party" President Defies Unions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 25.—One thing is fast following another to prove that President Calles, elected by the workers and peasants of Mexico on the labor party ticket, is proving to be as hostile to the workers as was the labor party premier, Ramsay MacDonald of England.

Cuts Rail Workers' Wages.

Yesterday Calles notified the railwaymen on the Mexican National line that the government was going to cut their wages. He even went so far as to threaten that he would oppose a general railway strike with every force of the government in order to compel a lower wage standard.

The railway workers of Mexico are strongly organized, and up to this time they have been conferred with when wages were discussed. This blow by Calles has disillusioned them in their support of Calles and the labor party whom they greatly aided in the fight against De la Huerta

Workers Reduced for Wall Street.

That the slashing of wages is done merely to benefit Wall Street, is shown by the announcement that over in the short time of three weeks Calles has been in office, he has taken 25,000,000 pesos out of the Mexican treasury and given them to American bankers who hold old loans against Mexico dating back to the regime of Porfirio Diaz. Calles says he is going to work other "economies," which means other wage cuts.

Life Among Riffs Not So Pleasant When Bullets Whiz

HAMBURG, Dec. 25.—The Hamburg Volkszeitung publishes an appeal from a German, one of many, who was driven by unemployment and hunger to join the Spanish foreign legion for the war in Morocco. This soldier writes of the terrible conditions and the brutal manner in which the Spaniards treat these German soldiers. He appeals to the German government to demand the return of all Germans belonging to the foreign legion. He states that most of the Germans are cripples, wounded or ill, and that the Spaniards neglect them and treat them as beasts.

The German government recently demanded that the Spanish government return all such Germans.

Shortly after the world war, when American service men were looking in vain for a job in the country they had fought for, Spanish agents lured a number of veterans into the Spanish Morocco army. The recruiting stopped as soon as the first tales of the Spanish officers' treatment of the American fighters came back to the American side of the Atlantic.

Fascist Movement in Melbourne, Australia, Sleeping in Files

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 25.—A search among the police files at Melbourne by the newly-elected labor government in the state of Victoria revealed the existence of a fascist organization.

The files showed that all members of this secret force belonged to influential families, and were authorized to carry arms, to wear a badge under the lapel of the coat like those worn by American movie sleuths, and to have special marks and lights on their motor cars. Not only were the files marked "strictly confidential," but there was a note to the police chief that the strictest secrecy was to be observed about the force.

The labor government of the state has ordered the secret force to disband, but there is no proof that this has been done. The discovery of the existence of this confidential file reveals how far the fascist movement has developed in Australia.

Anti-War Meetings in Australia Attack the Wars of Master Class

(By The Federated Press)

MELBOURNE, Australia. — At a huge anti-war demonstration in Melbourne, the speakers declared that wars were invented to make greater wealth for the capitalists. He stated that the masses had never gained from war, but merely became the machines of massacre.

The following resolution carried unanimously:

"This demonstration of Australian citizens, representing the majority of the people in this country, sends forth our fraternal greetings to the people of all other countries, and declares our determination to join hands and hearts with them in the great fight to abolish militarism and war."

Lay Off Rail Shopmen.

CLINTON, Ia.—Indefinite layoffs were the Christmas present of the Chicago & Northwestern railway to 50 of its Clinton shopmen.

NEW HAMPSHIRE CAPITALISTS REVIVE INDUSTRIAL SLAVE LAW THAT ALEXANDER HOW AT KILLED

DOVER, A. H., Dec. 25.—A court of industrial relations to make strikes and lockouts impossible in New Hampshire labor disputes is proposed by Frank F. Fernald, state legislator from Dover. Fernald plans to introduce a bill providing for a court, entirely separate from the present judiciary, of three appointed judges. The work of the state labor bureau and its board of arbitration and conciliation will be given the court. After 60 days' trial of the decision of the court preventing a strike or lockout either party if dissatisfied may seek modification of terms of settlement.

The New Hampshire court would be similar to the court attempted in Kansas but wrecked by an outlaw strike of miners lead by Alex Howat.

DILLONVALE, O., MINERS GIVE J. L. LEWIS TRIMMING

Progressive Beats Him Five to One

DILLONVALE, Ohio, Dec. 25.—Local Union 5173 of the United Mine Workers of America counted the votes cast for the international and district officers in the recent elections and found the following results: Lewis, 28; Voyzey, 144; Murray, 37; Staples, 132; Green, 48; Nearing, 119

In the vote for sub-district president, progressive candidate, J. J. Pope, polled more than twice as many votes as his nearest competitor. Pro-Lewis candidates for delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention polled a heavy vote.

NORTH BESSEMER, Pa., Dec. 25.—The results of the elections in Local 4238, give Lewis 5 votes against 81 for George Voyzey, progressive; Murray, 5 votes against 81 for Arley Staples; Green does a little better and lands six votes against 80 for Joseph Nearing. For delegates to the A. F. of L. convention the machine did even worse.

Labor Doubles Vancouver Vote.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—In the municipal elections in Vancouver labor increased its vote from 2,459 in 1923 to 4,717 in 1924 or almost 100 per cent.

SUPREME COURT APPEAL ON I. W. W. DEPORTATIONS

Defendants Over the 5-Year Dead Line

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—The failure of the U. S. district court of appeals to adequately answer the argument of defense counsel for five members of the industrial workers of the world will be the grounds of appeal to the U. S. supreme court on the deportation cases of Richard Brazier, Peter Green, Joe Graber, Don Sheridan, and James Slovik. Attorney Isaac Shorr urged for the defendants that the alien act of 1920 provides very specifically that the crime which might make these men undesirable must have been committed within five years of their entry to the United States to make them subject to deportation. All of the men had been in the country longer than five years and none were arrested until the five year period had passed.

The majority opinion claims that these men and other convicted of offenses against "measures adopted only to preserve the life of the nation in time of war, were in a class by themselves, and that class was to be treated in a way of its own, not like other aliens who had not manifested aggressive hatred of the land they chose to inhabit."

IRISH FREE STATE NAILS TORY GOVERNMENT ON LEAGUE DISPUTE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Dec. 25.—Ireland took a sharp issue with Great Britain in a note which Ireland sent to the league of nations today on the subject of the Anglo-Irish treaty. Ireland declared that the league pact clearly requires that the Anglo-Irish treaty shall be filed with the league.

Great Britain's recent protest to the league contended that the Anglo-Irish treaty was an "internal affair," therefore not a matter for league discussion.

CAPPELLINI IN OPEN ROLE OF STRIKEBREAKER

Miners Doubt His Ability For Dirty Job

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH
(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Dec. 25.—Rinaldo Cappellini, renegade radical of the anthracite region, once the leader of "outlaw strikes" to win power for himself, now makes the announcement that his "about face" is complete, for tomorrow he begins as a fullfledged strikebreaker.

This much is gleaned from the articles appearing in the local press today, which are to the effect that Cappellini will appear, beginning tomorrow, before the rank and file miners, to ask them to return to work. He is reported to have based this decision on the request of a "committee of fifty" (some committee) who, he says, visited his office and asked that he do something to get the mines started to work again.

Press agenting of this kind, however, will not accomplish anything for it will not surprise anyone that his "private chamber courage" deserts him before tomorrow. He claims that his first effort to break the strike will be made on the employes of Underwood colliery, at which place it is claimed, one of his supporters in an attempt to have the men break ranks, succeeded only in breaking the temper of the strikers and having his arm broken in the melee.

Several strikers from that place, upon hearing today that Cappellini will attempt to break the strike tomorrow, are reported to have offered wagers that he will be afraid to appear and also declaring that if he does come, he had better be wearing a good pair of shoes, to assure his exit.

Threatens Miners.

He has answered the general committee's action in publishing their list of grievances, by giving out the statement appearing in yesterday's issue. He answered the action of the Lehigh Valley general committee's action to take a strike vote, by sending a telegram to each local telling them of the dire consequences that will accrue if they carry out their threat, and his latest, to break the strike, if he can, is in answer to the new move of the now striking committee, in sending speakers to each local in the district so that all may be informed of the true state of affairs, from the viewpoint of the men on strike.

Cappellini's political burial will soon be held and not a ball unfired before the regular election in June 1925. The coming week will be an interesting one no matter what results are obtained, for it will determine the kind of metal the men in the anthracite region are made of.

Miners Meeting.

A special meeting of all the general grievance committees is expected to be held some day during the week in Wilkes Barre, if a hall can be secured for the occasion.

In blaming the Communists for all the trouble, Cappellini says there are eight Communist organizers in Wilkes Barre, and only "God knows how many are in Scranton."

To Squeeze Fruitgrowers.

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 25.—The big fruit packing concerns are trying to hogtie the co-operative movement in the fruit growing districts of British Columbia by having the provincial legislature pass an act which will force small growers to sell to an association but does not require the association to purchase fruit from small growers. The bill is being fought by the labor members in the house and largely thru their efforts an amendment was made to the original bill which prevented the associations from taking action against the small growers for breaches of contract prior to the passing of the present act.

Red Russia As We Like It

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—Wherever and whenever the Communist Party and the Soviet government come up for discussion, there life is injected; no matter how dead or dormant the environment—it arouses to life and struggle.

Miss Jessica Smith just returned from Russia, after a stay of three full years, spoke on Russia, "As I Like It" at the civic club here. She witnessed the slow, but certain progress toward the ultimate Communist goal. She described the schools, the farm life, the factory. She didn't disguise the facts. The children even lacked pencils, still lack these and many other essentials. It was hard to move the peasants from the old habits of life and work; hard to make them give up the antiquated implements, to get them to take up co-operative production with modern machinery. But the beginnings are being made. She cited instances in the new movement that will after a decade or so, revolutionize peasant life and Russian agriculture. Of the factories many facts and figures were cited by her to show the remarkable jump industry has taken in Soviet Russia—of the reduction too, in the gap between the two ends of the "scissors."

The civic club contains every shade of opinion and the socialists were there in full force. Charlie Erwin, the Jeffersonian socialist and once editor of the New York Call, led the attack. The first question a yellow socialist puts, no matter what the phases treated may be, is: "Why are perfectly good revolutionaries imprisoned for their opinions by the terrible Bolsheviks?"

The question, tearfully formulated, gathered around it such "hot shot" in the way of answer that the meeting became a battle ground in which the mensheviks got by far the worst of it. Dr. Anna Ingerman, who bored the audience with fifteen minutes of hysterics on the same and subject, got many a giggle out of the crowd when she strove to draw tears and was called to time by the chairman in the bargain.

Rose Pastor Stokes took five minutes to rake the mensheviks over the coals and to show the rest of the listeners the class character of the struggle. She convinced a majority of those present (if applause may be taken as an indication) that there are three conscious currents struggling on an international scale, the Reds, the yellows and the whites. That the yellows being bourgeois at heart, make compromises with the white guards against the revolutionary working class, but never with the reds against the capitalists. She declared the proletarian revolution will sweep the world and appealed to all who would be in line with the forward march of history to help, not hinder, the progress toward the proletarian power, which alone can build the Communist society.

An interesting feature of the evening was unexpectedly added when Mary White Ovington following Comrade Stokes, took her stand for the Russian proletarian revolution. Miss Ovington has always taken a pacifist position. Her little speech evoked a good deal of applause from the audience and a few facetious remarks from Charlie Erwin, who was "surprised that a pacifist like Mary Ovington should sanction violence."

The entire evening was a period of battle in which the Ingermanns and the Erwins suffered heavy defeat.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

A PAPAL bull issued in the year 1586 by one of his predecessors is causing Pope Pius considerable annoyance. This bull conferred the right of apostolic appointments in the world on the then king of Spain, which right so far as Argentine is concerned passed to the government of that country after Spain was kicked out. That the catholic church is a big political machine is very clearly shown by this fact. The pope appoints one Monsignor as apostolic governor of the Buenos Aires diocese without consulting the government. When the papal envoy arrived the government refused to see his credentials and the apostolic envoy said "Nothing doing" or words to that effect.

IF the Argentinian official who so politely requested the papal dignitary to put him have a squint at his papers, was bitten by a small army of New Jersey mosquitoes, he would not or could not be more excited. He talked eloquently in Spanish, swearing by the virgin's faithful and confiding spouse, that he would knock his holiness for a string of spaghetti even if the pope stepped to be St. Peter's right hand man a dozen times over.

SEEING that according to the Argentinian constitution the president of that country must be a Roman catholic those who cannot be listed among the faithful, or in other words lukewarm or ex-adherents of the Roman church, will marvel exceedingly at the cold, calculating and hostile manner in which portions of his flock proceed to make life exciting for the shepherd in the Tiber. But to catholics ex and otherwise it is only an added reason for the pope's unpopularity. Atheists grow in catholic countries where there is no protestant opposition worthy of the name as fast as flies multiply on a heap of dead fish. The Argentinian authorities threaten to expel Mgr. Boheo into the nearest cell unless he shows his credentials. We are hoping he does not show them.

ARISTIDE BRIAND, former socialist and premier of France during a period of the world war, is now appointed to minister all his eloquence to the reconciliation of nations. The European continent knows that the league is a farce comedy as long as the United States is on the outside, and the latter is too powerful and too wealthy to join something that would not add to its power unless it could be used to fasten its hegemony on the rest of the world. The league would only hinder Wall Street's ambitions, so it is given the frozen glove. Briand will holler in vain, but he may bark his way on the Wall Street payroll, as his former social democratic German "comrades" did.

THE former secretary of the young people's socialist league, a more or less fictitious organization, recently became disgusted with the socialist party and joined the Workers Party. That in itself is scarce worthy of editorial comment, such incidents being very common particularly since our party nominated its own candidates under the Communist banner in the recent elections. The socialist press was loud in its praise of this comrade before he became a Communist, but lo! once it became known that he had a red card in the Workers Party tucked away in his pocket the yellow sheets began to spew their vomit at him. He is now accused of being thirsty for gore and a place at the Communist beheading bee. The old story of the fox and the grapes.

ADMISSION was made recently to an American journalist by another of the British foreign office that the "Zinoviev" letter was a fake and that the tories knew that right along. His burst into a hearty laugh when the journalist cast doubt on the ethics of this procedure. "During the war" remarked the official "all countries practiced deception on each other and both sides paid correspondents large salaries for sending out propaganda ninety per cent of which was lies. It was war and self preservation rendered these tactics a matter of life and death. The struggle between the Soviet government and the capitalist nations is similar. It cannot be compromised. It is a fight between two systems. We feel that the MacDonald government had violated its unwritten agreement with us when it sanctioned a guaranteed loan to Russia. This we could not tolerate.

IT was quite possible that the labor government might be returned in the elections as it had several good talking points, and was playing for the business vote on the basis of its record in office, demonstrating that business had nothing to fear from it and that during its regime unemployment was reduced, and strikes were as firmly dealt with as under either liberal or tory governments. All indications pointed to a

COAL DIGGERS WAGE WAR ON BALLOT CROOKS

Movement for Special Convention Started

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Dec. 25.—A movement for the purpose of calling a special sub-district convention in Illinois Sub-District No. 9, to contest the fraudulent election put over by the machine candidates was launched at a mass meeting held here Sunday afternoon, Dec. 21.

The large theater where the meeting was held was packed with rank and file coal diggers. Miner after miner took the floor to tell what he knew about this and other crooked elections and bit by bit the whole rotten story came out.

The officials of the Buckner local told how the ballots were locked in the hall and when the tellers returned, they found that some one had broken in and what seemed to be fake ballots substituted for the genuine ones.

The fake ballots were sent in to Frank Johnson, present sub-district secretary, who was running as a progressive candidate for re-election. There is not a shadow of doubt that Johnson was re-elected. If the count was fair he would have been re-elected by an overwhelming majority, as all the rank and file miners say he has given better service than any former sub-district secretary.

Yet Johnson, as well as all other progressive candidates, will lose out if the steal is allowed to stand.

Just before the fake ballots from the Buckner local were sent in to Frank Johnson, the Buckner officials were notified by Johnson that the official ballots sent out by him had a special mark on them. A careful search of the fake ballots revealed the fact that the mark was lacking.

Johnson now has the fake ballots safely locked in a safety deposit box in one of the banks in Christopher.

One of the miners who spoke, said this fight is not a question of a few individuals, but it is a fight to save the United Mine Workers' Union from certain destruction which will surely take place if the rule or ruin policy of the machine gang continues. He also said we are not just fighting to put the men in office that we happen to be supporting, but we are fighting to get a fair election for the membership of the union now as well as in the future.

A motion was made to elect a committee of seven to draw up a petition stating the reasons for asking for a special convention. The vote on the motion was taken by a rising vote and carried unanimously. If there were any machine stool pigeons present, they did not dare vote in opposition. It will be necessary to get five per cent of the membership to sign the petition before a referendum vote can be put to the membership to call a special convention. This will apparently be an easy matter as the rank and file are deeply stirred over this issue.

"Comprendes, Companeros?"

There will be a big time at the dance tonight given by the new Spanish branch of the Workers Party at 722 Blue Island avenue. Everybody should come and meet our Spanish speaking comrades, enjoy the refreshments, the Spanish and Mexican dances and—not the least—the bright eyes of Mexican senoritas.

Mexican Debt Grows.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 26.—Mexico's financial debt now amounts to $808,070,015 a report made to the chamber of deputies reveals. The war department has, in the last hundred years, consumed between sixty and seventy per cent of the Mexican annual budgets.

NINETY PER CENT OF KANSAS MINERS VOTE FOR HOWAT SLATE; LEWIS HAS BALLOTS THROWN OUT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MULBERRY, Kansas, Dec. 26.—Ninety per cent of the miners' vote in District 14, United Mine Workers of America, went to Alexander Howat and August Dorchy, candidates for district president and vice-president, in the recent elections despite the handicap of writing in the names of the officials deposed by the autocrat John L. Lewis.

Many locals gave Howat a unanimous vote. A few locals angered at the action of the Lewis tools did not vote at all, declaring it was a farce and a fraud.

Lewis and his machine adopted the course usually followed by the fakers when the majority go overwhelmingly against them and a miscount is difficult. They simply refused to count the Howat vote. Six national stoolpigeons were in Kansas in order to assist the local agents in defeating the will of the membership.

Threatened Tellers.

When the vote was being tabulated, the Lewis agents informed the tellers that if the votes cast for Howat were counted the tellers would find themselves outside the union and blacklisted at the mines. Lewis wired the tellers that if they did not comply with the ruling of the district board he would remove them from their positions and kick them out of the union. The tellers were willing to abide by the constitution which Lewis and his hand-picked district board repudiate.

Ignores Convention Call.

The district board has not yet given any indication that it is willing to call a special convention. This state of affairs, with the membership in rebellion against the Lewis machine, and the latter ignoring every action of the rank and file, has brought about demoralization. Harry W. Burr, Lewis henchman, ran for district secretary unopposed, but only polled 1,700, whereas Howat, running unopposed for district president, three years ago, polled over 7,000 votes.

Returns from the locals indicate that Lewis was overwhelmingly defeated thruout the district by his opponent on the progressive slate, George Voyzey, hitherto practically unknown as a national figure.

Vote Thrown Out.

The tellers favored counting the vote, but were not permitted to do so by the international and district officials. They ordered the Howat-Dorchy vote thrown out. It was reported at first that Lewis would favor allowing the district to vote as it pleased, but he was stung to the quick by his ignominious defeat at the hands of Voyzey, who was unknown in the district until his name was seen on the progressive slate. The ballots on which the names of Howat and Dorchy were written in were all for Lewis. By throwing out these ballots, Lewis saved himself from a worse defeat.

Howat and Dorchy were nominated for district president and secretary-treasurer respectively, by 90 per cent of the membership. This scared the fakers, so they ruled the entire Howat slate off the ballot, contrary to the constitution.

Taken in Last Spring.

Alexander Howat was taken into a Cherokee county local last spring. There was no objection made at that time to his membership and since then he has been paying dues into the district and international organization. When the district board failed to place his name and those of his group on the official ballot, a mass meeting was called at Arma and a special convention requested. This request, made by a majority of the members in the district went unheeded.

The Kansas miners are more determined than ever to fight for the right of the membership to run the district in accord with the constitution. The last attempt on the part of Lewis to thwart the wishes of the rank and file has only added strength to the militants led by Howat.

CAPPELLINI'S STRIKEBREAKING EFFORTS FAIL

Miners Refuse to Be Driven Back

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Dec. 26.—"Failure crowned the efforts of Cappellini in his fascist attempt to have the men of the Underwood colliery return to work." Thus spoke a man who had attended the meeting at Olyphant, Pa., where about one thousand miners had assembled in the Labor Temple, when I asked him what the result was.

Too Much Bunk.

Accompanied by Wm. Brennan, ex-president and two others, all of whom spoke in an attempt to have the men return to work, Cappellini pleaded for observance of the "sacred contract" but the men have learned thru the medium of bitter experience that the more they listen to that bunk, the more suffering falls to their lot.

In a full page advertisement, the miners have clearly shown that the operators are guilty of the most flagrant violations of contract, and when their own "supposed" spokesmen come to them with that kind of soh stuff, it is time to tell them to come out in the open and declare whether or not they are representing the interests of the miners or those of the operators.

Like Two Peas.

In addition to the statement of the miners, the officials and the operators have also published statements and the latter two can only be distinguished by the signatures attached, so identical are they. Today, Brennan and Cappellini are on the same platform, pleading for the operators' profits under the cloak of "sacred contracts;" last year they were at each other's throats, telling the miners of all kinds of operators' connections the other fellow had, and only a matter of two weeks ago Cappellini practically blamed Brennan for the present trouble, claiming that he was trying to turn the membership against him by dirty union politics, that he could safely aspire to the job himself and thus turn the tables for his defeat at the hands of Cappellini at the last election.

Birds of a Feather.

It is nearly two weeks since a secret meeting was held to delve into these charges. The noise made by Cappellini prior to that time has subsided and now they are found on the same platform pleading the same cause. Cappellini has now departed for Philadelphia for a meeting of some kind, but declares that he will carry on his attempt to break the strike on his return. The officials sent here by Lewis have also returned to their homes to remain until after the holidays and, before going, they issued a statement to the effect that the men are engaged in an illegal strike and that nothing can be done until they return to work.

Grievance Body Busy.

Lewis said the same thing himself without having been near here, so the miners are wondering why the expense of sending a commission here was made.

The general grievance committee of the strikers are sending representatives of their body around to the different locals, to acquaint the miners of district one with their many grievances and they are arranging for a joint gathering of all the general committees for next Saturday in Wilkes Barre. Tony Pann, chairman of the strikers' committee, attended the Olyphant meeting yesterday and his talk served to defeat the aims of Cappellini.

WORKERS PARTY ISSUES CALL FOR UNITED FRONT TO SAVE SACCO-VANZETTI FROM DEATH

To All Workingclass Organizations:

Two workers, Nicolas Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti, have been sentenced by the capitalist courts of Massachusetts to die for the crime of holding revolutionary opinions and for defending Salsedo, their comrade and countryman who was later murdered by the agents of American government during the nation wide raids on labor and revolutionary organization in 1919-20.

They were tried as enemies of capitalism and not for the specific crime in the indictment.

True, the charge on which they were convicted and sentenced to the electric chair was the murder of a cashier.

Innocence of this charge has been proven a hundred times over by eye witnesses and by scientific testimony.

The most prejudiced of their enemies admit the innocence of these men, but the tool of capitalism on the judge's bench denies these innocent workers a new trial. Convicted by the use of every means known of prejudicing and intimidating a jury these workers now that there is less fear of capitalism's vengeance on the part of the working class, now that there is a practical certainty that no jury would convict in a new trial, are prevented, by those technical methods of holding its victims so well understood by American capitalism, and which we see at work in the case of Tom Mooney, from regaining their liberty.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America declares that the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti is the cause of the whole working class. It declares that the attack on their lives and liberty is an attack on the lives and liberties of all workers everywhere. It believes that only the united action of the working class can free these worker victims of capitalism's courts and save them from death.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America declares that the persecution of Sacco and Vanzetti is part of the drive against the most militant of the workers in America—that the Communists and members of the I. W. W., trade unionists railroaded for activity in strikes, who are in jail or under indictment are victims of the same class and the same government that tries to send Sacco and Vanzetti to their deaths.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America calls upon all organizations of workers in America to join with it in a united front for Sacco and Vanzetti against their capitalist enemies and for their immediate release.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America sets aside March 17, 1925, as Sacco and Vanzetti Day on which mass protest meetings shall be held in every industrial center and on which day the party press shall publish special Sacco-Vanzetti editions. It instructs its members to introduce

KILLING OF 34 DUE TO NEGLECT OF SALT FIRM

Dam Bursts from Waste Not Disposed Of

SALTVILLE, Va., Dec. 26.—Thirty four persons are know to have been killed, half a hundred were injured, and two hundred are homless following the breaking of a "muck" dam in the salt and alkali works of the Mathieson mill settlement. The accident was caused by the accumulation of refuse and waste lime, which the management of the salt works had not properly disposed of. This lime muck was allowed to press against the dam until on Christmas eve the dam burst inundating the valley below.

The avalanche that swept down from the broken dam of the Mathieson Alkali Works consisted mostly of lime refuse. It was solid enough to sweep ahead of it houses, fences, barns and vehicles. The entire valley is covered with the half frozen slush, being from a few feet to ten feet deep. The company had made no provision to take care of the lime waste, which had been accumulating for years. It was made soggier and heavier by recent rains, but still was allowed to pile up against the dam.

Many of the survivors have contracted pneumonia, and the death list is steadily growing. Those in hospitals are suffering from severe irritations of the eye, nose and throat due to contact with the alkaline muck water, but this is no novelty to the workers in the mill.

INSTRUCTIONS TO C. E. C. MEMBERS

ONE—The representatives of the C. E. C. (majority) shall exercise active control over the mass membership meetings and enforce the decisions of the C. E. C. regarding the same. They shall be held strictly responsible for the preservation of order and the taking of a fair vote.

TWO—Should any organized resistance develop against the putting into effect of these decision the C. E. C. members shall if necessary call upon the minority representatives to speak, together with such other comrades as may be necessary to preserve party discipline.

THREE—The theses themselves shall stand as motions to adopt. Other theses may also be placed before the meetings. These theses shall be voted on in the following order (1) C. E. C.; (2) minority of C. E. C.; (3) such additional theses as may be presented to the meetings, and in the order of their presentation.

FOUR—No business other than the discussion and the voting upon the theses can come before the meeting (except the matter of the DAILY WORKER at the beginning, and the taking of collections to cover the expense), until the matter of voting upon the theses has been disposed of.

FIVE—The rule that only members belonging to the respective C. C. C.'s where the meetings are being held can vote, should be rigidly enforced. Care must be exercised to explain before the meetings that the reason for this rule is that all C. E. C.'s will hold their own meetings and that this rule prevents duplicate voting. Care should be taken of the arrangements at the door so that none may enter the meetings except those entitled under the arrangements.

SIX—As soon as meetings are concluded reports, giving the number of votes cast for each thesis, shall be sent to Chicago by fast telegram.

AUTO-BODY WORKERS STRIKE AGAINST WAGE CUT AT RACINE, WIS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RACINE WIS., Dec. 26.—The body finishers in the Hupmobile body factory at this place got a cut of wage rates of $3.00 on each car.

The workers have refused to accept this reduction of wages and are out on strike.

The company is up against a solid front, and is trying the trick of threatening to bring men from Detroit to scab. Detroit auto workers stay away from Racine! Make the Hupmobile company back up on its wage cuts!

The Hupp Motor company is listed in the 1923 industrial investment guide for capitalists as having made a profit of $3,763,983 on the manufacture of 34,164 cars in 1922, and the profit in 1923 is reported still larger. Auto workers, fight against wage cuts!—Signed, "The Strikers."

BRAZIL REVOLT, DAWES PLAN AND U. S. JOBLESS

May Sound Mixed But They're All One

SAO PAULO, Brazil (by Mail)—There is more than an interesting story in the incidental consequences of the Sao Paulo rebellion, when the rebels retreated into the states of Parana and Matto Grosso.

Desiring to cross the Parana river where the Sorocobana railway bridge had been blown up, their forces were confronted with no large boats to cross the river and follow down it to the Paraguayan border. So the rebels ingeniously cut the whole upper part off of passenger coaches and converted them into barges by turning them upside down, sealing the ventilators and other opening and sailing away down the river.

The "Blessing" of General Dawes.

But here is where international complications appear. And an ominous signal of what these supposed "far away" countries and their struggles mean to workers in America and Europe. The rebels seized or destroyed so much rolling stock of the Sorocobana railway that many new locomotives had to be ordered.

Here enters the little arrangement known as the Dawes plan. German locomotive builders secured the big share of the orders over both British and American bidders. The American locomotive works got orders for nine locomotives of a special type and the Baldwin works got an order for twenty, but the German manufacturers in a bid of $16,000 an engine as against an American bid for $24,000 an engine and received an order for fifty locomotives.

Lessons in Internationalism.

This leaves the underpaid, 10-hour day German workers in none to good a condition to be sure, but it also puts the metal workers of the United States out of job in spite of immigration acts and tariff laws—barring, of course, that the prayer of the metal trades department at El Paso for more and bigger battleships is not arranged to relieve the unemployed in slight measure.

ROSEN, LEFT WING CARPENTER, MAKING GOOD VOTE SHOWING

That the left wing in the Carpenters' Union made an excellent showing in the election is the gist of reports arriving from many locals.

Newark, New Jersey, Local 1782, with 450 members went overwhelmingly for Rosen with the exception of only a handful of Hutcheson's machine followers.

In Yonkers, New York, Local 493 gave the following results: Rosen, 76; Hutcheson 76; Brown, 98. In Erie, Pa, the local gave Rosen 23, Hutcheson 21 and Brown 27.

From the west comes the local at Pocatello Idaho, with 17 for Rosen, and only nine each for Brown and Hutcheson. Rosen everywhere ran splendidly if the union men knew of his policies.

The labor faker Brown who ran to split the opposition vote, succeeded in getting some support by fooling the membership into thinking he was a progressive because he was running against Hutcheson.

Amalgamated Workers Mnst Present Front to Amalgamated Dollars

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, big business is making plans for a whole host of new mergers for the coming year. The 365 days of 1925 are going to be good ones for the great capitalists.

As this year fades combinations and consolidations are rapidly going forward in bakery products, sugar, dyes, natural gas, grain and other products. But the best information tells us that this is only an inkling of what may be expected next year.

The Coolidge administration will do nothing; except to silently acquiesce, in the best style of "Silent Cal."

• • • •

There is a law on the statute books of the nation called the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. It is supposed to prohibit the organization of mighty competition-killing trusts. But it has been used more against labor organizations than against consolidations of great wealth.

It is felt, in the marts of the multi-millionaires, that the results of the last election constitute an edict to proceed with their trustification schemes. The great rich consider it a 100 per cent endorsement of their policies; the biggest of which is to strengthen their position against the working class.

• • • •

But big capitalism is not entirely unafraid. It prepares its campaign with every possible caution. The Coolidge administration at Washington must not start proceedings in the courts; not even fake litigation. That would hurt.

A special Washington dispatch to the Chicago Tribune declares, that, "Any proceeding by the government against large industrial enterprises * * * * leaves the impression on the public mind that big business is the enemy of society."

But, at the same time, the masses must not be allowed to feel that the capitalist government at Washington, D. C., is merely the bond slave of organized dollars. So rumors are carefully circulated thru the subsidized press that the government is on the look out for violators of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. It is stated that the department of justice and the federal trade commission are well informed on the whole situation. A government official is quoted as saying that, "The merging process is going on more rapidly than appears on the surface, and has cropped out in only a comparatively few instances."

• • • •

So the innocent public goes on its innocent way assured that the police dogs of the "trust busters" are on the job.

They never wake up again until they find that some greater merger has been completed, and with the elimination of competition, left the way clear for unimpeded increases in prices.

• • • •

While the so-called public, with its middle class ambitions and prejudices, is thus lulled into slumber, the workers must be jerked wide awake. The concentration of great capital plunges an increasing number of middle class elements into the working class; thus weakening the struggles of the workers, if the ranks of labor are not held together by insoluble ties.

The transportation, mining, metal and other great industries are being drawn more and more under the complete domination of great finance, centered in Wall Street.

The issue of the amalgamation of the organizations of the workers should be of the greatest importance with the coming of the New Year—the year of the greater centralization of capital.

Industry and finance are amalgamating their forces. They will get every possible support from their kept government, at Washington, now in the hands of the Coolidge regime.

The workers must amalgamate. They will face the brutal opposition of the whole capitalist government, bulwarked by reaction in their own ranks. But organized labor must go forward in spite of this strongly entrenched enemy class, with all its supporters. It is amalgamation or annihilation. If there is to be any annihilation, it must be the annihilation of the capitalist class and all its supporters.

BAKERS MUST ABOLISH NIGHT WORK, SAYS T. U. E. L. PAMPHLET

There is no reason why the bakers should be forced to work at night, except the greed of the employers for more profits. Dr. Benzion Liber says in a pamphlet issued by the Trade Union Educational League on the subject of "Bakers and Night Work."

"It is a senseless and entirely unnecessary tradition that bakers must work at night," says Dr. Liber. "What has been possible abroad should not be impossible here. We should be ashamed to be behind Finland, Poland and the Scandinavian countries where night work in bakeries has been totally abolished.

"Do we really want our bread made by people who are inferior and deficient mentally and who are kept away from daylight as well as from intellectual light. Are we satisfied to let them mix their worry, their tragic life, their physical weakness and diseases into our bread?"

Liber declares that the statisticians of the Prudential Insurance Company place the bakers' work on the list of the "unhealthy trades," and they show that between the ages of 15 and 25 the deaths of bakers from tuberculosis of the lungs are nearly 25 per cent of the deaths from all causes. Between the age of 25 and 44 their deaths from tuberculosis are 25 per cent of the deaths from all causes. From the age of 45 and over their deaths from tuberculosis are nearly 11 per cent of the death from all causes.

William Z. Foster, who wrote the preface of this pamphlet, declares night work is ruinous to the health of the workers and is not requisite by the technical nature of the baking industry. On the banners of the food workers' unions everywhere should be placed the slogan, 'Abolition of Nigh Work'.

"In carrying on their struggl against unhealthful night work th bakers are making only a part of th general fight of the working class t preserve its health in the face of th anti-social schemes of exploitation en gineered by the greedy capitalists.

"If the workers are ever to find their way to emancipation they mus combat all these attacks upon thei health by the employing class. A de generate working class will never e tablish the new society. The first re quisite for real battlers, whether o the social, military or any other fiel of battle, is rugged health and virility The bakers must protect their physi al well being in their general fight for a higher standard of living. Nigh work in bake shops must go."

RECIPE FOR WAR: TAKE TWO POUNDS OF IMPERIALISM, ADD PINCH OF NATIONAL HONOR, MIX

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKYO, Dec. 26.—Despite the attitude of the United States, Japan does not regard the immigration issue closed.

Information of a most reliable nature was obtained today, that the Japanese government intends to reopen the question just as soon as it is considered the opportune time.

Wanted: A "Favorable Opportunity"

Foreign minister Shidehara is now engaged in a study of the form of the protest and the method of its presentation. It is believed ambassador designate Matsudaira will take instructions with him to Washington to see the first favorable opportunity to take the matter up with secretary of State Hughes.

The press continually refers to the immigration question, declaring they cannot recognize the United States' professions of friendship as sincere as long as the ban prevails.

The Real Reason.

Only the illegal Japanese Communist Party points out the real nature of this propaganda on "immigration" as a blind for the actual conflict between Japan and the United States arising over the right for control of China.

In Japan, just as in the United States, the imperialists cannot lead the working classes into war by openly telling them that they—the big capitalist-imperialists—want to grab China. In Japan, just as in the United States, the capitalists are making the ground for coming warfare to appear as arising from "national honor."

The Usual War Trap.

The American workers are persuaded that their "national honor" will be ruined if a few hundred Japanese are allowed to come in and work for the railroad companies. The Japanese workers are told that their "national honor" is ruined if these few immigrants are kept out.

A fine big war is brewing, but not about "national honor."

The war will be for the plundering of China. Of couse China has nothing to say about that.

PROGRESSIVES IN PITTSBURGH FORM COUNCIL

To Defend Victims of Coal Operators

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 26—Progressive miners held a conference here last Sunday and decided to wage a determined campaign for the release of the thirty eight victimized miners imprisoned at the Moundsville, West Va., penitentiary for participating in the mine trouble at Clintonville on July 17, 1922.

The trouble started when the operators decided to run the mine non-union. The miners of the Avella section gathered and marched to Clintonville in an effort to convince the strike breakers to join their ranks. As they neared the mine a shot was fired and both miners and mine guards began firing.

Operators' Tool Killed.

Sheriff Duval, a tool of the operators was killed in the melee. Over 200 men were arrested and 43 of them were held for the state for prosecution. The miners were tried before a prejudiced court and a picked jury and sentenced to terms ranging from three to ten years.

Counsel for the defense, advised them to accept trial in a body and plead guilty.

The wife of one of the prisoners attended the defense conference and charged the district officers of the union with betraying the miners of Clintonville.

Organize Committee.

The conference organized the Miners Moundsville Defense Committee with a committee of seven men to direct the defense. William A. Guiler and Pat Toohey were elected chairman and secretary-treasurer respectively. Every local in the district will be visited. Resolutions and petitions are to be immediately spread thru the district.

Locals will be asked to circulate the petitions, adopt the resolutions and contribute money for the defense. Every miner of the Pittsburgh district is urged to communicate with Comrade Toohey and receive petitions and resolutions. One of the prisoners is a Hungarian who cannot talk or read English. Hungarian workers should take note of this.

Workers Party Issues Call for United Sacco-Vanzetti Front

proper resolutions in their unions, fraternal societies and other workingclass organizations and to secure the indorsement of these bodies for the Sacco-Vanzetti campaign and committees for its organization.

It invites all other working class organizations to unite with it on this issue and to arouse the workers from the masses that capitalism will not dare to murder these workers.

It repeats that the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti is the cause of the whole working class.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America urges unity in this struggle and calls the attention of the workers to the manifesto of the Communist International on the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Let us raise the slogan of full freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti!

Let us go forward together in mass protest and show to American capitalism that Sacco and Vanzetti do not stand alone; that aligned with them are millions of workers who understand that their persecution is class persecution no matter how hard the capitalist executioners try to disguise the baseness of their deeds.

Money for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti! Money for legal defense but with the understanding that legal defense without mass protest is useless!

Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed by a jury of millions of their class—the working class for whom they fought and for whom they are sentenced to die.

The united front of all workers will free Sacco and Vanzetti!

Their death will be the signal of our danger and the sign of our shame.

Make Sacco and Vanzetti Day a Red Day for Freedom.

Workers Party of America,

FASCIST PARTY IN SPLIT OVER ELECTION BILL

Communists Expecting Large Gains

ROME, Dec. 26.—A split has occurred within the fascisti party over the bill introduced by Premier Mussolini calling for a new election in March. The extreme "right wing" of the fascisti, led by M. Bianchi, formerly a member of the socialist party, do not want a new election as they feel that the extreme fascisti have little chance of being returned to the chamber of deputies. The extremists have called a convention to take place Sunday, Dec. 28.

The opposition has issued a statement declaring that Mussolini's election is a move to distract attention from the illegalities which have been fastened on the fascisti. The opposition charges that Mussolini wishes to make the election an excuse for declaring general amnesty, which would release the fascists who have been implicated in murders and other violent activities. The opposition further declares that the elections cannot be carried out under the fascist government as the "fascist government and free election are two incompatible terms."

The Communists have issued a statement declaring that the presentation of the bill is a desperate attempt of Mussolini to keep in power, and that the Communists will make large gains in the elections.

BERLIN POLICE CLUB CORRESPONDENTS AT COMMUNIST MEETING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 26.—Three foreign correspondents were injured, one seriously, when the police attacked the crowd that gathered to greet the released German Communist, Erich Muehsman, just released from a Bavarian prison.

The government did not want news of the great demonstration to be sent out over the wires to other countries. When the correspondents showed their cards to the police, they were met by a volley of filthy insults and later on by clubs and rubber sticks.

The worst sufferer from this assault was a Hungarian correspondent for several Scandinavian newspapers. There is much criticism of the police over this affair. The police head is a socialist.

Open Switch Point Derails Locomotive On Passenger Train

GALESBURG, Ill., Dec. 26.—A party open switch point was blamed for the derailment of the locomotive of the Galesburg Peoria passenger train on the Burlington train, at Maquon, 15 miles from here. No one was badly injured. So far no one knows how the switch point came to be open. The company takes advantage of the heavy snow storm at the time and says that the heavily falling snow held the switch point open a distance sufficient to throw the locomotive off the rails. If that assumption were true then snow storms are indeed a tragic event in these parts. If snow storms are known to be responsible for such possible danger to life, then the company had better get busy to insure the necessary action of the switch point at such a time.

A special train was sent from Peoria to take passengers to that city.

FIFTY CHILDREN LOSE HOMES IN TENEMENT FIRE

Families Lose All When Two Flats Burn

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Eighty persons, including fifty children, were forced into the bitter cold of the streets by fire which consumed an eight-family and a four-family tenement on Railroad Ave., Jersey City. Most of the children were in bed when the fire started at 237 Railroad Ave. and were carried to safety wrapped in blankets, comforters and whatever articles of clothing could be found. There were half a dozen children in each family.

The fire spread to the house at 235 Railroad Ave., and the four families there were also forced to flee. The residents of the two tenements lost all their belongings. Neighbors are caring for the fifty children, but they are suffering intensely from the cold.

Lewis Fails to Poll Even One Vote in Cokesburg, Pa., Local

COKEBURG, Pa., Dec. 26.—Local 5071, did not give even one vote to John Lewis in the recent elections. George Voyzey, progressive candidate got 83. The entire progressive slate polled the maximum vote leaving the reactionaries lugging a lone ballot. Lewis did not get even one.

The voting for district officers was equally disastrous to the Lewis machine. Fagan, district president, got only one vote to 83 for his opponent W. A. Guiler. Michael J. Brajdik progressive candidate for vice president, received 84 votes. His two opponents received none.

ATROCITIES AGAINST POLISH WORKERS

(I. W. A. Press Service)

In Poland, which except for Finland is the most reactionary of all the newly created states of Europe, the sole function of the government has been the drilling of soldiers to be used as mercenaries of French capital in contemplated offensives against Soviet Russia—and the persecution of the labor movement.

Workers and poor peasants are incarcerated by the hundreds in Poland. A peaceful meeting of leather workers in Warsaw was raided a few days ago and 150 participants arrested. One hundred participants of a meeting of textile workers in Lodz were arrested and sent to prison. Workers in the Dembrow district, striking against the attempt of the capitalists to violate the eight hour work law were arrested en mass and all their committees committeed to trial.

Workers Beaten to Death.

Educational, cultural and benevolent societies of workers are raided, suppressed and officers committed to prison. Prisoners are murdered in their cells. To escape the danger of acquittal of unlawfully arrested workers, they are kept in prison without trial, for periods of years. Workers like Kalinowsky recently in Warsaw are beaten to death. Lucky are those who get a chance ever to emerge again from the all-devouring hell of a police rest. Workers are murdered by police in public meetings.

The present Polish government is based not on a "democratic" desire of the masses but continues its existence only by political persecution and murder.

Reaction reigns supreme in Europe. The capitalist class has everywhere stripped itself of all incumbrances of "humanitarianism." In the newly created countries, where the ruling classes feel themselves weakest, the attack of reaction is strongest. Therefore it is significant that the Baltic states and some of the Balkan countries march at the head of the procession of governments, trying to preserve their existence by incarceration and murder of their political enemies. In the same ratio as their enemies grow, the persecution grows and the white terror increases. Self-government in all these countries is made the farce it really is, and autocracy of big capital operates without disguise.

The organization for internationa' red aid calls upon workers everywhere to come to the aid of the tortured workers of Poland and elsewhere. These victims of capitalist persecution suffer for the cause of labor everywhere. Let labor everywhere respond to their call for aid. The American section of International Red Aid has its offices at 19 South Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

Carlson's Lectures in Capitol City Bring Splendid Response

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 26.—Fifty persons filled the Labor Lyceum, the regular meeting hall of the Workers Party, in this city, at which time Comrade Oliver Carlson delivered the second lecture of the season. That considerable interest is taken in these lectures was obvious from the questions and comments which followed the address.

Comrade Carlson traced the development of mankind from primitive savagery thru the various stages of slavery and outlined the materialistic causes which were responsible for the various periods thru which man has lived.

The speaker outlined the course which his lectures will take thruout the season and distributed a synopsis of last week's lecture and a bibliography which will be useful to the students. That the members are sincerely interested is shown by the fact that every copy of the books ordered the previous week were sold at the meeting.

Question Traction Muddle.

The city council sidetracked an order presented by Alderman Arthur Albert, commanding of the corporation counsel when the negotiations will be completed with local transportation companies for a municipally owned traction system. Albert wanted to know when better transportation can be expected for Chicago. The order was referred to the transportation committee.

The Pope's Problems

Pope Pius may have gotten a kick out of reading his diatribe against Soviet Russia in the capitalist press recently and also the editorial compliments showered on his hypocritical head by the editorial hirelings of capitalism. But there are happenings not so conducive to the mental calm of the alleged earthly ambassador of the mythical Saint Peter.

The French government is waging war on the papal agents who are supported by the royalists and the extreme reactionaries. The public school system without religious worship has been forced on Alsace Lorraine and Paris has made no further provision for the continuation of the French embassy at the Vatican.

In Spain the liberal elements who would like to see King Alfonso's lascivious mouth chewing on a sharp bayonet, have not the warmest feelings for the pope. When they topple Alfonso from his throne they intend to cut a lot of priests and other religious parasites off the payroll. The liberals do not like to share the loot wrung from the toil of the working class with any other group of thieves. They want it all for themselves. If Alfonso was wiser he might have the liberals on his side. He does not know how to share the loot judiciously, or perhaps there is not enough to go around. But that is a digression.

If the pope looks across the Atlantic, he will find nothing but trouble facing him, after he passes Palm Beach on his way south. Not so very long ago the Mexican government gave a papal conspirator his walking papers.

In the Argentine a papal ambassador is held up pending examination of his credentials which he refuses to submit to the proper authorities. Hard words have been hurled at the pope's envoy in the southern republic and unless His Holiness is less sensitive to abuse than is proper for one who has such a high opinion of himself, we are of the opinion that he will need some of Mussolini's castor oil to regulate his system.

The attack on Soviet Russia may have relieved him somewhat, but the rising tide of opposition to his black shirt ally, Mussolini, is another black blurb on the horizon. His Holiness is entirely surrounded by trouble. If he is depending on us for sympathy, he is out of luck.

Fascist Tide Ebbs

Faced with a split in the ranks of his supporters, terrified by the growing strength of the opposition, Mussolini is on the defensive and little of the bravado that characterized his earlier utterances is discernible in his latest statement.

He is going to "choose a favorable moment for the elections," he tells his disgruntled followers, but there will be no favorable moment for the Italian fascisti. They may secure a parliamentary majority, but it will mean little. The masses of the Italian workers are in motion. They have seen and endured the full power of fascism and they are no longer frightened by the braggadocio of its spokesmen.

Fascism had the task that every exploiters' government faces—It had to improve economic conditions of the masses and stabilize capitalism—it had to build an economic basis for its bayonets and this is an impossible task for any government in Europe that seeks to preserve capitalism.

The tide of fascism in Italy is running out. In comes the tide of Communism and another great struggle will take place when these conflicting currents meet in the final clash. Communism is virile and fights with history on its side. Fascism is decrepit and tries to stop the relentless march of historical development.

Greetings to the "Freiheit"

The "Freiheit," Jewish Communist daily, will celebrate the issuance of its one thousandth number with a celebration on New Year's Eve. This affair will be held at the 69th Regiment Armory, 25th St. and Lexington Ave., New York.

Our Jewish comrades are to be congratulated on their success in guiding their fighting revolutionary daily thru the many trials that confronts such a paper under the most favorable conditions. But when we realize that the "Freiheit" has encountered the fierce opposition of the bureaucrats of the needle trades unions and by that champion yellow socialist political pervert Abraham Cahan and his daily Forward, the fact that it is in the field and going strong is excellent testimony to the devotion of our comrades to their splendid paper and is the best guarantee for the future.

The DAILY WORKER extends greetings to its sister Communist Daily and our readers are urged to give the "Freiheit" celebration their support.

Every day get a "sub" for the DAILY WORKER and a member for the Workers Party.

Immediate Returns

To workers who are modest about demanding a high wage promptly paid, we commend the example of William Morgan Butler, erstwhile campaign manager for Calvin Coolidge. The votes have hardly been counted when Colonel Butler is discovered in Washington with a demand for a higher tariff on the products of his textile mills and those of his colleagues in the profitable enterprise of exploiting the labor of children.

Colonel Butler may have a high regard for Calvin Coolidge and this may have spurred him on to do his best as campaign manager, but the little matter of juicy pickings to be had from higher taxtile tariffs was a much greater incentive. Nor has the colonel been hesitant in demanding his reward. He feels that the laborer is worthy of his hire when employed in a vineyard where the grapes hang well within reach and in such juicy clusters.

"The unimpeachable integrity" of William Morgan Butler was a great propaganda slogan in the Coolidge press. He is a great capitalist and therefore could not be actuated by any desire for sordid gain, but his immediate proposal to cash in on the victory of his protege is more added to the mountain of proof that office holders receive the support of capitalists because their loyalty means money in the pocket for the fat-paunched parasites.

Lese Majesty

There is a gentleman in Philadelphia known as General Butler. His job is to clean up the city, which means closing blind pigs, saloons that ignore the Volstead law, houses where female virtue is on sale and no credit given. How well he has done the job is not yet apparent. But he has been there now for more than a year and "evil" seems to be holding its own.

The general being a public character, he becomes a target for criticism, ridicule, compliments, and any other form of intellectual diversion the populace may see fit to indulge in. But our generals are getting rather testy. It was once the privilege of "American citizens" to poke fun at their elected "superiors," but the good old days are gone, unless Simple Simon, LaFollette and his merry men bring them back in the next presidential election.

In Philadelphia, also known as the Quaker City, it is customary to have a mummers' parade on New Year's day. This parade usually burlesques current events, but the political hide of General Butler is so sensitive that he had orders issued to the mummers prohibiting ridicule of himself or his police. It looks as if our "democracy" is badly battered.

The Left Wing Grows

In our news columns we have been publishing stories of the election in the United Mine Workers of America that completely support our statement that a great revival of the militant left wing spirit is in evidence in that organization.

Where the left wing was organized the Lewis slate was beaten and even in many localities headed the poll. With all the crookedness of officialdom, their control of the union machinery, with widespread vote stealing and resort to fraud and intimidation of every kind, it is impossible for the Lewis machine to conceal the presence of a rank and file revolt of huge proportions.

In Kansas ninety per cent of the district voted for Howat while in the anthracite fields more than 20,000 miners have defied Lewis and his tools because of a long list of grievances against the operators that the officialdom refuses to adjust. In Illinois the Farrington machine has had the fight of its life and here, in the largest district in the union, the left wing is a real power.

The fight is just starting. Considering the youth of the R. I. L. U. section and the solidly entrenched machine when it began its activities, it has done wonders.

Not only in the United Mine Workers but in other unions the left wing, by dozens of its activities, shows its increasing strength. The campaigns and programs of the left wing groups have attracted the support of thousands of workers in the carpenters', steel workers', needle trades' and machinists' unions. The R. I. L. U. program offers the only hope for these workers and more of them are realizing it.

John Scurr, labor party member in the British house of commons, questioned the government's Indian policy. He urged the tories to adopt a wiser course. Note, the labor faker did not favor giving the Hindoos independence. He favored giving them soothing syrup instead of bayonets, and bayonets only when the syrup failed. It is well to remember that under the regime of Ramsay Mac Donald 253,000 Hindoo rebels were imprisoned.

That flourishing Chicago industry, the production of gunmen, has developed to the point where it is on an expert basis. According to dispatches from San Francisco, twenty-five of the Windy City automatic artists have been sent there to protect the holiday supply of hooch.

That the domestic market was overstocked is shown by the long list of homocides in the gunman colony recently.

According to late reports on the recent elections in Germany the Communists gained in Prussia and in the heavy industrial sections with a few exceptions. They lost only places where the white terror prevented the Communists from voting.

American financiers have $10,000,000,000 invested abroad now. Foreign countries borrowed $1,100,000,000 during the first eleven months of this year. That tells a tale.

BUTLER TAKES ADVANTAGE OF BUTLER'S LAW

Buys Stool Pigeons and President

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 27—"Blessed be the flexible provisions"—such is the tune sung by the cotton trust corporations led by none other than Wm. Morgan Butler, who, you will recall, was the campaign manager for "Silents Cal."

Immediately after the holiday recess, the cotton trust will come before the congress with a proposal for higher duties on cotton goods. This is a joint demand of both the New England mills, headed by Butler of stool-pigeon fame, and the Carolina mills, which are now in close combination with Butler.

The claim is that a higher tariff is necessary to start the mills now closed and keep them going. This "relief" otherwise called robbery is asked under the "flexible provisions" of the Fordney-McCumber tariff act.

Side Line For Stool Pigeons.

This act, it will be remembered, was passed after committee hearings had been listening to "union men" from the New Bedford Textile Council ask for higher tariff to protect "labor." It happened afterward, that the DAILY WORKER exposed these witnesses as stool-pegeons in the union under pay of Wm. Morgan Butler, who had them to go down to Washington as a side line to spying on the unions in Butler's mills.

Now, Mr. Butler, who is president of the National Association of Cotton fanufacturers, declares innocently that cotton manufacturers should avail themselves of the nice "flexible provisions" of the Fordney-McCumber act.

It is not expected that President Coolidge will veto any tariff increase on Butler's line of cotton goods. What does Butler buy a president for, anyhow?

When you buy, get an "Ad."

New English Branch In Philadelphia Shows Very Promising Signs

The Kensington English branch is now definitely formed and is getting right down to work. Regular meetings will be held at southwest corner Frankford Ave. and Chesterfield St. second floor. This is right in the heart of Kensington and it looks as if it is going to become a real revolutionary center.

This section of the town was once a stronghold of the rebel elements within the socialist party and was always a thorn in the side of the Hillquit-Berger dynasty. During the time of the split between the right wing that remained in the S. P., and the left wing which formed the base for the Communist movement, many of them drifted apart mostly dropping out altogether because their "revolutionary thought" was mostly dissatisfaction with the reformism that dominated the S. P. But now that the Communist movement has been definitely crystallized into the Workers (Communist) Party and is recognized as the only revolutionary leader there is no doubt but that most of them will take their place in its ranks and help blast the road to the overthrow of capitalism.

Meetings will take place regularly the second and fourth Thursday of each month. Entrance is on Frank ford Ave.

FIGHT FOR THE FUTURE!

By JAMES H. DOLSEN,
Organizer, District 13.

No more far-sighted plan could have been devised than that of INSURING our daily paper for 1925, and it is worthy of every comrade's wholehearted support. The launching of such a campaign shows that we are facing facts and using our common sense in solving problems.

This district (No. 13, California) will do its utmost to contribute its quota, despite the burden it has had of maintaining also a local paper and despite also the distance which separates us from our national headquarters. Personally, I shall emphasize the importance of this drive at every opportunity.

In my opinion, the DAILY WORKER is the very heart of our organization. It has done more to make us a real factor in the life of the American working class than any other weapon we possess. Its revolutionary attitude is bringing ever closer a large group of sympathizers who look to it for information and guidance.

It is the DAILY WORKER which will make possible the growth of an English-speaking Communist movement in America. Every comrade must get behind our Daily for the BIG PUSH!

THE END OF THE PACIFIST ERA

The Defeat of MacDonald and Its Consequences for England Itself.

By A. MASLOW.

To seek to attribute the annihilating defeat of MacDonald solely to the anomalous, obsolete English election system is childish. A whole number of factors have contributed to this defeat.

Numerically regarded, the defeat of the first English "labor government" is, at the first glance, not great. The proportion of the votes cast by the conservative party and the labor party respectively are as 6 to 8½. But in spite of this these figures prove on closer inspection, to be crushing for the labor government.

For the masses of the electors consist of workers, of compact masses of workers, who, in the cities, as for instance, in Birmingham, have overwhelmingly voted for the conservates. What is the reason for this?

It can be regarded as a rule that masses who are not politically trained and steeled do not think of supporting a government which has not done something definite for them.

This was the experience in Russia; not only with Kerensky, but in many struggles in Siberia, in the Ukraine, in Caucasus. This was the experience in 1923 with the "workers' government" in Saxony, where the proletariat entirely failed to defend "its" government against the Reichswehr, precisely because it had experienced nothing to show that it was "its" government.

The MacDonald government had given nothing to the broad masses of the English workers. Not even good propaganda. Therefore, there remained nothing else for the broad masses of English workers, with their imperialist tradition and their petty-bourgeois ideology, than to act like real gentlemen, to be responsive to the oratory of the conservatives, the more so when the well-aimed bomb of the forged Zinoviev letter exploded. It appealed to their British sentiments: "The first people in the world," "the freest people, and here was interference on the part of the barbarian, undemocratic and unmoral Soviet government," "we want to promote English trade, not to give our money to untrustworthy undemocratic despots, who in return incite our brave soldiers and blue jackets to mutiny," and such like cheap appeals.

This was to be seen on one side. On the other hand there was the increase in the votes cast for the labor party. That means that the English working class is becoming politically conscious and more revolutionary. In fact there was no more radical party in the elections than the labor party. The eight Communists do not count. And in spite of its miserable policy this party gained votes at the election. This shows that class antagonisms in England have increased, are increasing, and will continue to increase.

The new conservative government in England will no more be able to solve the chief question, the question of unemployment, than did the labor party. On the other hand, the Baldwin government will soon restore the McKenna duties (upon sugar, tea and coffee) and thereby abolish the only cheapening of food stuffs achieved by Snowden's budget. Tariff reform will follow, the notorious preference for the dominions upon tinned salmon, plums, apples, dried fruit, etc., and then of course, there will come tariffs on industrial products, and probably also on corn and wheat. A fierce struggle will flame up against these tariffs and against the increase of prices.

Secondly, the conservative government will abolish the Wheatley housing scheme. This act was a pure swindle; it provided for the building of two and a half million houses at the cost of the state and municipal authorities during the course of 15 years. But the labor party will make a virtue of necessity and mobilize the workers against this abolition of the housing scheme.

Thirdly, the conservatives will conduct a campaign against the unemployed maintenance.

Fourthly, they will set up fascist organizations in order to crush any rebellious working masses. (They will have no opportunity of discharging "socialist" officials, as the labor government did not appoint any, but took over the old conservative apparatus as it stood.)

The inner political effects will undoubtedly be a strong revolutionizing of the working class, an enormous increase of class antagonisms, and at the same time a differentiation within the working class, which will proceed much more rapidly than in the last nine months.

The workers now have a new character, a program of demands for which they will fight. These demands are unacceptable for the conservatives. Nationalization of the railways, mines and banks, a 44-hour week, a legal minimum wage—all this will not be granted by any conservative government. Nowhere will they be thereby compelled to it. The carrying out of even these inadequate and incomplete demands means the death of English capitalism. A fight, a real fight over them is a fight for life and death.

This fight stands on the order of the day. This does not mean that English capitalism will be "settled" tomorrow or the day after. But this means that in England the struggle for the ending of capitalism has begun. And this means a great deal, and pushes the whole international labor movement a stage forward.

Everything at present is in a state of flux. Singapore, the greatest naval base in the world, the link between Africa, Asia, Australia, and America, will be renewed and will immediately raise three questions: the attitude of the dominions to the mother country and of the mother country to the dominions; the attitude of England to the United States and vice versa; the attitude of England to Japan and vice versa.

Another example: Mosul. Here a policy of prestige can lead very rapidly to a great war.

A third example: Egypt. The Egyptian question can very easily become a French or Franco-Italian question. For the Egyptian opposition can be used as a pretext so to strengthen the Mediterranean fleet that it would not be tolerated by France.

All these possible difficulties render it improbable that the English conservative government will create unnecessary difficulty by withdrawing the recognition of the Soviet Union.

But the treaty will certainly not be ratified. Even if the government wished, they could not ratify it in the face of the election campaign, which was waged against the treaty. There will therefore be new negotiations, prolonged negotiations; the conservatives will practice the strategy of wearing down their opponent.

The new era which is now beginning will be an era of unrest, of mistrust of one government by the other, of sham conferences, of secret agreements, of diplomatic intrigues, of increased war preparations.

What is the task of our Communist Party in England? It was rightly pointed out that its tasks and its possibilities of development were especially great during the "democratic-pacifist" era. This era is at an end. The tasks however, not only remain, but have grown.

Broad work of enlightenment among the masses. Energetic rallying of the workers for the demands of the Hull congress or even "only" the election manifesto of the labor party, which the leaders will of course let drop. Creation of factory councils. Rallying of all active elements in the trade unions. Penetration into local organizations of the labor party. Organization of the fight against the fascist organisations which are arising. Recruitment of members, extension of the press with the view to setting up a Communist daily paper with a mass circulation. Energetic propaganda of Communism—these are the tasks of our party in England.

And Still They Come.

WILKESBARE, Pa., Dec. 26.—The official vote of the Workers Party candidates in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania was as follows: Presidential ticket, 58 votes; for state treasurer 41 votes; for auditor general, 351 votes.

heavy labor gain. The labor victory would be construed by the working class as a defeat for capitalism on the two important issues which preceded the elections; the Campbell case and the Soviet loan. These were fighting issues for us.

"WHAT was to be done? We knew well that the Communist International is conducting propaganda in England thru the British Communist Party. We knew that it favors a republic in Ireland and is giving as much aid and comfort to the Hindoos, Egyptians and the peoples in our other colonies as it can. When we protest against this kind of thing publicly and express much moral indignation, the Soviet government gets equally excited over our maneuvers in Georgia and our relations with the Menshiviks. It is the game, sir. We did not have any Zinoviev letter, but we had one drawn up almost fast as good. It was so good that it fooled Ramsay MacDonald, the 'that' gentleman was willing enough to be fooled.

"MACDONALD made the mistake of attacking the Soviet government and affirming his belief in the authenticity of the letter. That played into our hands. His false statements protesting doubt did not matter. It was his first comment that counted. We scared small business stiff. We got big business fighting mad. Millions of workers who were wavering in their allegiance came over to us fearing revolution if the respectable MacDonald party were returned. The forgery, (a rather crude name) did its work. Now that the elections are over, it makes little difference whether its authenticity was proven or not. But genuine Communist propaganda looks so much like the fake letter that the average person could not detect it."

* * *

THE journalist never heard such a frank confession by a government official before. He was shocked. The story grinned and said, "If you published what I have told you and I denied its authenticity, it would spell your ruin not mine." The journalist did not publish the story. He told it to his friends.

The Pan-American Federation of Labor

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

CAPITALISM in its early stages used as its advance guard missionaries. Now, in its imperialistic stage, it sends in labor leaders. Both serve the same purpose. The former used the cloak of religion, opened and closed their meetings with prayer, and, between times, beguiled the poor heathen into accepting christian faith and exploitation. The latter use the cloak of national patriotism, urges capitalist democracy, substitutes the Communist for the devil, Communism for hell, and betrays the workers into the maws of imperialistic exploitation.

The Pan-American Federation of Labor convention held in Mexico City, Dec. 3-9, struggled for seven days, advancing the interest of American imperialism at the same time making a bold pretense of representing labor. No organization in the world of labor has been so frank in its support of imperialism, American imperialism as against British or European imperialism.

No convention of labor ever held in America has had brought before it such heart-rending stories of misery and sufferings of whole nations—of savage tortures by the rack, the whipping post, the hanging by thumbs of workers who dared to lift their voices against their oppressors. Yet, nothing was done except the usual procedure followed by every congress of this alleged labor organization—referred to the executive committee for further investigation.

The delegate from Guatemala entered a vigorous protest during the last hours of the congress. It was in reality a summary of the work of the congress and a last minute cry of protest. He said, "You have referred all resolutions which show the deplorable conditions of the Latin-American workers, who are suffering under the iron heel of American imperialism, to the executive committee for further investigation. I am sure that they will sleep soundly in the archives of this organization. Even if you could not accept the resolutions calling for the withdrawal of American troops from Latin-America, or to fight against the Platt amendment, or the other resolutions which call for action, surely you can go on record at least against the death penalty and the tortures of political prisoners.

"We are sufferers; we know the conditions; we present to you the facts; we ask for definite action, and you give us words—nothing but words. We cannot fight Yankee imperialism that way."

This intrepid delegate from Guatemala, his liberty endangered by the mere fact that he attended the congress, was the subject of a vicious attack by one of the socialist delegates from Mexico and by our own liberty-loving John P. Frey, the man who tried his best to have Tom Mooney hanged. The socialist condemned the Guatemalian delegation for asking the organization to do for them what they ought but could not do for themselves. That it was against all common sense for the delegate to ask the withdrawal of troops from any country, then invite other forces to interfere with the internal questions of Central America.

"The delegate from Guatemala," continued this Calles socialist, "evidently does not know the policies and principles of this organization. This congress is not an instrument to be used against the enemy in each country. We exert only a moral influence." He admitted that capitalism was international, but that the Pan-American federation was opposed to outside interference. Their object was to help the labor movement of all countries morally, whatever that may be, so that they might be better able to combat the common enemy. The actual work, however, had to be done by the affiliated national unions within the boundaries of their own countries.

Frey, after accusing the delegates in English, which they did not understand and which Senator Iglesias, the official interpreter, deliberately misrepresented, that they had not appeared before the committee and presented their case, altho invited to do so—later in the day this crude juggler presented a document to the convention which he said had been submitted by the Guatemalian delegates explaining in detail the terrible conditions of the working class of that country. Then he asked the convention, with hypocritical solicitation, not to compel him to read it, or make it a part of the minutes, on the grounds that to do so would jeopardize the liberty of those who introduced it. He urged that it become a confidential informative document for the benefit of the executive committee, which of course, was the action taken.

Unquestionably, the document and the very presence of the delegates at the congress endangered their liberty. But the statement that there existed such a document was just as bad as if it had been read. In fact, the Guatemalian ambassador, thru the capitalist press of Mexico City, denied that conditions in his country were not as stated by the delegates. He did not say that he had seen the document, but it was an official warning to these delegates to return to that country at their own risk. The real motive of Frey in not wanting the document read was to keep back from the delegates the unpleasant truth that it was the United Fruit Growers' Association, and other American capitalist groups backed by the United States government, who were the cause of all the misery suffered by these unfortunate workers.

He expressed surprise that the delegate from Guatemala expected this organization to interfere with any government, and frankly admitted that it was not the purpose of the Pan-American Federation of Labor to try to compel any government to do anything that it did not want to do. That was for the unions in their own country to decide.

The Guatemalian delegate accepted this interpretation of the principles and purposes of the Pan-American federation. Altho he stated that international capital could only be fought successfully by international labor forces, he would, however, ask that the North American delegates within their own country demand the withdrawal of American troops from all Latin-American countries, that they fight for the abrogation of the Platt amendment, that they bring all their power to bear upon their government to the end that their government should not recognize any Latin-American republic that refused to grant the workers the right to organize, the right to strike, free speech, free press, and freedom of assembly. However, his appeal, logical and powerful, had no effect upon this hand-picked convention.

In order that the peacefulness of the next congress should not be disturbed in this manner, it was decided that the Central American Federation of Labor, a paper organization set up by Gompers, shall represent the five Central American republics.

The delegate from Santo Domingo, an exiled liberal and now a practicing physician in El Paso, Texas, presented numerous resolutions for all of which substitutes were offered referring the subject matter to the executive council for further investigation. They were written in the strongest kind of language, showing that the conquest of this republic was in the interest of the sugar trust, and that the United States government had set up Harry H. Lee as military governor for the purpose of stealing the fertile valley of Taximero, the water power and the general control of industries and commerce of the country.

He pointed out that the Hughes-Payneda so-called evacuation treaty, was one of annexation and future intervention. He showed that the last so-called popular election was conducted under a reign of terror. That the president elected was a tool of American imperialism elected by United States bayonets, warships, and marines. That the conditions laid down in the Hughes-Payneda treaty made legal all military acts which of course, included the land steals. Payneda, supposed to represent the people in the signing of this treaty, is chief council to the Barrowhead Sugar company with a salary of $12,000 per year.

The resolution pointed out that the military occupation of their country had been carried out without any declaration of war. That since the occupation, free speech, press, the right to organize and strike, had been abolished. The delegate presenting the resolution pointed out that he had served six months in prison for saying that the Hughes-Payneda treaty was one of annexation, slavery, starvation, and death, and now he is an exile from his country. He protested rather meekly about the light manner in which the committee had treated his resolution. He has yet to learn that the Pan-American Federation of Labor is part and parcel of the very forces which he is raising his voice against.

The same kind of treatment was handed the Panama delegation, with a little more special attention paid to them behind the scenes. It would have been very hard to explain, outside the United States, that one of the conditions laid down by Gompers in the subjugation of Latin-America by American capital, is that American workers in the canal zone must have a monopoly of the higher paid jobs, and that there must be a difference in favor of the American wage slave over that of the native of between 20 to 35 per cent in wages, and that the native must not be allowed to rise above the grade of laborer or messenger.

These delegates made no secret of their objection to the discrimination against them in the zone and in the republic itself. They, however, have had very little experience in the labor movement. It is difficult for them to believe that men will betray them with a smile, and with such beautiful abstract phrases as liberty, freedom, democracy, brotherhood, and good will. Their representative was appointed on the committee on officers' reports, and committee on rules. This placed him under the subtle influence of the Crown Prince Matthew Woll, with the result that they did not present their case to the convention, and what they came to fight for was planted peacefully in the "further investigation" committees' burial ground. This delegation and the Guatemala delegation were the only real working class representatives in the convention. The Panamainans were fooled. Their disillusionment will come very quickly.

Even a mild resolution presented by the A. F. of L.'s most powerful ally, the C. R. O. M., calling upon the congress to go on record for an exchange of union cards between them and the United States and urging that steps be taken to bring this about, was side-tracked by the usual substitute that it be referred this time to the international unions. Everything that smacked of stepping an inch along the path of progress was squelched. While every reactionary resolution that more firmly tied the organization to the American imperialistic machine was endorsed.

The A. F. of L. delegation quite naturally presented almost every reactionary resolution to the congress. Amongst them were ones urging the unions to petition their government for union representation in the Pan-American union, so that the countries in the western hemisphere could better solve their international problems. Thus officially offering labor's services in the enforcement of the Monroe Doctrine, and in the next world's war in the interest of American imperialism. They also urged that organized labor in all American republics demand representation in the Pan-American financial conference, which is one of the technical organizations for the more thoro exploitation of Latin-America, and to demand of their government that union representatives be attached to all consulates. This is without doubt, the most brutal and complete voluntary surrender to capitalism ever recorded in the annals of labor history.

Resolutions praising so-called liberal labor governments, such as Mexico, Columbia, Nicaragua, were endorsed without referring to the further investigation committee. A liberal or a labor government in the eyes of this congress is where American capitalism has imposed its imperialistic will upon the people to the extent that a government controlled by it has been elected. A letter from Secretary of State Hughes, showing that Santa Domingo had a popular and democratic government was used by Gompers to offset the facts presented by the Domican delegates. The only seeming purpose of this fake labor congress was to stifle the cries of the exploited and enslaved workers of Latin-America in the interest of American capital.

The congress itself was a tragic farce. The financial report only showed the United States, Mexico, and Santa Domingo affiliated. Over $29,000 was spent since the last congress and this is the result. Three affiliations out of 22 republics. But in order to make it a little more realistic, delegates were seated that had no more right to represent the particular country they were supposed to come from than I had. As an example, two brothers Salamon and Rogerio de LaSelva represented Nicaragua. Both of them are citizens of Mexico, one has a political job in the munition factory of which Morones was head. The other, until lately, was magistrate in the city of Mexico. Both are minor leaders in the labor party of Mexico. One of them made a hurried trip to Nicaragua at the expense of the Pan-American Federation of Labor in order that he could at least say, if questioned, that he had just come from there. Outside of Guatemala and Panama there was no delegation that was elected by the labor movement that they were supposed to represent.

The usual Communist baiting was a part of the congress' work. This was done in order to satisfy Gompers. And because of the real opposition that Morones finds in the Mexican Mexican first lieutenant, opened and closed the congress with an anti-Com-

Thesis on the Economic and Political Situation and Strategy and Tactics of the Workers Party

Submitted by JOSEPH BRAHDY

A. The International Development.

1. National political economy shows as a basis for national imperialism the organization within each (national) state of financial capital, industrial capital and working population.

2. The latest phase of social and political development is international imperialism. The United States with half the world's gold supply and power equipment in its possession, with a world net debt of many billion dollars in its favor, is commanding directly many important colonial and semi-colonial territories: Latin America, especially the sections around the Caribean Sea, possessions in the Pacific Ocean, and in a way also Germany.

3. England and France, owing to the United States several billion dollars, are exercising internationally the functions of national industrial capital, under the overlordship of the United States as the international finance-capitalist power. In the capitalist world outside of United States, England and France represent with their armies, navies, air force, merchant marine, mining and metallurgy more than half of these important elements of international political economy. They have under their direct influence Australia, nearly all of Africa, half of Asia, and most of Central Europe; their indirect influence goes farther.

4. The colonial and semi-colonial countries represent internationally the units corresponding to the working population within the state.

5. The U. S. S. R. (Soviet Russia) breaks into this international economy as a politically independent and economically more and more self-sustaining unit of one-twelfth of the world's population upon one-sixth of the world's surface. It represents the political economy of the prietariat and its revolution, as against the one of capitalist imperialism and its reacion and counter-revolution.

6. Imperfectly but definitely we see international organizations developing as the equivalent of national political parties, with a like tendency to concentrate: a) The western allies supreme war council); the Amsterdam Trade Union International; the Second (Socialist) International; the League of Nations with the World Court. aa) The Central Powers; the 2½ International (recruited largely from these states. (The units of group aa) have merged or are merging into group a)). b) The Pan-American Conference (U. S. A.); the Pan-American Federation of Labor (A. F. of L.); the Dawes commission. c) The difficulty in the rapproachement between groups a) and b) is impeded by the fact that the capitalist center of gravity of these groups would be in group b) and the labor center in group a.) e) The U. S. S. R., the C. I. the R. I. L. U., the Peasants and Farmers International. d) The tendencies of the capitalist elements within this series to coalesce at times and to some degree, as against the labor elements, has its counter part, e. g. in American politics where we have farm blocs, the C. P. P. A., etc., of republicans and democrats; foreshadowing a re-alignment upon inevitable economic lines as against the original purely organizational lines.

7. The acuteness of the class struggle both on the national and international scale is driving the world forces of both, reaction and revolution, into more intense preparation for the coming conflict. The present period does not give either of the two forces a substantial net gain in the capitalist countries; it represents generally a quick succession of victory and defeat on both, the economic and political field.

B. Economic Conditions in the U. S. of A.

8. To judge our economic conditions it would be necessary to have authentic figures on productivity, production, reserve stocks, employment, wages, standard of living, etc. So far our department of research has not been in the position to furnish such data from reliable sources. The best it could do was to reprint occasionally such data as are available in bourgeois publications.

9. Like all other information from those sources more than 90 per cent of it is pretense, bias, fraud, or mere piffle. If we are to judge by such political and international information as we can check up, we should take very little stock in these data.

10. Particularly provoking is the pseudo-scientific manner in which political statements in American Communist literature are based upon 2,000,000 unemployed, or 6,000,000 unemployed, at one time or another, as indicating normal employment, or a crisis, or what not. Not the slightest effort is made to come to an understanding what an "unemployed" in America really is. As a result even the two official theses bring contradictory data on unemployment.

11. The outstanding and undisputed factors which characterize our post-war period are the following.

12. Two years of prosperity due to fake war orders and replacement of industrial equipment; two years of consequent depression; followed by two years of normalcy.

13. Rural employment is constantly diminishing for the following reasons: a) Progressive industrialization of agriculture and mechanization of transport. b) Russia's re-entrance into the world market; the extent to which Russia will cut into American agricultural export has been somewhat obscured by the effect of the famine of 1921 and the internationally poor harvest of 1924, coupled with a $40,000,000 of purchase of cotton in America. With its program for the raising of cotton to cover soon a substantial part of its own requirement and a grain surplus available for export to Western Europe which even in the present state of Russian agriculture a normal harvest would yield; the U. S. A. is on the way of losing much of its grain and cotton export to Europe. As it is, the agricultural crisis has already driven hundreds of thousands of farmers with their families from the farms into the cities.

C. Political Conditions in the U. S. A.

14. The following economic groups are seeking to express their interests politically:

a) Big business—is for "no politics in business"—for a big army and navy—for protection of foreign investments.

b) Little business—is "against the trusts"—for low taxes and cheap government. Both are for low wages and long hours.

c) Labor bureaucracy—is for "no politics in the union" (except such as they themselves introduce, or when they need the help of the state to put down a revolting membership)—for wages as high and hours as short as can be gotten, without fighting for it.

d) Labor aristocracy—is for high wages and short hours—but they usually already have these conditions, and are on general principle opposed to change.

e) Poor farmers—are for low taxes and a low rate of interests—cheap elevator and railroad charges—high prices for their produce—low wages.

f) Wage workers—for high wages, and short hours.

15. It would be very naive to assume that there is a consistent line from right to left as would proceed from group a) down to f).

Politically the middle class, professional, industrial and rural have often furnished the most liberal and progressive elements. They are for civil liberties; and at the same time for economic slavery of the workers.

The poor employing farmers have very much in common with them; from them leads a straight line to the poor working farmer. While they are not economically interested in exploitation, yet they are prejudiced against high wages in industry because that makes for the high cost of industrial products which they need. And, they are in favor of high prices for their own produce, which then contributes to the high cost of living of the wage workers. They are in a bad way historically.

16. Every now and then a man who is losing out in the game of big politics, like Bryan, Roosevelt or LaFollette comes along and wants to capitalize their resentment against the law of economic evolution. But politically as well as economically they are marching from one failure to another. These groups are continually declining in importance—intellectually economically, politically, organizatory and numerically.

D. The Political Parties in the U. S. A.

17. Big business wants big profits; these are procured on the economic field thru wage slavery and imperialism, and secured politically thru a pretense of democracy and the substance of the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie.

18. The labor bureaucracy is fairly satisfied with its social position of procurers for the real masters of the country; eunuchs who have sold their manhood. It is their function to frighten their wards into the belief that they are protecting them both from the too greedy masters in the industry, as well as from the "outlaw" who would unreasonably stir up strife in the industry. The labor bureaucracy is usually satisfied with a small commission from big business; but the bigger the business the bigger the commission.

19. The labor aristocracy is potentially somewhat uneasy. They can live comfortably on the pay they make—while working; but not too well. And often the men are not working. But considering the fact that they are better off than 80 per cent of the people they prefer Coolidge to Chaos.

20. The wage worker that rests his case not with any privileged group but with his class constitutes the left wing, both economically and politically.

21. Substantially labor bureaucracy's economic interests are politically expressed thru the parties of big business. Such difference as does exist between those two groups is usually expressed in either one or both of the following ways: One the one hand they are usually with the democratic party as the smaller one of the two big parties; on the other hand they are for the "left wing" within either party.

This suffices as a popular concession: and it is quite an elastic method.

22. Small business (farmers, subcontractors, manufacturers, store-and restaurant-keepers, even small bankers) are losing the economic race, so it tries to take it out of the hide of the workers. They are really taskmasters of big business, and develop all the characteristics that come from such function: cringing compliance with the imposition of their superiors, and a ferocious, cunning oppression of the workers under their immediate control. But they are still losing. And so they come to see their salvation in certain political measures that are economically reactionary, and of others, especially thru the vehicle of popular and labor parties, that are meaningless in the long run.

23. Little business is opposed to big business and its big political parties; especially to the big wings of these parties which it is fighting thru its little (left) wings; and so is labor very often. Both little business and the masses of labor feel so hopeless in a singlehanded struggle against big business that they tend toward each other in ignorance and despair. And when both of them pull out of the big parties this is very much against the will of the labor bureaucracy who much prefer to be labor lieutenants to big business (rather than be equals of the petty bourgeoisie); with the resultant political jobs and pull.

24. Big business on one hand; and on the other hand the railroad-union leadership, their banks, buildings, insurance policies and scab mines; the investments of the printers' unions; the scab herding of the United Mine Workers international and district offices; in a less defined but very definite way the various rings of the business agents in the building trades. It is particularly the class struggle which is making of these two groups one almost inseperable whole—the interlocking directorate of reaction.

25. The labor bureaucracy is a coming power; they have finances, banks, real estate, investments and insurance organizations, besides their unions; a network of national and international connections; thousands of periodicals in editions that total millions; and a permanently functioning mass organization, well knit and strongly centralized, which lends itself very well for political purposes.

26. The petty bourgeoisie is deficient in most of the afore-mentioned facilities; besides, big labor is politically much too conservative for little business. We saw in the election campaign of 1924 how much more radical the progressives are than the labor bureaucrats upon matters that have no direct bearing upon their economics, as army, American legion, Communists, civil liberties, immigration, etc.

27. In the combination of big business with big labor in the big parties, big business is of course the one that gives the lead, no matter to what extent labor enters into the combination.

Notwithstanding its deficiencies little business dominates such remaining elements of labor as are in alliance with it (because too forcibly repelled by big business).

E. Proletarian and Revolutionary Forces in U. S. A.

28. In the U. S. A. the general proletarian and semi-proletarian forces are slowly but continually losing ground.

a) The A. F. of L. has for four years been steadily losing members, suffered wage cuts and a loss of morale, both internally and externally.

b) The I. W. W. have largely become a demoralized, desperate party-syndicalist-legalist-reformist conglomeration:

c) The Non-Partisan League and the original (1920) Farmer Labor Party have been totally merged into the LaFollette movement; the socialist party cannot stem its steady decline in membership, votes, and publications; it came out of the LaFollette movement still further deranged and demoralized.

29. The revolutionary forces have gained during this period. The left wing ideology has gained a foothold in the unions. (Good showing in union elections. Substantial and effective mass demonstration against the union bureaucracy. A consequent slackening of left wing expulsions. Certain independent unions show under Communist influence gains, organizational as well as on strike) The membership of the W. P. has grown. The party went successfully thru its first national election campaign.

F. Bolshevization.

The Comintern has chosen the term Bolshevization to describe the process which Communist Parties must undergo to prepare effectively for the revolutionary crisis. This requires on our part the following:

a) To maintain contact with every phase of the class struggle a. o. thru the establishment of a party research bureau, which, independent of bourgeois data as far as possible, has its con

The Discussion on Party Tasks

A Year of Party Progress

Being a Record of Difficulties Overcome, of Party Achievements, and the Part Played Therein by the C. E. C. and by the Minority.

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER, JAMES P. CANNON and A. BITTELMAN.

The minority in their articles have challenged the leadership of the C. E. C. majority. The minority charged us with lack of initiative and aggressiveness. The farmer-labor opportunists of the minority are attempting to make a case against the C. E. C. majority for its alleged failure to foresee events and precipitate developments in the class struggle. This compels us to make a reply which will show the membership the real achievements of the party under the leadership of the present C. E. C.

In making our reply, we will be guided by the following considerations. First, truthfulness to facts and reality. Second, proper regard for the history of our party and for the objective conditions that were confronting our work during the past year. And, third, Leninist objectivity and mercilessness in the estimation of past performances, in admitting our own mistakes and in drawing lessons therefore for our future work.

Dangerous Inflation.

This article deals with the term of office of the present central executive committee, i. e., the period between January and December of 1924. It was a year full of difficulties for our party and its leadership. To mention only a few of these difficulties: The collapse of the third party alliance, the big sweep to LaFollette, the breakdown of the arrangements perfected by the St. Paul convention the change in our election policy, the bitter war of the reactionaries against our membership and sympathizers in trade unions, and, last but not least the remnants of the internal factional struggle with an organized caucus of the minority functioning thruout the country and with the main executive office of the party, the office of executive secretary in the hands of the minority opposition.

It was a difficult year for our party. The split of July 3, placed us in a state of isolation which threatened for a while to cut off most of our connections in the labor movement. Then came the LaFollette sweep which shattered badly the basis of our farmer-labor operations. On top of this, we had to change our major policy, the third party alliance, and adjust ourselves quickly to the changed situation.

In addition to all these very serious obstacles to progress in our work, we had to be constantly on guard and at war against a peculiar state of mind of our organization which, for lack of a better name, we shall call the spirit of inflation. By this we mean disregard for objective facts and reality, dangerous self-conceit as to the strength and abilities of our party, the worship of empty phrases, and a grave lack of realism, practicability and Leninist objectivity. This inflationist spirit is the spirit of the minority.

Our party was dangerously inflated with this spirit of emptiness and fictitiousness. Conscious of this danger for quite a long time, we knew that no greater service could be rendered to our party than to deflate the party from the non-realistic, non-critical and non-Communist notions cultivated by the minority, to bring the party back to earth, making it a real, effective instrument in the class struggle. To this vital task the central executive commtitee devoted itself in all earnestness, and today, we claim, our party is much more realistic, much more practical and, consequently, much more effective in its work than it has ever been before. The period of wild maneuvers based exclusively upon a policy of bluff, the practice of initiating campaigns and movements having no other result than an increased production of party circulars, the theory of measuring the effectiveness of Communist policy by the amount of publicity space and by the size of headlines appearing in the capitalist press, which was so typical of the former C. E. C., the days of such leadership, we hope, are gone forever.

The Workers Party in the Elections.

As a legacy of the day of "grand maneuvers," the present central executive majority, immediately upon assuming office, found itself inextricably involved in the pursuit of an immediate political objective, which was totally beyond the power of our party to achieve under the prevailing circumstances. We mean the objective of creating a united farmer-labor party in the presidential elections and thereby defeat the LaFollette influence upon the so-called class farmer-labor movement.

The present C. E. C. did everything that was possible to achieve that objective. In doing so we were continually hampered by the minority in the C. E. C. which was bent upon putting into effect the August thesis, that is, the creation of a farmer-labor party, on the basis of the united front from above instead of a real united front from the bottom with the broad farmer-labor movement, upon the basis of an immediate program of partial demands. Beginning with the first meeting of the present C. E. C. in January and up until May, our principle political efforts were directed towards one end, a national farmer-labor ticket and party as against the third party LaFollette ticket. In this effort we were defeated thru no fault of our own.

Why? Our answer is because LaFolletteism was stronger among the masses than Communism, because petty bourgeois illusions (which mean LaFolletteism) were and still are dominating the minds of the farmer-labor movement. When the old C. E. C., in its opportunistic rush for leadership, decided that we must set up a farmer-labor party as against a third party, it set for our party an impossible task. The present C. E. C. majority did not realize the impossibility of this task until the June 17 convention. The situation became quite clear after the July 4 conference of the C. P. P. A. Then grasping the situation with initiative, we cut loose from the fiction of a farmer-labor ticket and entered the elections as the Workers Party.

This represented a profound change in tactics. The party should realize that it required courage, quick Communist thinking and much determination to make the decision and to carry it out successfully. The decision of July 8, which placed the Workers Party in the elections under its own name and with its own program and candidates, thereby extricating our party from the intolerable position of compromise and opportunism involved in supporting a fictitious farmer-labor ticket. This decision we consider one of the major accomplishments of the present C. E. C.. It was carried thru in the face of bitter opposition Comrade Lovestone, minority leader, whose policy would have sacrificed the interests of the Workers Party for the fake farmer-labor party.

Were we right or wrong in putting the Workers Party in the elections under its own name? Did we or did we not manifest initiative, firmness, and correct Communist understanding when we changed our policy on July 8? The party has already given the answer. Everyone in our ranks, except the incorrigible farmer-laborites, are convinced that our party made an excellent showing in the election campaign and greatly increased its prestige among the toiling masses.

Popularizing our Program on Unemployment.

It was thru the second national conference of the T. U. E. L. and upon the initiative of our industrial department that our party made known for the first time its program and tactics for the organization of the unemployed. Sometime later the old C. E. C. (now the minority), in line with its lack of sense for reality and understanding of concrete situations, proposed to immediately begin the actual organization of councils of unemployed, thereby thru premature organizational steps, endangering the success of what is bound to become a great movement.

Luckily for our party and for its unemployment program these premature organizational steps were not taken. The present C. E. C., after adopting a complete policy on unemployment at its March meeting, proceeded to popularize the issue, our unemployment program and proposed methods of organization. By instruction of the C. E. C. majority the question of unemployment was made one of the major issues in every campaign carried on by our party on the economic and political field. In spite of all provocations of the minority, the C. E. C. refused to begin prematurely the actual organization of councils of unemployed which because the situation was not ripe, would have resulted in complete failure, thereby wasting the efforts of the W. P. and discrediting a powerful organizational slogan for future use.

Our struggle against unemployment is still in its propaganda stage. During the election campaign alone the party distributed a quarter of a million of leaflets on unemployment and sold 20,000 copies of a pamphlet written by Comrade Browder. We are effectively propagating our demands for the unemployed and slogan of organization thereby preparing the ground for organization work which we propose to start the moment conditions become ripe for it.

Teaching our Party Methods of Organization.

The present C. E. C. has devoted a great deal of its attention to problems of organization, which were neglected by the former C. E. C. We realize that policies, programs and resolutions alone, even when correct, do not themselves build a party. When we assumed office we found that the party was totally out of balance as regards the various phases of its activities, and that systematic recruiting of new members was a matter not appreciated by the minority. The conception that the old C. E. C. had of organization was mainly that of writing articles once in a while in the press.

We set to work to infiltrate into our party a few of the basic principles of Communist organization. At the March meeting of the C. E. C. we adopted a statement on party activities by Comrade Foster. It was an attempt to give our party a clear picture of a balanced program of party work, which proved very successful in educating our party to a better understanding of the principles of Communist organization.

This was followed up with the program of action finally adopted by the C. E. C. at its full meeting in July. The party is well-acquainted with the contents of this program. It was outlined and submitted to the C. E. C. by the majority, the minority contributed nothing to its make-up, and was thereupon brought to our membership in a number of joint membership meetings in every large center. This program of action, with all that it stood for, was a real achievement of our party under the leadership of the present C. E. C.

The comrades will recall the nature of the program. It included our election policy and the means of organizing the campaign in every one of its phases, political, organizational, and financial. It provided for a systematic campaign to build the Workers Party thru campaigns for new members. It outlined a program for the building and strengthening of the DAILY WORKER. It covered in a most thoro manner our immediate tasks on the industrial field, and also the question of shop nuclei. It laid particular stress on the unemployment situation and our program for it. It contained a special section on educational work.

It was a program not only of what to do but also of how to do it. It called for the most thoro departmentalization, from the bottom up, of every unit of the party in accord with the various specialized activities contained in the program. It also provided for an effective system of check-up and control to secure the systematic carrying out of the program of action. This program is progressively being put into operation. Insofar as our party is functioning and moving forward, it is doing so under the direction of and in line with the program of action of the C. E. C.

Establishing a Real Industrial Department.

Another major accomplishment of the party during the past year was the establishment and perfection by the present C. E. C. of a real industrial department. This department is a vital organ of our party. Thru its policies, connections and machinery, our party is reaching out into the depths of the American labor movement and is establishing contact with the most elementary struggles of the organized workers. It is a real department, with subdivisions being established in every unit of the party, functioning under the direct supervision of a national committee and a national director, which in their turn are supervised and directed by the central executive committee. For the first time the D. E. C.'s and other party units are taking serious hold of the industrial work as regular work of our party.

The department is carrying on its work in accord with a definite program, the program of the Trade Union Educational League, which is the industrial program of our party. This new program of the T. U. E. L. was submitted some six months ago by Comrade Foster to the R. I. L. U. and was accepted unanimously with a few additions by Comrades Lozovsky, Johnson and Dunne. On the basis of this industrial program of the party which in many respects is a model program for the development of militant left wings in reactionary trade unions, the militants in the American unions are carrying on their work.

During the past year our comrades and sympathizers in the unions had to withstand and resist the most terrific onslaughts of the bureaucracy. In nearly every industry the left wing was compelled to carry on a bitter struggle for life, and in these struggles the industrial department of the party played a leading part. In the recent elections in the miners' union and in the carpenters' union the left wing was exceptionally well organized and carried on an intensive propaganda for the policies of the T. U. E. L. The Communist strength within these unions is constantly growing. The result of these efforts shows that the left wing in such industries as mining, garments, building, transportation, metal and food is at present more definitely crystallized, more conscious of its aims and is better organized now than ever before for continuing the struggle to revolutionize the trade unions.

In preparation for the El Paso convention of the A. F. of L. the industrial department submitted to the C. E. C. a thoro and well considered program. It dealt with every important issue in the labor movement, such as a general labor congress to consist of representatives of trade unions, workers' political parties, shop committees, the unemployed, etc., for the purpose of consolidating the ranks of labor politically and industrially and to launch a militant attack on the capitalist system; the recognition of Soviet Russia, abolition of racial discrimination against the Negroes; nationalization of the mines and railroads; amalgamation of the trade unions; organization of and relief for the unemployed; demand that all the forces in the Pan-American Federation of Labor be mobilized for a struggle against American imperialism; condemnation of imperialist schemes against China; demand that the R. I. L. U. plan for international unity be endorsed and the solidarity of labor be achieved; protest against criminal syndicalism laws, against the deportation of Oates, Mahler, Moran, and Nigra; the organization of the youth; release of Mooney, Billings, Ford, Suhr, Rangel, Kline, Sacco, Vanzetti, and other political prisoners; condemnation of the Ku Klux Klan and American Legion.

This program was designed to serve as a basis of action in the trade unions to rally the masses to the left wing. Special mention should be made of the resolution "For a labor congress," which contains a practical program of partial demands, all of which respond to immediate burning needs of the masses, and which provides for united front action by the organized labor movement in alliance with the Workers Party. It is highly significant that all the minority contributed to making up a program for the A. F. of L. convention was a motion to add the opportunist slogan "For a 'class' farmer-labor party." They violently objected to fighting in the convention for the Workers Party.

In connection with this we must mention the convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor held in Mexico City, Mexico. The party had its representative, Comrade Johnston in the field with a definite program of policy and organization designed to achieve two aims. One, to promote and unify the left wing movement in the trade unions of North, Central and South America under the leadership of the R. I. L. U. Two, to co-ordinate the activities of the Communist Parties of the United States and Mexico for common struggle against American imperialism in Latin-America. The only improvement the minority could suggest to our Pan-American program was to insert some additional comas, semicolons and incidentally an additional word.

It must be stated in passing that the minority exhibited a woeful lack of consistency and imagination when they failed to propose a Pan-American farmer-labor party as an amendment to our program. But that may come yet. It is also noteworthy that altho the C. E. C. adopted a Pan-American program, upon the report of Comrade Lovestone sometime in May, the executive secretary could find no better use for it than to put it in his files. Now, however, the C. E. C. has taken the matter into its hands and is determined to see that its program is carried into effect.

Educational Activities.

This was a field sadly neglected by the former C. E. C., who could see nothing but the farmer-labor party campaign. We realized the burning need for systematic Bolshevist education in the party and at the first opportunity established a special educational department with a responsible national director, Comrade Cannon and a committee under the supervision of the C. E. C.

Already the party is realizing the beneficial results of the activities of the educational department. There have been established party schools and classes in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston, also a large network of elementary study classes in the A. B. C. of Communism, thruout the country. There are also in operation circuit study classes in the districts of Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania. Provisions have been made by the educational department for the publication of a library of Communism, to contain theoretical books on the fundamentals of Leninism.

We realize that this is only a beginning, but a beginning in the right direction and with proper regard for the immediate needs of the party. The present C. E. C. intends to remain true to its conception of a balanced program of party activities in which Bolshevist education occupies an important place.

Thesis and Work on Shop Nuclei

It was the present C. E. C. that made the first earnest attempt to place the shop nuclei proposition as an immediate organizational task of the party. Thanks to our efforts, a practical way has been found to the application of the principle of shop nuclei to the specific conditions of our own party. This practical program is embodied in a special thesis recently adopted by the C. E. C. This shop nuclei thesis on the most complicated and difficult organizational question confronting our party was worked out by the majority.

Months ago we set out to begin to educate our party membership to the necessity of starting the reorganization on the shop nuclei basis. Soon afterwards the first organizational steps were actually taken by our Chicago district. At present the situation is ripe enough for similar steps in a number of other districts where there is enough concentration of our members in industry to permit such action.

Strengthening the Communist Morale and Understanding of our Membership

Another major achievement of our party during the past year was the general strengthening of the morale and Communist understanding of our membership. This was no easy task to accomplish in the face of an organized minority caucus functioning thruout the country in flagrant violation of Comintern decisions, ever since the 1923 party convention and until this very hour.

The C. E. C. majority have been working on the theory of discipline advocated by Lenin and practiced by the C. I. This theory is, that the basis of Communist discipline is confidence of the membership in the leading men and committees of the party and that this confidence can be won only in one way, namely, by the ability of the party to develop and apply correct political strategy and tactics. To win the confidence of the membership in our ability to give the party correct Communist leadership—this was the great ambition of the present C. E. C. It was for this reason that representatives of the C. E. C. frequently addressed joint membership meetings to familiarize the party with the plans and objectives of the C. E. C. And in every such instance the C. E. C. received the almost unanimous approval of the rank and file of the party.

We attempted on numerous occasions to liquidate the organized illegal opposition of the minority. It was Comrade Foster who immediately upon his return from Russia made a motion in the C. E. C. providing for a special committee, consisting of an equal number of representatives of the C. E. C. and of the minority, to remove the factional basis of our disagreements and to liquidate the organized opposition of the minority. We met the minority more than half way. We conceded them a number of important organization appointments as an indication of our willingness to work with them on the basis of mutual confidence, we submitted our program of action, a major achievement of our party, not directly to the C. E. C., but first to the minority group in order that they might identify themselves with it and thus share in the credit of initiating the program. We regret to say that the minority, altho always willing to accept our concessions, never for a moment relinquished its caucus-organization and systematic opposition. This fact, together with the additional fact that the executive secretary of the party belonged to the minority opposition, made it very difficult for the C. E. C. to put into effect more fully all its policies and decisions. The latest attempt to pacify the opposition was initiated by Comrade Cannon on the eve of the party discussion, with the idea of removing if possible the purely factional sting from differences of opinion on policy. We proposed informal discussions with the minority of the immediate political tasks of the party in order to ascertain whether or not a common basis of policy could be found, but the minority was more intent upon discussing the make-up of the next C. E. C. and similar questions of party control than problems of policy. This made it impossible for us to proceed, because we held to the Bolshevist principle that the basis of unity in a Communist Party is agreement on policy and not the arbitrary division of organizational control. The minority, however, thought otherwise, consequently our latest attempt to liquidate the organized minority opposition came to naught. A further reason is now clear: the minority is one of the right wing tendencies in the party.

But the party as a whole, if not the minority, responded splendidly to every effort of the C. E. C. to improve the morale and understanding of the organization. The membership particularly appreciated the readiness of the C. E. C. to admit mistakes and to correct them quickly. Something that the minority never dares to do, even in the case of their pet third party alliance which was rejected by the Communist International. Till this very day the minority cannot muster the courage to say whether the Comintern was right or wrong.

In our ideological struggle against the remnants of the Two-and-a-Half international we have been making steady progress, despite the numerous tactless provocations of the minority which went as far as supplying misinformation to the C. E. C. We adhered strictly to the tactics of the C. I., applied to Serrati, Smeral, and many others, which was to defeat these Two-and-a-Half International tendencies ideologically, to prove them wrong and politically bankrupt in the eyes of the membership, to win all the proletarian elements of the party to the point of view of the C. I., and to compel the carrying out of the policies of the C. I. when necessary even by means of disciplinary measures. Together with the C. I. we realized that the Bolshevization of our party is not a one-act affair, to be accomplished overnight by means of senseless persecutions, but a process of education and merciless ideological struggle against menshevism, opportunism, and centrism. This was the policy of the C. E. C. majority carried out daily in every phase of its activities. We fought to the best of our abilities every deviation from the C. I. policies, such as, the remnants of the ideology of the Two-and-a-Half International, the right wing farmer laborist tendency, as well as those temporary deviations of which we ourselves have been guilty. We strained all our efforts to draw into party leadership, to bring to the fore all the proletarian elements of the party, the active workers from the shops. And in contradistinction from the pseudo-intellectuals of the minority we believe that our movement is essentially a proletarian movement and that its ideology and psychology must be permeated with that of the class conscious revolutionary proletariat.

As a result of these efforts our party is now ideologically more homogeneous than ever before in its history. The attendance at branch meetings is now better, the internal life of our branches is richer and more intensive. The dues payments have never been so high as they are at present. Our party is continually growing in numbers. We are getting better organized and more closely knit together. All this makes us feel confident that our party is now on the right road to become an important factor in the everyday struggles of the American workers.

The DAILY WORKER.

A major achievement of the C. E. C. has been the management and operation of The DAILY WORKER. Instead of founding only our daily paper with the fund raised last year as was planned by the former C. E. C., we have purchased a building to house The DAILY WORKER and the national office of the party as well, and have established a modern and complete printing plant to take care of all the party's printing. The management of the mechanical department of this plant as well as the office end has been economical and efficient in the extreme, to the end that the deficit of The DAILY WORKER for 1924, is much lower than we had dared to hope (only $20,000).

But it was not this phase of the work which brought the party its greatest gains. Nor have the education and propaganda values of The DAILY WORKER been its chief advantages. It has been in the field of organization that The DAILY WORKER has brought us the greatest benefits. For due to the planful organizational methods used in The DAILY WORKER, the organizing of the army of agents, we have developed a rich field for making new mass contacts. Instead a haphazard attempt at building circulation, an organized army of subscription agents is being developed who are not simply sub-hustlers, but actually rapidly developing, capable organizers for the party. The formalizing of this organization into The DAILY WORKER Builders is another step in advance which is already yielding further results.

Centralizing the Party Press.

The decentralized state of our party press which the C. E. C. inherited from its preceding administration was an outrage and a nuisance. The Weekly Worker was printed in one place and edited and managed in another. The Liberator, Labor Herald, and Soviet Russia Pictorial all had separate editorial staffs and administrations. The Party Literature Department had another. As long ago as last January the C. E. C. decided to eliminate this waste and inefficiency.

The first step was the amalgamation of the three monthly magazines into The Workers' Monthly. Thus the party has one monthly official organ instead of three and instead of three editors and two assistants, there is only one editor. The DAILY WORKER has taken charge of the management of The Workers' Monthly and with the addition of one office girl to its staff, it does the work formerly done by the three business administrations which employed four or five persons. The resultant saving to our party in wages alone amounts to over $12,000 a year.

But the monetary saving is not the only nor by any means the greatest achievement. The centralizing of the production of our monthly with The DAILY WORKER makes it possible to produce both a better daily and a better monthly. The centralizing of the distribution makes it easier to increase the circulation of both The DAILY WORKER and The Workers' Monthly.

The C. E. C. has now decided to centralize in a similar manner the party's Literature Department, so that beginning the first of the year, The DAILY WORKER will be charged with the administration and distribution of this important arm of our party. This will not only make new savings for the party, but also because of centralizing of the selling machinery the party will for the first time begin really to permeate the working class with Communist books and pamphlets.

Shortcomings to be Overcome.

We should not close our eyes to a number of shortcomings in our activities. Some of our language sections are not as yet sufficiently close to the party organization. Communist work among women employed in industry, among the Negro masses, and among the agricultural workers and poor farmers has hardly begun. This much, however, must be placed on record, that the present C. E. C. majority succeeded in relieving the party from several very harmful notions of the minority regarding the policies and forms of organization to be ap-

The Discussion on Party Tasks

A Statement on 2½ Internationalism

By ABERN, BURMAN, BITTELMAN BROWDER, CANNON, DUNNE FOSTER.

In view of the present situation in the party, we find it necessary to make a statement regarding our struggle to eradicate the 2 1-2 international tendencies in our party.

In its recent decision on the Farmer-Labor party, the Comintern pointed out the existence in our party of remnants of the ideology of the 2 1-2 international, as exemplified by some of the writings of Comrade Lore. The C. I. called upon us to wage a sharp ideological struggle against these tendencies. This the C. E. C. has done and will continue to do until the entire party is completely won over to the point of view of Leninism and the C. I. These efforts of the C. E. C. to defeat ideologically the 2 1-2 international tendencies were hampered and weakened by the tactics of minority opposition.

Our tactics for combatting the remnants of the ideology of the 2 1-2 international in our party were the same as the tactics applied by the C.I. in other Communist parties, notably in the cases of Serratti in Italy and Smeral in Czecho-Slovakia. These tactics can be grouped under the following three heads: 1) to defeat ideologically and politically these tendencies, to prove them wrong in the eyes of our membership and followers. (2) to strengthen in our party the ideology and prestige of Leninism and of the C. I. (3) to compel under all circumstances full execution of every party member and every party unit of all decisions of the C. I. and of the C. E. C., even by means of disciplinary measures These principles have been successfully applied by the Comintern.

In pursuit of these aims the present C. E. C. took sharp issue with the remnants of the ideology of the Two-and-a-Half International when these manifested themselves in the activities of some of our comrades in the industrial field in the printers' union, in the needle trades, in the miners' union, and in several other labor organizations. In all instances the C E. C. immediately sent its representatives to instruct and direct these comrades to the Leninist point of view. The C. E. C. took prompt action in every single instance when the Volkszeitung or any other party or gan manifested deviations from the C. I. line of policy.

Thru its educational department the C. E. C. laid the basis for spreading Leninist ideology among our member ship. Our party schools, study classes, and our press have been utilized in every possible way, thru articles by Comrades Zinoviev, Stalin Kaminev, and others to strengthen the Bolshevist ideology of our party. By a recent decision of the C. E. C the powerful speeches by Comrades Kaminev and Stalin against Trotskyism were ordered printed in pamphlet form.

It was also by a decision of the C. E. C. that Comrade Olgin wrote his series of three articles explaining the decision of the C. I. regarding the deviations of Comrade Lore. All these efforts have contributed greatly towards the Bolshevization of our party.

In this ideological campaign we have been persistently hampered by the minority opposition. The tactics proposed by the minority always tended to crystallize the tendency of the Two-and-a-Half International and not to dissolve it or break it up. Every move of the minority strengthened the position of this tendency. The minority carried on a senseless campaign of petty personal persecution, going to the extent of furnishing misinformation to the C. E. C. on two important occasions whose only effect was to create sympathy for and strengthen the prestige of those who have been charged by the C. I. as manifesting remnants of the ideology of the Two-and-a-Half International.

Not in a single instance did the leaders of the minority under their own names take issue publicly in the party press with any individual of this tendency inside or outside of our party. This was done, however, by members of the majority, as witness the above mentioned articles by Olgin, the debate of Foster against Nearing, Cannon's speech in the Workers' School in New York on the Bolshevization of our party which was ordered published in the Workers Monthly, and the articles by Bittelman against Salutsky and Boudin.

The minority felt no responsibility for the welfare of the party. For this reason they were continually trying to provoke the C. E. C. to such action as would create a crisis in the party, if not an actual split, and thereby strengthen the very tendencies which it is our duty to combat. All thru the year the minority by their foolish tactics have been building up the Two-and-a-Half International tendency. Now they are strengthening the right wing of the party generally by their advocacy of an opportunistic farmer-labor party policy.

The minority showed its utter disregard for the C. I. decisions by maintaining a permanent caucus thruout the country at the very time when the C. I. was fighting militantly against such manifestations of Trotskyism in the Russian and other parties.

The inevitable result of such a reckless policy as the minority proposes would be a disastrous split, which would cost the party large numbers of valuable proletarian elements, and which would strengthen the Two-and-a-Half International tendencies. On the other hand, the policy of the C. E. C., which is the policy of the Comintern, will Bolshevize these proletarian elements and stamp out anti-Leninistic deviations.

Ours is a young party, it has many unripe elements within it, and the task of Bolshevizing them is a difficult one. It can only be accomplished along the lines now being followed by the C. E. C., that is by a patient, persistent, intelligent, strategical, determined, relentless application of the principles of Leninism.

plied by our party in its work among women, the Negroes, and the agricultural proletariat, at the same time formulating correct policies for our future work. The party is now fully equipped to proceed successfully in these comparatively new fields of activity.

United Front Activities.

One of the signs that our party is finally beginning to get the proper perspective in the estimation of events and in formulating its policies is the recent decision of the C. E. C. to establish a permanent commission on the united front. The duty of this commission, which is a subcommittee of the C. E. C. is to continually survey the field of class struggle and to formulate for the C. E. C. policies and plans of organization for united front campaigns on the basis of immediate burning issues in the life of the toiling masses.

At present we are beginning to develop such united front campaigns against child labor, and for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. The subcommittee is preparing the outlines of policy and organization for a campaign against the so-called criminal syndicalism laws and for the release of class war prisoners. It is our intention, in accord with the decisions of the Fifth Congress of the C. I., to seize upon every burning issue in the life of the masses, for united front action against the capitalists and against their agents in the labor movement. This plan to systematize the united front campaign was entirely the work of the C. E. C. majority.

The Party Discussion.

We want the party to remember that it was the present C. E. C. that created the opportunity for our membership to discuss thoroly and express itself on our immediate tasks. The whole plan for conducting the party discussion was presented by the C. E. C. majority. We took the greatest care to so organize the discussion as to secure the maximum freedom of expression for the minority and to crystallize opinion for all views and tendencies in the party. Last year, on the contrary, when we were in the minority, we were denied by the Pepper group even the right to defend our policies in the various district conventions.

To us the party is the party membership. The success of the party depends upon the consciousness, initiative, and activity of every party member. The present C. E. C. fully realizes that the strength of a Communist Party rests mainly on the Bolshevist quality of its rank and file and leadership and upon the bonds of mutual confidence that exist between the two. We are therefore, determined to do all in our power to deepen the Bolshevist quality of our party as a whole, and to strengthen the existing bonds of mutual confidence between the party membership and the party leadership.

The minority have challenged the leadership of the C. E. C. majority. In reply we say, let the record speak. We do not propose to follow in the footsteps of the minority and to bluff the party into the belief that under our leadership the party has already conquered the world. Instead, we will ask the party membership to examine our actual achievements. The party will then see that it has been making continual progress despite all difficulties, that we have extended our influence and strengthened our organization, and that now we are making an effort to rid the party completely of the old spirit of inflation and farmer-laboristic opportunistism. We are on the right road to building the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party.

WHY I SUPPORT THE MINORITY POLITICAL STRATEGY

By JOSEPH ZACK

Do We Lead the Left Wing?

YES and no! On the industrial field we do. There is no one else and the workers can see it easily enough; but on the political, we do not. And Comrade Foster ought to know that better than anyone eles. For intance, the bulk of active T. U. E. L. strength in the unions are non-party members; and the overwhelming bulk of their followers are still farther away from Communism. If the T. U. E. L. were the industrial department of the party and its members were placed before the alternative of either joining the party or getting out of the groups, we would disrupt our industrial work. In fact, the influence of the age-long policy of Gompers upon the trade unionists of "no politics in the unions" (except for capitalism), has had such an effect that the left wing only began to warm up on class politics during the farmer-labor party campaign. No the left wing does not follow us yet politically. If it did, we would be considerably nearer to our goal—the mass Communist Party.

Plainly, one of the main problems of our movement is to make this left wing politically active. The militants themselves who are not yet ready to join the Communist Party and they knowing that the masses are even more removed from the idea of joining the party than they themselves—this leads to the necessity of the use of the strategy of the farmer-labor party, in order to draw the left wing into political activity. Not only is that necessary, in order to get a mass political movement of the workers, but it is necessary in order to consolidate our position of leadership over the left wing. For should a petty-bourgeois movement gain control and influence over them politically it will undermine our influence over them industrially.

Surely if we were leading the left wing politically, Comrade Foster would have received many times the number of votes he received.

I am interested in the political united front policy mainly from the point of view of making our left wing followers politically conscious, and of getting an ideological hold upon them politically. And as strategy, for that purpose, as well as of connecting our sympathizers and followers everywhere, politically, of keeping an organized contact with them for a number of years so as to enable us to deepen their class consciousness and thus lay the basis for a mass Communist Party—which certainly is not possible by applying the majority tactics—the minority's political strategy offers the solution.

These semi-class-conscious workers, politically confused and timid workers, who are following our slogans on the industrial field, will not join our party. Still they are nearest to us, and if we wish to build a mass Communist Party, we must have a strategy not only of pursuing the task of organizing the class-conscious revolutionists, but of reaching out organizationally and politically to those closest to us. In a country where capitalism does not yet face its downfall, it is the best strategy to reach our goal—the mass Communist Party.

Do We Want a Labor Party a la Great Britain?

I would have considered it a calamity to our movement if the bureaucracy and the petty bourgeoisie, in their maneuver against us had really gone so far as to form a petty bourgeois farmer-labor party. The hold of such parties upon the illusions of the masses would have been much greater than a progressive or liberal party. The labor party which we should organize ought to be but a transition stage to the mass Communist party.

In this period of the decay of international capitalism, all the parties to the right of the Communist Party are being driven more and more to the right. Hence we are the only logical leaders in the struggles for even mild political reforms for the benefit of the working class. In Great Britain, on the other hand, at a time when capitalism was not shaken, the reformists could lead such movements and appear to be revolutionary. It is obvious, therefore, that just in this period we are the only logical leader to initiate this farmer-labor movement. It is very likely that we will not pass thru the stage of social-democratic parties in the United States and that the development will be in the direction of a big capitalist party, a progresive-petty bourgeois party and a labor party controlled by the Communists.

Now that the grip of the trade union bureaucracy and of the petty bourgeoisie on the workers is at a low ebb, owing to the dissolution of the LaFollette movement, our strategy must again be to get a hold politically of their imagination and crystallize it into a definite organization and thus eliminate the possibility of the left wing being absorbed politically by our enemies.

Here again the minority strategy offers the possibility of maneuvering and of eliminating the labor party as a factor on the side of our enemies, while the majority delivers it to them. However, our propaganda must be conducted in such a manner and the preparations even of our own party arranged in such a manner, that the work of organizing the farmer-labor party will take place during the coming economic crisis.

Liquidating the Workers Party.

Of all the silly accusations launched against the minority, this one takes the prize. How a farmer-labor party composed of affiliated organizations and under our leadership, which means without individual leadership, can lead to the liquidation of the Workers Party, must yet be an undivulged secret in the chest of the majority, for so far they have not yet revealed it. In such a party the only way to affiliate is to join the Workers Party or by being a member of a union, society, etc. In a party of the type of the labor party of Great Britain, owned and controlled by the bureaucracy, there is far greater danger of that sort and is the main reason for the numerical weakness of the Communist Party, the left wing outside of the Communists being obsorbed by the labor party. Not only would the Workers Party not be liquidated, but would become the dyanmic force within it. It would make it possible for us to conduct recruiting campaigns to get individual members within these organizations on a scale never attempted by us before.

This strategy will put the Workers Party to the front in the true sense. It is flexible, while the majority's tactics would put us into a political straight jacket that would revert into opportunism on the industrial field and into sectarianism on the political field. The Workers Party will get to the fore politically in as much as it got industrially thru the united front tactics thru the left bloc united front tactics formed under the auspices of the T. U. E. L., and it will consolidate our industrial strength, and give us the medium to effectively combat the petty-bourgeois political movement wherever and whenever it may arise.

Farmer-Labor Party and Opportunism.

How can we be at the head of a party with a reformist program without sinking our whole movement into the swamp of opportunism? Industrially, it seems to me, we are keeping out of that swamp by the mere skin of our teeth. We will surely sink into it unless we make our followers there politically class conscious. The coming struggles even for immediate demands will so react upon capitalism, which is in a precarious condition, that they are bound to become more and more intense. This gives the struggles a revolutionary implication and prevents them from sinking into the reformism of pre-war days.

It seems, however, that Comrade Foster conceives of the labor party only as a respectable affair, organized by the bureaucrats. And since, in his opinion, the bureaucrats are definitely lined up for a petty-bourgeois movement in one form or other, of course, there is no room for a labor party of his conception. But labor party advocated by the minority is not a party nicely camouflaged, with us in the background trying not to capture it. On the contrary, the labor party proposed by the minority is a roughneck affair, to be organized in the stress of the struggle and whose leadership is not to be camouflaged.

The farmer-labor party slogan cannot swing any masses into action at this time, says the majority. How far would they swing even for amalgamation? Not very far. Perhaps amalgamation, as we envisage it, will never be realized, and the unions as at present constituted will go down with the present leadership, and new ones may have to built on an industrial basis. Certainly the "labor congress" is not a slogan that, appears to have a great drawing power on the masses, but conditions and our activity may make it powerful. While for the labor party many unions, international, state and city and local bodies, went on record and a great agitation has been developed for the last three years. With the success of the British labor party dangling in front of the workers, they certainly think along the lines of a labor party to the extent that they think politically at all. And considering that they are not ready for Communism, the next economic crisis, together with our activity, will make it possible to swing them en masses into political action. It need not be a political party for parliamentary action, as the British party is, but one that will follow our lead.

Slogans are of value to the extent of the masses we can swing behind them. Yes, the politically frozen territory of the United States has yielded us sufficient not to abandon it to the mercies of the petty buorgeoisie, but on the contrary, profiting by our mistakes and misconceptions in the past we should buckle down to build a militant farmer-labor party, thru which we will reach our goal, the mass Communist Party. It will not be a respectable farmer-labor party, neither will it be created in a year or so, in a hectic, get-rich-quick manner. Nevertheless, it is the best way to reach out among the masses politically, to combat the petty bourgeois and to establish the Communist Party as a powerful body politically.

MAJORITY ADVOCATES POLITICAL DUALISM

By ELMER P. BOICH.
